Written Ministerial Statements

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Olympic Park

The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (Tessa Jowell): The masterplan for the Olympic Park was largely developed in the second half of 2003 by the EDAW consortium and outline planning permissions were secured in autumn 2004. The candidate file submitted to the International Olympic Committee (IOC) in November 2004 and subsequently presented to the Evaluation Commission in February 2005 presented the concept of a compact games with the Olympic Park at its heart.

Since winning the right to stage the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games on 6 July 2005, the masterplan has been reviewed, as part of the normal development process for a major project. This review has resulted in changes that will deliver a more compact Olympic Park, while meeting the technical specifications of the IOC. In summary, the revised masterplan will:

Free up some land that pgeviously had been required for the Olympic Park

Avoid the relocation of about 100 businesses, over 70 homes and a place of worship, and safeguard over 1200 jobs

Reduce overall programme and delivery risk

Enhance operational security, needed after the terrorist attacks on 7 July 2005

Be delivered with a potential cost reduction over current estimates of between £250 million and £350 million.

A detailed review has been undertaken of the Olympic Village and the core Olympic and Paralympic requirements to improve deliverability, efficiency of design, utilisation, reduce risk and costs and smooth the way for best legacy use.

The revised plan therefore proposes realigning the village to locate approximately 80 per cent. of it on the Stratford rail lands immediately to the north of the channel tunnel rail link (CTRL).

The proposed building envelope and mix of uses complies with Stratford City's existing planning permissions and will provide a village of a similar high standard to that proposed in the original masterplan.

This move will enable an earlier start on the village, allowing building work on almost half of it to begin before power lines have been placed underground.

The revised plan is intended to offer improved security through

The relocation of the IBC and MFC within the Olympic Park security cordon, bringing those facilities closer to the centre of the Olympic Park and away from major roads and unsecured car parks

Integrated security measures for Stratford City and the Olympic Games should enable the concurrent construction of the projects to progress more efficiently

A more compact Athletes Village should improve the efficiency of the security operation.

Further work on refining and developing the security aspects of the revised plan is in hand.

Details of the revisions to the masterplan are set out in maps to be placed in the Library of the House.

The overall cost reductions for land, remediation, relocation and demolition are £152 million of which £142 million relates to the LDA and £10 million for demolition relates to the ODA as analysed below:

		£ million
Land assembly, relocation and remediation
LDA	Fish Island car parking (Relocation of majority of 53 businesses, 72 homes avoided and 621 jobs safeguarded)	66
LDA	IBC/MPC relocation (Relocation of 42 businesses and 642 jobs expected to be safeguarded)	76
Demolition
ODA	Fish Island car parking	4
ODA	IBC/MPC relocation	6
		152

In addition reductions in other ODA costs of between £100 million and £200 million, compared to the current estimated cost for the original masterplan are estimated to be achieved. These savings will mainly be achieved through:

Reduced costs for the construction of the IBC/MPC

the relocation of car parking from Fish Island, with 2,000 vehicle spaces being provided in Stratford City multi-storey parking and a smaller temporary multi storey car park on the Pudding Mill site replacing the need for a large multi-storey car park at Fish Island.

The actual savings will be dependent upon the outcome of the commercial deal to be negotiated with Stratford City and further value engineering that will be undertaken as part of the detailed design work.

DEFENCE

Far East Prisoners of War and Civilian Internees (FEPOW Scheme)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Don Touhig): In my statement on 12 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1119-21, following my appearance at the Public Administration Select Committee oral evidence session on the operation of the FEPOW scheme, I told the House that I had commissioned a review into the extent to which inconsistent eligibility criteria had been used for deciding claims before and after the introduction of the birth-link criterion; this work is well-advanced. In addition, I said that a separate, independent investigation would be conducted into how the use of inconsistent criteria had arisen and why it had not been exposed earlier. I said that this work would be undertaken by a retired senior official from outside of the Departments involved. I am pleased to announce that Mr. David Watkins, a retired senior civil servant formerly in the Northern Ireland Office who is well qualified for the task, has agreed to undertake the investigation. His role will be to consider:

how the original inconsistencies arose, identifying any specific shortcomings in the development and implementation of policy;

how, subsequently, the Departments involved failed to identify that there had been inconsistencies, despite the need to explain the Government's position in Parliament, in the courts and to the Parliamentary Ombudsman; and whether there are any lessons to be learned for the future from such shortcomings as are identified in the development of the scheme and in its administration.

Mr. Watkins has begun his investigation and I have indicated my concern that, while it must be thorough, it should be completed as quickly as practicable.

I will make a further statement to Parliament when I have received Mr. Watkins' final report.

Army Basing (Germany)

The Secretary of State for Defence (John Reid): My predecessor announced to the House on 16 December 2004, Official Report, column 1795, that under the future Army structures, we intend to re-role an Armoured Brigade to a Mechanised Brigade and a Mechanised Brigade to a Light Brigade.

I am now in a position to confirm that 4th Armoured Brigade will re-role to a mechanised brigade in 2006 and will move from its current base in Osnabruck garrison in Germany to Catterick in 2008–09. A number of other minor adjustments will also be made. I have notified the German Government of our plans. 19 Brigade will re-role to a Light Brigade and will subsequently relocate away from Catterick to Scotland and Northern Ireland, although decisions on the final location of individual units have yet to be taken. We hope to be in a position to announce this later in the year. The net effect will be a reduction of our forces in Germany by roughly 2,200 personnel.

While there may be further modest adjustments to our force levels in Germany in the coming years where this makes sense, I would envisage sizeable forces remaining there for the long-term, where they will continue to enjoy excellent relations with the local population and contribute to our strong bilateral relationship with the German Government.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC)

The Minister for Europe (Mr. Douglas Alexander): The General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC) will be held on 30 January in Brussels. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I will represent the UK.

The agenda items are as follows:

GENERAL AFFAIRS

Annual Operational Programme of the Council for 2006/ Annual Work Programme of the Commission

Austrian Foreign Minister, Ursula Plassnik, will give a short presentation on the Annual Operational Programme of the Council 2006. The document forms the final part of the 2004–06 multi-annual strategic programme. There is clear continuity with the Luxembourg/UK programme for 2005 and the Government are supportive of it.

President of the European Commission Jose Manuel Barroso will also present the Commission's Legislative and Work Programme 2006 (CLWP), published in October 2005. The CLWP follows from the Commission's Strategic Objectives 2005–09 and focuses on the implementation of the Lisbon Strategy—placing jobs, growth and better regulation at the centre of its programme. The Government support these aims.

Lisbon Strategy: Commission Annual Progress Report

The Commission will formally present its first Lisbon Annual Progress Report, assessing Member States' National Reform Programmes against "jobs and growth" objectives and highlighting priorities for further action. The Government will want to give clear support to the continued focus on jobs and growth.

EXTERNAL RELATIONS

World Trade Organisation/Doha Development Agenda (WTO/DDA)

EU Trade Commissioner Peter Mandelson will brief the Council on progress in the WTO Round. This follows an informal EU Trade Ministers dinner on 29 Jan and meetings of key WTO Ministers in the margins of the World Economic Forum in Davos (25–29 Jan). We expect a short discussion without Conclusions.

Relations with the Western Balkans

Commissioner for Enlargement Olli Rehn will present the Western Balkans Communication, which will form the basis of discussion at the Salzburg EU-Western Balkans Ministerial. The Council will also discuss Kosovo, in light of President Rugova's death on 21 January. The Council is expected to agree Conclusions on Bosnia, welcoming constitutional reform and Lord Ashdown's successor, and Montenegro, expressing support for Solana's Personal Representative, Ambassador Lajcak, as well as a statement on President Rugova's death. Conclusions are also expected to underline the continuing importance of full co-operation with the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) by both Serbia and Montenegro and Bosnia and Herzegovina. The Government welcome the EU-Western Balkans Ministerial as a chance to re-endorse the Thessaloniki messages of 2003 and focus on some hearts and minds initiatives to support the political process.

Latin America: Presentation of Commission Communication

Commissioner for External Relations Benita Ferrero-Waldner will present the Commission Communication "A stronger Partnership between the EU and Latin America". The Council is expected to agree Conclusions on this at the February GAERC. The Communication sets out a strategy for strengthening the relationship between the EU and Latin America, in terms that the Government broadly welcome.

Afghanistan

The Council is expected to have a short discussion about the London Conference on Afghanistan on 31 January–1 February. This provides an opportunity for Afghanistan to seek, and to receive, international support and endorsement for the next five years. The Afghanistan Compact represents an excellent framework for activity going forward. The Council is expected to agree Conclusions confirming the EU's long term support for the Government and people of Afghanistan, welcoming the London Conference on Afghanistan and in particular the launch of the Afghanistan Compact. We also expect the Council to endorse "Recommendations for enhancing EU engagement with Afghanistan" and the Presidency's statement to be given at the London Conference.

Belarus

The Council will discuss the deterioration in human rights and democracy and the forthcoming presidential elections in Belarus. The Government remain concerned about the legitimacy of the 2004 referendum allowing the current President to stand for more than two terms and strongly supported November's GAERC Conclusions calling for free and fair elections. We welcome the invitation extended to OSCE/ODIHR to monitor the election process, and are keen that it should be able to function effectively throughout the election period. The Council is expected to agree Conclusions calling on Belarus to improve its record on human rights and democracy and expressing the EU's willingness to engage when the situation improves.

Middle East Peace Process (MEPP)

We expect Council discussion to focus on the outcome of the 25 January Palestinian Legislative Council (PLC) elections, the changing political landscape in Israel in the run up to the 28 March elections and the implications for the MEPP. The Council is expected to agree Conclusions, which take into account the political situation in the Palestinian Authority and Israel.

Iran

The Council is expected to have a full discussion of handling of the forthcoming 2–3 February emergency International Atomic Energy Agency Board meeting, following Iran's decision to restart enrichment related activities, and likely next steps on the nuclear issue. The Council is expected to agree Conclusions.

Iraq

We expect that discussion will centre on the recent Iraqi election results and future EU-Iraq engagement. The Government will wish to stress the importance of EU JUSTLEX, support for the Constitutional Review, maintaining a political dialogue under the EU-Iraq Joint Political Declaration and progress towards the launch of negotiations on a Trade and Co-operation Agreement. The Council is expected to agree Conclusions.

Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM)

The Presidency will seek agreement on the participation of senior representatives of Burma / Myanmar at upcoming ASEM meetings held in the EU. The Government support the ASEM process as a means of engaging with Asian states on a range of issues that matter to us. The Government will want to ensure that any agreement provides for a full and substantive discussion of the human rights situation in Burma/ Myanmar at ASEM ministerial meetings.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Employment and Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. James Plaskitt): The Employment and Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Informal Council was held on 19 to 21 January in Villach, Austria.

My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry the Member for Bradford, South (Gerry Sutcliffe) and I attended the working session for the UK.

The Austrian presidency posed two topics for discussion on Friday 20 January. The morning session discussed "Flexicurity—flexibility through security". The afternoon session discussed "The social dimension of the revised Lisbon strategy and the streamlining of social policy processes".

My hon. Friend represented the UK during the morning discussion of "Flexicurity". This session explored new ways of balancing flexibility and social and employment security in Europe.

Member states took examples from their national reform programmes to illustrate the balance they had struck between flexibility and security. For the UK, my hon. Friend suggested that legislative measures were for the national level and the EU could add value by sharing experience and good practice and by promoting better regulation principles.

The Commissioner noted that "Flexicurity" would be addressed in the Commission Green Paper on "Labour Law", due in the first half of the year.

Overall, Ministers agreed that there is no 'one size fits all model for flexicurity', but disagreed whether legislative action should be taken at the EU level.

The afternoon session asked Ministers to focus on the presidency question about the social dimension of the strategy for growth and jobs and the desired role and outputs for streamlined open method of co-ordination of social policies.

For the UK, I called for practical discussion about real policies rather than theoretical debate of principles. I suggested that the aim should be to integrate social policy making within an overall reform strategy where it could contribute to the delivery of employment aims.

There was a consensus that a visible social dimension to the Lisbon strategy must be maintained and that streamlining open method of co-ordination would help.

The presidency then proposed that Employment Ministers should feed these messages into the spring European Council.

TREASURY

ECOFIN: 24 January 2006

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Gordon Brown): At its meeting of 24 January 2006 the Economic and Financial Affairs Council took note of a presentation from the current Austrian and future Finnish presidencies on a work programme for ECOFIN for 2006.

The Council adopted opinions on the stability and convergence programmes for Finland, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Hungary, Slovakia and Sweden and adopted a decision under article 104(6) and a recommendation under article 104(7) of the EC Treaty with regard to the UK.

The Council discussed procedures for following up matters relating to the forthcoming Commission annual progress report on the Lisbon Strategy in the run-up to the spring European Council.

The Council adopted conclusions on an Economic Policy Committee report regarding the quality of public finances in the EU.

The Austrian presidency concluded that, subject to confirmation by the Czech Republic, Poland and Cyprus, political agreement could be reached on an extension of the arrangements for reduced rates of VAT for labour intensive services until 2010. The presidency subsequently announced on 30 January that the Czech Republic and Cyprus had agreed the proposal. Discussions are ongoing between the presidency and Poland.

The Council held an exchange of views on issues related to energy markets.

My right hon. Friend the Paymaster General, represented the UK.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Judicial Appointments

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Baroness Ashton of Upholland, has made the following written ministerial statement.

"The Judicial Appointments Annual Report, covering the period 1 April 2004 to 30 September 2005, is published today, 31 January. This year the report continues to focus on developments and achievements within the judicial appointments process and the work undertaken ahead of the new Judicial Appointments Commission. We have placed the full statistical tables, which give the results of the various competitions held within the period of the report and their supporting narrative, on the departmental website at: www.dca.gov.uk. The report also shows that:

Some 549 appointments were made during 2004-05 from around 3,500 applications.

Appointments, including lay appointments, of minority ethnic candidates accounted for 12 per cent. of those made over the 18 month period.

Women accounted for 37 per cent. of appointments.

Since 1 April 2005 women have made up 46 per cent. and minority ethnic groups 17 per cent. of all appointments.

The report also outlines improvements made to the judicial appointments process, including the introduction of competence based selection for all judicial appointments and the pilots of assessment centre-based recruitment for Recorder and Employment Tribunal appointments.

Copies of the report will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses and is also available on the Department's website at: www.dca.gov.uk".

DEFENCE

Met Office

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Don Touhig): I am pleased to announce to Parliament my decision on the future of the Met Office forecast production network.

The Met Office has a responsibility to provide value for money to the taxpayer, to deliver the UK's public weather service in the most efficient and effective manner and to provide the best possible service to all its customers. A thorough review and analysis of the Met Office's production network has been carried out. This included an extensive consultation exercise which took place between July and November 2005 involving customers, parliamentarians, trades unions, staff and other interested parties.

I am grateful to the many individuals and groups who took part in this consultation. It generated a great deal of useful feedback. Indeed, based on a number of the constructive comments received, the Met Office was able to produce an additional option for consultation, as a result of which I agreed an extension to the consultation period.

Having carefully weighed the various issues and arguments, I have decided that the best solution for the future of the Met Office and its customers is to centralise more forecast production at the Met Office HQ in Exeter, while retaining production capability in Aberdeen and a reduced regional network focusing primarily on service delivery. Forecast advisers within the regional network will take a proactive role with customers to identify regional weather impacts, and deliver the Met Office's open road, marine and public weather services.

I am confident that this decision will deliver significant benefits to the Met Office, the UK taxpayer and all the Met Office's customers.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Higher Education (Student Finance)

The Secretary of State for Education and Skills (Ruth Kelly): The Department is today publishing the report of the end to end review of the arrangements for the delivery of financial support to higher education students, and its collection from borrowers, in England. The start of the review was announced on 7 June. Copies of the report are being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The Department welcomes the report. Its initial response is set out below.

The principles underpinning the report are that student finance delivery arrangements must meet demand from customers for clear information about their entitlement to support; faster decisions once applications have been made; timely payments upon starting a course; and accurate repayments when these come to be made. They must also meet taxpayers' expectations that value for money is being achieved. While much has been achieved in recent years, the report makes clear that significant further improvements in performance are required. The Department agrees with this analysis and with the challenging new objectives and targets the report recommends.

The report makes 44 specific recommendations. The Department accepts these in principle, subject to the further detailed work on costs and practicalities which some will require. In particular the Department supports the report's vision of a future in which a large majority of students will apply for financial support online, and the changes which will be needed to achieve this. It welcomes the report's identification of changes which will increase repayments, and it will respond actively to the report's call for DfES leadership to ensure accessible, accurate and consistent information, advice and guidance at national and local level.

The report also sets out options for a new delivery structure. In the case of assessments and payment, delivery will need to reflect the move to online applications. It will also need to improve the current variability of customer service, and to achieve efficiencies. For these reasons the Department is attracted to the option of a centrally-provided service for which a single organisation would be responsible, working with others to ensure we meet the needs of individuals requiring local assistance. However, this needs to be discussed with local authority representatives given the impact on their staff.

The report offers three options for the national organisation: an NDPB, a private sector contractor chosen through procurement, and a new relationship with the Student Loans Company. In considering these the Department will focus not only on delivery capability and value for money, but also on which option is most likely to produce the significant cultural shift which the report rightly calls for if the service is to become truly customer-focused. The Department will consider the options in the report for the collections process.

The Department will now discuss the report with key stakeholders and will make a detailed response in the spring.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Single Payment Scheme

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Jim Knight): On 19 January 2005 the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) announced that payments under the new CAP Single Payment Scheme (SPS) were expected to commence in February 2006, well within the EU regulatory window of 1 December 2005 to 30 June 2006. Over the past year, staff at the RPA have worked exceedingly hard to ensure that this expectation was turned into a reality.

At the EFRA Select Committee hearing on 11 January my noble Friend Lord Bach made it clear that payments would begin, in line with the RPA's forecast, before the end of February and that an announcement would be made by the end of this month on whether they would be full or partial payments. Having considered the latest progress reports on the processing of farmers' claims I am pleased to confirm today that the RPA will now proceed to make full payments. The contingency system to make partial payments will not, therefore, be invoked.

The RPA will now proceed to definitively establish entitlements on 14 February, details of which will be communicated to individual farmers within two weeks of that date. This will allow for the trading of entitlements to commence in preparation for the 2006 scheme.

Where 2005 SPS applications have been fully validated, payments will start before the end of February, with the bulk being made in March. In the minority of cases where queries remain unresolved, the validation process will continue beyond March, but farmers may be assured that the RPA will make every effort to complete the task in the shortest possible timeframe.

I hope this statement will provide some reassurance to the farming industry about the progress of the scheme. I want to acknowledge the co-operation and patience of everyone who has made a claim.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Pingat Jasa Malaysia

The Minister for Trade (Ian Pearson): The Pingat Jasa Malaysia (PJM) is a commemorative medal which the Government of Malaysia would like to award to eligible British citizens, for their service in Malaya or Malaysia between 31 August 1957 and 12 August 1966.

The Committee on the Grant of Honours, Decorations and Medals (the official Committee which advises Her Majesty the Queen on matters of honours policy) has recommended that an exception to two of the long-established rules governing the accepting and wearing of foreign (including Commonwealth) awards be made, to enable the Malaysian Government to present the PJM. Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to approve this recommendation.

This exception to the rules means that all of the many thousands of eligible former members of the armed forces/veterans, and others, may receive the PJM. This will be in addition to the British General Service Medal (with appropriate Malaya/Borneo clasp) that many veterans will have been eligible to receive for their service in Malaya/Borneo.

Permission to wear the PJM will not, however, formally be given. It is long standing Government policy that non-British medals will not be approved for events or service:

that took place more than five years before initial consideration, or in connection with events that took place in the distant past (e.g. commemorative medals);

if the recipient has received a British award for the same service.

However, Her Majesty's Government welcome, and believe it is important to recognise, the generous gesture by the King and Government of Malaysia, and their wish to acknowledge the service given by veterans and others in the years immediately after Malaysian independence. The exception recommended reflects this and our strong and important relationship with Malaysia.

The Committee on the Grant of Honours, Decorations and Medals reviewed the five-year and double medalling rules, and considered that, while there were sound reasons why they should be retained, there will be occasions when specific circumstances require exceptions to the rules to be recommended. When such exceptions are contemplated, the Committee will consider each request on a case by case basis, taking into account any special circumstances at the time. The fact that a similar request has been approved in the past will not mean that permission will be granted in future cases.

Applications for the PJM, and its subsequent distribution will essentially be a matter for the Malaysian authorities, in collaboration with the relevant British Government Departments. Large numbers may be involved. It will take some time for the applications to be processed and for the medal to be distributed. The Malaysian High Commission and the relevant British Government agencies will work together to determine eligible applicants. Veterans' organisations and service and regimental associations will also be involved.

Prospects for the European Union in 2006

The Minister for Europe (Mr. Douglas Alexander): This afternoon I intend to make an oral statement to the House to launch the latest in the Government's series of White Papers on the European Union, "Prospects for the European Union in 2006 and retrospective of the UK's Presidency of the EU, 1 July to 31 December 2005". The White Paper will be available in the Vote Office from 11.00 am.

This White Paper is one of a series on prospects for the EU initiated by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary in 2004. White Papers were issued in April and September 2004 and in February and June 2005. These White Papers are intended to stimulate the closer and deeper involvement of Members of both Houses in EU affairs.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Grant Reports (England and Wales)

The Minister for Policing, Security and Community Safety (Hazel Blears): I have today placed in the Library a copy of the Police Grant Report (England and Wales) 2006–07 (HC 845). The report sets out my determination for 2006–07 of the aggregate amount of grants that I propose to pay under section 46(2) of the Police Act 1996, and the amount to be paid to each police authority and to the Greater London Authority for the Metropolitan Police Authority.

I have also placed in the Library copies of the Police Grant Report (England and Wales) 2004–05 (Amending Report 2005–06) (HC 847) and the Police Grant Report (England and Wales) 2005–06 (Amending Report 2005–06). (HC 846) to take account of changes to Office for National Statistics population data and pensions changes.

General police grant allocations which include Home Office Police Grant and Revenue Support Grant for each police authority for 2006–07 are set out in Table 1. Amended allocations for 2004–05 and 2005–06 are set out in Tables 2 and 3.

Notes

1. Rounded to the nearest £100,000. Grant as calculated under the Local Government Finance Report (England) and Local Government Finance (Police) Report (Wales). This includes the Metropolitan Police special payment, and the effects of floors and scaling.

2. Allocations made under the Amending Report 2005–06 are adjusted for the transfer of pensions and security funding.

3. Figures for the City of London relate to Home Office Grant only as calculated in the Police Grant Report (England and Wales). Revenue Support Grant is allocated to the Common Council of the City of London as a whole in respect of all its functions. The City is grouped with education authorities for the purposes of floors.

4. Welsh figures include Home Office floor funding.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): The Afghan and UK Governments are signing a 10-year development partnership arrangement at an international conference on Afghanistan in London on 31 January and 1 February 2006. At the conference the Afghan Government will launch the Afghanistan Compact (a framework for the international community's engagement in Afghanistan over the next five years) and its interim national development strategy.

The purpose of the development partnership arrangement is to reaffirm the UK Government's long-term commitment to the Afghan Government's development plans, and set out the nature of this arrangement. Afghanistan has achieved good progress since the fall of the Taliban in 2001 under a Government committed to reducing poverty. But as a new democracy, emerging from conflict and constrained by weak capacity, low revenue and a dominant narcotics industry, Afghanistan risks regressing without long-term commitment from the international community. We hope a 10-year DPA will help build the Afghan Government's confidence and further strengthen its commitment to reducing poverty.

The DPA covers only UK commitments on international development assistance provided through the Department for International Development (DFID). The DPA also transparently sets out Afghan Government commitments needed for DFID to continue with substantial long-term development support. These include commitments on reducing poverty and the Millennium Development Goals; respecting human rights and other relevant international obligations; and strengthening financial management and accountability, which reduces the risk of funds being misused through weak administration or corruption. The DPA specifies what each Government will commit to, and what happens if the Afghan Government are in breach of a commitment. These commitments should help to strengthen the Afghan Government's planning and budgeting through more effective delivery and use of aid, resulting in greater impact on poverty. Through the DPA, the UK Government are outlining an indicative financial commitment of £330 million from DFID for 2006-09, as part of a larger UK spend in Afghanistan expected at around £500 million in total over a period of three years. DFID is committing to give the Afghan Government aid figures on a three-year rolling basis in future years to increase funding predictability; and to channel at least 50 per cent. of its funding through the Government's budget, in order to strengthen state capacity and institutions.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ilex Urban Regeneration Company Ltd.

The Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office (Mr. David Hanson): Along with Lord Rooker, I have deposited copies of the Annual Report and Financial Statements of Ilex URC Ltd. for the year ended 31 March 2005 incorporating the auditor's report in the Libraries of both Houses.

Compensation Agency

The Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office (Mr. David Hanson): The Government have received a report from the Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice in Northern Ireland on the Compensation Agency in Northern Ireland. The report has been published today.

The Government welcome this report, which recognises the important service provided by the Compensation Agency. It comments favourably on the work being done in creating the balance between a strong performance culture and the needs of staff in a changing environment.

Copies of the Chief Inspector's Report have been placed in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

UK Civil Plutonium and Uranium

The Minister for Energy (Malcolm Wicks): The Department will be placing the figures for the United Kingdom's stocks of civil plutonium and uranium as at 31 December 2004 in the Libraries of both Houses. In accordance with our commitment under the "Guidelines for the Management of Plutonium," we have also sent the figures to the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), who will circulate them to member states. The figures will be available on the Department's and the IAEA's websites.

The figures show that stocks of unirradiated plutonium in the UK totalled 102.7 tonnes at the end of 2004. Changes from the corresponding figures for 2003 are a consequence of continuing reprocessing operations (e.g. as reflected in the increased quantity of "unirradiated separated plutonium in product stores at reprocessing plants"). The decrease in the civil depleted, natural and low enriched uranium figures reflects the change in requirements for these materials at fuel fabrication plants and reactors.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Justice and Home Affairs Council

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Charles Clarke): The Austrian Justice and Home Affairs Informal Council was held on 12–14 January in Vienna. I represented the UK along with my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs, Baroness Ashton of Upholland.

The Austrian presidency opened the Council by introducing the discussion on asylum and immigration. They drew attention to their ideas in relation to regional co-operation; rapid intervention teams; charter flights; and information exchange.

The Commission stressed the work they are currently undertaking and, in particular, their intention to produce, by the end of January, a communication on practical co-operation. In advance of that the Commission have issued an information note setting out the ideas likely to be contained in the proposal. The intention is for these to be discussed in more detail at the February Justice and Home Affairs Council.

Key ideas included information on countries of origin and the Commission's ideas for a European information system. In the medium term the aim would be to establish a common European database on countries of origin with information pooled by member states. In the short term, it would be useful to consider a common form for the collection of information and agree a common format for this. The Commission's communication would contain ideas on how to respond to particular pressures on specific member states. These proposals would include amendments to the European Refugee Fund/ARGO funding programmes to establish a fund for emergency situations. The Commission communication would also propose the creation of rapid reaction/emergency teams capable of providing such things as emergency medical assistance and interpretation. Training would be an essential component. Finally, the Commission's communication was likely to look at the procedures for examining applications for refugee status, with a view to harmonising processing procedures across the EU. This would be a key element in the longer-term move towards a common European asylum system (CEAS).

In subsequent discussion, most member states were broadly supportive of the ideas set out in the presidency paper and the Commission's analysis.

I stressed that strong EU action on immigration/asylum was essential. The solutions were, in principle, simple and included a need for:

strong borders;

a clear relationship with third countries; and a clear system for managing and processing asylum applications.

These principles are easy to lay down but in practice difficult to achieve. I therefore stressed the need for the EU to focus on achieving practical outcomes.

Antonio Gutteres, UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) gave his organisation's full support to regional protection programmes, both at a political level and on the ground. The migration and asylum nexus was the key policy issue in looking at the large-scale flows of population. The key question was to ensure that those genuinely in need of asylum got the right treatment. Gutteres stressed it would be important, however, to tackle the root causes in a global and comprehensive way. That would involve looking at broader issues such as conflict resolution; institutional good governance; trade; debt relief; and common migration management. Regional protection programmes needed to be part of that overall process and not something done in isolation. The EU needed to provide strong political initiatives in taking forward this work in partnership with UNHCR.

In summary the presidency noted broad support for its ideas and for the ideas put forward by the Commission. It was clear that a comprehensive programme would need to be developed and that work on many of these issues would need to be taken forward in close co-operation and co-ordination with UNHCR.

On criminal law, Ministers discussed the future of the draft framework decision on procedural safeguards for defendants in criminal proceedings and the impact of the recent European Court of Justice Judgement (Case 176/03) on environmental crime. Ministers agreed that the extent to which criminal law measures should come within the first pillar needed to be considered in greater detail and the Commission agreed to reconsider its proposals to "fast-track" the movement of third pillar measures to first pillar legal bases. All member states agreed that the JHA Council should have an important role in ensuring consistency in the way in which the Court's ruling was applied in relation to subjects falling outside the third pillar.

In the afternoon the discussion moved on to Europol. Presentations were made before the Council by Gijs de Vries (EU Counter Terrorism co-ordinator), Max-Peter Ratzel (Europol) and Mike Kennedy (Eurojust) highlighting the progress that has been made but also the need for further improvements.

The presentations led to a debate on how Europol could be developed further, ensuring that law enforcement authorities of the member states derive maximum benefit from its progress. It was clear that greater flexibility was needed in handling the work of the management board and it was necessary to ensure that the Director of Europol had the proper tools to lead and guide the organisation. At present, the bureaucratic processes involved made it difficult to respond flexibly to changing priorities and to revise the staff regulations.

The Commission called for greater information flows to both Eurojust and Europol—especially now that both bodies are internationally recognised. The majority of member states agreed on the need to create a more flexible Europol, better able to respond to the demands of member states and to the needs of the day and with more flexible internal management. The point was also made that competence lay principally with the member states' own bodies and that it was therefore necessary to look at the development of Europol in that context. Europol should not duplicate work properly undertaken at a national level and should not be given any greater operational powers it had a co-ordinating and analytical role.

In this context, member states also discussed how better to improve co-operation and co-ordination and whether there was a need for the creation of a committee on internal security as envisaged by the constitutional treaty. A number of member states warned against anticipating the treaty and emphasised the need to use existing bodies more effectively.

The presidency, in its summing up, noted general agreement on the need for greater co-operation, e.g. in the fields of analysis and information exchange. In relation to Europol, it needed to be more involved in joint operations but not to lead these operations. It needed more flexibility and adaptability and to build on what had already been developed. Member states needed to ratify the Europol protocols and there was a general view that no new structures were needed but that the EU needed to make better use of its existing arrangements. In particular, the EU needed to identify key areas and topics such as the Western Balkans; Afghan drugs; and the Mediterranean Africa and ought to develop priority road-maps for each of those areas. Member states welcomed the presidency commitment in this area; supported the country and topic priorities and on the need to take regions and issues together for best effect.

On the Justice and Home Affairs external relations strategy the presidency stated that it intended to make concrete progress on the basis of the strategy agreed under the UK presidency, and will be working closely with future presidencies and other member states in relation to key geographic areas such as the Western Balkans.

In the Commission's analysis, priority needed to be given to neighbouring regions and the strategy ought not to be confined simply to security issues. Attention was drawn to the idea of action plans focusing on particular policy issues such a drug trafficking; cybercrime; human trafficking and illegal migration. They recognised, too, the need to work closely with the UN and other international organisations. A number of member states commented on the clear priorities in the strategy thanks to the work done under the UK presidency. Work now needed to be developed in a balanced way and with sufficient resources. Member states welcomed the notion of action oriented papers and there was broad acceptance that the existing EU frameworks and agreements were sufficient to take forward the strategy. Relevant operational agencies such as FRONTEX, Europol and Eurojust should be involved in taking that work forward. A number of member states mentioned other geographical areas which should receive attention in addition to the Western Balkans.

In conclusion, the presidency noted the need to get down to practical steps, in partnership with other bodies and to ensure a co-ordinated and consistent approach. European neighbourhood policy countries; the Western Balkans and the Southern Mediterranean were all important and the presidency noted in particular the Euromed meeting that it had planned. An EU-Africa meeting would be taken forward under the next presidency. Work with countries such as Russia was also highly important.

In concluding the Council, the presidency looked in particular at the way in which civil law matters were dealt with in the current institutional structures. They asked member states whether they felt adequately informed about Justice and Home Affairs related issues that are dealt with in other Council formations.

Member states supported the analysis set out in the presidency paper. Baroness Ashton noted that the Civil Law Committee was set up on the initiative of the last Austrian presidency in 1998 and that one of its purposes was to ensure that justice matters which arose in other Council formations could be considered by civil law experts. Baroness Ashton also noted that this had met with some success but that the presidency was right that the system could be improved.

Summing up, the presidency noted that member states broadly shared its analysis; that the Civil Law Committee should play a greater role and that both Coreper and the JHA Council should receive information on all subjects touching on civil law in other councils.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Independent Monitoring Commission (Eighth Report)

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Peter Hain): I have received the eighth report of the Independent Monitoring Commission (IMC). This report has been made under articles 4 and 7 of the international agreement that established the Commission and it reports on levels of paramilitary activity in Northern Ireland. I have considered the content of the report and I am today bringing it before Parliament. I have placed copies in the Library of the House.

The IMC has confirmed that PIRA paramilitary activity has ceased since 28 July.

The Independent International Commission on Decommissioning (IICD) today confirmed its position on the decommissioning of PIRA arms.

In its report, the IMC say that "We are of the firm view that the present Provisional IRA (PIRA) leadership has taken the strategic decision to end the armed campaign and pursue the political course which it has publicly articulated.

We see a number of definite signs of the organisation moving in the direction indicated in the statement" of 28 July 2005.

Compared to where PIRA stood only a few years ago, there has been a sea-change.

This is a positive report which shows that the IRA is moving in the right direction and is closing down: no murders, no recruitment and no bank robberies.

Of course the report does not paint a picture of perfection and the Government did not expect it to.

While the report shows that there have been significant changes in IRA criminal activity with some criminal operations being closed down, any on-going criminal activity is unacceptable and the Police Service of Northern Ireland and Assets Recovery Agency will continue to bear down on it.

In addition, the IMC draws attention to the activities by loyalists. The Commissioners acknowledge the work of the Progressive Unionist Party (PUP) and the Ulster Political Research Group (UPRG) to move things in a better direction and in efforts to influence the Ulster Defence Association (UDA).

Loyalist paramilitary activity and criminality as described in this report must come to an end.

The IMC concludes that the financial sanctions against Sinn Fein and the PUP should not continue.

More can and should be done to speed up the process of bringing loyalist paramilitary activity and criminality to an end and remaining PIRA activities should cease.

The Government believe that after this report of significant progress by the IRA, there is every basis for proceeding with political discussions on re-establishing the Assembly. Once again, I am grateful to the Commission for their submission of this report and for its careful analysis.

TRANSPORT

Felixstowe South (Port Reconfiguration)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Derek Twigg): I am today issuing a decision on the proposals submitted by Hutchison Ports for reconfiguration of Felixstowe South, "The Landguard Terminal" as a deep-sea container port terminal. The inspector's report of the public inquiry held into the proposals is also being published today.

My decision and the reasons for it are set out in my Department's decision letter. After carefully considering the inspector's report and taking into account all relevant considerations, I have decided to authorise the port development, in line with the inspector's recommendation.

My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has accepted the inspector's recommendation in favour of those parts of the reconfiguration proposals which fall to him to determine and has today issued a decision granting planning permission.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Disabled People's Housing (Common Parts Review)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mrs. Anne McGuire): The Review Group on Common Parts was set up, during the passage of the Disability Discrimination Bill, which gained Royal Assent in April 2005, because of concerns expressed by Members of the other place that some disabled people could become confined to their homes if the common parts of the premises could not be adapted to meet their needs.

The Review Group was asked to investigate the need and evidence for change in relation to alterations to the common parts of let residential premises and to make recommendations to me and the Minister for Housing and Planning, Yvette Cooper.

The Review Group has considered a wide range of evidence including: a review of landlord and tenant and housing legislation, information on the experience of disabled people, research concerning the attitudes of tenants, lessees and landlords to adjustments to common parts and a range of surveys and statistical reports.

It has come to the conclusion that while there is evidence of good practice by some landlords, there is also evidence of unmet need for adjustments to common parts to assist disabled people. Therefore, it has concluded that a problem does exist and has made a series of detailed recommendations in its report, entitled "A review of the current position in relation to adjustments to the common parts of let residential premises, and recommendation for change", 23 December 2005. The Government are now considering the detail of the report and its recommendations. The report has been placed in the Library.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Prisoners' Voting Rights

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor has made the following written ministerial statement.

"The recent judgment of the European Court of Human Rights in the case of Hirst, concerning prisoners' voting rights has raised a number of difficult and complex issues which need careful consideration. The ECtHR indicated that there should be proper debate about those issues and I have therefore concluded that the best way forward would be to embark on full public consultation in which all the options can be examined and which will give everyone the opportunity to have their say. A consultation document is therefore in preparation and I hope it will be available for discussion in a few weeks time. Thereafter there will be a period for those with an interest to make their views known, which will help to inform the development of future policy."

DEFENCE

RAF Canberra T4

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Don Touhig): On 2 September 2004 a RAF Canberra T4 aircraft of 39 Squadron crashed at RAF Marham during a training sortie, resulting in the deaths of the two pilots, and serious injuries to the navigator.

The RAF Board of Inquiry has now reported, and the findings have been given to the next of kin of the deceased aircrew.

I have today placed the redacted Board of Inquiry (parts 1–5) in the Library of the House.

Logistics Modernisation

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): Following my oral announcement to the House on 8 November 2005 on proposals for the future of the five business units of the Defence Aviation Repair Agency (DARA), the Trade Union consultation period is over, and I have made my final decision. This decision concerns the future of DARA's business units at St. Athan in South Wales, Almondbank in Perth—Scotland, Sealand in north Wales and the two units at Fleetlands in Hampshire.

I have noted the House of Commons Defence Committee Report into Delivering Front Line Capability to the RAF. I will provide a full response to the Committee in due course but it is my judgment that further delay in announcing the way forward will prolong a period of uncertainty for the DARA workforce, will incur additional costs, and will adversely affect current work to examine options for DARA.

I have decided to implement my preferred options as explained in the consultation document. This will mean that:

DARA's engine maintenance business at Fleetlands in Hampshire will close by April 2007.

DARA's helicopter repair and associated component businesses at Fleetlands in Hampshire, and Almondbank in Scotland, together with DARA's VC10 work at St. Athan, will be taken to the market to test whether sale might deliver improved effectiveness and value for money for our armed forces and a better long-term future for the workforce.

DARA's electronics business, based in Sealand North Wales, will be retained within MOD ownership, while we optimise the Department's future avionics support arrangements.

At the time of my announcement last November I made clear that we would work closely with the regional assembly in Wales, and we will of course engage with the other regional bodies, to mitigate the consequences of these necessary decisions and to provide appropriate outplacement services to help those affected.

I pay tribute to the excellent service DARA employees have provided to our armed forces. I am particularly mindful of the impact this announcement will have for individuals, especially, and for south Wales in general. We will help those affected to find alternative employment wherever possible and we will make every effort to use natural labour turnover, redeployment and voluntary redundancy to mitigate the loss. Using all of the above means we will seek to keep compulsory redundancies to a minimum but a significant number may be expected.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Gypsies and Travellers

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Yvette Cooper): I am announcing today new guidance on enforcement and planning for site provision to address the problem of Gypsy and Traveller sites in inappropriate locations. This guidance sets out to address the shortage of authorised sites, and strengthen enforcement against the problem sites that can cause real distress for local communities.

The Government are also developing new measures to strengthen planning enforcement. This includes examining ways to strengthen temporary stop notices, where alternative sites are available, and establishing a new Task Group on enforcement involving the police and local government.

Three quarters of Gypsy and Traveller caravans are on authorised sites. But there are too many problem sites which can cause real distress for local communities. That is why we need stronger enforcement alongside more action from local authorities to identify alternative sites. Stronger enforcement and more alternative sites go hand in hand if we are to find a long term solution to the problems some communities face.

The Government are setting up a new Task Group, drawing together central and local government, the police and other agencies to address the wide variations in the use of enforcement powers and champion best practice. The Task Group will examine the difficulties some local agencies face in effective enforcement.

The Government will also consult the group on proposals to strengthen temporary stop notices where alternative sites are available. The group will act as expert advisers to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) and the Home Office, on further measures to strengthen enforcement, where there is alternative site provision.

The new circular we are publishing today, "Planning for Gypsy and Traveller Caravan Sites", provides that local authorities will need to identify appropriate land for Gypsy and Traveller sites through the planning system, to deal with the growing shortage of sites and prevent unauthorised sites in problem locations.

There has been a growing shortage of authorised sites since the duty on local authorities was repealed in 1994. Local authorities will have to assess the need for Gypsy and Traveller accommodation in their area. Guidance on carrying out accommodation assessments is also published today.

Also published today is new ODPM-Home Office guidance for local councillors on enforcement against unauthorised encampments—where Gypsies and Travellers camp on land they do not own. This is the first in a new series aimed at addressing the wide variations in the use of powers by local authorities and police forces across England, and enabling councillors to hold local agencies to account.

Further guidance will be published later this year, covering enforcement against unauthorised development—where Gypsies and Travellers develop their own land without planning permission—as well as antisocial behaviour, such as verbal abuse and late-night noise, and environmental problems, such as fly tipping. Together, they will give police and local authorities clear instructions on how to use the range of powers available to them.

Copies of these documents will be available to download from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at www.odpm.gsi.gov.uk/gypsysites and will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Identity Fraud

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Andy Burnham): Today I am announcing an updated estimate of the cost of identity fraud to the UK economy.

In 2002, the Cabinet Office undertook a study into the nature and extent of identity fraud and estimated that the total cost of identity fraud to the UK was £1.3 billion. It has, until now, been the most recent and current research on the problem. In the absence of consistent recording practices across the wide range of organisations affected by identity fraud, the Cabinet Office study had to make use of information which in some cases had been collected for different purposes but was nevertheless the best that could be obtained in the circumstances.

The Home Office Identity Fraud Steering Committee (IFSC) has completed a one-off exercise to update the Cabinet Office estimate for the purpose of establishing trends in the cost of identity fraud over the past three years. The new figure has been produced using the same methodology as the 2002 Cabinet Office Study, but with more up-to-date figures where these are available. As with the previous study, it represents a best estimate of the scale of the problem.

The latest estimate is that identity fraud costs the UK economy over £1.7 billion. The table, which I have placed in the House Library and which will also be published on the IFSC and Home Office websites, sets out a detailed breakdown of the component parts of the new figure.

Because of the limitations of the method used previously to estimate the cost of identity fraud, the IFSC has agreed and implemented a new method to gather data on a more consistent basis to produce future estimates. We hope to have results from these new arrangements by early next year.

Figures from CIFAS—the UK's Fraud Prevention Service—show that there were more than 135,000 incidents of identity fraud in 2005, which is an increase of over 500 per cent since 1999.

The introduction of a secure national identity cards scheme using biometric information will make a step change in protecting people from identity fraud. By linking a person's identity to biometric data which are unique to that person, a criminal claiming to be another person can be detected. The combination of a secure national identity register and a robust means of verifying identity will be an important safeguard for individuals, public services and the private sector against identity fraud.

Meanwhile, the Government are working actively with partners in the private sector and law enforcement to combat the growing threat of identity fraud. The Home Office, in collaboration with other Government Departments and private sector organisations, such as the Department for Work and Pensions, HM Revenue and Customs, APACS—the UK payments association, CIFAS—The UK's Fraud Prevention Service and the British Bankers' Association, set up the IFSC in 2003 to lead a cross public/private sector work programme to tackle identity theft and identity fraud. The programme co-ordinates existing activity in the public and private sectors and identifies new projects and initiatives to reduce identity crime. Work is ongoing to implement measures against identity fraud that can be put in place in advance of an identity cards scheme.

All police forces in England and Wales have now established single points of contact with their colleagues in the Crown Prosecution Service and other Government Departments and agencies, including HM Revenue and Customs, to improve the investigation and prosecution of identity crime.

We are raising public awareness of identity fraud and how people can protect themselves from this type of crime. This includes the IFSC identity theft website www.identitytheft.org.uk which has had over 170,000 hits, and the identity theft leaflet, which I launched last year. Since its launch, the leaflet has been co-branded and distributed by a number of organisations including the National Neighbourhood Watch Association and Barclays.

The Home Office, UK Passport Service (UKPS) and DVLA worked closely with APACS, the Finance and Leasing Association and CIFAS—the UK's Fraud Prevention Service to support their project to produce Identity Fraud—The UK Manual. The manual includes examples of known security features from UK passports and driving licences and provides guidance to financial organisations to help spot forgeries.

UKPS has deployed a database of lost and stolen passports that is being shared with border authorities and police worldwide to help prevent identity fraud. UKPS is also trialling the validation of passports against the passport database when they are presented as evidence of identity when opening bank accounts. This helps to identify forged and lost and stolen passports which are being used fraudulently. In a two-month pilot involving five companies, 71 suspicious instances of passport use were detected, for example where the details on the passport differed from that held on the database or the passport had been reported lost or stolen.

We changed the law in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 to align the penalty associated with fraudulently obtaining a driving licence with that for fraudulently obtaining a passport and made these offences arrestable. The maximum penalty for both documents is now two years' imprisonment. The Identity Cards Bill, which is currently before Parliament, strengthens the law on the possession and use of false identity documents which are often used by criminals to open false bank accounts.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Strategy for Sustainable Construction Report

The Minister for Industry and the Regions (Alun Michael): I am today launching a consultation process on the Government's draft "Strategy for Sustainable Construction Report 2006". The strategy is an update of the existing "Building a Better Quality of Life" produced by the then DETR, and focuses on the principle of sustainable development to which the Government as a whole are signed up.

The purpose of updating the strategy is to provide a framework to guide future progress within the construction industry. I expect the review to be complete and published by summer 2006 and I shall inform the House of the outcome.

TRANSPORT

Brighton Main Line Route

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Derek Twigg): Today the Department for Transport has published the Route Utilisation Strategy for the Brighton main line. This Strategy has been designed to improve the journey experience for the majority of the users of this busy and important route by delivering improved punctuality and more seats at peak times. This will be achieved through a re-timetabling exercise that will exploit the capability of the network to its fullest extent. I have placed a copy of the strategy in the House Library.

Route Utilisation Strategies take a strategic look at the rail network and its timetable. They outline plans to improve timetables to ensure the best use is made of the current rail network and to ensure that services meet current and future demands. This particular strategy was the last to be initiated by the Strategic Rail Authority. Strategies for other parts of the network are being developed by Network Rail.

The strategy published today confirms proposals for Brighton main line services up to 2012. It builds on the work undertaken by the SRA and takes account of the responses it received to its consultation. In particular it takes account of concerns raised by BAA and airline companies about the Gatwick Express service.

The concept of a fast, frequent service between Gatwick and Victoria will remain, although it will be necessary for those trains to serve additional stations. This will still constitute a high-quality service geared towards airline travellers, and in addition most Sussex coast trains will also serve the airport.

Further proposals will bring benefits to passengers elsewhere on the route. Punctuality and journey times will be improved by simplifying train movements, and crowding will be eased through the introduction of longer trains and additional stops at the busiest stations.

One of the proposed improvements has already been introduced; a direct Brighton to Ashford service now links coastal towns with the Brighton main line and the Channel Tunnel Rail Link.

Commercial negotiations with the relevant train operators, to facilitate the proposed changes, have already begun. Network Rail will lead on the implementation of the specific timetable proposals.

Thirty two thousand commuters use the Brighton main line each day. This strategy will build on improvements already made—including the introduction of over 700 new carriages in the last three years—through the provision of an additional 1,280 seats in each of the busiest commuting hours. I am confident that together these changes will deliver real improvements for all rail travellers whether they are travelling for work or for leisure.

TREASURY

Double Taxation Convention (United Kingdom and Japan)

The Paymaster General (Dawn Primarolo): A new Double Taxation Convention with Japan was signed on 2 February 2006. After signature, the text of the Convention was deposited in the Libraries of both Houses and made available on HM Revenue and Customs' website. The text of the Convention will be scheduled to a draft Order in Council and laid before the House of Commons in due course.

DEFENCE

Marine Services

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): Marine services embrace a wide range of waterborne and associated support activities, both in and out of port, at Portsmouth, Devonport and on the Clyde, as well as maintenance of UK and overseas moorings and navigation buoys and support to a range of military operations and training. Under the current arrangements, in port services are provided by Serco Denholm Ltd., under Government-owned contractor-operated arrangements, while out of port services are undertaken by the Royal Maritime Auxiliary Service (RMAS).

Since 2002, the Ministry of Defence has been working to find a long-term service provider, and following an industry briefing day in May 2003 and a subsequent prequalification questionnaire exercise, four bidders were short listed, although two subsequently withdrew. The two remaining bidders, Serco Denholm and the Starfish Consortium (the latter comprising Babcock Naval Services (Clyde), Devonport Management Ltd. (Plymouth), Fleet Support Ltd. (Portsmouth) and Smit International (Scotland) Ltd.), were invited to submit two proposals offering a complete service: One of these proposals reflected a partnering arrangement with the RMAS, whereby staff remain in the MOD; the second proposal entailed TUPE transfer as appropriate.

Detailed bid evaluations, using predetermined criteria, have now been completed and Serco Denholm's proposal to provide the complete service, including taking ownership of MOD marine service assets, has been selected as the preferred bidder. Subject to successful final negotiations with the company, a contract will be awarded later this year with service commencement (vesting day) some three months after. While Serco Denholm's proposal may yet be modified as a result of the final negotiations, the ensuing arrangement should be easier to manage than the current ones, be more flexible and will offer the greater potential for continuous improvements.

A key implication of Serco Denholm's proposal results in the transfer of the RMAS workforce to the company on vesting day under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (TUPE) Regulations. New pension arrangements will also be introduced that are broadly comparable to those currently enjoyed under the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme.

A further key aspect for MOD will be the closure of Her Majesty's mooring depot at Pembroke Dock, which currently employs 38 MOD staff, within 12 months of vesting day. However, Serco Denholm has developed plans with the Milford Haven Port Authority, the Welsh Development Agency and Pembrokeshire County Council to encourage inward investment and support building and infrastructure projects. This will provide alternative opportunities outside the MOD to sustain and improve job creation, in turn underpinning future jobs.

The changes in the way the service will be provided will result in a number of post reductions, although; Pembroke Dock aside, it is too early to determine the exact numbers, or be specific on how different locations will be affected. As far as possible, reductions will be achieved through either natural wastage or voluntary means although the need for some compulsory redundancies cannot be ruled out at this stage.

Throughout the tendering process the Department has engaged with the relevant trade unions. Informal dialogue will continue during the negotiation phase and the formal TUPE consultation process will commence following award of contract.

Anti-Structures Munition

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): I am pleased to announce the award of the contract for the demonstration and manufacture of the Anti-Structures Munition to Dynamit Nobel Defence. The contract is valued at £40 million and includes provision of combat weapons, training systems and contractor logistic support for the first five years.

The Anti-Structures Munition will provide our armed forces with a new capability. It will enable infantry to defeat hardened structures such as buildings or bunkers—reducing casualties to our forces while minimising collateral damage.

It is essential that we provide our armed forces with the tools they need to get the job done as safely, precisely and quickly as possible. This munition will help do just that.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

General Affairs and External Relations Council

The Minister for Europe (Mr. Douglas Alexander): My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, Sir John Grant (UK Permanent Representative to the EU) and I represented the UK at the General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC) in Brussels on 30 January 2006.

The agenda items were covered as follows:

Work Programme for 2006

The Council held a short public debate on the Annual Operational Programme (AOP) of the Council for 2006. The debate highlighted the priority areas as the Constitutional Treaty, the Inter-Institutional Agreement on the financial perspective, growth and jobs, Western Balkans, crisis and disaster management (both internal and external), human rights, climate change, JHA, transparency, and external relations.

The Council also took note of the European Commission's Legislative and Work Programme for 2006, presented by Commissioner Wallstrom who highlighted in particular growth and jobs, research and education, worker mobility and gender equality.

Lisbon Strategy: Commission Annual Progress Report

European Commission President Barroso presented the Commission's annual progress report on implementation of the economic reform strategy set out at Lisbon in 2000. He highlighted the positive progress so far and close partnership between Member States and the Commission. He said the National Reform Programmes contained a wide range of ideas and delivery was now the priority. But there was also a need for further co-ordinated action in some areas and therefore the Commission's report set out four priority areas for immediate action: investment in knowledge and innovation; unlocking business potential, particularly of SMEs; responding to globalisation and demographic change; and a more efficient and integrated EU energy policy. President Barroso concluded by emphasising the need for increased visibility of national action to influence public opinion positively. The Presidency summed up the four themes for the Lisbon agenda as "partnership, complementarity, visibility, and a focus on priorities". The Council took note of the presentation.

World Trade Organisation/Doha Development Agenda

The Council was briefed by Commissioner Mandelson on the latest developments in the current round of trade negotiations under the World Trade Organisation's Doha Development Round following meetings of key WTO members in the margins of the World Economic Forum in Davos (25–29 January). There was broad support for the Commission's position both in the Council and at an informal meeting of EU trade ministers on 29 January.

Western Balkans

High Representative Solana briefed the Council on the situation in Kosovo following the death of President Rugova. He noted President Rugova's successor, both as President and head of the negotiating team to the Kosovo status process, had not yet been identified. He also briefed on the activities of his personal representative in Montenegro, where no agreement had yet been reached between Government and opposition parties on the conduct of the proposed independence referendum.

The Commission introduced their recent Communication, proposing a number of practical ways in which the region's EU perspective could be made more tangible to citizens: notably through stimulating trade and investment, and by EU visa facilitation. Member States welcomed the Communication and looked forward to discussing the region's future in more depth at the EU-Western Balkans Ministerial Meeting to be held in the margins of the Foreign Ministers' informal meeting (Gymnich) in March.

The Council adopted Conclusions, covering the Commission's Communication, Kosovo, Bosnia, Montenegro and ICTY co-operation.

Latin America

Commissioner Ferrero-Waldner gave a short presentation of the Commission Communication on Latin America. Member States welcomed the Communication and looked forward to the EU-Latin America/Caribbean Summit in Vienna in May.

Afghanistan

The Council agreed Conclusions which reaffirm the EU's long term support for Afghan-led reconstruction, welcome the 31 Jan–1 Feb London Conference and the launch of the Afghanistan Compact, and commit to increased support for economic and social development, counter narcotics, and reform of the justice and security sectors. In a brief intervention, Dutch Foreign Minister Bot welcomed the Conclusions stating his desire that the Council discuss Afghanistan at greater length some time in the future.

Belarus

In a short discussion High Representative Solana and Commissioner Ferrero-Waldner gave readouts of their separate bilateral meetings with Mr Alexander Milinkevich (united opposition candidate in the forthcoming Belarus Presidential elections who was visiting Brussels). The meetings had been warm and constructive.

Several Member States intervened emphasising the importance of support for Belarusian civil society, international election observers operating unimpeded, monitoring the plight of political prisoners in Belarus, and reducing visa fees for Belarusians as a way of promoting people to people contact. They also highlighted the role of the OSCE in monitoring the election, and the scope for further co-operation with the US.

The Council adopted short Conclusions which call on the Belarusian authorities to ensure that the elections are conducted in accordance with international standards; welcome the Belarusian authorities' invitation to OSCE/ODIHR to monitor the election and note the willingness of EU Member States to contribute to that mission; but state the EU's readiness to take restrictive measures against individuals responsible for a failure to uphold international standards.

Middle East Peace Process

The Council discussed the Hamas election victory over lunch. High Representative Solana summarised the situation stressing that he understood that it was unlikely that a new government would be in place for at least three months but the Palestinian Authority (PA) was now bankrupt. Commissioner Ferrero-Waldner agreed the PA was in financial crisis. Several Member States intervened highlighting the need to keep lines of communication open but to make clear EU demands, namely that Hamas renounce violence. The Council adopted Conclusions which make clear that the EU's readiness to continue funding is clearly dependent on a Palestinian government committed to a peaceful and negotiated solution of the conflict.

Iran

In a short discussion French Foreign Minister Mr Douste-Blazy and the Foreign Secretary briefed the Council on the E3/EU process ahead of the 2–3 February emergency International Atomic Energy Agency Board of Governors meeting.

Iraq

The Council agreed positive Conclusions welcoming the announcements of the election results, paying tribute to the impressive turnout of voters and encouraging the swift formation of an inclusive government.

Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM)

The Council, over lunch, considered the forthcoming meetings to be held in Europe in 2006 under the ASEM process on the basis of the EU Common Position on Burma, which is due for renewal in April.

AOB—Nepal

Dutch Foreign Minister Bot drew the Council's attention to recent developments in Nepal and in particular over human rights violations. In a statement on 27 January, the EU expressed its deep concern over the situation in the country, where political forces seem to be moving towards an ever more severe confrontation and polarisation, thus increasing the risk of deepening political crisis.

AOB—Ivory Coast

Dutch Foreign Minister Bot drew the Council's attention to the deteriorating situation in Ivory Coast and stressed the importance of the international community's engagement to encourage a return to the peace process.

AOB—Middle East: Reactions to cartoons in a Danish newspaper

Danish Foreign Minister Moller raised over lunch the issue of reactions in the Middle East following the publication in September 2005 of cartoons portraying the prophet Mohammed in an independent Danish newspaper. The Council adopted a statement strongly rejecting any threats by militant factions against EU citizens. The Presidency also underlined the importance of both freedom of expression, as a fundamental freedom, and respect for religious beliefs.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fundraising (Self-Regulation)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Paul Goggins): I am today setting out the principles on which the Government will base their assessment of the success of the self-regulation of voluntary sector fundraising. This follows consultation with the fundraising sector last year and the announcement from the Institute of Fundraising last week of the appointments of a chair and director for the scheme following open competition.

Self-regulation of fundraising was a recommendation of the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit. The Strategy Unit reviewed the charitable and wider not-for-profit sector and in 2002 published its report "Private Action, Public Benefit" which made a number of recommendations. We accepted this recommendation and have made provision in the Charities Bill for statutory regulation should self-regulation fail.

The main aim of the self-regulation scheme is to maintain and build on the high levels of public trust and confidence in the voluntary sector's fundraising activities. The scheme will help the sector guard against future threats to these high levels of public confidence. It will promote best practice and enable the sector to respond to criticism.

The Institute of Fundraising has led the development of the proposals for self-regulation, with significant support from the sector. However, the Regulation of Fundraising Scheme (RFS) will be run independently of the Institute. The scheme, which will be voluntary, will be open to all charities and fundraising organisations throughout the UK. It is expected to be up and running and open for membership this summer. The Government support self-regulation of fundraising, and (along with the Scottish Executive) are providing funding to enable the scheme to establish itself. In the longer term, the scheme is expected to become self-funding through membership subscriptions.

We have not set out specific long-term targets for the RFS, as these could be inflexible and restrictive. Instead we have focused on what the Government expect the scheme to deliver, and how that could be measured when the Government are considering the scheme's success. External factors would need to be taken into account, and over time we would also expect the fundraising scheme to develop its own performance monitoring and reporting. Respondents to last year's consultation were broadly supportive of this approach.

The expectations which the Government have for the RFS, and which will be considered in any assessment of its success, are as follows:

The scheme will need to attract high levels of voluntary participation across the sector, although it is appreciated that it will take time to build up levels of participation. Participation should reflect the diversity of voluntary sector fundraising;

The scheme and its participants must provide a clear public promise of what should be expected from fundraisers who are participants in the scheme, and from the scheme itself. The codes of practice underpinning the scheme should go beyond requiring compliance with the law, and should set a high standard of good practice;

The scheme and its participants should actively encourage awareness among non-members and the public of the scheme's existence, and good fundraising practice;

The scheme should promote openness, transparency and accountability in fundraising practice;

The control of the scheme must be independent and impartial. Its governing body must include consumer representatives and those with fundraising experience;

Compliance with the scheme must be monitored proportionately. But there should not be complete reliance on self-certification;

There must be fair and effective sanctions for non-compliance which are proportionate to the nature and extent of any non-compliance. The initial focus should be on improving performance;

The scheme must have a clear and effective complaints handling process which is easily accessible to the public and which provides fair redress.

The scheme must be clear about its remit and should work effectively with other regulators, particularly where issues are outside its remit.

The scheme must be accountable through the publication of an annual report which details the scheme's performance. The scheme should also develop its own meaningful performance indicators following consultation with stakeholders.

The scheme should identify emerging trends in fundraising practice, and the public's perception of it, and be sufficiently flexible to quickly adapt and evolve codes of practice where necessary.

Regulation should be proportionate and the scheme should keep to a minimum any regulatory burden to participants.

We will review the development of the scheme on an annual basis, and agree specific targets, while the scheme is supported by Government funding. However we want to give the scheme sufficient time to become established and prove its effectiveness, before we judge its success. We therefore propose that a formal review of the success of self-regulation take place as part of the review of the impact of the Charities Bill which is due within five years of enactment and will report to Parliament.

If self-regulation were to fail, any proposals under the reserve power for statutory regulation of fundraising would require consultation and would be subject to the affirmative resolution of Parliament. A similar reserve power exists in Scotland, in the Charities and Trustee Investment Act 2005. Charity law and regulation is a devolved matter, and in Scotland it would be for the Scottish Executive to decide whether or not to pursue statutory regulation there. However, we will work closely with the Scottish Executive in monitoring the progress of the self-regulation scheme, and reviewing its success.

A summary of responses to the consultation has been deposited in the Library and is available on the Home Office website at:

www.communities.homeoffice.gov.uk/activecomms/charity-law-and-reg.

I am grateful to everyone who has helped to develop the proposals for self-regulation, and those who responded to the consultation on the criteria for assessing its success. Further details of the self-regulation scheme are available from the Institute of Fundraising at: www.institute-of-fundraising.org.uk.

Police Force Restructuring

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Charles Clarke): I should like to make a statement to report progress on the review of police force structures which I announced in September 2005.

My vision is a police service which is close, responsive and accountable to the communities it serves, supported by larger forces with the capacity and specialist expertise to protect the public from wider threats such as serious and organised crime and terrorism.

My overriding concern, and that of those responsible for leading the police service across the country, is to ensure that the police service is capable of preventing and responding to crime and disorder at every level: local neighbourhood; borough or local authority; force; nationally; and internationally. Although there has been much progress at all levels, especially at the local level where we have made a clear commitment to roll out neighbourhood policing across the country by 2008, it is vital that we close the gap in policing serious crime and major incidents identified by HMIC last year.

I am grateful for the submissions received from police force areas on or before 23 December. These submissions put forward a range of options for improving police capacity to tackle serious crime and major incidents, and at the same time delivering and sustaining neighbourhood policing. It is striking that all involved are clear that the current structures are not capable of delivering effective policing to meet 21st Century challenges.

HMIC has considered each of the options put forward in those submissions against a range of criteria. Last week they gave me the first of their assessments—that is, the protective services assessments which assess options on the basis of the delivery of effective policing. I am also being provided with additional assessments based on affordability, organisational resilience and impact on the CJS partner agencies. As I have said throughout, the decisions which I make will be clearly based on those professional assessments.

I can tell the House that the protective services assessments undertaken thus far have set out clearly, for each region, which options are of greatest benefit from the policing perspective. These are the options which will go forward for further consideration.

There are four areas where the clear conclusion of the protective services assessment is that there is only one acceptable option. These are the North East, North West, West Midlands and Wales. I am therefore today meeting with representatives from forces and police authorities in those areas to invite them to engage closely with me to consider taking forward the option for policing which I believe will be of greatest benefit to their communities. Final decisions on how we proceed in these areas will of course be based on the full consideration of the implications for organisational resilience, affordability, precepting and the impact on the wider CJS.

I am also writing to the Chief Officers and Police Authorities in the other five regions to explain the process and timescales for further discussions on the position in their regions. In the next few weeks I intend to meet with those Chief Constables and Police Authority Chairs to discuss the subsequent assessments and if possible to agree a way forward. At the same time, we will address the concerns which have been raised by police authorities regarding issues of finance and governance.

The proposals involving London will be dealt with at a later date, once reviews of fraud and transport policing have reported.

I shall make further reports to the House about the detailed plans for all areas as options for each are refined.

Options proposed at this stage as suitable for progression:

West Midlands

Merger of Staffordshire, Warwickshire, West Mercia and West Midlands

North East

Merger of Cleveland, Durham and Northumbria

North West

Greater Manchester Police standalone

Merger of Cheshire and Merseyside

Merger of Cumbria and Lancashire

Wales

Merger of Dyfed-Powys, Gwent, North Wales and South Wales.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

BNFL (Sale of Westinghouse)

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Alan Johnson): BNFL is today signing a purchase and sale agreement with Toshiba to sell its US subsidiary Westinghouse for the sum of $5.4 billion. This is an excellent outcome for the UK taxpayer who stands to benefit from a return of around four times BNFL's original investment in the business.

I am confident that as part of a global business, Westinghouse will be better placed to capitalise upon the prospects for international nuclear new build projects. The Government would have been reluctant for the taxpayer to take on the commercial risks of such international projects. Toshiba conversely is able to make the necessary investment and will be able to create synergies that are not available under the current ownership to take advantage of growing opportunities.

BNFL and Toshiba will now apply for the necessary regulatory and other clearances with a view to completing the transaction within six months.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Higher Education (Deregulation of Governance)

The Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning (Bill Rammell): I have today written to heads of all English higher education institutions explaining how the Government is taking forward our commitment outlined in paragraph 7.10 of the 2003 White Paper "The Future of Higher Education". Copies of my letter have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Chapter 7 of the White Paper focused on freeing up higher education institutions from bureaucracy and questioned how far regulation of universities through the Privy Council was necessary. Currently, the legal position is that all changes to institutions' Charters and Statutes or Instruments and Articles of Government have to be approved by the Privy Council and can delay institutional changes. The White Paper concluded that the Privy Council did not need to approve minor changes in the way universities go about their business. Subsequently, we have been working to decide what should count as a "minor change".

My letter explains how our proposals for de-regulation of governance arrangements will mean that in future only core issues of public interest will be monitored by the Privy Council.

The approach to drawing up key areas of public interest that still need protecting has been agreed by the Department, the Privy Council Office and our stakeholder bodies—Universities UK, the Standing Conference of Principals, the Association of Heads of University Administration, the Committee of University Chairmen, the Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education, the Higher Education Funding Council for England and the devolved administrations.

The Department has identified the key areas where there is a continuing "public interest" in university governance. These include degree awarding powers and university title, powers and objects, academic freedom and governance structures, particularly the functions and constitution of the governing body. Non-key areas include provisions on membership, internal structures and detailed roles and constitution bodies such as the Senate and Court.

My letter explains that while the Government cannot require institutions to liberalise their governance arrangements, we very much hope that they will bring forward proposals that will relieve them of the obligation of having all amendments to their governance arrangements agreed by the Privy Council.

This is just one of the steps we are taking to demonstrate the Government are serious about reducing unnecessary bureaucracy to the absolute minimum compatible with effective regulation and quality assurance, not just in higher education, but more broadly across education and the economy as a whole. Light touch, risk-based and proportionate regulation is essential for the success of any sector in our 21st century economy and this is especially vital for higher education, to help ensure our universities remain world class.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture and Fisheries Council

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Margaret Beckett): I represented the United Kingdom at the Agriculture and Fisheries Council meeting in Brussels on 23 January 2006.

The Chairman of the Council began by setting out the Austrian presidency work programme for the next six months. It includes progressing the WTO negotiations, work on rural development financing, avian influenza, sustainable development and renewable energy, genetically modified crops, and the European Fisheries Fund.

The Energy Commissioner and the Agriculture Commissioner jointly presented their Biomass Action Plan. The Energy Commissioner stressed the need to address the changes in the EU's energy situation caused by the increased price of oil and gas and the recent gas crisis in Russia and the Ukraine. The Agriculture Commissioner stressed the importance of the biomass plan being demand driven. I welcomed the action plan's integrated approach and its focus on energy for heating.

The Agriculture Commissioner presented a proposal to update and simplify the EU legislation governing organic farming and the labelling and sale of organic products. She also presented her proposals on changes to the rules for protected geographical indications and traditional specialties for agriculture products.

The Council agreed a request from Cyprus for approval to pay a national state aid to cover long-standing agricultural debts. The UK abstained.

The Council took note of the presentation by the Commissioner for Health and Consumer Protection of the Community Action Plan on the Protection and Welfare of Animals for the period 2006–10. The plan is intended as an overarching strategy paper containing a number of options for future legislation and focused on five main themes: simplifying and updating existing animal welfare legislation; promoting research and alternative approaches to animal testing; introducing standardised animal welfare indicators; improving communication of welfare issues to animal handlers and the general public; and, supporting international activities for the protection of animals.

Under any other business: the Commissioner for Health and Consumer Protection updated the Council on the outbreak of avian influenza and on the outcome of the recent International Pledging Conference on Avian Influenza in Beijing.

Germany supported by Austria, Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium and France drew attention to need for emergency measures for stabilising the EU market in order to cope with a likely sugar surplus of at least 2 million tonnes in the 2006 07 marketing year which would make the transition to the newly reformed Sugar regime problematic.

Italy supported by Greece, Cyprus, Poland, France, Spain, Malta and Hungary called for emergency market measures to support the poultry sector following a drop in sales caused by the recent outbreaks of avian influenza.

Over lunch the Agriculture Commissioner updated the Council on the outcome of the WTO agricultural negotiations in Hong Kong and outlined the next steps aimed at securing the adoption of modalities in the WTO negotiations by the end of April.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Materials Balance

The Minister for Energy (Malcolm Wicks): The Department of Trade and Industry is today publishing, on behalf of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, British Nuclear Fuels plc and Urenco (Capenhurst) Ltd., details of "material unaccounted for" (MUF) arising from the use of plutonium and or uranium in civil nuclear programmes during 2004 05. The figures, which are available on the DTI website at www.dti.gov.uk/non-proliferation/ukso/nuclear_materials_balance.htm aggregate the various operations at each site and follow the practice introduced in 1977. Copies of the report are also being placed in the Libraries of the House.

All of the figures are within internationally accepted standards published by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) for expected measurement uncertainty associated with nuclear materials accountancy. The 2004 05 figures conform to the pattern over previous years and give no rise to concern over either the safety or the security of the operation of the plants.

The Nuclear Materials Balance in future years will also be published on the DTI website.

TRANSPORT

Urban Congestion Target

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Alistair Darling): The Public Service Agreement target published in July last year is based on the congestion targets in the Local Transport Plans (LTPs) of the 10 largest urban areas (London, Greater Manchester, West Midlands, Tyne and Wear, Merseyside, Greater Bristol, West Yorkshire, South Yorkshire, Leicester and Nottingham). Local congestion targets were to be included in the Local Transport Plans which will be published in March.

In December a problem was discovered with some of the data being used to set the congestion targets. Corrected data will not be available in time to set targets in March. The March Local Transport Plans will contain congestion tackling strategies, but the targets consistent with those strategies will now be set by July at the same time as the Public Service Agreement.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Disability Discrimination Act (Definition of Disability)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mrs. Anne McGuire): I am today submitting to Parliament, on behalf of the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the draft revised "Guidance on matters to be taken into account when determining questions relating to the definition of disability" (hereafter referred to as the "Guidance").

The Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA), as amended, prohibits discrimination against disabled people in a range of circumstances, including in employment and occupation, education, transport, and the provision of goods, facilities and services. Only those people who are defined as disabled in accordance with section 1 of the Act, and associated schedules and regulations, are entitled to the protection that the Act provides. Under section 3 of the Act, the Secretary of State has the power to issue guidance on matters to be taken into account in determining whether a person is a disabled person for the purposes of the Act.

The Guidance does not impose any legal obligations of itself, nor is it an authoritative statement of the law. However, section 3(3) of the Act requires that an adjudicating body (such as a court or tribunal) which is determining whether a person is a disabled person for the purposes of the Act, must take into account any aspect of the guidance which appears to it to be relevant.

The original Guidance was published in 1996 (when the Act first came into force), and has not been amended since. As a result of various legislative changes since 1996, including the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 (which provides automatic coverage for people with HIV, cancer and MS from the point of diagnosis, and removes the requirement for a mental illness to be "clinically well-recognised"), the Guidance now needs to be updated. It also needs to take account of developments in case law to reflect key court and tribunal cases, which have helped to improve understanding of how the definition works in practice. Finally, it needs to take account of commitments that the Government gave during the passage of the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 through Parliament that it would consider how the Guidance might be revised in order to make clear how people with a mental impairment can be covered by the Act.

With these aims in mind, the Guidance has been redrafted. The revised text was subject to a consultation exercise, aimed at the primary users of the Guidance, but also including organisations representing disabled people, business and employee interests, and the legal and medical professions. The consultation document was also made available to the public through the Stationery Office and via the internet. The consultation took place between 5 September and 31 October 2005 and we have carefully considered the comments received. As a consequence, a number of amendments have been made to the draft to clarify the Guidance and the illustrative examples that it contains. An evaluation report on the consultation exercise has been produced and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of both Houses.

In accordance with section 3(6) of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, I am today laying a copy of the draft revised Guidance before both Houses. Subject to Parliamentary approval, the Secretary of State aims to bring this revised Guidance into force on 20 April 2006.

DEFENCE

Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (Mars) Programme

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Don Touhig): As set out in the Defence Industrial Strategy, the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) programme is a significant planned investment in a new integrated approach to afloat support, combined with investment in life extensions for retained platforms. MARS will form an essential part of the UK's Versatile Maritime Force, providing a suite of vessels to supply UK and allied vessels with fuel, food, ordnance and other support they need to sustain operations. MARS will also introduce a new capability, providing joint sea-based logistics for those operations where host nation support is absent or limited or where we would wish to reduce our footprint ashore. The programme is currently in the assessment phase.

HEALTH

NHS Direct

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Mr. Liam Byrne): The Minister of State, Department of Health (Lord Warner) has made the following written ministerial statement today.

"The annual accounts of NHS Direct 2004-05 and any accompanying comptroller and auditor general report has today been laid before Parliament pursuant to section 98(1C) of the National Health Service Act 1977.

Copies have been placed in the Library.

TRANSPORT

Thameslink Station, St. Pancras

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Alistair Darling): I have agreed to the proposal to fit out the new Thameslink station at King's Cross St. Pancras. Work is already underway and the station will be ready for passenger use at the end of 2007.

The new state of the art station will provide an excellent interchange between Thameslink services and national and international services when Eurostar services switch operation to from Waterloo International to St. Pancras. It will also improve passenger access to those wishing to use the Olympic Javelin services to access Stratford during the London Olympics in 2012.

As part of the recent Channel Tunnel Rail Link blockade works a station box has already been constructed underneath the new St. Pancras station. The new station will be a great improvement over the existing King's Cross Thameslink station at Pentonville Road, which has restricted access to the platforms and often suffers from congestion due to its narrow platforms and limited access between the platforms and the rest of the station. The new station, provisionally called St. Pancras Thameslink, will also be fully compliant with DDA requirements.

The fit-out of the new station is an independent project and is not dependent on powers being granted to the Thameslink 2000 project, and consequently can be delivered in advance of this.

The planned cost of fitting out the station and transferring services is £63.5 million at 2003 prices. It will be implemented by London Continental Railways, who are currently completing Stage 2 of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link.

CABINET OFFICE

Government Whips Office

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Jim Murphy): My right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister has made the following Machinery of Government change with immediate effect. The offices of the House of Commons and House of Lords Chief Whips will transfer from the Cabinet Office to the Privy Council Office. There will be no change in function or location of the Whips' Offices. The change comes about as part of a review being conducted by Sir Gus O'Donnell, the Cabinet Secretary, into the role and functions of the Cabinet Office.

Spring Supplementary Estimate 2005–06

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Jim Murphy): Subject to Parliamentary approval of any necessary supplementary estimate, the Cabinet Office DEL will be decreased by £3,150,000 from £226,144,000 to £222,994,000. The administration costs limits will be decreased by £3,570,000 from £199,401,000 to £195,831,000.

Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table.

			New DEL
£'000	Change	Voted	Non-voted	Total
Resource	-3,150	222,994	0	222,994
Capital	-1,687	23,313	0	23,313
Depreciation*	0	-37,338	0	-37,338
Total	-4,837	208,969	0	208,969

*Depreciation, which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from the total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from Machinery of Government (MoG) transfer of the Government Social Research Unit to HM Treasury and the Whips Offices (Lords and Commons) to the Privy Council Office. The resource implications are £2,097,000 and £914,000 respectively. Other outward transfers include the baseline for the Parliamentary Counsel Office to other Government Departments. Inward transfers include £389,0000 from the Department of Trade and Industry to fund the Equalities Review, £335,000 from various Government Departments to fund protective security measures relating to State and Government assets in central London and End Year Flexibility draw down of £7,900,000.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from the transfer of £20,000 capital as part of the MoG transfer to the Privy Council Office and £1,110,000 as part of the MoG transfer of Government Car and Despatch Agency to the Department for Transport. There is also a transfer of £557,000 to Her Majesty's Government Communications Centre for the provision of a new building and infrastructure at Hanslope Park.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Lord Carter's Review of Legal Aid Procurement

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Bridget Prentice): My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor, Lord Falconer of Thoroton, has made the following written ministerial statement today.

"Since 5 July 2005 Lord Carter of Coles has led a review of legal aid procurement.

Today Lord Carter published his interim report—"Procurement of Criminal Defence Services: A Market Based Approach to Reform".

I am very grateful to Lord Carter for the excellent progress he has made. I am also grateful for the continuing support and active engagement with the Carter team which both the Bar Council and Law Society have given. I am looking forward to Lord Carter's final report containing a worked through and fully costed implementation plan for delivering a procurement system that achieves maximum value for money and control over spending while ensuring quality and the fairness of the justice system".

TREASURY

ECOFIN 14 February

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Gordon Brown): Items on the agenda are as follows:

Stability and Growth Pact

ECOFIN will adopt Council Opinions on the Stability Programmes of Belgium, Luxembourg and Austria and the Convergence Programmes of Estonia, Latvia and Slovenia;

Lisbon Agenda

Council will discuss the Commission Annual Progress Report on the Lisbon Agenda and will hold a first debate on the ECOFIN Key Issues Paper for Spring European Council;

European Investment Bank Contribution to Growth and Employment

ECOFIN will discuss the role the European Investment Bank can play in promoting jobs and growth;

Ageing Report

ECOFIN will consider a Report from the Economic Policy Committee on the impact of ageing populations on public spending;

Appointment to the European Central Bank Executive Board

Council will consider the appointment of a successor to Otmar Issing to the European Central Bank Executive Board;

Vienna VAT Fraud Conference

ECOFIN will be de-briefed on a Conference held on 6–7 February to discuss VAT fraud issues.

Security and Counter-Terrorism

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Gordon Brown): A secure, safe and strong Britain requires concerted action against global terrorism with all the means at our disposal: military, security, intelligence, economic and culture. To this end coordinating the way we address international terrorism will be a central feature of the coming Spending Review.

Just as there should be no safe haven for those who perpetrate terrorism, so there should be no hiding place for those who finance terrorism.

The Government will bring forward new measures to enhance the prevention, identification and disruption of terrorist financing.

First, in order to strengthen the prevention of terrorist financing, the Government will:

review how best to strengthen the safeguards to protect the charitable sector from terrorist abuse and protect donor confidence in so doing; and publish proposals to strengthen safeguards for Money Service Businesses—and thereby protect the integrity of global remittances.

Secondly, in order to identify terrorist networks and strengthen the operation of counter-terrorist finance measures, the Government are approving the publication today of new guidance by the Joint Money Laundering Steering Group providing strategic advice to banks and financial institutions on targeting suspicious transactions; and will establish a new dedicated forum to bring them together with Government counter-terrorism agencies to formalise information sharing and take action when specific threats arrive.

Thirdly, in order to disrupt terrorist networks when they come to light, the Treasury will strengthen asset-freezing mechanisms to make them more proactive and pre-emptive. This will include a greater joint working between the Treasury and other Departments and agencies, both in respect of targeting and enforcement.

The Government will also seek to hold the Presidency of the Financial Action Task Force—to provide a platform to promote strong implementation of terrorist finance measures worldwide.

It is also fitting that we honour the contribution of those who fought in past conflicts.

In order to support the fundraising for the Armed Forces Memorial in Staffordshire, with the approval of Her Majesty the Queen, the Government will make available £1.5 million from the proceeds of a coin to mark the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Trafalgar towards the funding of this memorial.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

London Conference on Afghanistan

The Minister for the Middle East (Dr. Kim Howells): I wish to inform the House that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, His Excellency Hamid Karzai, President of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan and the UN Secretary General Kofi Annan, opened the London conference on Afghanistan on 31 January. My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the Secretary of State for Defence, the Secretary of State for International Development and I represented the UK at different sessions. The conference was attended by over 60 delegations.

The London conference successfully created the framework for the next phase of development in Afghanistan. It demonstrated the commitment of the Afghan Government and the international community to deepen their partnership, as we work together to build a peaceful, prosperous and democratic Afghanistan. The launch of the "Afghanistan Compact" (a copy of which I have placed in the Library), and discussion of the interim Afghanistan National Development Strategy and of the revised National Drug Control Strategy, all contributed to a renewed sense of purpose and direction.

Many delegations made new financial pledges at the conference, making available over $10.5 billion for the implementation of Afghan Government priorities over the next five years. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister told the conference that for its part the UK would spend £500 million in assistance for Afghanistan over the next three years.

The conference recognised the interconnected nature of the challenges ahead, with progress on security, governance and development being mutually reinforcing. It recognised the cross-cutting nature and scale of the narcotics problem and the threat that this posed to Afghanistan's reconstruction. Delegates welcomed the newly updated National Drugs Control Strategy. On security issues, it was noted that Afghanistan continues to welcome assistance from international forces and supports the expansion of the NATO-led ISAF. On governance, there was broad support for sensitive handling of transitional justice issues and acknowledgement of the valuable role played by NGOs in Afghanistan's reconstruction. The conference welcomed the Afghan Government's plans for economic and social development by focusing on private sector development, investment in key infrastructural sectors such as power, water and roads, and by building human capacity. There was also useful discussion about improving aid effectiveness.

I am pleased that representatives of the Afghan National Assembly and of Afghanistan's Civil Society were able to attend the conference. Our partnership is both with the Government and the people of Afghanistan and their elected representatives.

The challenge now is to build on the momentum created by the conference—to implement the Compact so as to bring real improvements to the lives of people in Afghanistan. Early follow-up action will include establishing the new joint co-ordination and monitoring mechanism envisaged in the Compact, to achieve greater coherence of effort between the Afghan Government and the international community, led for the latter by the UN.

I will set out the detail of UK support for the newly updated National Drug Control Strategy in a separate written ministerial statement tomorrow.

HEALTH

Care Services (Regulatory Fees)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Mr. Liam Byrne): In 2002 the Government stated their policy to move gradually to a position where the recurrent costs of regulation are fully recovered from service providers. This remains our policy.

Increased fees for registration and inspection will be charged therefore by the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) from April 2006. These are set out in the table. The fees are subject to a 15 per cent. increase over 2005-06 levels, except in relation to boarding schools and further education colleges whose fees already match the full cost of regulation.

In parallel, the Government will address the overall cost of regulation to limit what providers will pay in future. We are also working with the inspectorates, and have been for some time, to ensure regulatory services are provided as cost effectively as possible, and working with public commissioners of care to ensure they understand regulatory costs are a legitimate part of the cost of providing care and need to be reflected in commissioning fees.

Individual letters are being sent to all providers of care services regulated by CSCI to notify them about the increases.

Fees for registration and inspection 2006-07 (2005-06 in brackets)

Commission for Social Care Inspection

Service	Provider Registration	Manager Registration	Minor Variation	Variation requiring visit
Care homes	£2,186 (£1,901)	£596 (£518)	£99 (£86)	£1,093 (£950)

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration Rules (Child Visitors)

The Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality (Mr. Tony McNulty): I have, as of 12 February, made changes to the immigration rules regarding children coming to the United Kingdom with a visa or entry clearance issued for the purpose of a visit. Some of these are accompanied by adults; many are not accompanied by an adult even though it has in the past been possible to obtain a visa without declaring that this will be the nature of the journey made. These changes will, therefore, provide further safeguards for children when entering the UK as visitors.

We will require that a child seeking to visit the UK in their own right, i.e. unaccompanied, must demonstrate that there are adequate arrangements for their care here and that they identify a person in their home country who is responsible for them.

Where a visa national child is seeking entry to the UK as a visitor in the company of an adult, that adult must be identified, and the child's visa must identify the adult with whom they seek to enter.

At present a child can apply for entry clearance at the same time as other close family members, be granted an entry clearance, and then travel to the UK either alone or in the company of an adult other than one of those who applied for a visa along with them. This can allow children to enter the UK in the company of an adult who is either unrelated or with whom they have little connection. By doing this they can evade the extra scrutiny of the reception and care arrangements awaiting the child in the UK which is given to children who travel unaccompanied. Some instances can be well intentioned but highly irregular, but in others the child is used to facilitate fraud, and can endure serious physical harm. However, the main cause of concern is the subsequent difficulty in tracing these children.

The Rules will now contain additional requirements for visa national children coming to the UK for a visit, be they travelling alone or with an adult. Each child will be issued with a separate entry clearance vignette. When applying for a visa for a child, the parent or guardian will be required to indicate whether the child will travel to the UK alone or with a nominated adult. The child's entry clearance will be endorsed to indicate the adult who will accompany the child. The entry clearance will not be valid for travel other than when accompanied by the identified adult. The visitor rules have been amended to reflect this (at Paragraphs 41-46F of the Immigration Rules).

The changes will create an official and accessible record which is not there at the moment. These measures are aimed at tackling some of the problems associated with unaccompanied minors arriving in the United Kingdom, chief of which is the lack of information about their circumstances in their home country. They will contribute to the ability to act, where necessary, when individual children come to attention after arrival for welfare and other reasons. They will ensure that children who enter the UK in the company of an adult do so in a recorded way, with a specific destination for their future care, and with a record of their parents' details in the place where the entry clearance was issued. The records which this provision will allow us to keep will be a deterrent to abuse, as all of those involved in the child's travel will be traceable.

TRANSPORT

Marine Environmental High Risk Areas

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Alistair Darling): I am today announcing 32 locations around the UK coast that have been identified as Marine Environmental High Risk Areas (MEHRAs). The locations of these areas have been identified after taking into account shipping risk, environmental sensitivity and other environmental protection measures already in place at each location and follow recommendations made by the late Lord Donaldson in his report "Safer Ships, Cleaner Seas".

MEHRAs will be an essential aid to passage planning since their primary purpose is to inform ships' masters of areas where they need to exercise even more caution than usual. This is just part of the information available to mariners to enable them to navigate UK waters safely.

MEHRAs will now be notified by a Marine Guidance Note to mariners who will be expected to exercise an even higher degree of care than usual when passing through them. They will also be marked on Admiralty charts.

Paper copies of the full MEHRAs report are available in the Libraries of both Houses and it is also published at www.dft.gov.uk.

WALES

Departmental Expenditure Limit

The Secretary of State for Wales (Mr. Peter Hain): The Wales departmental expenditure limit will be increased by £244,298,000 from £12,243,494,000 to £12,487,792,000. The increase is a result of:

(a) An EYF allocation of £1,168,000 from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister for Counter Terrorism.

(b) An allocation of £1,234,000 from the 2005 Pre Budget Report

(c) A take up of £70,329,000 EYF—Near cash

(d) A take up of £61,211,000 EYF—Capital

(e) A take up of £97,000,000 EYF for Non cash—Depreciation and Cost of Capital

(f) Net transfers from other Government Departments to the National Assembly for Wales of £13,356,000.

These transfers are as follows:

(i) £110,000 from DEFRA for Animal Health powers

(ii) £84,000 from DFES for the Open University Fees Waiver Scheme

(iii) £4,533,000 from DFES for Welsh students studying at the Open University

(iv) £3,336,000 from the Department of Health for Out of Area Treatments

(v) £2,132,000 from the Department of Health for Cross Border Patients

(vi) £202,000 from the Department of Health for High Security psychiatric Services

(vii) £14,000 from the Department of Health for Dental SIFT

(viii) £2,476,000 from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister for the purchase of Fire and Rescue equipment.

(ix) £681,000 from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister for purchase of Fire and Rescue equipment

(x) £8,000 from Northern Ireland for Out of Area Treatments

(xi) £220,000 to the Wales Office

These changes will result in an increase of £227,023,000 in the grant payable to the National Assembly for Wales.

The increase in DEL will be offset by transfers from other Departments and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Provision for the Wales Office is increased by £606,000 as a result of :

A transfer from the Parliamentary Counsel Office of £57,000.

A transfer from the Welsh Assembly Government of £220,000.

Take up of End Year Flexibility of £329,000.

Wales Office spending is contained within single Department of Constitutional Affairs departmental expenditure limit and administration costs limit.

TREASURY

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Paymaster General (Dawn Primarolo): Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, HM Revenue and Customs departmental expenditure limit will be increased by £21,249,000 from £5,033,971,000 to £5,055,220,000 and the administration costs limit will be increased by £3,574,000 from £4,523,288,000 to £4,526,862,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

New DEL

£000s

	Change	Voted	Non-voted	Total
Resource	17,849	4,322,312	355,662	4,677,974
Capital	3,400	374,269	2,977	377,246
Depreciation*	-19,362	-183,499	-	-183,499
Total	1,887	4,513,082	358,639	4,871,721

*Depreciation, which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from the total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from the draw down of £20,000,000 non-cash administration costs EYF as set out in the Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper; the draw down of £3,400,000 Resource Departmental Unallocated Provision, subsequently vired into capital; virement from administration costs to programme expenditure of £15,000,000; the balance reflects the net effect of PES transfers from the Cabinet Office of £1,974,000 administration costs in respect of Parliamentary Counsel Office funding; £707,000 programme expenditure to the Department for Transport to cover the cost of a transfer of work; £18,000 programme expenditure to Security and Intelligence Agencies as a contribution towards the purchase of computer-based tools.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from virement from administration costs of £3,400,000.

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (John Healey): Subject to Parliamentary approval of any necessary Supplementary Estimate, HM Treasury resource DEL will be increased by £914,000 from £256,064,000 to £256,978,000. The administration budget will be reduced by £5,313,000 from £166,854,000 to £161,541,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

New DEL

	Change	Voted	Non-voted	Total
Resource	914,000	221,592,000	35,386,000	256,978,000
Of which:
Administration	-5,313,000	161,141,000	400,000	161,541,000
Capital	-1,745,000	5,455,000	-	5,455,000

New DEL

	Change	Voted	Non-voted	Total
Depreciation*	8,663,000	-6,518,000	-	-6,518,000
Total	7,832,000	220,529,000	35,386,000	255,915,000

*Depreciation, which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from the total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The net change in the resource element of the DEL arises from the Machinery of Government change transferring the Government Social Research Unit from Cabinet Office to HM Treasury, £914,000 for 2005–06.

The following items are DEL neutral:

the draw down of £600,000 administration costs from the Financial Inclusion Fund for expenditure on the promotion of banking services to those on low incomes. £1 million of funding for the FIF was classified as Treasury non-voted DEL administration budget at the start of the year; the other £400,000 remains within non-voted DEL.

Transfer between RfRs 1 and 3, £12,465,000, to fund OGC's work on its wider remit, including delivering the efficiency programme and changes in provisions relating to the residual vacant estate.

Transfer between RfRs 1 and 2, £3,700,000, for increased spend on coinage arising from higher metal prices.

Increase in appropriations-in-aid within all three RfRs (RfR 1 £10,702,000, RfR 2 £500,000, RfR 3 £325,000) with increased expenditure switching from RfR 1 to RfR 2 for coinage spend, see above, and RfR 3 for expenditure relating to OGC's fee earning services.

Movement of OGC Efficiency Challenge Fund allocation from non-voted to voted, £2,422,000. The allocation for the ECF within non-voted DEL for 2005–06 was £7,800,000, and total forecast ECF expenditure for 2005–06 is £8,868,000. The other £6,446,000 of funding is being transferred from RfR 1, as above.

The net reduction of £1,745,000 in the capital element of the DEL arises from:

Transfer of capital spend from Core Treasury (RfR 1) to fund planned expenditure by OGC (RfR 3). The transfer is DEL neutral. In addition, non-operating appropriations in aid are increased by £1,380,000 to cover loan repayments from OGCbuying.solutions to OGC. The increased net provision is to finance OGC's spend on its domestic IT systems and capital improvements to its Norwich office.

A further reduction in core Treasury and DMO capital for provision in the Main Estimate no longer required.

The non-voted resource DEL of £35.4 million in the table above includes banking and gilts registration services provided by the Bank of England and Computershare, plus MEPs' salaries and the Civil List. Latest forecasts indicate that those activities are likely to underspend the provision by around £3.9 million in aggregate. In addition, £400,000 of the original £1 million provision for the Financial Inclusion Fund and £5,378,000 of the original £7.8 million provision for the Efficiency Challenge Fund have not been transferred to voted resource DEL and will not be applied in 2005–06.

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Ivan Lewis): Subject to parliamentary approval of any necessary supplementary estimate, National Savings and Investments DEL will be increased by £2,500,000 from £179,794,000 to, £182,294,000 and the administration costs limits will be increased by

£2,500,000 from £179,794,000 to £182,294,000. Within DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are set out in the following table:

New DEL

(£000s)

	Change	Voted	Non-Voted	Total
Resource	2,500	182,294		182,294
Capital		500		500
Depreciation*		-2,970		-2,970
Total	2,500	179,824		179,824

*Depreciation which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The increase in the DEL relates to resources only and arises from end year flexibility being drawn down. This is in order to allow National Savings and Investments to continue with the successful project investment, and to allow costs arising from more recent forecasts on the Evidence of Identity costs to be financed. More recent National Savings and Investments budgeting assumptions for 2005-06 showed an increase in costs associated with payments to Siemens Business Service (SBS) and other suppliers later in the year. These payments are necessary in order to meet National Savings and Investments financing targets.

There is no change in the capital element of DEL.

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (John Healey): Subject to Parliamentary approval of any necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Office for National Statistics DEL will increase by £178,000 from £170,924,000 to £171,102,000 and the administration budget will increase by £178,000 from £170,374,000 to £170,552,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

New DEL

(£000s)

	Change	Voted	Non-voted	Total
Resource	178	171,102		171,102
Capital		27,570		27,570
Depreciation*		-15,500		-15,500
Total	178	183,172		183,172

*Depreciation, which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from the total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from a drawdown of £100,000 from HM Treasury's Evidence Based Policy Fund to fund work on the Wealth and Assets survey and £78,000 Machinery of Government change from GAD for the transfer of certain responsibility for demographic projections.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Electoral Pilots (May 2006)

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): My hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs, Lord Falconer of Thoroton, has made the following written ministerial statement in the other place yesterday.

"The Government is continuing to look at ways to modernise our electoral system and to increase the opportunities that people have to vote. To test the effectiveness and robustness of these innovations and to build public confidence in them, we are continuing to conduct a programme of pilots in 2006 which maintains the momentum that was started in 2000.

With this aim in mind, at the end of October 2005, in conjunction with the Electoral Commission, we issued a prospectus inviting expressions of interest from local authorities seeking to run electoral pilots at the May 2006 local elections.

Today I am pleased to announce that I have accepted 16 applications from local authorities to hold pilots at the May 2006 local elections. The names of the successful local authorities are attached at the end of this statement. A background paper providing further details on the pilots has been placed in the House Library.

The local authorities will pilot innovations including:

trials of changes to the administration of elections proposed in the Electoral Administration Bill, such as changes to the ballot paper to support more secure efficient production of postal votes and the checking of signatures on postal ballots, voting in alternative locations such as shopping centres and rural locations to allow us to further test how voting in different locations and at different times can enhance access, electronic counting of ballots which will build on past work and test how this can be refined to ensure confidence and support future use of technology to gain efficiencies in the administration of elections. This will also enable us to identify how technology can support counting in the different voting systems used in local authority and regional elections.

Some of these pilots will assist us in planning the implementation of the proposals in the Electoral Administration Bill, in ensuring the ongoing integrity of electoral mechanisms and in refining and developing the programme of work for ensuring electoral processes fit with the needs of modern lifestyles.

The next step will be for us, working in consultation with the Electoral Commission and the local authorities, to draw up the statutory orders authorising the pilots.

We are grateful to all local authorities that applied to pilot in May 2006 and are keen to continue to engage local authorities in looking at innovative ways to improve the elections process and take advantage of new technologies."

Capital	54	161	-	161
Depreciation	-	-38	-	-38
Total	2,381	6,832	-	6,832

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from a Machinery of Government change, which transferred the Offices of the House of Commons and House of Lords Chief Whips from the Cabinet Office to the Privy Council Office (£2,097,000), and the take up of end-year flexibility (£230,000).

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from the transfer of the Offices of the House of Commons and House of Lords Chief Whips from the Cabinet Office (£20,000) and the take up of end-year flexibility (£34,000).

The Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harriet Harman): Subject to Parliamentary approval of any necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department for Constitutional Affairs, Northern Ireland Court Service and National Archives: Public Records Office and Historical Manuscripts Commission Total Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) will be increased by £38,886,000 from £3,785,906,000 to £3,824,792,000 and the administration budget will be increased by £12,821,000 from £490,081,000 to £502,902,000

Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

(xvi) A transfer of £248,000 from administration to programme to correct a previous transfer to the Crown Prosecution service for Liverpool Justice Centre.

RfR1 Resource Change: Programme (total increase of £11,952,000)

Transfers from other Government Departments:

(xvii) £1,868,000 increase in resources in relation to the Implementation of the Adoption & Children Act 2002.

(xviii) A transfer of £150,000 additional funding for the Enforcement Programme.

(xix) £110,000 increase in resources in relation to the funding for EXISSR1.

Machinery of Government Transfer

(xx) A transfer of £650,000 from the Home Office in relation to Coroner's Reform.

(xxi) £59,000 increase in resources from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in relation to the Boundary Commission.

Take up of End-Year Flexibility (EYF):

(xxii) £39,690,000 additional spending on Single Asylum Fund.

Transfers to other Government Departments:

(xxiii) A transfer of £2,500,000 to the Crown Prosecution Service for the Charging Initiative.

(xxiv) A transfer of £38,000 to the Department of Trade & Industry for CEHR Funding SR04 & Equalities Review.

(xxv) A transfer of £8,000,000 budgetary cover to the Scottish Executive for increased Judiciary Salary liability.

(xxvi) A transfer of £2,600,000 budgetary cover to the Northern Ireland Court Service for increased Judiciary Salary liability.

(xxvii) A transfer of £4,000,000 budgetary cover to the Northern Ireland Court Service in relation to increased Northern Ireland Legal Service Commission costs.

Other changes

(xxviii) £6,000,000 reduction to the CLS for the Clarification on VAT treatment for Asylum Legal Aid Bills.

(xxix) £5,900,000 Increase in Appropriation in Aid for Magistrates Courts fee income.

Transfers between sections within the Estimates:

(xxx) A correction of Public Guardianship Office income (£1,289,000) moved from administration resource to program. This results in a decrease in the programme budget of £1,289,000.

(xxxi) A transfer of £248,000 from administration to programme to correct a previous transfer to the Crown Prosecution service for Liverpool Justice Centre.

RfR3 Resource Change: Administration (total increase of £606,000)

Take up of End-Year Flexibility (EYF):

(xxxii) £329,000 in relation to Additional costs for increased work due to the Government of Wales Bill.

Transfers from other Government Departments:

(xxxiii) £57,000 funding for the Parliamentary Counsel Office.

Movements of provision between sections within RfR3:

(xxxiv) £220,000 increase in relation to Non Cash transfer from Assembly to Wales Office to cover increased impairment charges.

The change in the resource element of the Northern Ireland Court Service DEL arises from:

Resource Change: Admin (total decrease of £1,750,000)

Increase in Appropriations in Aid:

(i) To take up £750,000 additional appropriations in aid to offset project costs incurred by the Northern Ireland Court Service and Northern Ireland Office in respect of the safety camera netting off scheme.

(ii) To take up £1,000,000 additional appropriations in aid to offset a corresponding amount of "other current" expenditure on judicial salaries, non cash costs and lay magistrates fees.

Resource Change: Programme (total increase of £8,509,000)

Transfers from other Government Departments:

(iii) A transfer of non cash funding from the Department of Constitutional Affairs to fund an increased judicial salary liability (£2,600,000).

(iv) A transfer of funding from the Department for Constitutional Affairs to fund additional expenditure on publicly funded legal services (£4,000,000).

Other Increases:

(v) Additional expenditure on judicial salaries, non-cash costs and lay magistrates fees offset by additional appropriations in aid (£1,000,000).

(vi) Additional expenditure by Northern Ireland Court Service and Northern Ireland Office arising from the safety camera netting off scheme (£750,000).

Neutral Changes:

(vii) Increase in non cash costs for cost of capital (£1,064,000) and depreciation (£2,700,000) to release additional grant payable to the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission for expenditure on publicly funded legal services (total of £3,764,000). This is offset in DEL terms by a reduction in the resource consumption of the Legal Services Commission.

Take up of End-Year Flexibility (EYF):

(viii) To take up resource EYF for additional expenditure on publicly funded legal services by the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission (£159,000).

The change in the resource element of the National Archives DEL arises from:

The National Archives: Public Record Office and Historical Manuscripts Commission's DEL will be increased by £4,407,000 from £38,616,000 to £43,023,000 and the administration budget will be increased by £3,723,000 from £39,394,000 to £43,117,000.

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises in respect of expenditure on the further development to systems relating to the preservation of records and making these records accessible online. Additionally, to allow The National Archives to develop wider market sales operations, a neutral change is sought to allow for £2.6m of expenditure on events, on wholesale publishing, book purchases and record copying intended for sale through The National Archive's retail sales outlets and wholesale distribution channels. Additional wider market receipts generated by these retail sales of £2.6m offset this expenditure.

The 2005-06 Main Estimate provided £39.4m administration cost budget. The Spring Supplementary Estimate requests an increase in the original provision of £3.7m, making the new limit £43.1m.

The change in the capital element of the Department for Constitutional Affairs DEL arises from:

RfR1 Capital Change (total increase of £6,620,000)

Transfers from other Government Departments:

(i) £500,000 additional provision for Effective Trial Management Programme (ETMP) for the Case Provision Tool.

(ii) £1,500,000 additional provision for the Mental Health Review Tribunal.

(iii) £1,120,000 additional funding for the Case Progression Tool for the Effective Trial Management Programme (ETMP).

(iv) £500,000 to provide additional funding for the North Merseyside Local Criminal Justice Board (LCJB).

Take up of End-Year Flexibility (EYF):

(v) £3,000,000 in relation to GLMCA Capital Receipts.

Asset sale

(vi) £2,085,000 capital and £7,263,000 capital receipts (reflecting a £5,178,000 profit on disposal). Only the net book value of £2,085,000 will score against capital DEL.

The change in the capital element of the Northern Ireland Court Service DEL arises from:

Capital Change (total increase of £1,000,000)

Take up of End-Year Flexibility (EYF):

(i) Take up of capital EYF to fund refurbishment of accommodation for the Coroners Service (£1,000,000).

The change in the capital element of the National Archive DEL arises from:

Capital Change (total increase of £684,000)

Take up of End-Year Flexibility (EYF)

£0.684m end year flexibility draw down for the development of electronic service delivery and further development of online services for the National Archive website to further improve access to catalogues and records held.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (Tessa Jowell): Subject to parliamentary approval of any supplementary estimate, the Department for Culture Media and Sport's departmental expenditure limit (DEL) will be increased by £22,448,000 from £1,630,269,000 to £1,652,717,000 and the administration cost limit will increase £829,000 from £48,970,000 to £49,799,000. Within the DEL changes the impact on resource and capital are set out in the following table:

New DEL

£000s

	Change	Voted	Non-Voted	Total
Resource DEL	8,248	191,086	1,375,140	1,566,226
Capital DEL	14,200	97,730	87,307	185,036
Depreciation*	0	-5,942	-92,613	-98,555
Total	22,448	282,883	1,369,834	1,652,717

*Depreciation, which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from the total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

Drawdown of £12,000,000 non cash, non voted end-year flexibility to cover the borrowing of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games (LOCOG).

Transfers from other Government Departments of: £148,000 from Cabinet Office for Parliamentary Counsel and £100,000 from the Department of Trade and Industry for the Women and Equality Unit.

With agreement of HM Treasury the provision of £4,000,000 which had been incorrectly classified as resource DEL has been amended to capital DEL.

The administration cost limit has increased by £829,000 from £48,970,000 to £49,799,000. This is as a result of transfers to and from programme budgets and transfers from the Cabinet Office and the Department of Trade and Industry as detailed above.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from:

Take up of end-year flexibility of £4,200,000 of which £3,000,000 is in respect of the listed places of worship project funded by the Capital Modernisation Fund and £1,200,000 is administration to cover refurbishment costs of the Cockspur Street offices.

A transfer of £6,000,000 from ODPM for Olympic-related regeneration projects. A £4,000,000 resource to capital re-classification detailed above.

DEFENCE

Ministry of Defence Votes A 2006–07

The Secretary of State for Defence (John Reid): Ministry of Defence Votes A 2006–07, will be laid before the House on 14 February as HC 869. This outlines the maximum numbers of personnel to be maintained for service in the armed forces for financial year 2006–07.

Copies of these reports will be laid in the Libraries of both Houses.

National Employer Advisory Board

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Don Touhig): Following an open competition which attracted a strong field of applicants, I am pleased to advise the House of the appointment of four new members and the reappointment of one member to the National Employer Advisory Board (NEAB).

The new members are:

Mr David Brown

Dr Elizabeth Haywood

Mr Neil Johnson

Mr Tim Melville-Ross

The reappointment is:

Ms Nicola Carew

They join the other eleven members of the board, which is chaired by the noble Lord Glenarthur, and which continues to provide appropriate support in conjunction with the SaBRE campaign to reservists and their employers. I take this opportunity to thank NEAB for its work which is greatly valued by the Ministry of Defence.

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Secretary of State for Defence (John Reid): I am pleased to announce that Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Ministry of Defence Departmental Expenditure Limits (DEL) will be increased by £1,303,494,000 from £31,053,831,000 to £32,357,325,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

New DEL

£000's

	Change	Voted	Non-voted	Total
Resource	770,794	33,330,552	396,792	33,727,344
Capital	259,997	6,797,534	744	6,798,278
Depreciation*	272,703	-8,168,297	-	-8,168,297
Total	1,303,494	31,959,789	397,536	32,357,325

*Depreciation, which forms part of Resource DEL, is excluded from the total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

a transfer of £104,000 from the Cabinet Office to the MOD in respect offuture funding arrangements with the Office of the Parliamentary Counsel;

a transfer of £2,100,000 from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to theMOD in respect of an extension to aircraft operations;

a transfer of £167,000,000 from the MOD to the Department of Trade and Industry relating to start up costs for the newly-established Nuclear Decommissioning Authority; to draw down the Department's Unallocated Provision of £805,000,000 to meet additional requirements for depreciation and provisions; to increase Non-Budget Expenditure by £267,606,000 to reflect the impact of the revised Treasury discount rate on provisions; to reduce resource provision by £65,000,000 to reflect a technical agreement in the 2004 Spending Review relating to changes in the handling of cash release of provisions; an increase in income of £10,000,000 offset by Resource Appropriations in Aid in the same amount, relating to forecast income being above that requested at Main Estimates for the Central TLB;

an increase in RfR 2 Resource of £933,565,000 to reflect the costs of peace keeping in Iraq and Afghanistan; transfers in of £64,000,000 and £3,200,000 Resource from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to the MOD in respect of the Global Conflict Prevention Pool for Balkans programme costs and the Global rest of the World Conflict Prevention Pool costs; to recognise a non-budget Grant in Aid payment of £175,000, offset by a corresponding reduction in DEL, to the Royal Hospital Chelsea and the National Army Museum to fund commercial insurance policies.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from:

recognition of a Capital DEL reduction of £15,000,000 in RfR1, the advanced purchase of programmed equipment as Urgent Operational Requirements, under RfR2 in 2004-05;

a reduction of capital provision by £55,000,000 to reflect a technical agreement agreed in the 2004 Spending Review relating to changes in the handling of cash release of provisions; an increase in Capital Appropriations in Aid of £27,857,000 relating to the redemption of preference shares held by the MOD in QinetiQ; an increase in RfR 2 Capital DEL of £329,997,000 to reflect the costs of peace-keeping in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The changes to Capital and Resource, together with changes in internal budgetary re-allocations and adjustments to working capital, will lead to an increased net cash requirement of £1,889,814,000.

Surface Warship Maintenance and Repair Arrangements

The Secretary of State for Defence (John Reid): I am pleased to announce new, alternative contracting arrangements for surface warship maintenance and repair. These arrangements were signalled as part of the wider Defence Industrial Strategy and today's announcement is an important step towards ensuring that the capability requirements of the Royal Navy can be met now and in the future.

Surface warship upkeep (generally known as refitting) contracts have increasingly been awarded following competition while operational (or fleet) time support is delivered through partnering arrangements under the Warship Support Modernisation Initiative. While these arrangements have delivered clear, value for money benefits to the MOD, recent force level reductions coupled with over capacity in the surface ship repair market prompted a review. The Department, in consultation with industry, undertook a study (the Surface Ship Support Study) to identify the optimum approach for the future maintenance and repair of surface warships (that is aircraft carriers, major amphibious vessels, destroyers, frigates and mine warfare vessels) that would deliver the most efficient, effective and sustainable support policy and offer best value for money to the taxpayer.

The study has concluded that the option best able to meet the needs of both the Department and industry would be the formation of a surface warship support alliance, which would include current providers of surface warship upkeep and fleet time support. We will now enter into detailed dialogue with industry to investigate the feasibility of delivering such support through an alliance. During this exploratory phase, which is planned to last up to two years, competition policy will be suspended, to enable the alliance concept to be developed and tested progressively in a controlled manner. The first package of surface warship upkeep to be included in the exploratory phase will be that for HMS Liverpool, HMS Iron Duke, HMS Cumberland, HMS Chiddingfold and HMS Penzance: it is currently planned to commence in autumn 2006. At the end of the exploratory phase there will be a review of the alliancing approach.

These new arrangements will promote a sustainable industrial base that retains key operational support and system upgrade capabilities within the UK, and are therefore vital to our ability to maintain and support the Royal Navy. We will be working closely with industry in a spirit of transparency and trust to ensure more effective joint planning for the longer term. The aim will be to improve the delivery of surface ship support, with benefits for the Royal Navy, industry and the taxpayer.

Military Air Radar Services

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): I am pleased to announce that the Ministry of Defence has today signed a contract with National Air Traffic Services (En Route) plc for approximately £725 million to provide an en route air traffic control facility to the Ministry of Defence until 2021. This contract enables military personnel to work alongside National Air Traffic Services (En Route) plc staff to manage air traffic within UK airspace.

The existing contract with National Air Traffic Services (En Route) plc expires in July. I am pleased to confirm that National Air Traffic Services (En Route) plc will continue to provide this facility for the next 15 years.

The signing of this new contract reflects the continued commitment of the Government to an integrated military-civilian approach to en-route air traffic control services. Such an approach, with military personnel working alongside National Air Traffic Services (En Route) plc staff, works to the benefit of all airspace users. This is a world leading concept and offers both operational and cost benefits to Defence.

MARS Programme

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): I am pleased to announce that the following three companies have been chosen to compete for the role of Integrator for the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) programme:

AMEC

Raytheon Systems Ltd

MARS will form an essential part of the UK's Versatile Maritime Force, providing a suite of vessels to supply UK and allied vessels with fuel, food, ordnance and other support they need to sustain operations. MARS will also introduce a new capability, providing joint sea-based logistics for those operations where Host Nation Support is absent or limited or where we would wish to reduce our footprint ashore.

The MARS vessels, will have some military features, while being technically similar to specialist merchant ships. We therefore want the build of the MARS ships to harness the efficiency of specialist commercial shipbuilding practice. As indicated in the Defence Industrial Strategy, we expect the competition for the shipbuilding element of this project to be wide-ranging. UK yards and other suppliers will be given every opportunity to compete for this shipbuilding work and should see it as both a challenge and an opportunity to demonstrate world-class performance. With the high planned workload on CVF and Type 45, the complex warship design and integration capabilities that we intend to sustain in the UK will remain healthy for some years.

The Integrator's key role will be to use their expertise in engineering project management and supply chain relationships to drive good project management and partnering practice into a delivery team consisting of the MOD, the Integrator, and key suppliers. The selected Integrator will also help MOD identify the shipbuilders and other key suppliers, and develop the right partnering approach to ensure successful delivery of the MARS programme.

The shortlisting of potential Integrators marks a significant step forward for this project. The companies will now work with the Ministry of Defence to provide evidence of their suitability to be the MARS Integrator.

The MARS project, along with the future aircraft carriers, Type 45 destroyers and Astute submarines, forms part of the largest procurement programme of new ships for many years, reinforcing our firm commitment to provide UK Armed Forces with the enhanced naval capabilities needed to face the threats of the 21st Century.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. John Prescott): Subject to Parliamentary approval of any necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Departmental Expenditure Limits for 2005-06 will change as follows:

(1) The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Main Programmes DEL will be increased by £42,327,000 from £9,468,500,000 to £9,510,827,000 and the administration costs limit will also be increased by £454,000 from £335,358,000 to £335,812,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

New DEL

an increase in receipt of £254,000 fully offset by an increase in provision for Electoral law.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from a take up of End Year Flexibility of £500,000 from Invest to Save Special Grant.

Housing Corporation Powers

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Yvette Cooper): The Government will legislate to modernise the Housing Corporation's decision making arrangements as necessary, at the earliest opportunity. This will clarify its ability to delegate decisions from the Board to subcommittees and to officers.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Secretary of State for Education and Skills (Ruth Kelly): Subject to Parliamentary approval of any necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department for Education and Skills Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) (including the Office for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools (OFSTED) which has a separate Estimate) will be increased by £264,668,000 from £30,765,762,000 to £31,030,430,000 and the administration costs limits will be increased by £337,000 from £276,418,000 to £276,755,000.

Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are set out in the following table:

Resource DEL

The increase in the resource element of the DEL of £390,798,000 arises from a £445,175,000 decrease in the voted element of the resource DEL and an increase of £835,973,000 in the non-voted element of the resource DEL mainly to the Department's Non-Departmental Public Bodies.

Voted Resource DEL

The £445,175,000 decrease in the voted element of the resource DEL arises from:

RFR 1

A £785,273,000 movement to non-voted, to support Schools and Teachers £226,489,000, to support Further Education and Lifelong Learning £427,958,000, to support Higher Education £118,192,000 and to support Children and Families £12,634,000. A movement from Schools capital £148,065,000 for City Academies £125,934,000, for Information Technology in Schools £13,369,000, Music and Ballet Schools £1,502,000 and for the Children and Workforce Development Council £7,260,000. RFR3

A movement to RFR1 of £22,196,000 for Local Area Agreements.

Administration Cost Limits

The £337,000 increase in the Administration Cost Limit arises from the transfer from the Cabinet Office for the Parliamentary Council's Office.

Non-voted Resource DEL

The £835,973,000 increase in Non-voted resource DEL arises from the movement of £785,273,000 from RFR1 voted resource DEL. The take up of End Year Flexibility £39,588,000 for Higher Education Funding Council for England Science and Research £33,000,000, Qualifications and Curriculum Authority modernisation £6,338,000, Adult Learning Inspectorate administration £250,000. The movement from voted schools capital £50,000,000 for Higher Education Funding Council for England teaching infrastructure. A reduction of £56,900,000 Higher Education Funding Council for England for the Scientific Research Investment Fund and an increase of £3,586,000 for the Knowledge Transfer Funding for Universities. Transfers from the Department of Health £18,979,000 for University Medical Schools £10,500,000, Pensions Indexation £5,669,000, Clinical Academies £2,328,000 and College Social work £482,000. Transfer to the National Assembly for Wales £4,553,000 for students studying at the Open University.

Capital DEL

The decrease in the capital element of the DEL of £126,130,000 arises from a £210,769,000 decrease in the voted element of capital DEL and an increase of £84,639,000 in the non-voted element of capital DEL.

Voted Capital DEL

The £210,769,000 decrease in the voted element of the resource DEL arises from:

RFR1

A £82,640,000 movement to non-voted to support Schools and Teachers £77,867,000, to support Further Education and Lifelong Learning £3,901,000 and support for Higher education £872,000. A movement to voted resource £148,065,000 for City Academies £125,934,000, for Information Technology in Schools £13,369,000, Music and Ballet Schools £1,502,000 and for the Children and Workforce Development Council £7,260,000. A movement to non-voted capital £50,000,000 for Higher Education Funding Council for England teaching infrastructure. The take up of End Year Flexibility of £11,289,000 for Cybrarian capital modernisation £10,450,000 and Secure Accommodation £839,000.

RFR2

The take up of End Year Flexibility of £58,647,000 for Local Authority Capital grants.

Non-voted Capital DEL

The £84,639,000 increase in the non-voted capital DEL arises from the movement of £82,640,000 from voted capital DEL. The take up of End Year Flexibility £1,999,000 for Education Funding Council for England Technology Institutions £982,000, Qualifications and Curriculum Authority capital investment £820,000, Sector Skills Development Agency capital investment £195,000 and Investors in People capital investment £2,000.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Jim Knight): Subject to parliamentary approval of any necessary supplementary estimate, the Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs DEL will be increased by £187,231,000 from £3,164,819,000 to £3,352,050,000 and the Administration Budget will be increased by £30,311,000 from £342,064,000 to £372,375,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

New DEL

£000s

	Change	Voted	Non-voted	Total
Resource	141,701	2,400,367	772,535	3,172,902

Total	184,531	2,611,549	740,501	3,352,050

*Depreciation, which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from the total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from (i) take up of £57,000,000 administration resources through end year flexibility; (ii) a switch of £5,000,000 from administration resources to capital; (iii) a transfer from the Cabinet Office of £311,000,000 of administration resources for Parliamentary Counsel costs; (iv) a transfer to the Welsh Assembly of £110,000 of programme resources for policy advice; a transfer from the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development for Northern Ireland of £1,500,000 of programme resources for the National Fallen Stock scheme; (v) transfer from the Department of Health of £60,000,000 for the Over Thirty Months scheme; (vi) take up of £8,000,000 of programme resources through end year flexibility; (vii) take up of £20,000,000 of programme resources from the reserve for Fuel Poverty.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from (i) take up of £40,530,000 of capital through end year flexibility; (ii) a switch of £5,000,000 from administration resources to capital.

Waste Strategy for England (Consultation)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mr. Ben Bradshaw): I am today announcing publication of the consultation document on the review of England's Waste Strategy.

The consultation document sets out the progress made since 2000 in meeting the Government's objectives and implementing its policies with respect to waste, and consults on proposals for a revised strategy and the policies for implementing it. The consultation document is supported by a partial Regulatory Impact Assessment and Environmental Report.

We have made considerable advances since the original waste strategy was published in 2000. In particular recycling and composting of household waste has doubled in the last four years; nearly 50 per cent. of packaging waste is being recycled; and less of most types of waste is going to landfill.

But Government cannot be complacent despite these positive trends. There is much more that needs to be done to achieve our aim of reducing the amounts of waste generated and to meet our targets for diverting waste from landfill.

The approach set out in our consultation document has benefited from extensive discussions with stakeholders on the issues and options for the review. It includes a substantial shift in direction, with a broader approach and stronger emphasis on:

Reducing the growth in the amount of waste produced and decoupling its environmental impacts from economic growth, set firmly within our broader context of sustainable consumption and production; achieving greater progress in the diversion of waste from landfill and reusing, recycling or composting more of what is left or, where this is not possible, using it for energy; highlighting sustainable management of non-municipal waste, and greater integration between municipal and non-municipal waste;

The consultation document reflects the need to reduce the environmental impact of waste, including reducing the impact on climate change, conserving limited natural resources and reducing risk to health and the environment from potentially harmful substances in waste.

Waste prevention stands at the top of the waste hierarchy, but only limited progress has been made to decouple waste generation from economic growth. The waste strategy review proposes measures aimed at producing less waste by putting greater emphasis on eco-design, including through more agreements with producers and increased engagement in waste prevention of businesses and householders.

For waste that is produced there is a need to recover more resources. The revised strategy aims to facilitate development of a recycling culture by shifting our thinking so that the reuse and recycling of resources is part of our everyday activities whether at home, at work or during leisure. New, more ambitious national recycling and composting targets for household waste—40 per cent. in 2010 and 50 per cent. by 2020—are being proposed, alongside advice and information to the public and more agreements with businesses to take responsibility for their end of life products.

Consultation has shown strong support for better integration between municipal and other waste streams, such as commercial, industrial, construction and demolition waste, which make up most of the waste produced, to gain potential economies of scale. The strategy review proposes new targets for a reduction in the percentage of commercial and industrial waste landfilled, helping small businesses to reduce and recycle their waste and a more joined up approach in managing waste from different sources facilitated by local authorities and regional bodies.

Subject to the outcome of this consultation and continuing policy development, the Government intend to publish a revised waste strategy for England later this year, setting out Government's vision and strategic direction on waste for the next 20 years, as well as the policies and actions which will be necessary to deliver the new strategy.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan: Counter Narcotics

The Minister for the Middle East (Dr. Kim Howells): In his opening remarks to the London Conference on Afghanistan held on 31 January to 1 February, His Excellency Hamid Karzai, President of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, described narcotics and terrorism as the two gravest threats facing Afghanistan.

Despite a 21 per cent. reduction in opium poppy cultivation in 2005 (130,000 hectares in 2003–04 to 104,000 hectares in 2004–05), the trade in Afghan drugs remains a significant challenge to Afghanistan's long-term security, development and effective governance. It undermines the stability of the region and accounts for almost 90% of the world supply of opiates.

President Karzai has taken a strong lead in the struggle against the pervasive and corrosive threat posed by the cultivation, production and trafficking of narcotics. His Government has, with the support of the UK as the key partner nation for counter narcotics, recently reviewed and updated its National Drug Control Strategy to ensure its policy approach is the right one. The Strategy was endorsed by the Cabinet Sub-Committee on Counter Narcotics and approved by President Karzai in January. The international community also expressed its strong collective support for the updated Strategy following its presentation by the Afghan Minister for Counter Narcotics, Engineer Habibullah Qaderi, during the counter narcotics session of the London Conference.

The National Drug Control Strategy represents a balanced and comprehensive approach to the drug problem. It sets out four key priorities, which I believe will help make a greater impact on the trade and sustain the reduction in cultivation we have seen in 2005. These are:

disrupting the drugs trade by targeting traffickers and their backers strengthening and diversifying legal rural livelihoods reducing the demand for illicit drugs and treatment of problem drug users developing state institutions at the central and provincial level

The Strategy also notes that "where there are legal livelihoods, a credible threat of eradication is needed in order to incentivise the shift away from poppy cultivation". It also highlights the importance of raising public awareness and improving international and regional co-operation on counter narcotics.

In recognition of the serious threat that narcotics pose to the broader reconstruction effort in Afghanistan and the importance of adopting a comprehensive approach equal to the scale of the challenge, counter narcotics is also included as a cross-cutting theme in the Afghanistan Compact between the Afghan Government and the international community which was also launched at the London conference. The Compact includes high level benchmarks to measure progress in the counter narcotics effort. These benchmarks are underpinned by the more detailed planning in the National Drug Control Strategy and the interim Afghan National Development Strategy, the third of the interlocking documents launched in London.

The challenge now is implementation. In support of the Government of Afghanistan's efforts, the UK will spend £270 million over this and the next two financial years, including some £130 million on legal rural livelihoods and institutional development from the Department for International Development. In the current financial year, about 70 per cent. of the rest of UK spending has been channelled into efforts to target traffickers and disrupt the trade. We expect this to remain a top priority.

As part of the activity to date, the UK has helped to establish and provide training for the Counter Narcotics Police of Afghanistan—the lead drug law enforcement agency, headquartered in Kabul, with seven provincial offices. The UK is also providing training for the Afghan Special Narcotics Force, an elite and highly trained force equipped to tackle high value targets across the country. We are also working with the international community to recruit and train a counter narcotics Criminal Justice Task Force of Afghan investigators, prosecutors and judges to work with the Counter Narcotics Police, to be able to push through successful drugs investigations and prosecutions.

The UK has funded the development of five drug treatment centres and is working with the Ministry of Counter Narcotics to determine how best to support activity in this area following the completion of UNODC's survey on drug use within Afghanistan late last year. We are also supporting the US led Poppy Elimination Programme (PEP) by funding the salaries of Afghan staff charged with raising awareness of the illegality of the opium industry and monitoring Governor-led eradication in priority poppy growing provinces.

From the spring, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence (Dr. John Reid) announced on 26 January, UK troops will be deployed to the South of Afghanistan, to Helmand province, in support of the UN authorised, NATO-led International Security Assistance Force. They will work to counter insurgency and help the appropriate authorities build security and government institutions to continue the progress of recent years. Above all, their presence will help the Afghans create the environment in which economic development and institutional reform—both essential to the elimination of the opium industry—can take place. ISAF forces will be able to help with the provision of training to Afghan counter-narcotics forces and will, when necessary, provide support to their operations. They will also help the Afghan Government explain their policies to the Afghan people. ISAF forces will not take part in the eradication of opium poppy or in pre-planned and direct military action against the drugs trade. As President Karzai has pointed out, this is a job for the Government of Afghanistan.

The UK is working hard to increase international support, including NATO and Coalition support, for the counter narcotics campaign. It was heartening to note the collective recognition at the London Conference of the need to increase resources to help the Government of Afghanistan deliver against the ambitious, but essential, benchmarks it has set itself. Several delegations, including the US (US$2 million), Sweden (US$2 million), Korea and the UK (at least £30 million (US$52.9 million) announced contributions to the Counter Narcotics Trust Fund set up to support the strategy in London. These contributions add to those already committed by Australia, New Zealand, the EC and Estonia (US$1.5 million, US$338,000, US$18.4 million and US$50,000 respectively), giving a total of $77 million pledged to the CN Trust Fund. The Fund will bring counter narcotics funding on budget; give the Afghans greater ownership over this important agenda; and ensure that assistance is targeted as effectively as possible.

The commitment of the Government of Afghanistan and the support of the international community are starting to yield results. Progress is being made. 2005 saw the establishment of a Ministry for Counter Narcotics in Afghanistan, the passage of vital counter narcotics legislation, the conviction of over 90 drug traffickers and the seizure of some 165 tonnes of opiates. The Counter Narcotics Police of Afghanistan is now 500 strong and the operations of the Afghan Special Narcotics Force are starting to make an impact on the trade, forcing traffickers to shift their modus operandi, moving and storing drugs in smaller quantities.

In parallel, the National Rural Access Programme has restored thousands of kilometres of roads and renovated hundreds of irrigation systems through labour-intensive cash for work schemes aimed at providing basic employment opportunities for the rural poor. Work is also taking place to improve social protection for the poor (through the creation of social safety nets); to improve access to finance and credit; to develop better provincial development planning processes and research programmes into new crops and markets.

It will not be easy to sustain last year's reduction in cultivation. Sustainable drug elimination strategies take time. Afghanistan will continue to require the strong support of the international community and the firm commitment of its own Government. As the key partner nation for counter narcotics the UK remains committed to the challenge and to supporting the delivery of the National Drug Control Strategy. We believe this represents the best means of securing a sustainable reduction in the cultivation and trafficking in opium.

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Jack Straw): Subject to parliamentary approval of any necessary supplementary estimate, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office departmental expenditure limit (DEL) will be increased by £185,034,000 from £1,818,884,000 to £2,003,918,000. The administration budget will be increased by £29,439,000 from £796,238,000 to £825,677,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

New DEL

Neutral Change

I. An increase in income and expenditure of £3,000,000 relating to the asset recycling agreement.

HEALTH

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Secretary of State for Health (Ms Patricia Hewitt): Subject to the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department of Health's element of the Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) will be increased by £112,322,000 from £78,591,189,000 to £78,703,511,000 and the Administration Cost Limit will be increased by £484,000 from £247,629,000 to £248,113,000. The Food Standards Agency DEL will be increased by £951,000 from £144,424,000 to £145,375,000. The overall DEL including the Food Standards Agency will be increased by £113,273,000 from £78,735,613,000 to £78,847,886,000. The impact on resource and capital are set out in the following table.

*Depreciation, which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from the total DEL since the capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The Department of Health DEL has increased by £112,322,000 to reflect take up of £200,000,000 capital end year flexibility as announced in the public expenditure white paper (Cm 6639) July 2005 and £1,461,000 from the invest to save budget for social care projects. In addition, transfers have been agreed with the DHSS Northern Ireland of £554,000 for out of area treatments and from the Cabinet Office of £484,000 (administration costs) for services of the Parliamentary counsel. These increases are offset by transfers to the Department for Education and Skills of £18,854,000 mainly for capital building programmes and pension costs; a transfer to the Department for Environment and Rural Affairs of £60,000,000 for a contribution towards the over thirty months scheme; to the Department for Constitutional Affairs of £1,500,000 capital associated with the transfer of the mental health review tribunals; to the Scottish Executive of £4,140,000 for out of area treatments; to the National Assembly for Wales of £5,684,000 mainly for out of area treatments and cross border flows.

The Department of Health's administration cost limit has increased by £484,000 from £247,629,000 to £248,113,000 as detailed above.

The changes to the Food Standards Agency resource element of the Departmental Expenditure Limit arises from an increase in MHS gross cost of £5,000,000 offset by a similar increase in the income limit. Due to this neutral change the Programme DEL has been increased by £1,000 to ensure there is a token Supplementary amount to be voted.

The changes to the Food Standards Agency capital element of the Departmental Expenditure Limit arises from increased capital expenditure of £950,000 for the renewal of IT infrastructure and strengthening IT contingency arrangements.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Paul Goggins): Plans to change the Charity Commission's Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) and administration budget for 2005–06.

Subject to Parliamentary approval of any necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Charity Commission DEL will be increased by £250,000 from £32,607,000 to £32,857,000 and the administration budget will be increased by £250,000 from £32,153,000 to £32,403,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

New DEL

	Change	Voted	Non-voted	Total
Resource	250	32,403	0	32,403
Capital	0	1,604	0	1,604
Depreciation*	0	-1,150	0	-1,150
Total	250	32,857	0	32,857

*Depreciation, which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from: take up of £250,000 Efficiency Challenge Fund (ECF) monies to assist with the delivery of efficiency targets.

The increases will be funded by the take up of ECF monies allocated in the SR04 settlement.

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Charles Clarke): Plans of changes to the Departmental Expenditure Limits ("DEL") and Administration Budget for 2005–06.

Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Home Office's Departmental Expenditure Limits for 2005–06 will be increased by £30,348,000 from £13,645,786,000 to £13,676,134,000 and the Administration Budget will be increased by £833,000 from £704,526,000 to £705,359,000.

Within the DEL change, the impact on Resources and Capital is as set out in the following table:

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Spring Supplementary Estimates

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department for International Development departmental expenditure limit (DEL) will be increased by £46,111,000 from £4,472,082,000 to £4,518,193,000. The administration budget will be increased by £11,000 from £238,970,000 to £238,981,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

New DEL

A reduction of £2,500,000 in Africa conflict prevention departmental unallocated provision relating to the take up of provision within DFID's Request for Resources 2

A reduction of £500,000 in Africa conflict prevention departmental unallocated provision relating to a transfer to the Ministry of Defence to fund approved projects on conflict prevention in Africa.

An increase of £150,000 in Africa conflict prevention departmental unallocated provision in respect of a transfer from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office from savings on conflict prevention projects in Africa.

A reduction of £3,050,000 following the classification of the Retrospective Terms Adjustment charge on interest foregone by the Consolidated Fund on the conversion of loans to grants, as outside public expenditure.

A reduction of £2,500,000 following the reclassification of interest income on bilateral and multilateral loans from outside the OFID resource budget to the Resource DEL.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Peter Hain): Subject to Parliamentary approval the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) will be taking a 2005–06 Spring Supplementary Estimate. The effect this will have is to increase the NIO's Resource DEL by £36,241,000 from £1,199,288,000 to £1,235,529,000 and decrease Capital DEL by £580,000 from £65,928,000 to £65,348,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resource and capital are as set out in the following table:

Resource (£000s)				Capital (£000s)
Change	New DEL	Of which: Voted	Non-voted	Change	DEL	Of which: Voted	Non-voted
36,241	1,235,529	365,515	870,014	(580)	65,348	29,657	35,691

The change in the resource element of the DEL by £36,241,000 arises from an increase in PSNI pension current service cost of £36,000,000 and the surrender of PES transfers from other Government Departments of £241,000.

The change in capital DEL by £580,000 is due to the surrender of a PES transfer to another Government Department.

SCOTLAND

Spring Supplementary Estimates

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Alistair Darling): Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the Scotland Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) will be increased by £108,539,000 (net of depreciation) from £23,049,735,000 to £23,158,274,000.

The DEL increase takes account of the following:

the take-up of End Year Flexibility (EYF) by the Scottish Executive amounting to £135,186,000; and the take-up of 2005 Pre-Budget consequentials by the Scottish Executive amounting to £2,124,000.

The DEL increase also includes the following transfers between the Scottish Executive and other Government departments, amounting to a net increase of £14,648,000. These are:

a transfer of £2,280,000 from the Department for Transport (Rail);

a transfer of £4,140,000 from the Department of Health (Out of Area Treatments); a transfer of £228,000 from the Northern Ireland Executive (Out of Area Treatments); and a transfer of £8,000,000 from the Department for Constitutional Affairs (Judicial Salaries).

The increases will be offset by interdepartmental transfers as detailed above or charged to the DEL Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditur

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Spring Supplementary Estimates

The Solicitor-General (Mr. Mike O'Brien): Subject to Parliamentary approval of any necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Attorney General's DEL will be increased by £14,290,000 from £702,733,000 to £717,023,000 and the Administration budget will be increased by £167,000 from £114,761,000 to £114,928,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

New DEL

	Change	Voted	Non-Voted	Total
Resource	13,767	709,331		709,331
of which: Administration Budget	167	114,928		114,928
Capital	1,106	16,056		16,056
Depreciation*	-583	-8,303		-8,303
Total	14,290	717,023		717,023

 Depreciation, which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from the total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.*

The Crown Prosecution Service's (CPS) element of the Attorney General's DEL will be increased by £13,708,000 from £601,813,000 to £615,521,000 and the Administration budget will be reduced by £415,000 from £57,953,000 to £57,538,000.

The change in the CPS's DEL arises from:

The utilisation of £10,400,000 resource End Year Flexibility to support increased expenditure on the prosecution of criminal cases

An increase of £550,000 Programme resources due to the reallocation of resource DEL budgetary cover from the Home Office to the Crown Prosecution Service. This is required to provide additional resources from Criminal Justice Information Technology (CJIT) to fund the re-commissioning of a test environment for Exchange Integration Service Stream Release 1 (EXISSR1) and enhancements to the Witness Management System.

An increase of £1,240,000 Programme resources due to the reallocation of resource DEL budgetary cover from the Department for Constitutional Affairs to the Crown Prosecution Service. This is required to provide additional resources from Criminal Justice Information Technology (CJIT) to aid the development of the IT tools necessary to support Case Progression Officers.

An increase of £2,500,000 Programme resources due to the reallocation of resource DEL budgetary cover from the Department for Constitutional Affairs to the Crown Prosecution Service. This is required to provide additional resources to help fund the Statutory Charging programme.

A decrease of £173,000 Programme resources due to the reallocation of resource DEL budgetary cover from the Crown Prosecution Service to the Home Office. This is required to provide additional resources to fund the "No Witness No Justice" partnership programme to improve services to prosecution witnesses in Court.

A decrease of £415,000 Administration resources due to the reallocation of resource DEL budgetary cover, within the Attorney General's resource DEL, from the Crown Prosecution Service to HM Procurator General & Treasury Solicitors. This is required to provide additional resources to help fund the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers.

A decrease of £394,000 Capital due to the reallocation of capital DEL budgetary cover from the Crown Prosecution Service to the Home Office. This is required to provide additional resources to fund the "No Witness No Justice" partnership programme to improve services to prosecution witnesses in Court.

Other changes which have no net effect on the CPS's DEL are:

Programme expenditure changes in respect of an increase in the Crown Prosecution Service's other current expenditure costs offset by a corresponding increase in Programme income received in respect of costs awarded to the CPS in court. This has increased by £4,000,000 from £29,300,000 to £33,300,000.

The Serious Fraud Office's (SFO) element of the Attorney General's DEL will not change from £46,275,000 and the Administration budget will not change from £27,175,000.

The Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office's (RCPO's) element of the Attorney General's DEL will be reduced by £16,000 from £37,788,000 to £37,772,000 and the Administration Budget will be reduced by £766,000 from £19,412,000 to £18,646,000.

The changes in RCPO's DEL arise from:

The transfer of £750,000 resource DEL to capital DEL to cover additional capital spending. This is required to provide additional resources to help fund the accommodation improvements demanded by the Gower Hammond and Butterfield Reviews.

A decrease of £16,000 Administration resources due to the reallocation of resource DEL budgetary cover, within the Attorney General's resource DEL, from the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office to HM Procurator General & Treasury Solicitors. This is required to provide additional-resources to help fund the provision of administrative services by the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers.

The Treasury Solicitor's Department (TSD) element of the Attorney General's DEL will be increased by £598,000 from £16,857,000 to £17,455,000 and the Administration Budget will be increased by £1,348,000 from £10,221,000 to £11,569,000.

The change in TSD's DEL arises from:

Administration costs changes in respect of a reallocation of resource DEL budgetary cover, within the Attorney General's resource DEL, of £415,000 from the Crown Prosecution Service, and £16,000 from the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office to the Treasury Solicitors

Department to meet the cost of policy support to the Attorney General provided by the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers (LSLO).

Take up of capital End Year Flexibility of £750,000 to meet the capital commitments of TSD and LSLO.

Other changes, which have no net effect on TSD's DEL, are:

Administration costs changes in respect of the transfer of £61,000 from the Treasury Solicitors' Department Agency to meet the cost of policy support to the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers (LSLO).

Administration costs changes in respect of a £15,750,000 increase in Treasury Solicitors' Departmental Administration costs offset by a corresponding increase in Administration income to meet an additional demand for legal services provided to other Government Departments.

Administration costs changes in respect of a £45,000 increase in Treasury Solicitors' Departmental Administration costs offset by a corresponding increase in Administration income for the cost of shared finance services provided to the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office.

Administration costs changes in respect of a £73,000 increase in Treasury Solicitors' Department Administration costs offset by a corresponding increase in Administration income arising from a rate rebate.

Administration costs changes in respect of a £917,000 transfer of depreciation costs from other current to administration costs.

Shaken Baby Syndrome

The Solicitor-General (Mr. Mike O'Brien): My right hon. Friend the Attorney General has made the following Oral Statement.

"I wish to make a statement announcing the outcome of my review of Shaken Baby Syndrome cases and to also make the House aware of new guidance relating to expert witnesses in court.

The House will recall the high profile cases of Sally Clark, Trupti Patel and Angela Cannings, all of which related to allegations of unlawful killing of children. It was following these cases that I undertook to review past cases where a parent or carer had been convicted of killing a baby or infant under the age of two, in the past 10 years.

In December 2004 I reported to the House that 297 cases had been reviewed and 28 were found to have questionable convictions. Today I report that I have fulfilled my pledge to re-examine the 88 cases which were identified at the outset of this process as shaken baby cases.

The review of the shaken baby cases was undertaken once the Court of Appeal ruled in July last year. Today I am able to report that three cases have been found to have questionable convictions.

The three convictions identified as questionable include:

one male convicted of murder in 2001 and sentenced to life imprisonment [and currently still serving that sentence] one male convicted of manslaughter in 2001 and sentenced to three years imprisonment [no longer in prison]

one female convicted of manslaughter in 1994 and sentenced to seven years imprisonment [no longer in prison—carried out extensive searches but appears to have left the country or changed her name]

The cases of Sally Clark, Trupti Patel and Angela Cannings generated a wide ranging medical debate about infant deaths and also the causes of shaken baby syndrome.

The judgment of the Court of Appeal, which considered the evidence of 25 expert witnesses from all disciplines, is now considered the case law authority on shaken baby syndrome and has helped clarify the law.

It stated that the presence of all or some of three particular injuries is a strong pointer towards shaken baby syndrome. The Court was therefore uniquely placed to comment upon this difficult area, and the differing medical evidence put before it.

The Court's primary focus was on the significance of the so-called "triad" of injuries which, when all or some are present in an infant, is suggestive of deliberate harm. These consist of subdural haemorrhaging, retinal haemorrhaging and encephalopathy or brain swelling.

The Court's critical focus was on the degree of force required to cause those injuries, or indeed whether any force was required. The Court of Appeal found that:

> The presence of the triad of injuries is consistent with shaken baby syndrome, but the triad alone cannot automatically lead to a conclusion that the infant has been shaken.
> The triad however remains "... a strong pointer ..." to shaken baby syndrome.

Taking into account the judgment of the Court of Appeal, a thorough review of the 88 cases was carried out by a senior CPS lawyer and independent Counsel, who were part of a team that conducted my wider review into infant homicides in 2004. I have taken an active personal role in supervising the review and believe we have acted carefully, and as swiftly as practicable, in reaching conclusions.

The review has found that three convictions may give cause for concerns as to the safety of those convictions. In the considerable majority of the remaining SBS cases, other extraneous evidence existed to support the findings of shaken baby syndrome.

A few examples are: evidence the infant had been struck against a wall causing catastrophic injuries; admissions to shaking and punching the infant; earlier fractures; and head injuries occurring on two separate occasions.

My office has written to the legal representatives of those involved in the three cases suggesting that it might be appropriate for the safety of their client's conviction to be referred to the Court of Appeal or the Criminal Cases Review Commission.

The letters stress that the determination of the review does not mean that the convictions are unsafe. That will be a matter for the Court of Appeal to decide in due course, if the defendants decide to take the matter further.

While I believe, after careful review, the vast majority of shaken baby syndrome convictions do not give rise to concern, it remains open to anyone with such a conviction to seek leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal or a referral to the Criminal Cases Review Commission.

To ensure that this problem does not happen again, the DPP will be issuing further guidance to prosecutors as a result of this review.

Infant death cases such as those of Angela Cannings and Sally Clark led to concern among practitioners and the public at the way in which the criminal dealt with the issues surrounding expert evidence. It is a concern I share.

I can therefore announce today that, as a result of that work between the Crown Prosecution Service and ACPO, we will now be implementing new guidance that focuses on the requirements made on such witnesses in terms of disclosure. Where experts are police employees, they will continue to work to the requirements of the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996, and in particular the obligations to retain, record and reveal.

Experts who are not police employees will receive a guidance booklet setting out what is required of them, including the need to reveal to the investigator all the material they will have created in working on the case. They will also be required to certify that they have revealed to the prosecution any information that might adversely affect their credibility and or competence as an expert witness. They are reminded that they must not give expert opinion beyond their area of expertise. This guidance will set standards across the criminal justice system for the use of expert witnesses.

The new guidance is one of a number of initiatives underway across government which will improve the management of expert evidence in the criminal courts. In addition the Criminal Procedure Rule Committee is considering new rules that would provide explicitly for pre-trial discussion between experts to identify areas of agreement or disagreement and so save court time.

I believe the clear and thorough guidelines I have announced today will assist in bringing about greater confidence in the criminal justice system in handling such difficult cases where expert witnesses are called on".

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Alan Johnson): Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department of Trade & Industry's DEL will be increased by £576,302,000 from £6,374,488,000 to £6,950,790,000 and the administration costs limit will be reduced by £27,917,000 from £391,523,000 to £363,606,000.

Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is as set out in the following table:

	Change	Voted	New DEL Non-voted	Total
Resource (£000)	412,078	225,473	6,186,687	6,412,160

v) utilisation of £6,000,000 from the unused balance of the Department's End-Year Flexibility entitlement for the Enterprise Capital Fund/Early Growth Fund;

vi) utilisation of £23,900,000 from the unused balance of the Department's End-Year Flexibility entitlement to provide for a shortfall in non-voted Launch Investment receipts;

vii) a virement of £54,024,000 from non-voted near-cash resource expenditure to non-voted capital expenditure in respect of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority;

viii) a virement of £1,500,000 from non-voted capital expenditure to voted non-cash resource expenditure in respect of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority;

ix) a virement of £2,000,000 from voted capital grants to non-voted capital in respect of the MG Rover support package funded by the Regional Development Agencies;

x) a virement of £71,265,000 from non-voted capital grants expenditure to non-voted capital expenditure in respect of the Regional Development Agencies;

RfR2

i) an increase of £4,000,000 in the non-voted expenditure of the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council and an equivalent increase in voted receipts;

ii) a virement of £ 18,717,000 from non-voted capital expenditure to non-voted capital grants expenditure of the Research Councils.

Office of Fair Trading

Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Office of Fair Trading's DEL will be increased by £1,237,000 from £58,403,000 to £59,640,000.

Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital is as set out in the following table:

	Change	Voted	New DEL Non-voted	Total
Resource (£000)	487	57,492		57,492
Capital (£000)	750	2,148		2,148
Depreciation* (£000)		-2,549		-2,549
Total (£000)	1237	57,091		57,091

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

i) utilisation of £487,000 from the unused balance of the Department's End-Year Flexibility entitlement in respect of the launch of "Codes Program" delayed from prior year.

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from:

ii) utilisation of £750,000 from the unused balance of the Department's End-Year Flexibility entitlement in respect of the launch of "Codes Program" delayed from prior year.

TRANSPORT

Spring Supplementary Estimates

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Alistair Darling): Subject to parliamentary approval of any necessary supplementary estimate, the Department for Transport DEL for 2005-06 will be increased by £270,488,000 from £11,723,915,000 to £11,994,403,000 and the administration costs limits will be increased by £5,365,000 from £264,558,000 to £269,923,000.

London and Continental Railways

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Alistair Darling): With construction of the link nearing completion, my Department has been considering its future relationship with the project and with London and Continental Railways, who are responsible for the construction and operation of the Rail Link. A number of options have been considered, touching on future financial arrangements, the current structure of controls in light of current best practice in such projects and the structure of LCR and its subsidiary companies. Officials have for some time held discussions with LCR about the best long term commercial structure. Separately, my Department has recently been approached by a third party, asking about the Department's attitude to their discussing with LCR's shareholders the potential acquisition of their current holdings, and about the issues of finance, structure and control mentioned above. My Department has made clear that any changes to LCR's ownership, corporate structure or controls structure will be considered against the primary objective of ensuring continuing value for taxpayers' money.

Silverlink Metro

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Alistair Darling): From 11 November 2007, responsibility for Silverlink Metro services will be transferred to Transport for London (TfL).

Silverlink Metro consists of train services between Richmond and North Woolwich, Gospel Oak: and Barking, Clapham Junction to Willesden Junction and between Watford and Euston.

The transfer is in line with the Department for Transport's White Paper commitment to examine mechanisms for giving the London Mayor more control over rail services within London.

After the date of transfer, TfL will have complete responsibility for services levels on Silverlink Metro. TfL will now begin the process of procuring a concession to operate services after the transfer.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Spring Supplementary Estimate

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. John Hutton): Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department for Work and Pensions DEL will be increased by £120,787,000 from £8,827,404,000 to £8,948,191,000 and the administration budget will be reduced by £30,335,000 from £6,059,262,000 to £6,028,927,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are as set out in the following table:

	£000's	New DEL £000's
	Change	Voted	Non-Voted	Total
Resource	58,158	7,409,690	1,178,920	8,588,610
Capital	62,000	458,414	9,928	468,342
Depreciation (1)	629	-107,999	-762	-108,761
Total	120,787	7,760,105	1,188,086	8,948,191

Note:

1. Depreciation, which forms part of resource DEL, is excluded from the total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The change in the resource element of the DEL arises from:

RfR1

i. an increase in provision of £4,000,000 (other current) due to increased spending by the Child Support Agency (take up of end of year flexibility);

RfR2

ii. an increase in provision of £37,000,000 (grants) due to increased spending on Employment Programmes (take up of end of year flexibility);

iii. an increase in provision of £74,000,000 (other current/grants) due to increased spending by Jobcentre Plus (£50,688,000), Health and Safety Executive (£8,763,000) and Housing Benefit Administration (£14,549,000) (take up of end of year flexibility);

iv. a reduction in provision of £229,000 (other current) due to a transfer to the Department of Trade and Industry for the transition costs of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights;

v. a reduction in provision of £62,000,000 (other current) due to a switch of funding into capital to reflect revised spending plans;

RfR4

vi. an increase in provision of £3,000,000 (other current) due to increased spending by the Pensions Service (take up of end of year flexibility);

RfR4

vii. an increase in provision of £2,000,000 (other current) due to increased spending by the Disability and Carers Service (take up of end of year flexibility);

RfR5

viii. an increase in provision of £387,000 (administration) due to a transfer of funding from the Cabinet Office for the transfer of the functions of the Parliamentary Counsel Office.

Capital

The change in the capital element of the DEL arises from:

RfR2

ix. an increase in provision of £62,000,000 due to a transfer from other current to better reflect spending plans.

Administration Costs

The movement in the Administration Cost limit arises from:

RfR2

x. a transfer of provision of £30,000,000 within Job Centre Plus from administration to other current to more accurately reflect spending plans;

RfR4

xi. a transfer of provision of £722,000 from Disability Client Group (administration) to Disability Rights Commission (other current);

RfR5

xii. an increase in provision of £387,000 (administration) due to a transfer of funding from the Cabinet Office for the transfer of the functions of the Parliamentary Counsel Office.

Movements from non-voted expenditure

Additionally there are the following drawdowns that are neutral in overall DEL terms:

Welfare Modernisation Fund

xiii. £64,564,000 into RfR1 for Child Support Reform;

xiv. £70,000,000 into RfR2 for Jobcentre Plus modernisation;

xv. £26,000,000 into RfR3 for the Pensions Transformation Project;

xvi. £18,000,000 into RfR4 for Disability and Carers Service modernisation;

Employment Development Fund

xvii. £285,000,000 into RfR2 for Jobcentre Plus roll out.

Financial Assistance Scheme

xviii. £17,000,000 into RfR 3 to reflect spending plans.

TREASURY

DEL and Administration Costs Limits

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Ivan Lewis): Subject to Parliamentary approval of any necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Government Actuary's Departmental Expenditure Limit will be decreased by £199,000 from £1,365,000 to £1,166,000. Within the DEL change, the impact on resources and capital are set out in the following table:

New DEL

	Change	Voted	Non-Voted	Total
Resource	-399	728	0	728
Capital	200	438	0	438
Depreciation*	–	-422	–	-422
Total	-199	744	0	744

* Depreciation, which forms part of the resource DEL, is excluded from total DEL since capital DEL includes capital spending and to include depreciation of those assets would lead to double counting.

The change in the resource DEL arises from (a) machinery of government transfer to the Office of National Statistics £78,000 and (b) efficiency savings identified in response to the Gershon Review £121,000. The change in the capital element arises through a virement of DEL resource into capital £200,000. This capital funding will support investment in business systems for GAD.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Electronic Conveyancing (England and Wales)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Bridget Prentice): My noble Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Baroness Ashton, has made the following written ministerial statement:

"Land Registry has carried out extensive further consultation with stakeholders on the introduction of Electronic Conveyancing in England and Wales since the formal consultation exercise in 2002. The implementation of this important reform programme will continue to be carried out incrementally. A prototype in 2006 (the Chain Matrix) and a pilot exercise in the second half of 2007 (the system to be used for domestic sales) are planned, with further releases as the system progresses. These exercises will be limited to voluntary users. Once sufficient experience of the new system has been gained, the Secretary of State and Land Registry will initiate a consultation process with stakeholders over the form of the rules which will make e-conveyancing compulsory for most transactions. If Parliament approves those rules, I would expect the implementation of the compulsory provisions to take place as soon as possible, which is likely to be in 2009 or 2010".

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Olympic Delivery Authority

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Jim Fitzpatrick): This statement concerns a consultation on the transfer of certain powers from existing planning authorities to the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA). The ODA is to be established, subject to parliamentary approval, following Royal Assent of the London Olympic Games and Paralympic Games Bill.

The making of the Planning Functions Order to give the ODA powers must be preceded by a consultation process. Copies of the Olympic Delivery Authority (Planning Functions) Order Consultation Paper have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses today. The consultation period will run from today for eight weeks until 12 April.

Giving planning powers to the ODA will facilitate the planning process for the Olympic Park, bearing in mind the scale of development involved, the timescales attached, and the integrated nature of the project. The transfer of powers from the existing planning authorities to the ODA would not change the nature of those powers, nor would it lessen the transparency of the planning process. The ODA as planning authority would follow the same, or similar, procedures as the Boroughs and the London Thames Gateway Development Corporation, in which the Olympic Park is situated. Applicants would have the same rights of appeal against decisions by the ODA.

The planning powers taken by the ODA will operate within a defined geographical boundary. The Consultation Map shows the expected area of the Olympic Park, as well as other areas where development is considered integral to the delivery of the Park. The Consultation Paper does not seek views on the layout of the Park or the area to be covered by the Olympic Park development. The Consultation Paper seeks views on what area should be subject to ODA planning powers and the extent of the planning powers to be given to the ODA.

HEALTH

NHS Capital Allocations 2006–07

The Secretary of State for Health (Ms Patricia Hewitt): I am today notifying National Health Service Trusts, Primary Care Trusts and Strategic Health Authorities of their 2006–07 capital allocations. The total value of these allocations is £2,041 million. Details of allocations made to individual NHS organisations has been placed in the Library.

Investment in infrastructure continues to play a pivotal role in the modernisation of this NHS. This funding is for capital investment in NHS land, buildings and equipment.

NHS Trusts and Primary Care Trusts will receive operational capital for the purpose of renewing their existing asset bases and for modernising their equipment.

Strategic Health Authorities will receive Strategic Capital to fund larger scale investments facilitating strategic change. Strategic Health Authorities manage the distribution of strategic capital on to NHS Trusts and Primary Care Trusts in their patches by prioritising business cases for capital investment.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Carlile Report

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Charles Clarke): I am pleased to say that Lord Carlile of Berriew QC has completed the report on the operation of Part VI of the Act in 2005, which will be laid before the House today.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Review of UK Assisted Areas (2007–13)

The Minister for Industry and the Regions (Alun Michael): I am today launching a consultation about the criteria we should use in drawing up the map of areas in the UK within which it will be possible to pay state aid for investment (economic funding to help to boost competitiveness) during the period 2007–13. A similar consultation took place before the current assisted areas map drawn up in 2000. Regional investment aid payments can be paid from EU Structural Funds or from a nation's own resources but are limited, at least as far as larger companies are concerned, to areas which need help according to clear criteria. This consultation is the first step in a process of agreeing the regional aid map.

In addition, the Government will be consulting in the near future on the proposed Rural Development Programme for England and on a draft National Strategic Reference Framework, which will be required by European Regulations to set out the broad priorities for future Structural Funds Programmes in the UK over the 2007–13 budgetary cycle.

The Government are committed to making sustainable improvements in the economic performance of all English regions and over the long term reducing the persistent gap in growth rates between the regions.[1] The Devolved Administrations work in partnership with the UK Government to promote economic development in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. The Government have developed their regional development strategy on the basis of a detailed economic analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of the economies of the UK's regions and labour market as set out in Productivity in the UK 3: The Regional Dimension[2], Full Employment in Every Region[3], and Devolving Decision-making 2: Meeting the regional economic challenge[4].

The Review of the Assisted Areas is an important step to ensuring that Regions and Nations have the flexibility to build on strengths and address weaknesses. A national consultation will seek views on the designation of future Assisted Areas from 2007 to 2013. The consultation will be carried out in two parts. Part one of the consultation begins on 15 February 2006 and ends on 19 April 2006.

In part one the Government will seek views on the type of indicators that should be used to identify Assisted Areas, the appropriate geographical unit, and whether "economic development" areas should receive Assisted Areas coverage in their entirety.

The Government are also intending to cover Northern Ireland in its entirety, because of the unique difficulties in spatial targeting, the boundary with Borders, Midland and Western region of the Republic of Ireland, and that fact that Northern Ireland is currently eligible for an aid intensity of 40 per cent. higher than any other region of the UK. Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the House Library.

After responses have been received and analysed, part two of the consultation will contain the Government's response and a draft map and should be issued during the summer.

The new European Commission guidelines on regional aid were adopted on 21 December 2005. Under the new European Commission guidelines, the proportion of the UK population covered by the Assisted Areas will be 23.9 per cent, compared to 30.9 per cent. currently covered. This results mainly from the UK's sustained economic success in recent years. The reduction in coverage for the UK, like other longer-standing Member States, reflects the European Union objective of reducing the quantity of state aid as well as the impact of European Union enlargement. This has led to eligibility for regional aid being concentrated in the new, poorer Member States.

[1] HM Treasury, Office of Deputy Prime Minister and Department of Trade and Industry share a Public Service Agreement target to: "Make sustainable improvements in the economic performance of all English regions by 2008, and over the long term reduce the persistent gap in growth rates between the regions, demonstrating progress by 2006".

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pensions Levies 2006–07

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. John Hutton): I am pleased to announce that there will be no increase in either the Pensions Regulator General Levy rates or the Pension Protection Fund Administration Levy rates for 2006–07. Rates will remain at the 2005–06 level as set out in the tables below.

The General Levy meets the cost of the Pensions Regulator (TPR) whose objective is to protect the benefits of members of occupational and private pension schemes; to reduce risks that lead to calls on the Pension Protection Fund and to promote and improve understanding of, the good administration of work based pension schemes. It also meets the cost of the Pensions Ombudsman and the Pensions Advisory Service which provide scheme members with help, advice and information.

The Pension Protection Administration Levy meets the cost of administrating the Pension Protection Fund. This cost is initially met by money provided by Parliament, then recouped through this levy. The Pension Protection Fund which provides compensation to members of non money purchase pension schemes where the employer in respect of the scheme becomes insolvent later than 6 April 2005, and where the scheme is under-funded and is unable to purchase benefits for members above the level that the Pension Protection Fund would provide.

The provisions for the General Levy are in existing secondary legislation (S.I. 2005/626). The proposed provisions for the PPF Administration Levy are in draft regulations which will be debated in both Houses of Parliament.

Written Ministerial Statements

Thursday 16 February 2006

TREASURY

Budget Statement

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Gordon Brown): I propose to deliver my Budget statement to the House on Wednesday 22 March.

DEFENCE

Chinook Support

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): The Ministry of Defence has today announced the award of a contract for the Through Life Customer Support (TLCS) of the Chinook helicopter fleet to The Boeing Company (Boeing). The key benefit offered by this through-life Partnering Arrangement is the delivery of a holistic, affordable and incentivised support solution, with clearly defined outputs that transfer substantial risk from the MOD to industry, where it can be better managed. The 34-year TLCS contract, which is worth £199 million over the first five years, will result in savings of 17 per cent. (approximately £170 million), over the 34-year life of the contract, compared to the value for money benchmark.

The contract is part of the wider Defence Logistics Transformation Programme and entirely consistent with the policy set out in the Defence Industrial Strategy. It follows the successful implementation of similar support contracts for the Sea King, Harrier and Tornado fleets, all of which seek to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of military logistics support to the front line.

As the major sub-contractor for this contract, DARA has worked in partnership with Boeing and the MOD to deliver an availability-based repair and maintenance capability. DARA's sub-contract is worth £69 million over the five-year period and provides work for its bases in Fareham, Perth & Sealand.

Armed Forces' Pay Review Body (Thirty-Fifth Report)

The Secretary of State for Defence (John Reid): The 2006 Report of the Armed Forces' Pay Review Body has been published today. Copies of the Report are available in the Vote Office and the Library of the House. I wish to express my thanks to the Chairman and members of the Review Body for their Report.

The AFPRB has recommended an increase in basic military salary of 3 per cent. for the majority of personnel and 3.3 per cent. for Privates, Lance Corporals and equivalents on the lower pay range. The AFPRB has also recommended increases in the rates of Specialist Pay (e.g. Flying Pay, Submarine Pay, Diving Pay and Hydrographic Pay), and in accommodation charges.

The AFPRB's recommendations are to be accepted in full, with implementation effective from 1 April 2006.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Neighbourhood Renewal Fund

The Minister for Local Government (Mr. Phil Woolas): In July 2005 I announced the indicative allocation of £525 million Neighbourhood Renewal Fund (NRF) resources for 2006–07 to 86 local authority districts. These allocations were subject to satisfactory progress by Local Strategic Partnerships. I can now confirm the final allocations for all 86 LSPs in receipt of NRF for the period 2006–07.

As I said when we announced the allocation of the NRF last July we are committed to improving the overall quality of life for people living in our most disadvantaged areas. We want them to share fully in a better society where we see respect for people of all ages, races and faiths and respect for the communities they live in. The funds are to support local authorities, other agencies and communities to work together to achieve these goals.

Ministers have made it clear that the initial allocations were conditional on satisfactory assessment of progress in the autumn. Those LSPs assessed as weak at that time were then required to put in place a robust improvement plan and demonstrate they had the capacity to deliver it by 13 January 2006.

Overall Local Strategic Partnerships in these areas have made good progress in achieving neighbourhood renewal objectives since they started in 2001. There is evidence that progress has been made in reducing crime and worklessness and improving health, education and housing. However a small number of these areas—three—need to improve their performance. The Government are to withhold 10 per cent. of the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund allocation for the financial year 2006–07 from these three LSPs. The three LSPs (local authorities and their partners) and the amounts withheld are:

Birmingham	£3,226,641
Kingston upon Hull	£1,284,351
Nottingham	£1,423,614

Each of these LSPs will be required to complete plans to demonstrate how national floor targets are to be met and the gap narrowed between the poorest neighbourhoods and the city average. If these LSPs are able to demonstrate significant improvement by the end of April 2006, the funds withheld will be released during 2006–07.

Details of the final allocations are contained within annex A.

Pandemic Influenza
(The Government's Response to the House of Lords Science and Technology Committee Report)

The Secretary of State for Health (Ms Patricia Hewitt): Today, the Government have laid before Parliament their response to the House of Lords Science and Technology Committee's fourth report of Session 2005–06, on pandemic influenza (Cm 6738). Copies have been placed in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Private Security Industry Approved Contractor Scheme

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Paul Goggins): On 12 January I announced that the Government had decided to introduce an Approved Contractor Scheme (ACS) for the private security industry and that the detail of the scheme, including the fee structure, would be announced at a later date. The purpose of the scheme is to protect the public and to maintain and improve standards within the private security industry.

The detail of the ACS has now been decided. It will have the following key features:

The scheme will have three broad alternative routes to accreditation, relating to a combination of Options 3 and 4 set out in the draft Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) issued on 25 August 2005:

(a) Self assessment against an Security Industry Authority (SIA)-provided workbook followed by verification from an SIA-approved assessing body;

(b) Confirmation of ISO9001:2000 certification by a UKAS-accredited body compliance, topped up with British Standards ments of the SIA Self Assessment Workbook ady covered;

(c) Use of an existing SIA approved accreditation, based on existing standards, to meet the same requirement as (a).

Companies approved under the scheme will be permitted to deploy up to 15 per cent. of their security personnel who are not yet licensed but who have completed training and have an application pending. I have already announced that they will not be able to deploy unlicensed personnel on assignments that involve contact with children or vulnerable adults. This will ensure that those dealing with this particularly sensitive group have undergone, and satisfied any SIA requirements relating to, a Criminal Records Bureau check.

The fee structure has been set, following consultation on a partial Regulatory Impact Assessment, to enable full cost recovery for each type of firm, and is in two parts:

1. the Application Fee, to cover the pre-approval costs of considering applications for approval;
2. the Annual Registration Fee, to cover the post-approval costs of ensuring that standards are maintained by all employees covered by the scheme.

Type of Firm	Employees	Application Fees	Annual Registration Fee
Micro	under 10	£400	£20 per licensable employee
Small	10 to 25	£800
Medium	26 to 250	£1,600
Large	over 250	£2,400

The application fees are slightly lower than those consulted upon in the Partial RIA.

The detail of the ACS will be subject to annual review.

Regulations will be made to bring the ACS into force from 20 March 2006. A Full Regulatory Impact Assessment will be published on the same date.

Full details of the scheme, including the workbook, are on the SIA website at www.the-sia.org.uk.

National DNA Database

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Andy Burnham): I am today placing in the Libraries of both Houses recently issued guidance from the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) to Chief Officers on the consideration of applications for the removal, in exceptional circumstances only, of DNA and fingerprints from the respective databases. There has been considerable recent interest in the policy and operation of the National DNA Database (NDNAD), particularly in relation to juveniles and those arrested but subsequently not proceeded against. This statement and accompanying guidance is intended to inform that debate.

Under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) 1984, as amended, the police may take without consent a non-intimate DNA sample and fingerprints from all persons arrested for, informed they will be reported for, or charged with a Recordable offence and detained in a police station. Since May 2001, the police have been able to retain the DNA samples and fingerprints taken from persons who have not been convicted of such an offence. That change in legislation was itself challenged by judicial review and in July 2004 a judicial committee of the House of Lords found that the retention of DNA samples and fingerprints in these circumstances was proportionate and justified. The police may also take and retain DNA and fingerprints from persons convicted of a Recordable offence. The amendment to PACE to allow the police to take and retain DNA and fingerprints from arrested persons is contained in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 which was considered carefully by Parliament.

Since the amendment to PACE in 2001, about 200,000 DNA samples have been retained that would previously have had to be destroyed and of these, over 8,000 have been matched with crime scene stains involving nearly 14,000 offences, including murder, rape and other sexual offences. Early research has also shown that sampling persons who have been arrested but not proceeded against has yielded a "match" with a crime scene stain in over 3,000 offences, again including murder, manslaughter and rape. These links may never have been made had the police not been given their current powers to take and retain DNA. In relation to the 24,168 under-18s who have been arrested but not charged, which include 23 arrests for murder and 288 for rape, 541 have been matched to crime scenes profiles for unsolved crimes.

I wish to draw Members' attention to two important points in relation to juveniles under 10. First, there are no under-10s on the NDNAD where the sample has been taken without the consent of a parent or legal guardian, and in fact, there are no powers to do so without such consent. Secondly, it is possible for anyone to apply to their Chief Constable to have their or their child's DNA or fingerprints removed from the databases and the ACPO guidance sets out the process for doing that.

Tony Lake, Chief Constable of Lincolnshire Police Force and Chairman of the National DNA Database Strategy Board has emphasised the value of DNA evidence and the importance of the database to the criminal justice service.

New Governance arrangements for the NDNAD were introduced in December 2005 following the transformation of the Forensic Science Service to a Government owned Company. A new Delivery Unit, which will initially be part of the Home Office, is responsible for the standard setting and oversight of the NDNAD, ensuring quality and integrity of the service. It will be overseen by the National DNA Database Strategic Board, a tripartite Board composed of representatives from the Home Office, ACPO and the Association of Police Authorities. Representation at meetings of the Board by the Human Genetics Commission is being increased from one to two persons in order to strengthen lay representation and the Government are additionally looking to establish a dedicated ethics group to provide independent oversight of Board decision making.

Inclusion on the NDNAD does not signify a criminal record and there is no personal cost or material disadvantage to the individual simply by being on it. Given this, and the clear evidence showing the substantial public benefit in relation to the detection of serious crime, it is the judgment of the Government that the existing policy is justified. However, we accept the need for on-going accountability to the public and the NDNAD Annual Report, which publishes details of its activities and will be laid before Parliament, is an important part of the aim to increase transparency and maintain and improve public confidence in the oversight, management and operations of the NDNAD.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Devolving Policing and Justice

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Peter Hain): Later today I will be introducing a Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill which will, amongst other things, pave the way for future devolution of policing and justice in Northern Ireland. I am introducing this enabling legislation now because I want to send out a clear message: I believe that responsibility for policing and justice in Northern Ireland should properly lie with a Northern Ireland Assembly, directly accountable to the people of Northern Ireland.

Devolution of policing and justice cannot happen until the Assembly is restored and requests devolution of these functions, and until Parliament agrees it. But although this may be some way off, it is important that we start discussing now, with all the parties, how devolution of policing and justice can work most effectively for the people of Northern Ireland.

We need to ensure that we are agreed on the model for the new department or departments. We need to develop a shared understanding of exactly what will be devolved and how it will operate. And we need to make sure that a future Northern Ireland Assembly has the tools it needs to deliver policing and justice effectively, for example giving the Assembly the power to raise revenue for policing from a policing precept, as is the case in England, Scotland and Wales.

The discussion paper is intended to initiate and facilitate those discussions. It sets out what the Government believe is a sensible and pragmatic framework for policing and justice in Northern Ireland under an Assembly. It sets out which specific powers we think should be devolved and how these could operate. It also identifies particular areas where further thinking is needed.

The paper is not a blueprint but a discussion document. It is an opportunity for all those with an interest, but particularly the political parties in Northern Ireland, to engage with the Government and, together, work out how devolution of policing and justice should work.

The Bill contains a number of provisions in addition to those providing for future devolution of policing and justice, including provisions relating to elections in Northern Ireland, a power to create a wholesale electricity market for the island of Ireland and provision to facilitate the funding of sustainable energy development in Northern Ireland.

The various policies in the Bill have been equality screened to assess whether they impact adversely on any of the nine equality groups in Northern Ireland. The assessment is that no such adverse impact arises. Steps are being taken to draw the Bill and the discussion paper to the attention of representative groups.

I am placing in the Libraries copies of the Regulatory Impact Assessment prepared in relation to the single wholesale electricity provisions in the Bill, and of the Discussion paper.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

African, Caribbean and Pacific Countries (Economic Partnership Agreements)

The Minister for Trade (Ian Pearson): I would like to update the House on how the UK has sought to deliver its position on the Economic Partnership Agreements (EPAs) that are currently being negotiated between the EU and the African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries and also to highlight our objectives in 2006, which is a critical year for the EPA process. The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) and Department for International Development (DFID) published a position paper in March 2005 called "Making EPAs Deliver for Development", which was outlined in a ministerial statement made by Patricia Hewitt, then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, on 22 March 2005. That statement set out the Government's view that EPAs should be designed to deliver long-term development, economic growth and poverty reduction, and that in its work on EPAs, the EU should take a non-mercantilist approach and not pursue any offensive interests. Since then, we have made progress in taking forward some of these goals, particularly in reinforcing the underpinning principle that these trade agreements should be tools for development in the ACP.

The UK position paper has helped to give EPAs a much higher profile among EU Member States. During 2005, we used our presidency of the EU to ensure that there was more and better dialogue on EPAs both with other EU member states and with the European Commission about the shape these agreements should take. At ministerial and official levels where we aimed to ensure that the crucial role of EPAs in development was fully recognised, and that the trade and development aspects of EPAs are discussed coherently.

We established a technical "EPA Expert Group", involving trade and development officials which is chaired by the Commission. We have also established an informal EPA network of EU development officials which facilitates informal dialogue on the critical issues and helps us work more closely with other EU member states. EPAs were discussed at the first meeting of Director-Generals of Trade and Development in the EU, and at the informal meeting of EU development ministers. We have been pleased to see a more pro-development approach reflected, for example in the European Commission Staff Paper, "Trade and Development Aspects of the EPA Negotiations" published in November 2005, as well as in the EU-Africa Strategic Partnership agreed at the European Council in December 2005.

The UK Government have continued to work closely with the ACP countries in order to understand their views and help support their development interests in the EU policy debate. For example, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development, met with the chief ACP negotiators in October 2005, where he listened to their concerns on the slow disbursements of development assistance for EPAs. Since then, the Government have agreed with several other EU member states and the European Commission that we will jointly work to co-ordinate our bilateral and multilateral development assistance for EPAs. DFID has been continually developing their EPA research programme to provide new evidence to inform the policy dialogue. This research is practical and policy-oriented and includes exploring how ACP countries can ensure that any liberalisation that they undergo is paced and designed in a way that works for them. DFID has also expanded its technical assistance programme to support the ACP and promote a more level playing field in the negotiations. For example, DFID is helping the Caribbean region to decide how to structure their offer to the EU on market access in goods. This support has been well-received by the ACP and we have received very positive feedback from the ACP negotiators.

During 2006, we will build on the progress achieved so far, and continually press for agreements that are in the interests of ACP countries' development, economic growth and poverty reduction. We will also push to ensure that the review of the negotiations provided for in the Cotonou Agreement is both comprehensive and fully involves the participation of the ACP. From a UK perspective, we believe that the review should firstly aim to take stock of progress across all the ACP regions on specific priority issues and confirm that each ACP regional group can make its own decisions on the timing, pace, sequencing, and product coverage of market opening. The review should also help steer the EPA process during 2007 towards the conclusion of the negotiations. We continue to develop our specific priorities based on the principles above, in response to discussions with the ACP.

We will also work to ensure there is more systematic assessment of whether development aspects are properly incorporated into EPAs, as well as to check that the impact of implementing the agreements does not cause harm to ACP countries in the longer term. To this end, we will support the establishment of an improved monitoring mechanism that will check progress against development objectives.

We will continue to work closely with the Commission, other EU member states and the ACP as the negotiations continue. Obviously the Commission is charged with representing the balance of EU opinion, but we will prioritise our objectives and advance clearly on our pro-development approach, ensuring that the UK voice carries the maximum weight.

Small Business Research Initiative

The Minister for Industry and the Regions (Alun Michael): On 13 December 2005 in response to a question from the hon. Member for Burnley (Ms Kitty Ussher), Official Report, column 1907W, I informed the House that the DTI's Small Business Service (SBS) would shortly be publishing the overall Small Business Research Initiative (SBRI) performance figures for 2003–04 and 2004–05. I have today published these figures. A copy has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The overall SBRI target is that Government Departments will procure at least 2.5 per cent. of their extramural R&D from small firms, very good progress is being made. In 2004–05 of a proposed SBRI baseline of £2,532.9 million, £269.1 million (10.6 per cent.) went to small firms in the form of contracts.

Also on 12 December 2005, in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Burnley, Official Report, column 1675W, as to whether the guidelines issued to all Government Departments in implementing the mandatory SBRI would be placed in the Library, I said the guidelines were being revised and would be placed in the Library shortly, the updated guidelines have, today, been placed in the Libraries.

TRANSPORT

Firth of Forth Oil Spill Contingency Plan (Consultation)

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Alistair Darling): I announced on 21 November that the Maritime and Coastguard Agency would co-ordinate a public consultation to assess the implications for relevant nature conservation sites in the Firth of Forth, of Forth Ports' revised and amplified oil spill contingency plan.

The consultation has been launched today, and will last for a period of 12 weeks. The consultation package comprises the submitted oil spill contingency plan material and supporting information from Forth Ports and, Scottish Natural Heritage. The consultation is limited to assessing the implications of the plan for the protected sites (in view of their conservation objectives) with a view to ascertaining whether the plan will adversely affect the integrity of the sites concerned.

Details on how to take part in the consultation are available on the Maritime and Coastguard Agency's website www.mcga.gov.uk.

Railways (Eastern Regional Planning Assessment)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Derek Twigg): Today the Department for Transport has published the first of its series of Regional Planning Assessments for the Railway (RPAs). This is the Eastern RPA, covering North and East London and the East of England Region.

Regional Planning Assessments are designed to inform the development of the government's strategy for the railway. They look at the challenges and options for development of the railway in each region over the next 20 years, in the wider context of forecast change in population, the economy and travel behaviour. An RPA does not commit the Government to specific proposals. Instead it sets out the Government's current thinking on how the railway might best be developed to allow wider planning objectives for a region to be met, and identifies the priorities for further development work.

RPAs are the key link between regional spatial planning (including preparation of regional transport strategies) and planning for the railway by both Government and the rail industry. There will be 11 RPAs covering England and Wales.

The RPA clarifies the role of the railway in the region, its contribution to the economy and its place in the overall transport system, setting out where greater rail capability and capacity will be needed over the next 20 years, and the options route-by-route for responding to that need. In the shorter term (five years), the Government are committed to making the best use of existing capacity on the network by matching resources to demand.

Copies of the Eastern RPA have been placed in the House Library today.

Vehicle Registers (Release of Data)

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Dr. Stephen Ladyman): I am today launching a full public consultation on the release of data from the DVLA and DVLNI vehicle registers. I have placed copies in the House Library and it is also available on the DfT website at: www.dft.gov.uk.

The Government take very seriously their responsibilities for protecting individuals' legitimate expectations of privacy and confidentiality. Information collected from citizens is therefore held securely and will only be released to third parties where there is a lawful basis for doing so. There is a broad consensus that some groups—such as the police—should have full access to details from the vehicle register. Over the past 40 years, a wide range of other groups have been granted access to details held on the register for what is judged to be "reasonable cause". However, the activities of a small number of groups who have been granted access has raised significant concern. And so we are today setting out how the current system operates, and the main options for the future. Consultation will last six weeks and we look forward to receiving responses by 31 March.

Specifically, the consultation seeks views on the groups that should have information from the vehicle register and the reasons for their having it; how we manage access to the register; and the audit regime for those who are granted access.

Following the consultation we will announce any changes that are to be made and if necessary, amend legislation accordingly. We intend to ensure that this current review produces a system that protects vehicle keepers from misuse of their information; ensures that those who do have a good case can get the data they need; balances the right to privacy of individuals whose data are held on the register with the rights of others to gain proper redress; is cost effective—in that the costs to all are proportionate to the benefits that the scheme delivers; and is right in principle and works in practice.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mrs. Anne McGuire): It has been brought to my attention that the reply I gave the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds, David Ruffley, on 30 January 2006, Official Report, column 248W, did not contain an adequate explanation of shortcomings in the data provided. I apologise for this oversight.

The figures in the last two columns of the table provided are not comparable over the time series given.

Due to an operational decision at the time of transfer, between 1993 and 1995, many existing Invalidity Benefit cases had their start-dates reset at the time of transfer to the Incapacity Benefit system, resulting in an underestimate of long-term IB cases prior to May 2000.

The information is in the tables.

Financial Assistance Scheme

The Minister for Pensions Reform (Mr. Stephen Timms): The general notification period for the Financial Assistance Scheme ends on the 28 February. The notification period began on 1 September and is the period during which the scheme manager must be supplied with some basic details of potentially eligible pension schemes in order for them to be considered for qualification. The scheme manager may, at his discretion, accept notification of those details for any particular scheme after the 28 February.

Although FAS offers help to those pension schemes which began winding-up between 1 January 1997 and 5 April 2005 where the principal employer became insolvent on or before 28 February, extending the notification period for any particular scheme also extends the period in which an insolvency event can occur. This means it may be possible for some pension schemes which would not otherwise qualify for FAS or for compensation offered under the Pension Protection Fund to become qualifying schemes for FAS. I wish to make it clear that we may be able to extend help to some individual pension scheme members who have lost part or all of their occupational pensions but who may not have appeared eligible for help from either FAS or the PPF.

The Government will set a definitive cut-off date for insolvency events before the end of the calendar year. Until then the scheme manager will consider requests for an extension to the notification period from those pension schemes that undergo a qualifying insolvency event after the 28 February.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Animal Welfare Bill

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what scientific advice her Department has received on whether to include cephalopods within the remit of the Animal Welfare Bill. [45980]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA officials have considered numerous reports on whether cephalopods experience pain and suffering, but the current scientific evidence is not clear-cut. Before making a decision, we intend to await the outcome of a European Union review of Directive 86/609/EEC relating to the use of cephalopods in scientific research.

If future research shows that cephalopods can in fact experience pain and suffering, there are powers within the Animal Welfare Bill to extend the definition of an animal to include such invertebrates.

Batteries

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of batteries were recycled in each European Union country in the last year for which figures are available. [43353]

Mr. Bradshaw: Information on percentage of batteries recycled in European Union countries is not readily available for all battery chemistries. Member states have not been required to provide this in the past. However, officials are in the process of acquiring this data.

Portable battery (small consumer type batteries—used in phones, clocks, watches, cameras) collection rates are available for 2002 for the following countries:

Collection rate as percentage of sales in 2002

Austria	44
Belgium	59
France	16
Germany	39
Netherlands	32
Sweden	55
Spain	14
UK	0.5

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department will spend on research into the disposal of batteries in each of the next three years. [40621]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 17 January 2006]: The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) are currently undertaking work to determine the most cost effective way to meet the collection targets set out in the forthcoming EU Batteries Directive. They are aiming to look at ways of ensuring that this is done without incurring excessive costs for any of the businesses involved in the collection and recovery or disposal of batteries. The work is being funded by Defra's BREW (Business Resource Efficiency and Waste) programme with just under £600,000 spent in 2005. We are about to determine funding for the next three years as part of departmental business planning.

Beavers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the (a) progress of the reintroduction of the beaver to Gloucestershire and (b) its compatibility with the British ecosystem. [43706]

Jim Knight: The Department is continuing to hold constructive discussions about the project in Gloucestershire which, to the Department's knowledge, is keeping the beavers in captivity and is therefore not a re-introduction project.

The re-introduction of beavers into the wild in England would require a licence under section 16(4) of the 1981 Act. As part of the application process for such a licence, an impact assessment would have to be undertaken to consider the possible consequences for the local environment (such as forestry, farming, fishing, public health), impacts on local biodiversity and also to consider issues such as liability or compensation payments.

Biodiesel (Environmental Impact)

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what environmental impact assessment has been carried out into the process that converts vegetable oils into biodiesel of diesel quality. [43911]

Mr. Morley: The most common process for converting vegetable oil into biodiesel is trans-esterification. This process is well known from years of use in the oleochemical sector. However, the Low Carbon Vehicle Partnership will be looking at the specific environmental impacts of biodiesel processing as part of their work on developing draft environmental standards for biofuels. The impacts in terms of pollution to air, land and water are controlled by the Environment Agency. A pollution prevention control permit is required where biodiesel is being produced for own-use by six or more people or for commercial operations producing more than 5,000 litres a year. The processing of biodiesel from waste cooking oil and tallow is also subject to waste management controls. Various studies have assessed the greenhouse gas impact across the whole production process from raw material to finished biodiesel. UK-produced biodiesel typically gives greenhouse gas savings of around 55 per cent. compared to fossil diesel.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make provision for those cattle that react following a skin test to have a blood test before they are required to be slaughtered. [46348]

Mr. Bradshaw: The current skin test for bovine tuberculosis is an effective test. It is the accepted standard laid down in both national and international legislation for determining the existence of the disease in a cattle herd. Under EU law, the gamma-interferon diagnostic blood test may be used to supplement the skin test. It is considered marginally more sensitive than the skin test, but less specific. This means that it results in a higher probability of false positives. EU legislation allows for the gamma-interferon test to be used to pick up cases missed by the skin test, but not to overrule it.

Preparations are being made for wider use of the gamma-interferon test (in prescribed circumstances). A Gamma-interferon Working Group has been established to prepare and deliver a policy for increased use of the test.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the minutes of the discussions she has had with His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on bovine tuberculosis. [42253]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra Ministers have not held any recent discussions on bovine tuberculosis with His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's policy is on badger culling to eliminate bovine TB. [46347]

Mr. Bradshaw: No decision has been made on culling badgers to control bovine tuberculosis (TB) in England. We are still consulting both on the principle and the method of a badger culling policy in areas of high TB incidence in cattle.

Centre for Ecology and Hydrology

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what financial savings she has estimated will be made over (a) two, (b) five, (c) 10 and (d) 15 years from the planned closure of Centre for Ecology and Hydrology sites; and what the cost to her Department will be over each period of obtaining the services previously provided by those centres. [44150]

Mr. Morley: Defra would not make any savings over (a) two, (b) five, (c) 10 and (d) 15 years from the proposed closure of Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) sites. CEH is part of the Natural Environment Research Council, which receives grant in aid funding from the Department for Trade and Industry. As well as funding from NERC, CEH also obtains external funding for commissioned research.

Defra contracts research to CEH and the current contractual agreements would continue to be delivered.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the (a) financial and (b) scientific impact of the proposed closure of each of the five centres for Ecology and Hydrology on research into (i) emergent diseases, (ii) invasive species, (iii) climate change, (iv) Avian influenza, (v) GMO release, (vi) sea level rises and (vii) monitoring biodiversity; and if she will make a statement. [44151]

Mr. Morley: The aim of the restructuring proposal for the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) is to ensure its long-term sustainability which would ensure continued capacity for environmental research in the UK into the future. The Natural Environment Research Council (NERC) has confirmed that the scientific programmes for the restructured CEH would remain as:

Biodiversity
Water
Biogeochemistry
Climate Change
Sustainable Economies
Environmental Informatics

Defra contracts research to CEH and the current contractual agreements would continue to be delivered.

NERC is currently consulting widely with stakeholders and I am sure that NERC council will consider all evidence and views on the potential impact of the proposals.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect of the closure of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology on (a) the amount of independent research undertaken into climate change and (b) capabilities for the long-term collection and analysis of environmental and ecological data necessary to reveal the effects of climate change; and if she will make a statement. [44850]

Mr. Morley: The Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) is only one of a large number of institutions undertaking climate change research for, and providing long-term environmental and ecological datasets to the Department. We believe that the restructuring that the Natural Environment Research Council has proposed for CEH would not reduce the amount of independent research into climate change nor reduce capabilities for the long-term collection and analysis of environmental and ecological data available to the Department.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact that proposed Centre for Ecology and Hydrology closures will have on the Government's ability to maintain and improve the environment; and if she will make a statement. [44851]

Mr. Morley: The Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) is one of a large number of institutions undertaking scientific research for the Department. We believe that the restructuring that the Natural Environment Research Council has proposed for CEH would not reduce the amount of scientific research capability available to the Department. Consequently there should be no loss to our ability to be able to maintain or improve the environment.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the extent to which the proposed Centre for Ecology and Hydrology closures will affect the capacity of the Government (a) to react to environmental issues across the geographic range of the United Kingdom and (b) to monitor biological diversity in different regions. [44861]

Mr. Morley: The Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) is only one of a large number of institutions undertaking climate change research for, and providing long-term environmental and ecological datasets to the Department. We believe that the restructuring that the Natural Environment Research Council has proposed for CEH would not reduce our capacity to react to environmental issues across the geographic range of the United Kingdom nor affect our ability to monitor biological diversity in different regions.

Chewing Gum

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which councils have applied to join the Department's scheme tackling the problem of chewing gum litter. [45102]

Mr. Bradshaw: We do not yet know which local authorities have applied to take part in the campaign as the closing date for applications is 3 February.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons the Government decided not to introduce a tax levy on the price of chewing gum as part of its proposals for tackling chewing gum litter. [45103]

Mr. Bradshaw: Taxation is a matter for my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. I am however, not convinced that a levy on gum, which would be paid by those who dispose of their gum correctly as well as those that do not, would be a fair way of funding the costs of cleaning discarded gum from the streets.

Correspondence

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan dated 27 August 2005 regarding his constituents Mr. and Mrs. W. Ritchie (DEFRA ref 223198). [46148]

Mr. Bradshaw: A reply was sent on 27 October 2005. I will arrange for you to receive a further copy.

Departmental Transport

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 2376W, on departmental transport, if she will place a copy of the revised Travel Plan for her Department in the Library. [42544]

Jim Knight: A copy of the revised Travel Plan for the Defra building at Merrow, Guildford will be placed in the Library of the House.

Energy Efficiency Directive

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what targets she has set for energy efficiency gains under the Energy End-use Efficiency and Energy Services Directive by (a) 30 June 2007, (b) 30 June 2011 and (c) 30 June 2014. [46022]

Mr. Morley: The Energy End-use Efficiency and Energy Services Directive is expected to enter into force in May this year following publication in the Official Journal. Member states will then have two years to transpose the Directive's requirements into domestic legislation. The Directive provides for an indicative energy-savings target for every member states of 9 per cent. over the nine-year period from 1 January 2008. Within that period member states must set one intermediate target for the third year of application consistent with achievement of the overall target. The decision about what that intermediate target should be in the UK has not yet been made and will be determined during the implementation process.

Fisheries

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what formal approaches she has made to the Government of the Republic of Ireland about the effect on UK salmon stocks of drift netting off the coast of Ireland. [46541]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have discussed this issue with the Irish Minister for Communications, Marine and Natural Resources on a number of occasions. I have urged on him the need to take steps to reduce the impact of the salmon driftnet fishery on salmon returning to English and Welsh rivers.

Flood Protection/Alleviation

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent (a) in England and (b) in the Ouse catchment area on flood protection and alleviation measures by (i) the Government and (ii) City of York council in each year since 1996–97. [43646]

Mr. Morley: Defra funds most of the Environment Agency's flood related work and grant aids individual capital improvement projects undertaken by local authorities and, in low-lying areas, internal drainage boards. The programme to manage risk is driven by these operating authorities; Defra does not build defences, nor direct the authorities on what specific projects to undertake.

Prior to April 2004 most of the Environment Agency's flood defence funding came from levies paid by local authorities. These levies have now largely been replaced by direct funding from Defra. Local authorities still pay some levies to the agency and also continue to fund other flood defence related work; such expenditure is supported by the local government funding mechanisms operated by what is now ODPM.

Table 1 shows total central and local government expenditure on flood protection and alleviation measures in (a) England and (b) the Ouse catchment area. This includes expenditure on flood defences, flood warning, research and development etc. but excludes expenditure on measures primarily to reduce risk of coastal erosion (which can also sometimes help reduce flood risk).

Defra grant to local authorities and or internal drainage boards within the Ouse catchment could not be determined without incurring disproportionate cost.

Table 2 shows revenue (i.e. non-capital) spend by City of York council on their own flood defence measures and on special levies to internal drainage boards. The Council's expenditure is limited to investment in the Ouse catchment area.

Racehorses

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will commission research on the animal welfare implications of whipping race horses. [45790]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has no plans to commission a survey on the animal welfare implications of whipping racehorses.

Landfill

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's landfill policy. [41867]

Mr. Bradshaw: Landfills are a major source of emissions of methane—a powerful greenhouse gas—and also a potential pollution hazard requiring careful management. For this reason landfill lies at the bottom of the waste hierarchy, and thus represents the least favourable management route for most wastes. The Government has targets under the EU Landfill Directive to reduce the amount of biodegradable municipal waste going to landfill to 75 per cent. of 1995 figures by 2010 and to 35 per cent. by 2020. The Government seeks to discourage all landfill—including that of commercial waste—through the landfill tax escalator. Landfill remains, however, the best management route for certain wastes in certain circumstances and, indeed, the only available option for some others (such as heavy sludges from industrial processes).

The Government is currently undertaking a review of its wider waste strategy, for which the consultation document will be published shortly.

Nuclear Waste

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the Government plan to dispose of the nuclear waste stored in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [46293]

Mr. Morley: Under the Managing Radioactive Waste Safely Programme, jointly sponsored by UK Government and the devolved Administrations, the independent Committee on Radioactive Waste Management (CoRAWM) has been established to advise on the best option, or combination of options, for the safe long-term management of the UK's higher activity radioactive waste. The committee is due to deliver its recommendation in July 2006. Low level radioactive waste is already disposed of in various ways, most notably to the national disposal facility close to the village of Drigg in Cumbria.

Pesticides

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action her Department is taking to help stop foreign farm workers from being exposed to dangerous pesticides. [44979]

Mr. Morley: UK pesticide and health and safety legislation provide a high degree of protection to all those, irrespective of their origin, whose work in the UK requires them to handle or use pesticides. Specific guidance is given in the Statutory Code of Practice for Using Plant Protection Products.

In addition a number of other schemes have been established to protect the health and safety of migrant workers. These include the recently revised Seasonal Workers' Scheme (SAWS) operated by the Home Office and the establishment of the Gangmasters Licensing Authority (GLA) and its supporting legislation. The GLA will look specifically at health and safety issues as part of their inspection of labour providers and any breaches of Health and Safety legislation will be referred to the relevant body.

National Poultry Register

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to ensure that poultry owners register their flocks on the national poultry register. [43552]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are working closely with a wide range of interested parties to promote the GB poultry register and to make poultry keepers aware of the requirements of the Avian Influenza (Preventive Measures) (No 2) Regulations 2005. Over 40,000 leaflets have been distributed to poultry keepers and advertisements have been placed in a number of poultry and countryside magazines. DEFRA has also distributed posters to veterinary surgeries, MPs, livestock markets and auctioneers, and to Local Authorities Coordinators of Regulatory Services (LACORS) staff. In addition, state veterinary service colleagues, in the course of their day to day duties, are reminding poultry keepers of their obligation to register.

As we approach the 28 February deadline, we will consider what further action needs to be taken; for example, proactive visits to premises to remind poultry keepers of their obligations.

Pre-movement Testing

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the veterinary profession on its capacity to undertake large-scale pre-movement testing. [45841]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 26 January 2006]: The Department has had a number of discussions with various stakeholders on this issue. The veterinary profession was represented on the independently chaired Pre-Movement Testing Stakeholder Group and the issue of veterinary capacity was given careful consideration. Pre-movement testing will be introduced in two phases as a result of recommendations made by the Group.

Defra officials also met with the British Veterinary Association (BVA) twice during the development of policy on pre-movement testing. The BVA did not express any concern about veterinary capacity to deliver pre-movement testing.

Reusable Products

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is her policy to promote reusable products over single-use disposable products. [40971]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government has no such policy overall, but the reuse of suitable products is strongly encouraged.

The Environment Agency has carried out work to compare the lifecycle impacts of disposable and reusable nappies.

Tail Docking

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the inclusion of a ban on dog tail docking in the Animal Welfare Bill. [44961]

Mr. Bradshaw: The law currently permits the docking of dogs' tails by veterinary surgeons. Although the Government is inclined to support the status quo, we appreciate there are genuine views held on both sides of the debate and believe that the status of tail docking should be for Parliament to decide.

The views expressed during the Second Reading and in the Standing Committee considering the Animal Welfare Bill were strongly in favour of a complete ban on the docking of dogs' tails, while some members argued for an exemption for working dogs. As a result, we are currently considering how best we can provide all MPs with the opportunity to express a view as the Bill proceeds through the House.

TRACES

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the EU-wide computer system, TRACES, records (a) which species are imported, (b) the country of origin of imported species, (c) whether imported animals and birds are captive-bred or wild-caught and (d) the level of mortality among imported animals and birds. [45985]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 26 January 2006]: TRACES records which species are imported and the country they are imported from. It does not distinguish between captive-bred or wild-caught birds, nor does it show the level of mortality among imported animals and birds.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether information gathered by the EU-wide computer system, TRACES, is available to the public in the UK. [45986]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 26 January 2006]: The information gathered by TRACES is only directly available to Member States' Competent Authorities and Official Veterinarians. Registered traders have the option of using the system to request export certification.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she is making to other EU member states about the merits of an improved system to monitor imports of animals and their products into the European Union. [45987]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 26 January 2006]: In 2004 a computerised system to record imports of animals and animal products into the European Union, known as TRACES, was introduced by the European Commission. Officials from DEFRA are closely involved in the continued development of the system. The UK is represented at meetings with the Commission and other member states to discuss issues associated with the effective operation of the system.

Waste Paper

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department's policy is on minimising waste paper within the Department. [46683]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 1954W.

Wild Bird Imports

Ms Angela C. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the European Commission on its progress in reviewing policy on importing wild birds into the European Union. [45226]

Mr. Bradshaw: All imports of live birds and their products, from countries which have notified Highly Pathogenic Avian Influenza (HPAI), have been banned. In addition, the EU has agreed a temporary ban, now extended to 31 May 2006, on the imports of all wild birds from any other countries. Additional restrictions on captive pet birds coming in with their owners have also been imposed.

The Government are considering the conclusions of the Dimmock report (the Independent Review of Avian Quarantine) which said that imports of captive birds should be permitted as a ban might divert imports to illegal, un-quarantined, channels which would pose a greater risk. Discussions are continuing with stakeholders and the European Commission to find a longer-term solution to the problems associated with the importation of wild birds.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Prosecutions (Northern Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Solicitor-General how many prosecutions in Northern Ireland have been abandoned for national security reasons in each of the last 30 years, broken down by charge. [46463]

The Solicitor-General: National security is only one of a number of factors that may have contributed to a decision to discontinue a prosecution in the public interest. To provide this information would require the individual examination of the file of every case discontinued in the public interest. The information requested is not centrally recorded and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Christmas Cards

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will estimate the cost to his Department of sending Christmas cards in 2005. [46483]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) produced its own 'Season's Greetings' in 2005 at a cost of £2,102.09 for 7,000 copies. As individual teams from across DFID were responsible for mailing out cards to stakeholders and contacts, to obtain information relating to postage charges would incur a disproportionate cost.

Ethiopia

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on UK aid to Ethiopia. [46527]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member for Boston and Skegness to the statement I made on 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 49WS.

Global Fund

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding the UK Government has allocated for the Global Fund for each of the next five years. [46451]

Mr. Thomas: The UK has committed £359 million to the Global Fund for the period 2002 to 2008. Our contribution in 2005 was £51 million, which brings our total contribution to date to £159 million.

Over the next two years we have pledged to provide £100 million to the Global Fund for 2006 and £100 million for 2007 to support the Fund's estimated resource needs of US$7 billion for this period. The two-year total of £200 million represents 8.4 per cent. of the total pledged to date (ie. £3.4 billion) and 5.1 per cent. of the US$7 billion. This is above our Gross National Income (GNI) fair share and is consistent with our past support. The UK is currently the fourth largest donor for the period 2006–07; after France, the US and Japan, and the second largest in the EU.

Good Governance

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to promote good governance in the developing world; and if he will make a statement. [45643]

Mr. Thomas: Good governance is at the core of DFID's work to reduce poverty and achieve the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). This recognises that developing and transitional states' ability to achieve the MDGs and eliminate poverty will depend greatly on the quality of their governance.

DFID encourages improved governance and assists with governance reforms through specific programme activities, aid allocations and use of different ways of delivering aid. DFID's work supports seven broad areas: political systems that extend opportunities to poor people; economic management that brings stability and facilitates investment; delivery of policies that benefit the poor; raising revenue and delivering public services; maintenance of safety security and justice; national security; and accountability and tackling corruption. Governance reforms need to be prioritised, achievable and appropriate to context.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Department of International Development will be speaking about governance and its role in eliminating poverty on February 2nd at the School of Oriental and African Studies in London. I will ensure a copy of his speech is sent to the hon. Member for Guildford (Anne Milton).

Madagascar

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what discussions he has had with Water Aid on the impact of its work of the closure of the British embassy in Madagascar; and if he will make a statement; [45574]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of the closure of the British embassy on the sustainable development of Madagascar. [45611]

Hilary Benn: I have had no discussions with Water Aid on the impact of the closure of the British embassy in Madagascar on its work. British interests in Madagascar are currently represented by an Honorary Consul. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office are in the process of accrediting the British high commissioner in Port Louis, Mauritius, as non-resident ambassador to Madagascar.

As DFID does not have a bilateral development programme with Madagascar the closure of the embassy is unlikely to have any effect on the sustainable development of the country.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department intends to take to support Madagascar's programme of development and good governance. [45609]

Hilary Benn: DFID does not have a bilateral development programme with Madagascar, but we provide significant support through our share of European Union and multilateral agencies' development programmes. In 2003 (the latest figures we have), the UK's imputed share of multilateral aid going to Madagascar was £33.9 million, primarily through assistance from the World Bank, European Commission and United Nations agencies.

Pension Costs

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the cost was of pension contributions incurred by (a) his Department and (b) each (i) non-departmental public body; (ii) Executive agency and (iii) other public body for which he is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005-06. [40002]

Mr. Thomas: Following the response I gave to the hon. Member on 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 1962W; I now wish to submit the following answer.

The question asked about the cost of pension contributions incurred by my department, my response stated that my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for the Department for International Development was not responsible for any non-departmental government bodies, executive agencies or other public body, this is factually incorrect; my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State is responsible for the following non departmental public bodies:

Commonwealth Scholarship Commission in the UK

Crown Agents Holding and Realisation Board

Overseas Service Pensions Scheme Advisory Board

There are however, no pension contribution costs incurred in respect of these bodies.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which British Government aid programmes were conducted through the Government of Zimbabwe between 1997 and 2003; and what their total value was. [42471]

Hilary Benn: Between 1997 and 2003 DFID supported some 60 projects in Zimbabwe which involved the Government and public sector organisations, with a total spend of £145 million. These projects ranged from a substantial sexual health project with a commitment of £9 million to initiatives on anti-corruption involving grants as little as £10,000. Sectors included health, education, water and sanitation, agriculture, forestry, livestock, wildlife and tourism, infrastructure, private sector development, civil society, justice, public reform, local government and public finance.

DFID suspended development assistance to the Government of Zimbabwe in 2002, in protest of the continuing disregard for democratic principles and mismanagement of the economy by the Government of Zimbabwe. Since that time, DFID has supported the international response to the humanitarian and HIV/AIDS crisis in Zimbabwe, through funding to United Nations agencies and non-governmental organisations, but has provided no funding to the Government of Zimbabwe.

TRANSPORT

A1 (Roundabout Removal)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects work to begin on the roundabout removal on the A1 at (a) Apleyhead and (b) Blyth. [45744]

Dr. Ladyman: The anticipated start dates for works for the Apleyhead and Blyth junctions subject to the availability of funds and the satisfactory completion of the appropriate statutory procedures are:

A1/A614 Blyth junction improvement – June 2006

A1/A57/A614 Apleyhead junction improvement – July 2006.

A11 (Dualling)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement on the dualling of the A11 between Fiveways Roundabout and Thetford; and if he will make a statement. [45956]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 26 October 2005, Official Report, column 384W.

A27

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) locations and (b) reported consequences of injury crashes on (i) the eastbound and (ii) the westbound sections of the A27 west of Worthing between the 40 mph sign and the Hammerpot junction in each of the last three years. [45396]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table lists the reported consequences of the recorded injury accidents on this stretch of road.

	East-West				West-East
	Fatal	Serious	Slight	Total	Fatal	Serious	Slight	Total	Total
2002	0	3	4	7	0	1	3	4	11
2003	0	4	1	5	1	0	5	6	11
2004	1	0	6	7	0	1	5	6	13
2005[1]	0	3	2	5	0	0	2	2	7
Total				24				18	42

[1] On this stretch of road up until end of October 2005 where information has been validated.

A map detailing locations of accidents from January 2002 to October 2005 on the A27 west of Worthing to the Hammerpot junction, a distance of approximately 4.5 km, has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

A3 (Hindhead)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will accept the recommendation of the South East of England Regional Assembly Regional Transport Board's recommendation with regard to the A3 at Hindhead; and if he will make a statement. [46379]

Dr. Ladyman: We expect to respond to the South East Region's advice on its priorities for major transport schemes, including improvement of the A3 at Hindhead, during the spring.

Airlines (Tax Treatment)

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the revenue from fuel tax that would have been received in each of the last three years by the Government if airlines had been subject to the same tax treatment as public transport bus companies. [44234]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

A discussion paper published jointly by HM Treasury and the Department for Transport in March 2003, entitled 'Aviation and the Environment: using economic instruments', considered the role of economic instruments and the environmental costs of aviation. This was also considered in 'Air Transport White Paper. The Future of Air Transport', published on 16 December 2003 and in chapter 5 of 'Aviation and Global Warming', published by the Department for Transport on 10 February 2004.

The Air Transport White Paper set out the conclusions of the Government's analysis, including our view that aviation should be brought within the ED emissions trading scheme by 2008, as the most effective way of tackling the climate change impact. Along with other measures to tackle local environmental impacts, this will help to ensure that the air transport sector meets its environmental costs.

Under the terms of the Chicago convention, it is illegal to tax fuel for international flights, and so the Government have not undertaken an analysis of the potential revenue implications that would result from taxation of fuel used on international flights. Also, figures for aviation turbine fuel consumption for specific flight services are not collected. It is therefore not possible to estimate the potential revenue effect of applying the same tax treatment to the domestic aviation industry as to public transport bus companies. The Government anyway does not accept such direct comparisons as valid as they assume no change in demand or to the working practices of the aviation industry.

Airports

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which airports in the UK do not have airbridge facilities; and what steps he is taking to reduce the number of such airports. [44790]

Ms Buck [holding answer 24 January 2006]: The CAA has advised that, of the 143 UK aerodromes currently licensed by the CAA, 12 have airbridge facilities.

The provision of airbridges is not a licensing issue. It is a matter for each airport operator itself to determine whether to invest in this equipment.

The 12 airports with airbridge facilities are:

Cardiff,
Newcastle,
Heathrow,
Gatwick,
Stansted,
Manchester,
Birmingham,
Edinburgh,
Glasgow,
Aberdeen,
Belfast International,
Leeds Bradford.

Borough Market Site

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations his Department has made to the planning inquiry for the Borough market site. [45766]

Dr. Ladyman: None. As the Secretary of State will be jointly responsible with the Deputy Prime Minister for determining the various applications relating to Network Rail's Thameslink project, the Department wishes to avoid prejudicing these decisions. We presently await the Inspector's report.

Bus Services

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus services were operated from (a) York, (b) Selby and (c) Tadcaster (i) in May 1997 and (ii) on the most recent date for which figures are available. [46814]

Dr. Ladyman: The Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA) do not hold data which identifies the start and finish points of registered local bus services for 1997.

The current figures are:

	Number
York	81
Selby	24
Tadcaster	14

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus services have been withdrawn in South Manchester since 1997. [44390]

Ms Buck: The data kept by the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency on registered bus services does not differentiate between South Manchester and the rest of the North Western Traffic Area.

The following table represents the number of bus services cancelled in the North West Traffic Area from 1 April 1998. Information prior to this date could not be recovered without disproportionate cost.

Financial year	Cancellations
1998–99	790
1999–2000	842
2000–01	1,048
2001–02	666
2002–03	578
2003–04	584
2004–05	589

An application which is cancelled is one which has been accepted by the Traffic commissioner, commenced running and at a later date the operator has applied to cease operating.

Cabin Air Supply

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ask the Civil Aviation Authority to investigate organophosphate contamination of cabin air supply on commercial aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [46169]

Ms Buck: The House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology did an investigation, which reported in November 2000 and said:

"The absence of confirmed cases of tri-ortho-cresyl phosphate (TOCP) poisoning from cabin air and the very low levels of TOCP that would be found in even in the highly unlikely worst case of contamination from oil leaking into the air supply lead us to conclude that the concerns about significant risk to the health of airline passengers and crew are not substantiated."

In 2004 the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) published research into fume events by the Defence Science and Technology Laboratory Porton Down and the (then) Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. That concluded that 'no single component or set of components can be identified which at conceivable concentrations would definitely cause the symptoms reported in cabin air quality incidents'.

But acids were found which could act as irritants, and as a result CAA brought in specific troubleshooting and maintenance actions to minimise the potential for fume events.

The inter-departmental Aviation Health Working Group has recently arranged for the independent Committee on Toxicity (COT) to review further evidence which the British Airline Pilots Association (BALPA) has collected. This process is under way and should help us to specify any further research needs in an area where public funds have already been invested without finding a link between cabin air and long-term health problems.

Meanwhile, some research is starting in the USA funded by the Federal Aviation Administration. Government officials are in touch with the research team to monitor progress. In principle, we are interested to join in international research when we have a clearer idea of the needs, and we shall review our position on the American project after the COT has held a formal meeting in public in the spring.

Car Insurance

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many prosecutions have resulted from the campaign to target motorists driving without insurance. [46156]

Dr. Ladyman: The latest figures available are for the year 2003 when there were 320,937 convictions for uninsured driving.

No further figures are yet available for the year 2004, nor for the period since June 2005 when we began the introduction of new measures to tackle uninsured driving.

Congestion (West Midlands)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a league table to highlight the most congested roads in the West Midlands. [46312]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department for Transport will shortly be publishing journey time reliability data for individual roads on the strategic road network in England operated by the Highways Agency. These data will form the baseline for the new public service agreement target for the Highways Agency network. Performance on a sample of 25 of the most important roads in the West Midlands will be monitored as part of the Public Service Agreement relating to movements on a sample of routes in the ten largest urban areas in England. These data will not be presented in the form of a league table.

Cycling Accidents

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many children under the age of 16 years have (a) died and (b) received serious head injuries as a result of a cycling accident in each of the past 10 years. [45887]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of child pedal cyclists (aged 0–15) who were killed or seriously injured as a result of personal injury road accidents between 1995 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available), is given in table.

Child pedal cyclists (aged 0–15) killed or seriously injured in personal injury road accidents, 1994 to 2004

Year of accident	Fatalities[1]	Seriously injured
1995	46	1,201
1996	54	1,177
1997	33	983
1998	32	883
1999	36	914
2000	27	731
2001	25	649
2002	22	572
2003	18	577
2004	25	552

[1] Deaths within 30 days of the accident

Information on the child pedal cyclists (aged 0–15) who received serious head injuries as a result of a cycling accident is not available.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to reduce the number of children who are killed or receive a serious head injury as a result of cycling accidents. [45891]

Dr. Ladyman: Our policy is to persuade cyclists to protect themselves by wearing helmets. We concentrate our paid publicity on teenage and child cyclists. The Department developed the 'Cycle Sense' safety campaign encouraging teenagers to wear cycle helmets, other safety issues are also addressed. The campaign consisted of a new website, posters and a supporting TV filler film. A new campaign is planned for summer 2006. Aimed at younger children, the 'Cycle Smart' campaign for seven to 10-year-olds is a series of posters and a comic that use Disney characters to communicate simple cycle safety messages, including helmet wearing. The latest edition was released in summer 2003 and we launched a new website, in partnership with Disney, on 18 March 2005. A new campaign is also planned for later this year.

In addition, the current version of the highway code includes a section for drivers on road users requiring extra care, including cyclists. We strongly advise parents to encourage their children to take cycle training, and not to let them out on the roads until they are clearly competent to handle their cycles safely. We have also established a new national standard for cycle training with more than 20 road safety bodies.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the items valued at over £100 that have been reported as stolen from buildings occupied by his Department in the past 12 months. [43442]

Ms Buck: Items reported as stolen, between 1 January 2005 and 31 December 2005, which have a value of more than £100 are listed below:

Item	Value
8 flat screen computer monitors	3,081
2 tool kits and cases	200
1 overhead projector	300
Computer parts removed from desks	190
7 laptop computers	8,600
1 printer	170
1 desktop computer	1,000
1 personal organiser	300

All buildings have appropriate security measures in place including both a manned presence at some locations or remote monitoring and response arrangements elsewhere. Incidents are reviewed and action taken to risk assess the need for improved security in that location in accordance with Government guidelines. The majority of incidents have also been reported to the police.

Driving Instructors

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the results of his Department's review of the regulatory arrangements for approved driving instructors. [45604]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department's Road Safety Strategy, "Tomorrow's Roads—Safer for Everyone", commits the Government to raising the standard of tuition offered by driving instructors. The Driving Standards Agency has commissioned three pieces of independent research into occupational standards for driving instructors and their continuing professional development. This can be viewed on the Agency's website. The Agency is currently engaged in discussion with the industry's consultative groups on how best to take these matters forward.

DVLA (Data Protection)

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of whether the making available to third parties against payment by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency of data relating to the owners of vehicles is consistent with the Data Protection Act 1998; and if he will make a statement. [46274]

Dr. Ladyman: The Data Protection Act exempts from its non-disclosure provisions the release of information where the law allows it. Regulation 27 of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 2002, permits the release of information from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's vehicle register to the police, to local authorities and to those who can demonstrate 'reasonable cause' for receiving the information. 'Reasonable cause'' is not defined in legislation and requests are considered on their merits.

DVLA works closely with the Information Commissioner to ensure that disclosure is fair and lawful. The Information Commissioner has published guidance on his website.

I recently announced a review of these regulations and this will commence shortly.

Gatwick Express

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future of the Gatwick Express. [44808]

Derek Twigg: Proposals relating to Gatwick Express will be made in the context of the Brighton Main Line Route Utilisation Strategy (RUS). An announcement about publication of the RUS will be made shortly.

Green Travel Plans

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what national target he has set for the number of (a) employers and (b) public sector employers implementing the Green Travel Plans by 2009. [45529]

Ms Buck: We have put in place a requirement in the planning system that significant new developments, both for the public and private sectors, should have a staff travel plan. However, the implementation of travel plans by employers for existing sites is voluntary. We have not therefore set a national target for their introduction. Instead, we promote the business case and other benefits of travel plans through our publications, conferences and other events.

Under the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate, Government Departments were mandated to implement sustainable travel targets to reduce CO_2 emissions through a range of measures. These included reducing both road transport vehicle carbon dioxide emissions by at least 10 per cent. and single occupancy car commuting to the workplace by 5 per cent. by 2006, against a baseline year of 2002–03. The Framework is currently being reviewed in order to deliver a step change in the way the Government manages its land and buildings sustainably.

Heathrow (Sustainable Development)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made of the air pollution impact of the introduction of mixed mode at Heathrow in advance of the publication of the report from the project for the sustainable development of Heathrow. [46297]

Ms Buck: Work is still in hand to develop proposals for the possible introduction of mixed mode at Heathrow, prior to consultation. Air quality impacts will be assessed drawing on the outcome of the work of the air quality technical panels, whose report is currently being finalised.

Highway Code

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the consultation on the next update of the Highway Code will begin. [45603]

Dr. Ladyman: The consultation on the next update of the Highway Code will begin in the next few weeks.

Housing Development (Mid-Sussex)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much is being allocated from the Community Infrastructure Fund to support transport infrastructure related to planned housing development in mid-Sussex. [46686]

Ms Buck: None. The Community Infrastructure Fund was established to support transport infrastructure costs that enable faster housing development in the four growth areas announced in the 'Sustainable Communities Plan' (Thames Gateway, Milton Keynes South Midlands, London Stansted Cambridge Peterborough and Ashford).

Humber Bridge

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment of the purpose the Humber Bridge would serve was made in advance of its construction. [45338]

Dr. Ladyman: The construction of the Humber Bridge was enabled by legislation—the Humber Bridge Act 1959 as amended by the Humber Bridge Act 1971—promoted by a consortium of Humberside local authorities.

It was for those authorities to assess the role the Bridge would serve.

A report entitled 'Humberside: A Feasibility Study' was produced by the Central Unit for Environmental Planning in 1969 (published for the then Department of Economic Affairs). This report considered the likely need for major development in the Humberside area in the 1980s—based on estimates of population growth in the UK—and concluded that there was a case for a Humber Bridge being built by 1976 to facilitate improvements to Humberside's economy and underwrite the area's value for major development.

Lighthouse Keepers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many lighthouse keepers there are in Great Britain. [45967]

Dr. Ladyman: None. The automation of all lighthouses over the last 30 years has made the role of the lighthouse keeper defunct. The lights are monitored by the General Lighthouse Authorities' operation centres in Harwich and Edinburgh and require little or no maintenance outside the annual maintenance regime.

London Airports

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the airports within a 100 mile radius of London that take commercial air traffic; in each case what the existing weekly capacity for flights is; and to what percentage of that capacity each airport is operating in relation to (a) wide bodied jets, (b) commercial passenger aeroplanes and (c) executive and personal jets. [45661]

Ms Buck: This information is not held centrally in the form requested. However, information on aircraft movements at those airports is available from the Civil Aviation Authority website at: http://www.caa.co.uk/docs/80/airport_data/2004AnnualTable_03_1_Aircraft_Movements_2004.pdf

M42

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicles on average use the (a) northbound and (b) southbound sections of the M42 between (i) junction 5 and junction 6, (ii) junction 6 and junction 7, (iii) junction 7 and junction 8 and (iv) junction 8 and junction 9 each day. [46313]

Dr. Ladyman: The average daily traffic flows between the specified junctions of M42 are as follows. The figures are taken from data collected in 2005:

Junctions 5–6
Northbound	65,000
Southbound	66,900
Junctions 6–7
Northbound	63,500
Southbound	68,400
Junctions 7–8
Southbound	49,600
Junctions 8–9
Southbound	44,400

Similar data is not currently available for M42 northbound between Junction 7 and 9. A traffic monitoring facility for this stretch of road is in the process of being commissioned.

National Safety Camera Programme

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the locations identified by the National Safety Camera Programme where casualties on roads with speed cameras have increased; and what steps he is taking to reduce the casualty rates in these locations. [45607]

Dr. Ladyman: Details of all the cameras in England and Wales operating in the National Safety Camera Programme as at 31 March 2004, including those where casualties had increased, were published in June 2004 alongside the three-year evaluation of the National Safety Camera Programme. This information is on the Department's website.

It should be recognised that at any individual location there is some element of chance variation in the number of serious accidents between one year and the next, so it would be wrong to conclude automatically that a camera is not effective. However, the Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the National Safety Camera Programme for England and Wales for 2005–06 published in November 2004, requires partnerships to, at least annually, review the effectiveness of existing camera sites and to specifically consider sites where there appears to be a continuing problem of high numbers of collisions, notwithstanding the use of cameras, to assess whether further or different action should be taken.

In these instances partnerships should consider what alternative cost-effective engineering or other solutions should be implemented to tackle the problem instead of, or in addition to, the cameras. Solutions might include greater speed enforcement, road improvements, traffic calming or road safety education and information measures. Operational cases for 2005–06 indicated that as a result some 104 camera sites were being stood down.

An updated Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the National Safety Camera Programme for 2006–07 has today been published on the Department's website. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House. This requires partnerships to keep existing sites under review.

Office of Rail Regulation

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people are employed by the Office of Rail Regulation. [44778]

Derek Twigg: As at Monday 16 January 2006, the Office of Rail Regulation employed 135 people.

Port of London Authority (Consultation) Harbour Revision Order

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons hon. Members representing constituencies with riparian areas were not consulted prior to the making of the Port of London Authority (Consultation) Harbour Revision Order 2005; and if he will make a statement. [43154]

Dr. Ladyman: In line with statutory requirements applications for Harbour Revision Orders are advertised in the London Gazette and local newspapers. It is not current practice to inform MPs separately about Harbour Revision Orders.

Private Aircraft

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many privately operated aircraft have landed in airports in the UK in each of the last five years; and what information is collected on the operators of private aircraft. [45977]

Ms Buck: The CAA publishes aircraft movement data compiled from returns by UK airports in their Annual UK Airport Statistics report. The number of privately operated movements, which have landed at or taken off from UK airports, is shown as follows.

	Total number of private movements (for all UK reporting airports)
2004	221,096
2003	231,722
2002	212,982
2001	247,361

These figures exclude private movements operated by aero-club members for instruction or pleasure, on which the CAA also collects data. Data for 2005 are not yet available.

As private flights are not required to seek the prior permission of a State to overfly, land or make non-traffic stops the Department does not hold information for these flights. However, the individual airports, as well as air traffic management providers (NATS Ltd. and Eurocontrol), do keep records of aircraft movements for their own purposes.

Rail Franchises (Value for Money)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1150W, on train operating companies, what the benefits are whose delivery is monitored and enforced through continuous management of franchise contracts with train operating companies. [39377]

Derek Twigg: Franchise contracts place a wide variety of obligations on train operators associated with the provision of franchised services. In many cases they also prescribe penalties for non-compliance. Franchise contracts are managed and monitored to ensure that these obligations are delivered and that subsidy, premium payments and liabilities are managed in the interests of the taxpayer.

Road and Public Safety

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which organisation is responsible for road and public safety matters between the start of a new development and the date when roads are adopted by the local highways authority. [44198]

Dr. Ladyman: Where there is a new development such as a housing estate or a business park which provides for public access the responsibility for road and public safety matters principally lies with the owner of the site. This will usually be the developer until the properties are sold after which the owners of the properties fronting the road will become responsible for maintaining it until it is adopted as a publicly maintainable highway by the relevant highway authority. While the road remains unadopted, the relevant street works authority can serve a notice requiring the owners of premises fronting the street to execute such works to obviate danger to traffic using it as may be specified in the notice within a prescribed time. Should the works not be carried out in the required timescale the street works authority may carry out the works itself and recover the costs from the owners of the relevant properties.

In addition, the local traffic authority has a duty to secure the expeditious, convenient and safe movement of vehicular and other traffic, including pedestrians. This applies to all highways and roads to which the public has access, irrespective of whether or not the road has been adopted as a public highway.

The relevant police authority will also have a responsibility for safety matters in its area.

Where the new development is a new highway intended for use by the public and does not impinge on an existing highway the highway authority promoting the new highway and which makes the orders in relation to the construction of the new highway is the authority responsible for road and public safety matters during the construction stage as well as after adoption of the road as a public highway.

When the new development is an improvement to an existing highway, depending upon the circumstances, either the highway authority promoting the improvement to the highway or the traffic authority which regulates the use of the existing highway is the authority responsible for road and public safety matters. Usually the relevant highway authority and the relevant traffic authority are the same authority.

Who the relevant highway authority or the relevant traffic authority is will depend upon the location of the highway development, the classification of the highway (i.e. local road, trunk road or special road) and the nature of the development.

Road Gritting

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance the Government issues to local authorities on the gritting of roads during cold weather; and if he will (a) place a copy in the Library and (b) provide a weblink to the documents. [46324]

Ms Buck: The Government strongly recommend that local authorities carry out winter maintenance, including gritting, in accordance with Section 13 of "Well-maintained Highways, Code of Practice for Highway Maintenance Management" published by the UK Roads Liaison Group in July 2005. A copy of this is in the Library, and it is also available electronically at www.ukroadsliaisongroup.org

Road Improvements (Stonehenge)

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when (a) Ministers and (b) officials last met representatives of the National Trust to discuss road improvements at Stonehenge; and if he will make a statement. [46852]

Dr. Ladyman: There have been no recent meetings of Department for Transport Ministers with the National Trust at which road improvements at Stonehenge have been discussed.

An official from the Highways Agency and representatives from the National Trust attended the last meeting of the Stonehenge World Heritage Site Committee on 29 November 2005 at which progress with the A303 Stonehenge Review was discussed.

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost was to (a) his Department and (b) the Highways Agency, to the end of July 2005, of preparatory work on the A303 Stonehenge improvement scheme. [45816]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has spent £14.1 million on preparatory work with its suppliers since awarding the contract for the Stonehenge improvement scheme in March 2002 up until end-March 2005.

This figure does not include HA salary and other costs which would be difficult to apportion. Similarly, it is not possible to apportion DfT salary and other costs on developing the scheme.

Road Pricing Framework Division

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the scope and remit is of the Road Pricing Framework Division within his Department; how many persons (a) are and (b) are planned to be employed therein; and if he will make a statement. [46393]

Dr. Ladyman: The Road Pricing Framework Division is a new division established within the Department for Transport's Roads, Regional and Local Transport Group in January 2006.

The purpose of the division is to take forward work on the technical systems and standards that will need to be developed to support the piloting of road pricing.

It is planned that the division will employ up to 13 full-time equivalent members of staff. Seven posts have already been filled.

Road Safety (Barnsley/Doncaster)

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fatalities there have been in (a) Barnsley and (b) Doncaster in each of the last 10 years as a consequence of road traffic accidents. [46554]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of fatalities in personal injury road accidents in the Metropolitan Districts of Barnsley and Doncaster between 1995 and 2004 (the last year for which figures are available) are shown in the table.

Fatalities[1] in Barnsley and Doncaster districts: 1995–2004.

	Barnsley	Doncaster
1995	18	21
1996	11	20
1997	11	13
1998	11	10
1999	4	23
2000	14	15
2001	14	15
2002	15	11
2003	11	18
2004	14	16

[1] Deaths within 30 days of the accident.

Road Transport Fuel Obligation

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the design of a certification scheme for the sustainability of the sources of fuel to be accepted within the proposed Road Transport Fuel Obligation. [46192]

Dr. Ladyman: We have made clear from the outset that we want the Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation to promote the use of the most environmentally beneficial forms of biofuel. We are discussing with stakeholders how best to achieve this.

In the meantime, we have asked the Low Carbon Vehicle Partnership to take forward two separate but related pieces of work in this area, both of which have been part-funded by this Department. The first is the development of an agreed and user-friendly methodology to allow the carbon savings from different biofuels to be calculated. The second is the development of a sustainability assurance standard for all biofuels.

Safe Driving Skills

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what modern learning techniques have been developed by the Driving Standards Agency since September 2005 to help learners develop safe driving skills. [45605]

Dr. Ladyman: The Driving Standards Agency (DSA) is always looking at new and innovative ways of helping drivers to learn and prepare for their tests. Earlier this year the DSA launched a revised version of its free information DVD "Are You Ready?". This is sent to all categories of theory test candidate with the appointment letter. The DVD explains the nature of the different parts of the driving test and the standards that candidates need to reach.

Thames Gateway Port Project

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact on the Thames Gateway Port project of the possible takeover of P&O by Dubai World Ports; and if he will make a statement. [46214]

Dr. Ladyman: None. The potential change in ownership of P&O does not affect the application for the port. The proposed harbour empowerment order would involve the establishment of London Gateway Port Limited as a separate new statutory harbour authority, the London Gateway Port Harbour Authority.

Thameslink 2000

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what stage the approval by his Department of the Thameslink 2000 project has reached; what the estimated cost of the project is; and if he will make a statement. [41336]

Dr. Ladyman: The public inquiry into the Thameslink 2000 project was re-opened between 6 September and 7 December 2005, following the submission of fresh applications by Network Rail to address deficiencies in the scheme identified by the original inquiry.

The Inspector is currently preparing his report on the re-opened inquiry for submission to the Secretary of State for Transport and the Deputy Prime Minister, who are jointly and severally responsible for determining the various consent applications required to implement the project. We expect to receive the Inspector's report in March. We also expect to receive in the spring a report from London Travelwatch on the railway closures required to implement the project. The estimated cost of the project is £2.7 billion at 2001 Quarter 2 prices.

Transport 2010 Document

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will update Table A3 of the Transport 2010 document published in July 2000 with actual totals for the years 2000–01 to 2004–05. [40856]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport (DfT) no longer records spending in the same way as presented in Table A3 of the Transport 2010 and so comparable figures are not available. The latest outturn figures for public spending by DfT for each year from 1999–2000 to 2003–04 are set out in Tables A1-A3 of DfT's Annual Report 2005 (Cm 6527, June 2005).

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel on duty in Afghanistan were injured in (a) action and (b) accidents, broken down by severity of injury, for each year since UK forces have been deployed there. [45457]

John Reid: In the period 1 to 25 January 2006, no UK Service personnel have been categorised as very seriously ill/injured (VSI) or seriously ill/injured (SI) as a result of injuries sustained in Afghanistan in any circumstances. The information for previous years is not held centrally and will take some time to collate.

I will write to the right hon. Member when the figures are available and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

The Ministry of Defence intends to publish casualty figures for Afghanistan from 1 January 2006 onwards, identifying the number of personnel categorised as SI and VSI, on its website in the coming weeks, and to update them regularly.

Aircraft Cannibalisation

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cannibalisations of (a) C-130 Hercules, (b) Tristars, (c) VC-10s and (d) C-17A Globemasters occurred in each of the last five years. [45142]

Mr. Ingram: The removal of serviceable parts from one aircraft for use on another is a routine and temporary measure to ensure that the maximum number of aircraft are available to the front line.

The number of these instances over the last five years is given in the following table.

Tristar	74	102	119	122	118
VC10	196	322	242	254	314
C17	40	56	65	61	29
C130K	113	145	116	[1]177	[2]No data
C130J	879	638	848	1717	[2]No data

[1] April to December data only.
[2] C130 data is not available before April 2002.

Apache Helicopter Fleet

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the job satisfaction of Apache helicopter (i) qualified pilots and (ii) engineers; and if he will make a statement; [43873]

(2) what steps he plans to take to retain the services of Apache helicopter (a) qualified pilots and (b) engineers for (i) the full three year term of their posting and (ii) a longer period; and if he will make a statement. [43874]

Mr. Touhig: There has been no specific research commissioned to evaluate the job satisfaction of Apache pilots or engineers, though job satisfaction across the Army is monitored through the Continuous Attitude Survey. This survey has been in place for over 20 years and is based on a stratified random sample of personnel and sent out twice a year. The surveys are analysed by occupational psychologists.

Apache pilots are required to sign a four year 'Training Return of Service' from the start date of their conversion course. This means the individual cannot leave the service for that period of time.

Aircraft and avionics technician trades are required to sign a three year 'Training Return of Service' from the completion of basic technician training. Technicians who progress in grade sign a further two year 'Return of Service'.

There are financial retention incentives for certain aircrew for all aircraft types and the eligibility is generally connected to length of service. These are in the form of taxable lump sums at particular stages of career and in certain circumstances with the advantage of an enhanced pension scheme.

Across the Army a range of financial and non-financial retention measures have been put in place which include improvements to service housing and the Operational Welfare Package.

Armed Forces (Divorce Rates)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the divorce rates have been in each of the armed forces since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [45170]

Mr. Touhig: Available information is shown in the following table on the annual divorce rates of Army and RAF personnel:

DASA (Tri-Service)

Figures are for UK regular forces, and therefore exclude Gurkhas, full-time reserve service personnel, the home service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment, mobilised reservists and Naval Activated Reservists.

Rates are calculated as a percentage of the average married strength during the calendar years.

For the years 1999, 2000 and 2001, annulments are excluded from the calculations for divorce rates, as the information is not available. The remaining years include annulments in their calculation.

Naval Service marital status data is not available.

Armoured Infantry Units (Trade Pay)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will extend trade pay for crews in armoured regiments to armoured infantry units. [45937]

Mr. Touhig: The current armed forces pay structure, known as pay 2000, does not use the 'trade pay' system. Instead it places each rank within each and every trade into either a higher or lower pay band, based upon job weight.

All Infantry and Royal Armoured Corps (RAC) trades have undergone job evaluation within the last two years. As a result, from 1 April 2006 the only differences in pay banding between the infantry and RAC will be at colour sergeant rank where the infantry are in the lower band, and RAC staff sergeants (the equivalent rank) are in the higher band, and at corporal rank where infantry corporals are in the higher band and RAC crewmen are in the lower range. Infantry soldiers are paid in the higher band at all ranks except private and colour sergeant.

Army Battalions

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the full strength establishment is of each battalion of the British Army; and what the actual complement of each battalion was on the most recent date for which figures are available. [45173]

Mr. Touhig: The following table shows the Army by arm/service compared to the liability. The infantry strength is broken down by regiment, but the liability is not defined individually for infantry regiments. However, the strength and establishment figures for whole infantry and Royal Electrical Mechanical Engineers (REME) by individual battalion are not held centrally and to collate these data would incur disproportionate costs.

Of the arms/services within the Army it is only the infantry and REME that have units categorised as 'battalions'.

4. Liability is based on the Regular Army liability 2009.

Bottle-nosed Whale

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of whether the bottle-nosed whale calf which died during the attempted rescue on January 21 was forced up the Thames by (a) sonar from a naval vessel or (b) explosions at Shoeburyness. [45764]

Mr. Ingram: No Royal Navy ships were operating military sonar in the area of the Thames estuary or the North sea on 21 January 2006 or in the days immediately preceding 21 January 2006.

An independent company specialising in noise and vibration monitoring, has advised that the impact of Ministry of Defence activities at Shoeburyness on the marine environment at Shoeburyness is miniscule compared to the impact of everyday shipping in the area. We have no evidence to suggest that our use of Shoeburyness forced the whale up the Thames.

Compensation (Japanese Detainees)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it was the intention when the scheme for compensating British civilian detainees of the Japanese was established that detainees with no blood link to the UK would not be included in the scheme. [45335]

Mr. Touhig: When the scheme was first announced in November 2000, it was intended that payments would be made only to those British civilian internees who could demonstrate a close link with the United Kingdom at the time of internment. In March 2001, this close link was defined in terms of the individual or one of his or her parents or grandparents having been born in the UK. This definition was made public in July 2001 and has become known as the birthlink criterion. My Department is currently undertaking a review of the scheme to establish what criteria were used for claims from British civilian internees that were decided before the introduction of the birthlink definition. I will report the outcome to the House.

Contractors

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many of the 41 contractors listed on 9 February 2004, Official Report, column 1177W were awarded follow-on contracts; and in cases where re-let contracts resulted in a new contractor, what the financial returns (percentage of basic material price) to his Department or the Treasury were from (a) the original and (b) the new contractors; [43203]

(2) whether the one case of arbitration referred to on of 9 February 2004, Official Report, column 1177W, has been finally settled. [43209]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 January 2006]: Of the 41 contractors listed on 9 February 2004, Official Report, column 1177W, four (Serial Nos. 3, 7,16 and 36) hold or have held follow-on contracts, although not for precisely the same scope of service as for the initial contracts. The contracts are "incentivised" agreements that allow contractors to retain a percentage of the final sale price of those items declared surplus to requirements. The information requested on financial returns is commercially confidential and as such is being withheld.

The arbitration referred to 9 February 2004, Official Report, column 1177W, has not been settled.

Defence Training Review

Mr. McFadden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate his Department has made of the number of jobs that are likely to be created in the West Midlands if DCAE Cosford is selected as a preferred site in the Defence Training Review. [38989]

Mr. Touhig: The Defence Training Review programme is currently evaluating the bidding consortia's proposals. No estimation has yet been made of the number of jobs that may be created in the West Midlands as a consequence of the DTR programme. Such an estimation is dependant upon bidder's training and estates solutions, including proposed training efficiencies and the scale of distributed learning. This work will not be completed until the evaluation phase has concluded in about spring 2006.

Mr. McFadden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what account will be taken of (a) existing training resources in aerospace, ICT and engineering industries, (b) location and (c) proximity to local labour markets in evaluating sites bidding in the defence training review. [38986]

Mr. Touhig: As part of the Defence Training Review programme, comprehensive and rigorous evaluation of the bidding consortia's proposals is underway judged against defined evaluation criteria. This includes an assessment of bidders' compliance with the total requirement and the quality and deliverability of their proposals.

Mr. McFadden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the likely effect on the (a) further and high education sectors and (b) manufacturing companies of the Defence Training Review. [38987]

Mr. Touhig: The Defence Training Review (DTR) programme is currently evaluating the bidding consortia's proposals. The impact on further and higher education sectors and manufacturing companies depends on bidders' training and estates solutions, the extent to which the education and manufacturing sectors are drawn into training design, delivery and support and the exploitation of third party opportunities and revenue. Until the evaluation phase is complete and a decision has been taken to select a preferred training partner, I am not in a position to make any detailed comment on the wider impact of the DTR solution.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) land and (b) property is owned by his Department in Forest of Dean constituency. [46617]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence owns the following estate within the Forest of Dean constituency:

Beachley Barracks, Chepstow.

Gloucestershire Volunteer Estate:

Coleford Army Cadet Force, Coleford.

Newent Army Cadet Force, Newent.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) property and (b) land is owned by his Department in North East Milton Keynes constituency. [46857]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence does not own or lease any land or property in the North East Milton Keynes constituency. However the Territorial Army, which is funded by the Department, lease the Territorial Army Centre off Yeoman's Drive, Blakelands, Milton Keynes.

Departmental Expenditure

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent by his Department on refreshments in each year since 1997. [41252]

Mr. Touhig: Comprehensive and detailed information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost, as 'refreshments' are not treated as a discrete expenditure item and are made available in a range of circumstances. I am, however, able to provide limited information, specifically on refreshments for committee meetings, for the period 1997–98 to 2001–02, when such expenditure was recorded separately. This is shown in the following table:

Financial year	Committee refreshments (£ million)
1998–99	0.345
1999–2000	0.481
2000–01	0.485
2001–02	0.472

It should be noted that all expenditure of this nature is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on principles set out in Government Accounting.

Departmental Staff (Castle Point)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff employed by his Department live in Castle Point. [42812]

Mr. Touhig: Data on the residential location of civilian personnel is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Helicopter Deployment (Afghanistan)

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British military helicopters he is planning to make available in support of the projected deployment of British forces to Helmand Province in Afghanistan; and what type of helicopters he plans to make available. [46873]

John Reid: I refer the right hon. Member to the statement I made to the House on 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 1531, about the deployment of our armed forces to Afghanistan.

HMS St. Albans

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) security and (b) cost implications are of the unauthorised disclosure of the future deployment details of HMS St. Albans. [45391]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 January 2006]: To mitigate the security risk arising from the inadvertent disclosure of HMS St. Alban's deployment details, some changes to the ship's programme have been made. These changes are being implemented at no additional cost.

Iraq

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel signed disclaimers before taking nerve agent pre-treatment tablets during Operation Telic; and what warnings were given to service personnel about potential side effects before they signed the disclaimers. [44219]

Mr. Touhig: Ministry of Defence policy is that no personnel are asked to sign disclaimers before being issued with, or taking nerve agent pre-treatment sets (NAPS) tablets.

A Patient Information Leaflet detailing the potential side-effects of the tablets is issued to personnel with the tablets.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how nerve agent pre-treatment tablets were administered during the 2003 invasion of Iraq on Operation TELIC; what records of their administration were kept; and what monitoring of potential side-effects took place. [44224]

Mr. Touhig: Self-administration of NAPS is one of the crucial life-saving protection measures that can be taken in a situation where a nerve agent attack is a possibility.

Nerve agent pre-treatment sets (NAPS) tablets were issued to personnel by their commanders, and self-administered on command. Operational commanders were given the authority to decide when troops should start and stop taking NAPS in order that the use of the countermeasure could be adapted to meet the threat situation at the time.

Due to the policy of self-administration of NAPS tablets, as opposed to administration by a medical officer, no records of their administration are kept.

All Service personnel receive training on the importance of taking NAPS in theatre and instructions for the use of NAPS are well publicised to command and medical staff.

The use of NAPS on Operation TELIC ceased in April 2003. As at 30 April 2003, no serious adverse events had been reported through epidemiology and theatre reporting systems.

International Security Assistance Force

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what the policy of NATO is relating to the rendition of terror suspects detained by International Security Assistance Force; and what agreement has been reached between NATO and the Afghan Government relating to arrest and detention of suspects in Afghanistan. [45582]

John Reid: I refer the right hon. Member to the answers given on 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1805W and 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 1982W to the right hon. and learned Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram).

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements have been made by NATO to ensure that terror suspects detained by Afghan authorities will be treated in compliance with international law. [45584]

John Reid: ISAF policy is that individuals detained should be handed over to the Afghan authorities at the first opportunity and within 96 hours, or released.

It is of course the primary responsibility of the Afghan Government to treat individuals it detains in accordance with international law. But as NATO prepares to expand in the south of Afghanistan it is discussing detention issues with the Afghan Government with the aim of agreeing a comprehensive policy in full compliance with international law.

Kosovo

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his NATO counterparts regarding the Council of Europe request to inspect Bondsteel camp in Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [44171]

Mr. Ingram: Defence Ministers have not had any discussions with their NATO counterparts regarding the Council of Europe's request to inspect Bondsteel Camp in Kosovo.

Meteorological Office

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the consultees who were given the opportunity to respond to the proposed new option four of the Met Office's proposals to change its civil centre forecast production network. [28350]

Mr. Touhig: The original Met Office consultation period began in July 2005 when details of the options for consultation were circulated to Met Office staff, customers, stakeholders and parliamentarians.

Details of the prospective new option 4—which was developed as a result of feedback from responses to the original phase of consultation (5 July 2005 to 20 October 2005)—were circulated to the same group of Met Office staff, customers, stakeholders and parliamentarians in October 2005. The consultation document was also available on the Met Office external website and was therefore effectively available for anyone to access.

Porton Down

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects a funding agreement to be concluded between the Defence, Science and Technology Laboratory and Defence Estates on remediation work at Porton Down. [44165]

Mr. Touhig: An informal agreement has already been reached between the Defence Science and Technology Laboratory and Defence Estates to allow work on the remediation of the Porton Down site, which commenced in early 2005.

It is anticipated that this agreement will be formalised with effect from 1 April 2006 and, subject to review as deemed necessary, remain extant until 31 March 2015.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 13 June 2005, Official Report, column 16W, on private finance projects, what the (a) capital value, (b) annual revenue cost, (c) start date and (d) end date is of each private finance initiative and public private partnership project his Department is undertaking. [45305]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 24 January 2006]: The information is provided in the following table. However, you should note:

that the table contains an updated list of PPP projects including details of projects signed since the answer given on the 13 June 2005, Official Report, column 16W; that the Contract End Date, as given in the following table, is generally based upon the date that the contract was entered into. However, for certain projects, the Contract End Date is calculated from the date that the service provided under the contract becomes fully "operational"; that the annual revenue cost of projects is commercially sensitive information and cannot therefore be provided. However the MOD Annual Report and Accounts 2004–05 provides details of the total payments made for PFI projects for the last two years and includes future service payment commitments.

The information that you request cannot be given for projects that are either being considered or in procurement as the information has not yet been determined or is commercially sensitive.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the estimated (a) capital value, (b) annual revenue costs, (c) start date and (d) end date is of each (i) private finance initiative and (ii) public private partnership projects under consideration by his Department but not yet signed. [45372]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 24 January 2006]: HM Treasury defines public private partnerships as privately financed projects and other forms of joint ventures, but excludes prime contracts, partnering and other outsourcing deals.

The Ministry of Defence has a forward programme of 16 private finance initiative (PFI) projects that are either under consideration or in procurement. Of these, 10 projects have progressed to various stages in the procurement process as shown in the following list. Further information on the status of individual projects is available on the MOD's PFI website at http://www.mod.uk/business/ppp/pfi_database.htm. The estimated capital value, annual revenue cost, start date and end date of these projects has either not yet been determined or is commercially sensitive and is not therefore on the website at present. Further information will be added to the website as decisions are taken.

Psychological Trauma

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to ensure armed forces personnel receive assistance from medical professionals for issues relating to physiological trauma. [45660]

Mr. Touhig: Physiological trauma may arise as a result of any physical injury or illness, including environmental injury, and its treatment is an integral part of the medical care and support given to injured armed forces personnel by members of the Defence Medical Services.

When deployed on operations, United Kingdom forces are supported by a range of in-theatre medical facilities, staffed by fully-qualified military medical personnel. These are capable of providing immediate treatment in theatre, and are backed up by fast and efficient medevac procedures to return personnel to the UK for further treatment as necessary.

On return to the UK, injured personnel will be given the treatment they need, usually through one of the MOD's Ministry of Defence hospital units attached to NHS hospitals. When necessary, follow-up treatment is provided through specialist units such as the 15 regional rehabilitation units (RRUs) in the UK and Germany, and the Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre (DMRC) at Headley Court, which provides world-class medical care, rehabilitation, prosthetics and adaptations for service personnel. Where there are psychological consequences, further treatment is provided through one of 15 MOD Departments of community mental health located in the UK (plus other satellite centres overseas), or if necessary through in-patient care at Priory Group facilities, with whom there is close liaison.

QinetiQ

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the proceeds of the QinetiQ flotation will (a) be reinvested with his Department and (b) go to the Treasury. [44154]

John Reid: The Treasury and the Ministry of Defence have agreed that the MOD will be able to retain a substantial proportion of the QinetiQ receipts for reinvestment in the defence programme. The precise proportion to be retained by the MOD will not be determined until the actual value of the overall receipt from the sale is known.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether royalties being paid to QinetiQ/Defence Evaluation and Research Agency for the use of intellectual property rights and research before privatisation will continue to be paid to new owners. [42425]

John Reid: The Ministry of Defence does not pay royalties to QinetiQ for MOD's own use of intellectual property generated as a result of MOD contracts. The MOD has free rights to such information for its own use or for use by its contractors for defence and security purposes. The MOD also has rights to disclose such information to other Governments for international co-operation purposes. All these rights apply regardless of whether the work was carried out by DERA or by QinetiQ, and they are not affected in any way by the Initial Public Offering (IPO). These arrangements are consistent with those for all other defence contractors undertaking research under contract for MOD. Existing royalty arrangements in place between QinetiQ/DERA and other parties will also not be affected by the IPO. The shareholders, including the Government, will continue to benefit from the value generated by these payments.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the proceeds from the flotation of QinetiQ will be re-invested in defence research. [44155]

John Reid: The Treasury and the Ministry of Defence have agreed that the MOD will be able to retain a substantial proportion of the QinetiQ receipts for reinvestment in the defence programme. The precise proportion to be retained by the MOD will not be determined until the actual value of the overall receipt from the sale is known. The allocation of this money within the MOD will be determined by the normal planning process.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what restrictions he has placed on QinetiQ's use of technology funded by his Department for third party contracts. [44159]

John Reid: Should QinetiQ wish to use the United Kingdom Government-funded technology in third party contracts, arrangements established in July 2001 allow the Ministry of Defence to prevent transactions that it judges would cause an unmanageable conflict of interest or otherwise be contrary to the defence or security interests of the UK. These arrangements will remain in place after the initial public offering in QinetiQ.

Radioactive Waste

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funds his Department has made available in each year since 1997 to help facilitate the treatment of legacy radioactive waste of military origin held at (a) Sellafield and (b) other civil nuclear sites; and what plans he has to provide such funding in the future to the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority. [46038]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 January 2006]: Due to the complex nature of the treatment of legacy radioactive waste of military origin, I am unable to give details of the funding as this will take time to collate. I will write to the hon. Member when I have the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

As part of the transfer of the Ministry of Defence's historic nuclear liabilities to the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (through the Department of Trade and Industry) the MOD will be transferring £624 million covering the period of financial years 2005–06 to 2007–08. All responsibility for bids for future funds now rests with the NDA.

Royal Ordnance Chorley

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many products produced by Royal Ordnance Chorley have been strategically stockpiled by (a) Royal Ordnance and (b) his Department. [43618]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 January 2006]: Information on ammunition natures held in the strategic stockpile is classified information and as such is withheld as disclosure would not be in the national interest. Any requirement for BAE Systems Land Systems to stockpile ammunition for its own purposes is a matter for the company.

Stonehenge

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the last occasion was on which (a) Ministers, (b) officials and (c) military personnel met the director general of the National Trust to discuss Stonehenge road issues; and what was discussed. [46669]

Mr. Touhig: Ministers have not met with the director general of the National Trust (DG/NT) to discuss Stonehenge road issues. At DG/NT's request, the chief executive of Defence Estates (CE/DE), met with her on 11 January 2006. DG/NT wanted to explore possible options for re-routing the A303 in the Stonehenge area, and for a further meeting to be arranged between officials. The Department's current plans for the area were explained, and it was made clear that Salisbury plain and the surrounding garrison towns would continue to be required as military sites for the foreseeable future.

NT and DE officials met on 16 January. NT hoped to identify a broad corridor that avoids the archaeological features between the A303 and Larkhill. DE officials reiterated the advice already given and undertook to examine NT proposals in detail, but emphasised that this was an interdepartmental issue.

Vice-Admiral Dunt (CE/DE) is a serving officer; no other military personnel have been involved in the meetings.

Training and Evaluation Capabilities

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to conclude the review of air training and evaluation capabilities. [44174]

Mr. Ingram: A review of the air test and evaluation process and its impact upon the delivery of military capability is due to be reported to senior officials in early 2007.

The Ministry of Defence future requirement for the air test, evaluation and training services capability provided by QinetiQ under a long-term partnering agreement is also being assessed as part of the first quinquennial review of the contract.

War Pensions Committee

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether a war pensions committee panel is to be set up in respect of the case of the late Lieutenant William Norbury and his widow. [45228]

Mr. Touhig: No war pensions committee has received a formal request. A war pensions committee panel will be set up on receipt of a formal request from Mrs. Norbury.

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it is within the remit of war pensions committee panels to determine appropriate sums to be paid in respect of past periods for which war disability pensions were not paid due to errors. [45232]

Mr. Touhig: It is not within the remit of war pensions committees (WPCs) to determine amounts to be paid to pensioners. The WPCs are advisory bodies who can hear complaints and make recommendations to the Veterans Agency for consideration.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION

General Election Expenditure

29. Mr. Allen: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission if the Commission will review the limits on expenditure for candidates in general elections; and if he will make a statement. [46118]

Peter Viggers: In its report on "The funding of political parties" published in 2004, the Electoral Commission identified a need to review the balance between party and candidate spending limits at all relevant elections. The Commission will consider how to take forward the recommendations it made when the Government have responded to the report.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Magazines/Periodicals

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission which magazines and periodicals have been delisted from the Library in each month in the last two years; and for what reason. [45875]

Nick Harvey: In 2003–04 the Library carried out a review of periodicals. Such reviews are carried out at regular intervals with the aim of ensuring that the Library's holdings continue to reflect Members' needs in the most cost-effective way.

During the review use of periodicals was recorded over a 12-month period. As a result many periodicals that were no longer being used widely were cancelled, titles taken in duplicate were reduced where practicable, with copies held in the place of greatest use, and a number of closed runs were disposed of. £29,000 of savings have been redeployed to meet new needs, including subscriptions to electronic sources. Out of 1,400 titles 419 current subscriptions were cancelled and a further 319 closed runs of older titles agreed for disposal. Some cancellations were made during the summer of 2004, and the majority came into effect in January 2005, when existing annual subscriptions ended. The large majority of cancelled titles were not kept on display in the Members Library as they were of marginal interest and not in demand. The Library has subsequently received a small number of queries from Members with regard to specific titles, as a result of which two titles have been relocated to the Members Library and five titles reinstated. Single articles from titles not held in the Library can be obtained for Members through Inter Library Loan.

A full list of titles agreed for cancellation and disposal has been placed in the Library.

CABINET OFFICE

Government Communications

Mr. Gale: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much was spent on Government public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [46040]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Records of expenditure on public relations and information services across government are not held centrally.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Professional Football (Governance)

9. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with football authorities on the governance of the professional game. [46098]

Mr. Caborn: In my ongoing discussions with the football authorities about the governance of football I continue to urge the Football Association to implement the Burns Review recommendations.

The FA must use this Review to ensure they are fit for purpose in the 21st Century and make the necessary changes without delay.

Digital Radio Stations

10. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with Ofcom on the range of musical genres offered by specialist digital radio stations. [46099]

Mr. Lammy: None. Licensing of independent radio is a matter for Ofcom.

Gaming Act

11. Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the trend has been in applications for new casino licences under the

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Gainsborough (Mr. Leigh).

Television Licence Concessions

12. Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will introduce proposals to extend the provisions relating to television licence concessions to residents in sheltered accommodation. [46101]

Tessa Jowell: As indicated in the BBC Charter Review Green Paper published in March last year, we believe the current scope of licence fee concessions is about right. However, we undertook to re-examine any anomalies in the existing concessions policy, particularly the accommodation for residential care scheme. Our conclusions, which will take into account the responses to the Green Paper consultation, will be set out in the White Paper which we intend to publish shortly.

World Heritage Sites

13. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what process governs applications for World Heritage Site UK nominee status. [46102]

Mr. Lammy: For a site in the UK to be considered for inscription under the UNESCO World Heritage Convention, it must first be included on the national Tentative List of Sites. The UK Tentative List, first published in 1999, is due to be reviewed and I shall be making an announcement about this later this year.

Selection of a site from the Tentative List for nomination is made by Government following a rigorous assessment process including consultation with the devolved Administrations. Final decisions on inscription are made by the World Heritage Committee at its annual meeting.

Tourism Deficit

14. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the UK tourism deficit. [46103]

Mr. Lammy: The UK tourism deficit was £17.3 billion in 2004. Although we have a strong domestic tourism industry, a number of factors including increasing prosperity and cheaper air travel are encouraging more British people to holiday overseas. The UK is not alone in this—Germany's deficit stands at £27 billion.

Community and Amateur Sports Clubs (West Midlands)

15. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department has taken to promote community and amateur sports clubs in Coventry, South and the West Midlands. [46104]

Mr. Caborn: The Community Amateur Sports Club Scheme is open to eligible community and amateur sports clubs across the country, including those situated in Coventry, South and the West Midlands. So far over 3,500 clubs have registered for the Scheme in total, the benefits of which include mandatory rate relief as well as exemptions from Corporation Tax and which have totalled some £8 million to date.

In addition, in the financial year ending 31 March 2005 Sport England allocated over £1.75 million from lottery and exchequer funding to grass roots sport, including community and amateur sports clubs, in Coventry, and over £6 million to the West Midlands as a whole.

Licensing Act

16. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent assessment she has made of the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 on sports clubs. [46105]

Mr. Caborn: While we believe that the Act will benefit sports clubs in the long term by removing the need to obtain a number of different permissions for different activities, I recognise that some concerns have been expressed about how sports clubs will adapt to the new licensing regime.

I have therefore asked the Central Council for Physical Recreation to provide any information about how sports clubs are adapting to the new licensing regime and, in particular, to feed in any evidence about the impact of the fees into the Independent Fees Review Panel.

In addition, I recently met representatives of the National Golf Clubs' Advisory Association, who confirmed that the transition period had gone well, without any major problems.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 on sports clubs. [45856]

James Purnell: While we believe that the Act will benefit sports clubs in the long term by removing the need to obtain a number of different permissions for different activities, I recognise that some concerns have been expressed about how sports clubs will adapt to the new licensing regime.

I have therefore asked the Central Council for Physical Recreation to provide any information about how sports clubs are adapting to the new licensing regime and, in particular, to feed in any evidence about the impact of the fees into the Independent Fees Review Panel.

In addition, I recently met representatives of the National Golf Clubs' Advisory Association, who confirmed that the transition period had gone well, without any major problems.

Olympic Games

17. Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on proposed training facilities for the 2012 Olympics. [46106]

Tessa Jowell: Preparation and holding camps are an important element of the Games, potentially bringing benefits to the whole of the UK, both in economic terms and in galvanising the participation and engagement of local communities who will play host to elite athletes from around the globe. The responsibility for co-ordinating preparation and holding camps lies with the London Organising Committee for the Olympic Games (LOCOG) in conjunction with the British Olympic Association who are developing a pre-training guide and application process to assist the Devolved Administrations and the English Regions in securing these training camps. The 2012 Nations and Regions Group, chaired by Charles Allen, will also be working with the Regions to develop plans for maximising the benefits of hosting the Games and regional working groups will be fully engaged on this issue as work goes forward.

18. Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on progress with arrangements for the 2012 Olympics. [46107]

Tessa Jowell: We have made excellent progress since 6 July with preparations for London to host the 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games. Top appointments at the London Organising Committee for the Olympic Games and the interim Olympic Delivery Authority have been made, the London Olympic Games and Paralympic Games Bill continues to make good progress through Parliament, and work is under way on the Olympic Park site.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on progress with arrangements for the 2012 Olympics. [46175]

Mr. Caborn: We have made excellent progress since 6 July with preparations for London to host the 2012 Olympic games and Paralympic games. Top appointments at the London Organising Committee for the Olympic games and the interim Olympic Delivery Authority have been made, and the London Olympic Games and Paralympic Games Bill continues to make good progress through Parliament. Work is already under way on the Olympic Park site.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress is being made in involving regions outside London in preparation for the 2012 Olympics. [46176]

Mr. Caborn: We have established a nations and regions group (NRG) chaired by Charles Alien, the chairman of ITV. It will ensure the whole of the UK is engaged with and realises the benefits—economic, social and sporting—from the 2012 Olympic games and Paralympic games. Each nation and region has also established a national or regional working group to draw together people from across the nation or region with a role to play in engaging local communities and securing the benefits from 2012.

The NRG met in London on 25 January and representatives from the national and regional working groups met in Leeds on 26 January to consider future arrangements in more detail.

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment was made by PricewaterhouseCoopers in their Olympic games impact study of December 2005 of the economic impact in the south Wales valleys of holding the Olympic games in London in 2012. [46572]

Mr. Caborn: The Olympic games impact study analyses the potential economic, social and environmental impacts of hosting the 2012 Olympic games and Paralympic games on three geographical areas: the UK as a whole; London; and north east London. It does not analyse the impact on other particular regions or nations within the UK.

The report presents a picture of what would happen if nothing was done to spread the benefits from the games. Government and 2012 stakeholders are committed to ensuring timely and appropriate action is taken to spread the benefits throughout the UK.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on progress of preparations in Dorset for the 2012 Olympics. [45854]

Mr. Caborn: The Dorset Olympic Steering Croup (DOSG) has been set up as the local lead for venue development. DOSG links in with a new local co-ordination structure for Dorset. This comprises the Dorset Strategic Partnership, Dorset Economic Partnership and County Sports Partnership. The Dorset Strategic Partnership is currently developing a vision statement for Dorset and 2012, consulting all relevant partners. The CEO of Dorset county council sits on a regional steering group which has now been set up to co-ordinate the programme of activity across the south west.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has for the provision of training facilities in the Eastern Region for the 2012 Olympic Games, with particular reference to rowing. [45989]

Mr. Caborn: I am aware of the excellent rowing facilities that already exist in the Eastern Region and in the hon. Gentleman's own constituency of Peterborough. It will be for the National Olympic Committee of each country to decide where their teams will train for the London 2012 Games. The London Organising Committee for the Olympic Games (LOCOG) is responsible for co-ordinating the preparation of training camps for the Games in conjunction with the British Olympic Association (BOA). They are currently developing a Pre-Training Guide that will both assist partners in the Devolved Administrations and the English Regions to secure these training camps.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what liaison bodies have been established between her Department and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in relation to the arrangements for the 2012 London Olympic and Paralympic games; and if she will make a statement. [46065]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) worked closely with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) during London's bid to host the 2012 Olympic games and Paralympic games. Since winning the right to host the games, DCMS has continued to work closely with ODPM on preparations for the games.

The DCMS has established, and chairs, an inter-departmental steering group which will provide strategic direction in delivering the games and its legacy and a working level network of Olympic co-ordinators. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM), along with other Whitehall Departments, is represented on both of these groups. ODPM are also represented on the Olympic delivery group and the Olympic projects review group established by DCMS.

DCMS and ODPM represent Government on the Olympic board steering group that was established by the four Olympic stakeholders (Government, the Mayor, the London Organising Committee for the Olympic Games and the British Olympic Association).

The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport and the Deputy Prime Minister are both on the ministerial committee on the Olympics (MISC 25) that co-ordinates and oversees Government issues relating to the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games.

Horseracing Industry

19. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support her Department gave to the horseracing industry in the last financial year. [46108]

Mr. Caborn: My Department sponsors the horseracing industry and two non-departmental public bodies, which provide support and funding.

In the last financial year, the Horserace Betting Levy Board distributed £96 million to racing and the Horserace Totalisator Board contributed £11 million, in addition to its levy payments.

Children's Play

20. Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on children's play. [46109]

Mr. Lammy: My Department recognises the importance of play in children's lives, not only for its own sake, but also in terms of other government priorities such as reducing obesity or increasing educational attainment. We remain committed to play and we are developing a more strategic approach to play policy through the cross departmental group which was set up last year.

Administrative Costs

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the administrative costs were of each agency for which she has responsibility in the last year for which figures are available; what the total of such costs was in that year; and whether the costs are regarded for the purposes of public expenditure statistical analyses as (a) identifiable and (b) non-identifiable. [39855]

Mr. Lammy: The Department is responsible for one agency, The Royal Parks. All of the agency's resource expenditure is classed as "other current" costs rather than "administration costs" in the Supply Estimates and the Departmental Resource Accounts. The Royal Parks expenditure figures for 2004–05 can be found in the Royal Parks Annual Report at pages 48–60, a copy of which is available in the House of Parliament Library and from The Royal Parks website, www.royalparks.gov.uk/about/publications. Expenditure is broken down into the following categories:

Gross expenditure	£000
Staff costs	6,456
Depreciation	1,374
Notional charges	1,242
Programme costs
Consultancies	633

All of the agency's expenditure is regarded as "identifiable" for country and regional public expenditure statistical analyses.

Amateur Sports Clubs

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate her Department has made of the number of sports clubs (a) eligible for and (b) which have attained community amateur sports club status, broken down by sport; and if she will make a statement. [45999]

Mr. Caborn: The Community Amateur Sports Club (CASC) scheme is administered by HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC), who provide data on CASC registrations and the overall financial benefits to clubs. There are however no reliable estimates of the number of clubs that may be eligible for CASC status. As of 22 December 2005, 3,504 clubs had successfully registered as CASCs, up from a figure of 2,004 on 31 December 2004, representing an increase of 74 per cent. over the twelve month period. Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department has taken to promote community amateur sports club status in each quarter since April 2002; what the costs were; and if she will make a statement. [46000]

Mr. Caborn: The Department does not hold this information in the format requested.

Since April 2002 my Department has supported and undertaken a number of initiatives to promote the Community Amateur Sports Clubs Scheme (CASC), resulting in a 74 per cent. increase in registration in the year ending 31 December 2005.

In both 2003 and 2004 the Department contributed to the costs of a series of seminars organised by the Central Council of Physical Recreation (CCPR) to promote the scheme.

In June 2004 the Economic Secretary to the Treasury and I held an event at Totteridge Cricket Club to publicise the scheme. In November 2004 DCMS organised, and I spoke at, a seminar for the National Governing Bodies (NGB) of sport to encourage their members to seek CASC membership. The meeting was held in tandem with the publication of a new information leaflet to NGBs about the benefits of CASC and information about the application process. This leaflet was produced and distributed by my Department.

In addition, we have also worked with Sport England to promote the CASC Scheme, including a round of regional seminars in 2003, and the organisation of nine regional workshops which were staged in the second half of 2005.

Anniversary Events

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans her Department has for celebrating anniversaries of major events up to 2010; and if she will make a statement. [45995]

Mr. Lammy: The Secretary of State is responsible for organising, on behalf of the Government, the annual Remembrance Day Ceremony at the Cenotaph and the Under-Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, the hon. Member for Tottenham (Mr. Lammy) is working closely with the Deputy Prime Minister and Paul Goggins, Minister for Race Equality and external stakeholders to ensure the best support for the forthcoming bicentenary marking the abolition of the slave trade in 2007.

Many of DCMS's sponsored bodies are planning to celebrate anniversaries of various other major events, including the 200th anniversary of the birth of Isambard Kingdom Brunei in 2007, the 90th anniversary of the end of the First World War in 2008 and the 500th anniversary of Henry VIII's accession to the throne in 2009. Any plans by the Department or its sponsored bodies for the celebration of other major anniversaries will be announced closer to the time.

Ashes Test Series

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether Ministers or officials will represent the Department at any of the Ashes test series matches in Australia in 2006. [46094]

Mr. Lammy: No decision has been reached on whether Ministers or officials from the Department will be going to any of the Ashes test matches in Australia in 2006. A decision on the matter will be made later in the year.

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on how many occasions her Department consulted citizens juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens jury. [46241]

Mr. Lammy: My Department has not used citizens juries as a means of consultation in the last five years.

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many pensioners over 75 years were receiving a free television licence in Selby constituency in the most recent period for which figures are available. [46799]

James Purnell: TV Licensing, who administer free television licences for people aged 75 or over as agents for the BBC, are not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, the number of households with at least one person aged 75 or over claiming the winter fuel payment in the Selby constituency in 2004–05 was 5,500 according to Department for Work and Pensions records.

Constantine Anniversary

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Government is taking to commemorate the 1700th anniversary of the proclamation in the City of York of Constantine, the Roman Emperor; what support her Department has given to the York Museums Trust's exhibition on Constantine; and if she will make a statement. [45765]

Mr. Lammy: The Constantine exhibition, mounted in association with the British Museum, has received £50,000 in funding from the Heritage Lottery Fund. The activities of York Museums' Trust are supported through the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council's Renaissance in the Regions programme. Renaissance has funded a new space in the Yorkshire Museum to support activities for schools. During the exhibition, this learning space will be dressed in Roman style with real objects to handle. A Roman story trail for children and families has also been developed.

Departmental Estate

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps have been taken to provide a clear description of her Department's estate which includes (a) executive agencies, (b) staff numbers, (c) buildings and (d) land managed. [44705]

Mr. Lammy: Both the Department for Culture Media, and Sport and The Royal Parks have their own Estates Management databases. They are also working with the Office for Government Commerce on the Electronic Performance Indicator Management System for the Government Estate.

The number of staff in the Department and The Royal Parks are published in Table C in Civil Service Statistics 2004 which is available in the Library of the House and on the Cabinet Office website www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk.

Departmental Websites

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost of maintaining her main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46300]

Mr. Lammy: The information is as follows:

Maintenance costs

The DCMS primary website www.culture.gov.uk is managed in-house from existing resources. Total costs for 2005 were £47,000.

Hosting—£12,000 (figure includes costs for a number of other departmental sites)

Development—£10,000

Software licence—£25,000

Unique visitor numbers to the site

January	57,316
February	193,522
March	251,237
April	236,966
May	212,858
June	221,181
July	251,224
August	193,665
September	226,160
October	277,926
November	324,624
December	260,952

English Heritage

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much lottery funding was allocated to English Heritage in 2005–06. [46354]

Mr. Lammy: A total of £9,521,177 for three projects has been allocated to English Heritage by the Heritage Lottery Fund in the period April 2005 to January 2006. No other lottery distributor has allocated funding to English Heritage in that period.

Film Council

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list films to which the UK Film Council has given financial assistance in each of the last five years; and how much each received. [45704]

James Purnell: A complete list of the films that have received financial assistance from the UK Film Council in each of the last five years, and the amounts received, is available on the UK Film Council website at www.ukfilmcouncil.org.uk . I am also arranging for the complete list to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what criteria the UK Film Council uses to determine eligibility for financial assistance to film-makers. [45705]

James Purnell: The UK Film Council provides financial assistance to film projects to help deliver a consistent flow of high quality and culturally significant films. All film projects are selected according to an assessment of their cultural and creative merits. Funding will generally be given only to projects that are wholly or substantially capable of certification as a 'British' film. However, the UK Film Council is able to exercise discretion and may still elect to finance a film if there are other strong cultural reasons for doing so. Full details of the eligibility criteria for individual funding schemes are available on the UK Film Council website at www.ukfilmcouncil.org.uk

Government Art Collection

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the Government's art collection is catalogued; and if she will make a statement. [46835]

Mr. Lammy: The Government Art Collection (GAC) maintains a catalogue and database of the collection in line with the documentation standards of the Museums Accreditation Scheme administered by Museums, Libraries and Archives Council.

The GAC has a website that includes an on-line catalogue of works in the collection. All original works and impressions of all modern prints in the collection are included; historical prints are currently being added.

In addition, the GAC has published a range of books about the collection including a summary catalogue of original works from the 20th century (published 1997).

The GAC and the Public Catalogue Foundation (PCF) are planning a volume of the PCF's ongoing series of catalogues "Oil Paintings in Public Ownership" to include the GAC's holding of paintings.

Green Ministers

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what work her Department's green Minister has undertaken in the last three months in an official capacity within that role. [45439]

James Purnell: I met with representatives from South Hams district council in October to discuss a sustainable approach to tourism and I chaired two meetings of the Tourism Reform Implementation Group (TRIG) at which the sustainability sub groups recommendations were discussed.

In November 2005 in my capacity as DCMS member of the EE(SD) committee I had a bi-lateral meeting with the Minister for Climate Change and Environment (Elliot Morley). I am currently preparing my Department's sustainable development action plan.

Hampton Court Green

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what notice was given to residents at Hampton Court Green of Historic Royal Palaces' intention to allow the parking of vehicles on the Green for the Christmas event within the walls of the Palace from 1 to 11 December 2005; and whether an application was made to Richmond upon Thames borough council in relation to parking for this event. [45774]

Mr. Lammy: Historic Royal Palaces did not give any specific notice to local residents of their intention to allow parking on Hampton Court Green for the Christmas event, although residents living in the vicinity of Hampton Court Green were sent promotional leaflets which showed the Green as the location for the main car park. Historic Royal Palaces did not make any application to Richmond upon Thames borough council in relation to parking for the Christmas event. It is the responsibility of the event organisers, contracted by Historic Royal Palaces, to obtain any necessary consent that may have been required. The council was aware of the event, and no application was made by the event organisers.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many days each event held by Historic Royal Palaces on Hampton Court Green lasted in 2005, including time for setting up and dismantling. [45775]

Mr. Lammy: In 2005 Hampton Court Green was used for events under licence from Historic Royal Palaces for 52 days (37 event days and 15 days for setting up and dismantling.) The 2005 events were as follows: nine days for a funfair at Easter (five days for the event, four for set-up and dismantling), 14 days for a circus during the May holiday (11 and three days respectively), 11 days for a country affair at the August bank holiday (three and eight days respectively), seven days for temporary car parking for the Hampton Court Palace flower show and 11 days for temporary car parking for a Christmas affair.

Information and Communication Technology

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the Arts Council England spent on information and communication technology projects for each year since 1997; what (a) the nature of the project, (b) commencement date, (c) planned completion date and (d) actual completion date was in each case; whether contractors were involved in each project; and if she will make a statement. [46031]

Mr. Lammy: Information and Communication Technology expenditure since 1997:

	Expenditure (£)
1998–99	100,000
1999–2000	2,310,000
2000–01	2,294,000
2001–02	1,797,000
2002–03	1,823,000
2003–04	553,000
2004–05	1,775,000

Project details

Year 2000: Ensuring IT systems were compliant for the year 2000 changeover. Work was carried out during 1998–99.

ARTIS:

A finance and grants management system replacing those in place prior to 1996–97. The initial phase went live on 1 April 2001 with further phased releases during 2001–02 and 2002–03.

Telephone system:

Harmonisation of the telephone network following the merger with the 10 Regional Arts Boards in 2002. This was implemented during 2002–03 and 2003–04. Installation was completed in line with the original timetable.

Thin client:

Creation of a thin client IT infrastructure following the merger of the Arts Council of England with the 10 Regional Arts Boards in April 2002. This was rolled out during 2003–04 and 2004–05. Installation was completed in line with the original timetable.

Single system:

A new system for finance, grants and management information following the merger of the Arts Council of England with the 10 Regional Arts Boards in April 2002. The planned implementation date is September 2006.

Expenditure (in £) by project

	Year 2000	ARTIS	Telephone system	Thin client	Single system
1998–99	100,000	0	0	0	0
2000–01	0	2,294,000	0	0	0
2001–02	0	1,797,000	0	0	0
2002–03	0	1,362,000	461,000	0	0
2004–05	0	0	18,000	34,000	1,723,000

The Arts Council made use of contractors for all of the above projects, as the cost of retaining a permanent IT staffing resource of specialist expertise to deliver projects of this type is prohibitive. Exact records of commencement, planned and actual completion dates were not retained.

Lottery Funding

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was paid to the arts through (a) grant-in-aid to the Arts Council, (b) the Arts Lottery Fund and (c) the Big Lottery Fund in 2004–05. [45997]

Mr. Lammy: In 2004–05 Arts Council England received £369.9 million in Grant in Aid and £170.2 million in Lottery funding. The Big Lottery Fund also funds arts projects but does not categorise these separately. Therefore the figures could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was paid to sport through (a) grant-in-aid to Sport England, (b) the Sports Lottery Fund and (c) the Big Lottery Fund in 2004–05. [45998]

Mr. Caborn: In 2004–05, Sport England Exchequer awards totalled £86.8 million; awards from the Sports Lottery Fund[1] totalled £135.2 million (Sport England: £121 million and UK Sport: £14.2 million) and awards from the Big Lottery Fund[2] totalled £395 million.

[1] The figure provided includes Lottery funding awarded by Sport England and UK Sport, which are the NDPBs sponsored by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport.

[2] This figure includes New Opportunities for PE and School Sport, Space for Sport and the Arts, and community sports programme awards. It does not include Awards for All, Positive Activities for Young People and other grants which have funded sport indirectly.

New Opportunities Fund

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the expenditure of the New Opportunities Fund for physical education and sport was in each year since 2001; and if she will make a statement. [46001]

Mr. Caborn: The table shows awards and payments made by the New Opportunities Fund to programmes for physical education and sport for each year since 2001. These figures do not include Awards for All, Activities for Young People and other grants which have funded sport indirectly.

	Awards made	Payment made
2001–02	10,596,800	11,400
2002–03	88,622,611	4,801,339
2003–04	202,444,347	31,618,846
2004–05	395,174,057	84,993,116
Year to date	79,292,733	202,244,646

Private Security Industry Act

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received from sports bodies about the Private Security Industry Act 2001; and if she will make a statement. [46162]

Mr. Caborn: A number of sports bodies, including the Central Council for Physical Recreation, have contacted my Department with concerns about the impact of the Private Security Industry Act 2001. We are working closely with the Home Office to ensure that sport is not unnecessarily burdened by the legislation.

Royal Works of Art

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the inventory of royal works of art was completed; and where it can be consulted by members of the public. [46534]

Mr. Lammy: The Royal Collection is a department of the Royal household and is not a responsibility of my Department. However, I understand that the custodial inventory was completed in 1997, and is used to help manage the collection and answer public enquiries. In partnership with the National Trust, the Royal Collection is currently developing a new collections management system; and in April 2005 the Royal Collection launched the first phase of its online e-Gallery, an interactive, multimedia catalogue of works of art, which is available on the Royal Collection's website.

Second World War Records

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans her Department has to record the accounts of ex-servicemen who served during the Second World War; and how much has been spent on doing this in each of the last 10 years. [45651]

Mr. Lammy: The accounts of ex-service people who served in the Second World War are being recorded by two of the national museums sponsored by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport.

Since the beginning of 1996, the Imperial War Museum's Sound Archive has planned for, acquired, documented, stored, preserved and made accessible 4,263 recordings of people's accounts of Second World War service, representing approximately 52 per cent. of the intake for those years. The direct cost of the Second World War recordings has been £1.22 million, excluding costs for accommodation, utilities and storage.

In addition, the Department of Documents at the Imperial War Museum is responsible for the collection of the unpublished diaries, letters and memoirs of servicemen and women who have taken part in the conflicts in which Britain and the Commonwealth have been involved since 1914. Some 15,000 individuals' experiences are now represented in the archive, of which close to half cover service in the Second World War, and the collection is continuing to grow. The costs associated with these Second World War accounts are also in the region of £1.2 million.

The Royal Armouries currently runs a programme called 'Memories', which records through DVD the reminiscences of veterans from the Second World War about the Department for weapons they either used or encountered during conflict. A DVD is currently on display in the main entrance to the Royal Armouries in Leeds, and 10 more Second World War veterans will be interviewed by the end of February. The project is in its early days and it is estimated that it will cost £7,000 in 2005–06, with plans for further development.

Stonehenge Visitors Centre

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost was to (a) her Department and (b) English Heritage, to the end of July 2005, of preparatory work in connection with the Stonehenge Visitors Centre. [45817]

Mr. Lammy: The total expenditure by English Heritage in connection with the Stonehenge Visitors Centre since 2000–01 is £8.9 million. This includes funds to purchase land on which the centre is to be built together with consultancy and project team costs associated with architectural, structural and environmental design of the centre.

£3 million of this amount was allocated as grant in aid in 2000–01 to English Heritage from DCMS for land purchase. Some additional staff costs have fallen to my Department but these are included in overall running costs and not separately recorded.

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the earmarked allocation of funding from the National Lottery Heritage Fund for the Stonehenge Visitors Centre is ring-fenced for that project irrespective of possible planning and construction delays. [46663]

Mr. Lammy: The Heritage Lottery Fund has earmarked £25 million to support the Visitor Centre element of the Stonehenge Project. There are no current plans to reallocate these funds.

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the last occasion was that (a) Ministers and (b) officials met representatives of the National Trust to discuss road improvements at Stonehenge. [46853]

Mr. Lammy: I met the chairman of the National Trust on 25 January. There have been regular meetings at official level, the last of which included a visit to Stonehenge on 19 January.

Sustainable Development

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate, what her Department has identified as the most significant sustainable development impacts in relation to the operation of its estate. [45830]

James Purnell: The Department has identified the most significant sustainable development impacts pursuant to the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate as being:

Part E—Energy

Part F—Procurement

Part G—Estates Management and Construction

Television Licence Fee

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many fines for non-payment of a television licence have been collected from premises used to shelter women from domestic violence in each of the last three years in each (a) country, (b) region and (c) constituency of the UK. [45826]

James Purnell: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take steps to include women's refuge centres in the concessionary television licence scheme available to people living in residential care accommodation. [46172]

James Purnell: In the BBC Charter Review Green Paper published in March 2005, the Government indicated that it believed the current scope of television licence fee concessions was about right but undertook to re-examine any anomalies in the existing concessions policy, particularly the accommodation for residential care scheme. Our conclusions, which will take into account the responses to the Green Paper consultation, will be set out in the White Paper which we intend to publish shortly.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the level of the colour television licence fee has been in each year since 1996–97. [46351]

James Purnell: The level of the colour television licence fee in each year since 1996–97 has been:

	Licence Fee
1996–97	89.50
1997–98	91.50
1998–99	97.50
1999–2000	101.00
2000–01	104.00
2001–02	109.00
2002–03	112.00
2003–04	116.00
2004–05	121.00
2005–06	126.50

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the penalties are for not paying the television licence fee. [46352]

James Purnell: Under section 363 of the Communications Act 2003, the penalty for unlicensed installation or use of a television receiver is a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale, currently £1,000.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people in West Lancashire were prosecuted for not having a television licence in each of the last five years. [45119]

Fiona Mactaggart: I have been asked to reply.

The information from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform is contained in the table and shows the number of people proceeded against at magistrates courts in Lancashire police force area for offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts 1949 to 1969 (mainly television licence evasion), 2000–04. It is not possible to identify those prosecutions in West Lancashire, as the data is not collected at this level of detail.

Number of persons proceeded against at magistrates courts for offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts 1949 to 1967 (mainly television licence evasion), Lancashire police force area 2000 to 2004[1]

	Proceeded against
2000	3,888
2001	4,720
2002	5,058
2003	3,824
2004	4,145

PRIME MINISTER

Christmas Cards

Mr. Hands: To ask the Prime Minister if he will estimate the cost to his Office of sending Christmas cards in 2005. [45916]

The Prime Minister: Approximately 1,600 cards were purchased for official use at a cost of £325. All expenditure incurred in the purchase and posting of these cards is in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in "Government Accounting".

Early Retirement

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Prime Minister how many employees of his Office have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46776]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I have therefore asked my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Jim Murphy) to reply. A copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Jewish Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Prime Minister what his Office did to (a) celebrate Hanukkah and (b) mark Yom Kippur in 2005. [46763]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 621W.

Special Advisers

Mr. Heald: To ask the Prime Minister (1) how much was spent on special advisers in each year since 1996–97; and what the estimated spend is for 2005–06; [47199]

(2) if he will list the (a) paid and (b) unpaid special advisers working in each Government Department. [47200]

The Prime Minister: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each payband. I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement I made on 21 July 2005, Official Report, 158–61WS. Information on the numbers of special advisers prior to 2003 was provided at regular intervals and this information is available in the Libraries of the House.

Information on special advisers for 2005–06 will be published in the normal way once it has been completed.

Terrorism Victims (Compensation)

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 888W, on terrorism victims (compensation), when he expects to be able to report to the House on the results of the Government's consideration of the feasibility of introducing a scheme to provide compensation for UK victims of terrorism referred to in his reply to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) on 15 October 2005. [46558]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 888W.

Tibet

John Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with President Hu about the destruction of historic buildings by the Chinese Government in Tibet. [45549]

The Prime Minister: I last met President Hu during his state visit in November 2005 where we discussed a wide range of issues. The British ambassador to China raised the destruction of historic buildings in Tibet with the Vice-Mayor of Lhasa in July 2004. He stressed the need to balance modernity with the preservation of Tibetan culture.

The Government monitor developments in Tibet closely and regularly raises Tibet-related issues with the Chinese Government, including during our biannual UK/China human rights dialogue.

Torture

David Howarth: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his Oral Answer to the right hon. Member for Ross, Skye and Lochaber (Mr. Kennedy) of 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 862, whether the definition of torture he uses includes cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment. [45815]

The Prime Minister: The Government understands the term "torture" to have the meaning set out in Article 1 of the UN Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (UNCAT).

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Council Tax

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the (a) merits and (b) cost of a revaluation of council tax bands. [46021]

Mr. Woolas: The Government believe that it is right to maintain a fair alignment between house prices and council tax bands. However they announced on 20 September 2005 that they were postponing the 2007 revaluation of council tax so that revaluation can take full account of Sir Michael Lyons' extended inquiry into local government funding. Sir Michael published his initial findings and research so far in December last year and will publish his final report at the end of this year.

It is not possible at this stage to estimate what the costs of a future revaluation will be.

Coventry City Council

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of Coventry City council housing stock has been sold under the right-to-buy scheme in each year since 1980. [45659]

Yvette Cooper: The proportion of housing stock owned by Coventry City council, sold through the right-to-buy scheme in each financial year since 1980–81, as reported by Coventry City is tabulated. The table shows the number of right-to-buy sales in each financial year as a percentage of the stock at the beginning of that period. There have been no right-to-buy sales since September 2000 when all remaining local authority stock was transferred to a registered social landlord.

West Lancashire: right-to-buy sales

P1AB returns from local authority to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister

Departmental Expenditure

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was spent by his Department on refreshments in each year since 1997. [41259]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was formed in May 2002. Figures for ODPM are unavailable for 2002–03. The ODPM does not hold separate information on expenditure on refreshments, however expenditure on catering which includes refreshments is held and the figures for these are as follows.

2003–04	192,271.22
2004–05	200,124.53
2005–06 to date	203,643.86

All expenditure is incurred in line with the appropriate guidance.

Emissions Targets

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will include emissions targets in the public service agreements his Department has with local and regional organisations. [44392]

Mr. Woolas: Local public service agreements are now negotiated with local authorities and their partners by Government offices as the 'reward element' of local area agreements (LAAs).

The LAA Outcomes Framework, published as part of the LAA Guidance Note in June, 2005, provides for targets to be negotiated relating to concentrations of air pollutants and to the energy efficiency/carbon performance of properties.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the relationship between the work of the Interdepartmental Taskforce on the Improvement of Energy Efficiency in Existing Buildings and the energy review. [45394]

Yvette Cooper: The recommendations of the review of the sustainability of Existing Buildings which, among other issues, is considering measures which could be taken to improve the energy efficiency of existing buildings, will be taken into account in the much wider energy review, as stated in the consultation document, "Our Energy Challenge: Securing clean, affordable energy for the long-term", that was issued on 23 January.

Energy Policy

David Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to ensure that the work of the interdepartmental review on energy use in existing buildings led by his Department is made available to the Minister of State for Energy to assist him with his review of energy policy. [44814]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 23 January 2006]: The review of the sustainability of existing buildings which, among other issues, is considering measures to improve the energy efficiency of buildings, is being steered by a project board of senior officials from several Government Departments including the Department of Trade and Industry.

The Energy Review consultation document, acknowledges the need to take account of a number of related exercises including this existing buildings review.

Single Regeneration Budget

Charles Hendry: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total expenditure on the single regeneration budget has been for each year since introduction in each local authority area. [46680]

Mr. Woolas: The Single Regeneration Budget (SRB) was allocated to regeneration partnerships and funding by local authority area is not collected centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. 1,027 SRB schemes were successful under the six rounds of the SRB including thematic, pan or sub-regional schemes that each embraced several local authority areas. £5.706 billion of SRB funding was allocated over the schemes' lifetime of up to seven years. Details of the schemes have been made available in the Library of the House. These include an indication of their location (except for the thematic or pan-regional schemes) and region and their lifetime funding.

Stonehenge

Robert Key: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost was to (a) Wiltshire county council and (b) Salisbury district council of preparatory work in connection with (i) the A303 Stonehenge Road Improvement Scheme and (ii) the Stonehenge Visitors Centre project to the end of July 2005. [45818]

Yvette Cooper: Wiltshire county council is unable to give an estimate of the total cost of its involvement in the future of the A303 through the Stonehenge World Heritage Site, although the major cost has been in staff time. However, it has identified that its specific legal costs in connection with the Public Inquiry over the Road Improvement Scheme were £16,550.

Salisbury district council estimates that in excess of £350,000 has been spent on the Stonehenge project. Approximately 90 per cent. of this figure is in respect of the Visitor Centre.

Thames Gateway Port

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list (a) formal and (b) informal committees considering aspects of the Thames Gateway Port transport infrastructure; what the (i) objectives and (ii) composition of each is; and whether a possible link to Canvey Island is part of the remit of any of these committees. [45717]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

There are no committees considering transport infrastructure for the proposed London Gateway port.

On wider Thames Gateway matters, the Thames Gateway Strategic Partnership is chaired by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning. It has within its remit the consideration of transport matters across the whole of the Thames Gateway.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Apprenticeships

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to extend apprenticeship schemes beyond the age of 25 years. [46082]

Phil Hope: The Department for Education and Skills has already changed the rules so that young people who start a Government-funded apprenticeship at any point up to their 25th birthday can complete it. Beyond that, the Department is currently trialling apprenticeships for adult entry in three sectors: engineering, construction and health and social care, and discussions are taking place to include the IT sector. These trials are due to complete in March 2006, although some programmes may take longer depending upon their starting date. We will decide in the light of these trials how the apprenticeship model can be adapted to the needs of older entrants to an occupation; and what—if any—extra public funding should be made available to support the costs of the learning.

Child Abuse

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the judgment in Re H and R on the standard of proof required in cases involving allegations of child abuse. [44659]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

In Re: H and R in 1996 Lord Nicholls of Birkenhead explained that the standard of proof required is that it is the balance of probabilities. In the judgment of Re: U and B in May 2004, given in the Court of Appeal by the past President of the Family Division Dame Elizabeth Butler-Sloss, Lord Justice Thorpe and Lord Justice Mantell, the standard of proof that applies in civil/family cases was rehearsed in some detail and confirmed as the approach explained by Lord Nicholls. Re: H and R should continue to be followed as before.

Child Care

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what visits abroad Ministers in her Department have made in relation to child care policy since 2001. [43672]

Bill Rammell: Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis information relating to Cabinet Ministers' visits overseas costing more than £500. Copies of the published lists for the years 2001 to 31 March 2005 are available in the Libraries of the House. The detailed information you have requested in respect of other Ministers is not collected centrally and to collect it would involve incurring disproportionate cost.

Ministerial travel is conducted in accordance with the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers".

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what targets she has set for (a) the establishment of children's trusts, (b) the use of home childcarers, (c) expanding the number of (i) neighbourhood nurseries and (ii) early excellence centres and (d) the use in schools of the extended schools programme; what assessment she has (A) made and (B) plans to make of each scheme; and what progress has been made towards meeting those targets. [43832]

Beverley Hughes: The Government's expectation is that most local authority areas will have a children's trust by April 2006, and all will by 2008. There is progress in all areas towards having children's trusts arrangements in place by 2008.

There is no target for the use of home childcarers. In April 2003, we introduced the Home Childcarers Scheme allowing Ofsted to approve registered childminders to provide care in parents' homes. 300 carers were approved under that scheme. A subsequent PSA target required us to introduce, by April 2005, a light-touch Childcare Approval Scheme. This new scheme was launched in December 2004 and became effective in April 2005. 1,339 carers have been approved under it. Our target for the Neighbourhood Nurseries Initiative was the creation of 45,000 new full-time daycare places for children under 5 in the 20 per cent. most disadvantaged areas by 2004. This was achieved. There are no plans to expand the programme. Our focus now is on the development of Sure Start children's centres, building on neighbourhood nurseries and other early years provision.

107 early excellence centres (EECs) were established and there are no plans to expand the programme. There were no targets for the development of EECs. We expect all EECs to develop into children's centres.

We expect all schools to be making a core offer of extended services including child care, 8am-6pm, all year round, by 2010, with a third of secondary schools, and half of primary schools, doing so by 2008. The vast majority of schools are currently providing some extended services, and all local authorities have received funding in the current financial year, 2005–06, to support the development of extended schools in their areas. The National Remodelling Team is monitoring progress through its work with local authorities.

There has been an evaluation of children's trusts in place since April 2004. It will be completed by the end of March 2007. Two interim reports have already been published and available at: www.everychildmatters.gov.uk/strategy/childrenstrustpathfinders/nationalevaluation/ whilst three practitioner focused reports will be published in May 2006.

The Childcare Approval Scheme is being run by Nestor Primecare Services Ltd., the approval body, under contract to the DfES. The scheme is being closely monitored as part of the contract management process, overseen by an Inter-departmental Implementation Board.

A comprehensive national evaluation of the neighbourhood nursery initiative began in August 2002, and will run until August 2006. The final evaluation report is due to be published towards the end of 2006.

The 29 pilot EECs were the subject of an evaluation study between 1997 and 2002. The final report of this study was published in November 2004.

The Department is implementing a comprehensive research and evaluation strategy for extended schools, including an evaluation of the impacts of full service extended schools. The findings of the evaluation of the first year of the full service extended schools, and a baseline survey of extended services in maintained schools were published in September 2005. We are collecting annual data from schools to show progress towards the extended school core offer targets published in the Ten Year Childcare Strategy.

Reports on the neighbourhood nurseries, early excellence centres and extended school research and evaluation published so far are available at: www.surestart.gov.uk/research.

Childminders

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes have taken place in the measurement of the number of childminders since 2001. [43671]

Beverley Hughes: From 1999 to 2003 the number of childminders and childminder places created were reported to the Department by local authorities.

Since March 2003 the Department has been able to use more reliable childminder and place data recorded by Ofsted.

Children's Commissioner for Children

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what was the cost of the Children's Commissioner for England in the last year for which figures are available. [45944]

Beverley Hughes: In March 2005 the Government appointed Professor Al Aynsley-Green as England's first Children's Commissioner. From this point, the Commissioner worked on a part-time basis until he formally took up his post on 1 July 2005. The total cost of the Children's Commissioner for England in financial year 2004/05 was £113,018. The Commissioner will prepare a statement of his accounts for the financial year 2005/06 which will be laid before Parliament once the Comptroller and Auditor General have examined and certified the statements.

Dedicated Choice Advisers

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the entitlement of access of the least well-off parents to the dedicated choice advisers referred to on page 8 of the White Paper, Higher Standards, Better Schools for All will be determined. [46435]

Jacqui Smith: We intend to publish guidance for local authorities on choice advice which will cover a range of issues including the role of the choice adviser, potential delivery models, and targeting the service. This guidance is currently in development and will be published shortly.

Dedicated Schools Grant

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) on what basis Wirral local education authority was allocated an average dedicated schools grant of £3,514 per pupil; [45857]

(2) on what basis the average Dedicated Schools Grant was £6,708 per pupil in the City of London. [45858]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 26 January 2006]: The calculation of the Dedicated Schools Grant (DSG) in 2006–07 and 2007–08 takes authorities' 2005–06 level of spending as the baseline, rather than their Schools Formula Spending Share (SFSS); it gives all authorities a minimum increase of 5 per cent. per pupil over the baseline in each of the next two years; and then distributes the remaining grant to reflect the Government's key priorities for education.

The Wirral's baseline spending in 2005–06 was £3,279 per pupil, which reflects its spending of 2 per cent. below SFSS. Given the 5 per cent. per pupil increase, in 2006–07 Wirral is receiving an additional £2.78 million to reflect the Government's key priorities for education, plus an additional £0.687 to help move its per pupil funding towards the level indicated by the funding formula. Its average guaranteed unit of funding in 2006–07 is therefore £3,514 per pupil. That gives the Wirral an indicative allocation of DSG in 2006–07 of £171.6 million.

In the City of London's case, its baseline spending in 2005–06 was £6,286 per pupil which reflects its spending of more than 75 per cent. in excess of SFSS in 2005–06. Given the 5 per cent. per pupil increase, plus an additional £27,000 to reflect the Government's key priorities for education, the City of London's average guaranteed unit of funding in 2006–07 is £6,708 per pupil. Its indicative allocation of DSG in 2006–07 is £1.7 million. Given that the City of London only has about 250 pupils, it is not possible to make meaningful comparisons between its unit costs and those of other authorities.

Departmental Expenditure

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the annual expenditure on vehicles has been for (a) her Department and (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which she is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [39997]

Bill Rammell: The annual expenditure on vehicles for the Department for Education and Skills in each of the last three years is as follows.

	Amount (£)
2002–03	263,000.00
2004–05	493,500.00

The increase in expenditure for the period 2003–04 was attributable to; The Department's continuation of the Private User Scheme (PUS), purchase of new vehicles and the number of vehicles over three years old with 60,000+ miles resulting in vehicles being less cost effective and costing more to run.

A similar expenditure for the period of 2004–05 saw the purchase of a number of new cars to replace older and less efficient vehicles within the fleet.

Planned expenditure for 2005–06 is £270,000.00.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will estimate the cost to her Department of sending Christmas cards in 2005. [46481]

Maria Eagle: The Department again sent electronic cards following the launch last year. A small number of printed cards were produced and sent via the governmental inter-departmental service or Royal Mail. No breakdown of the delivery methods is available which would enable an accurate assessment to be made.

All expenditure incurred in the purchase and dispatch of official Christmas cards is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in Government Accounting.

The cost of printing the Department's Christmas card this year was £2,324.

Printed Christmas cards are distributed to Ministers and senior officials on request. A central team was in place to avoid duplication of recipients.

Departmental Pensions Liability

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total pensions liability of the Department is. [39921]

Maria Eagle: The Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme is an unfunded multi-employer defined benefit scheme and individual departments' pension liabilities are not available. The Cabinet Office: Civil Superannuation Resource Accounts for 2004–05 showed that the total pension liability at 31 March 2005 was £84.1 billion. As a result of a change in the discount rate used for calculating pension liabilities with effect from 1 April 2005, the total pension liability at 1 April 2005 increased by £10.6 billion to £94.7 billion.

Departmental Targets

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what national target she has set for (a) improving children's (i) communication skills and (ii) social and emotional development, (b) schools' development of anti-bullying accreditation schemes, (c) placing of children with adopters within 12 months of the decision that this was in their best interests and (d) increasing the proportion of leaders of integrated early years education and childcare settings with a Level 4 or above qualification. [45548]

Beverley Hughes: The Sure Start Public Service Agreement (PSA1) covering (a) and (b) is to improve children's communication, personal social and emotional development so that by 2008 50 per cent. of children reach a good level of development at the end of the foundation stage, and reduce inequalities between the level of development achieved by children in the 20 per cent. most disadvantaged areas and the rest of England.

There is no national target for schools' development of anti-bullying accreditation schemes.

The target for placing children with adopters was by 2004–05 to increase to 95 per cent. the proportion of looked after children placed for adoption within 12 months of the decision that adoption is in the child's best interests, up from 81 per cent. in 2000–01, and maintain this level (95 per cent.) up to 2006, by locally applying the timescales in the national adoption standards, taking account of the individual child's needs.

No target has been set for increasing the proportion of leaders of integrated early years education and childcare settings with a level 4 or above qualification. However, proposals in the Children's Workforce Strategy envisage a graduate level early years' professional in every Sure Start Children's Centre by 2010 and in every full day care setting by 2015.

Departmental Website

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost of maintaining her main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46303]

Maria Eagle: The websites that the Department is responsible for are listed as follows, along with the number of visits to each for 2004 (the last whole year that stats are available for):

Website	Number of visits
www.dfes.gov.uk	10,859,230
www.teachernet.gov.uk	4,308,205
www.connexions-direct.com	1,388,251
www.surestart.gov.uk	1,050,171
www.aimhigher.ac.uk	932,165
www.parentcentre.gov.uk	881,819
www.governornet.co.uk	662,607
www.wavtolearn.co.uk	417,376
www.need2know.co.uk	274,571
www.skillsforemployers.gov.uk	119,324

Total number of visits: 20,893,719 (In the time given to answer this question, monthly breakdowns were not available).

The hosting cost of these sites was £1,235,500.

The Department currently has large numbers of sub-sites falling under the main sites listed in the response and these are developed by policy teams using their own budgets. It would therefore be a difficult and time-consuming task to co-ordinate across all policy directorates and communications teams (for campaign sites) to assess overall costs.

The Department is working towards consolidation of these sites (which run into hundreds) into a small number of sites which specialise in delivering information and services to a particular audience, (e.g. for those working in schools). As well as this the new technical infrastructure, currently in procurement stage, will provide a centralised Content Management System (CMS) which means that more costs will be centralised, which will deliver better value for money.

Education Provision (Growth Communities)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions she has had with (a) organisations and (b) Government Departments about changes in pupil numbers and provision of school places in communities in which the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to build additional houses; and if she will make a statement. [44452]

Jacqui Smith: The Government have announced, in the run-up to the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007, and in response to Kate Barker's review of housing supply, a cross-cutting review into supporting housing growth to effectively co-ordinate across Departments the strategic delivery of local and regional infrastructure necessary to support additional housing.

DfES are closely involved in the housing growth proposals, and working to translate forecasts into pupil numbers. Local authorities are responsible for planning school places in their areas and they take account of forecasts and proposed future housing developments as part of this process.

A DfES Minister will be nominated shortly to engage with the Minister for Communities and Local Government on the Thames Gateway.

Educational Attainment

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils achieved five or more A* to C grades at GCSE in each local education authority area, excluding candidates sitting examinations at independent schools in the last period for which figures are available. [45384]

Jacqui Smith: The figures requested, which were published on the Research & Statistics Gateway on the DfES website on 18 January 2006, are included in the following table:

[4] Local authority figures include all maintained schools and exclude independent schools, non-maintained special schools and independent special schools.

Failing Schools

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the 242 schools deemed at the start of January to be failing, which are referred to on page 15 of the White Paper, "Higher Standards, Better Schools for All". [46421]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested has been placed in the House Libraries.

Fire Sprinklers

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many responses to the consultation on 'Building Bulletin 100—Designing and Managing Against the Risk of Fires in Schools' were in favour (a) of the proposals in respect of the fitting of fire sprinklers in school buildings and (b) of strengthening the proposals. [46328]

Jacqui Smith: The first question in the consultation on Building Bulletin 100 asked whether respondents agreed with the proposal that risk assessment should be used as the basis for designers to make their choices, rather than following a purely prescriptive approach that may preclude many of those choices. There were a further 11 questions, of which two concerned sprinkler installations:

"Do you agree with the proposal that sprinkler systems should be installed if indicated by the risk assessment?"

"Do you agree that the guidance on sprinklers is adequate?"

The analysis of the responses is not yet complete, but should be finalised before the end of March.

Foundation Stage Profile

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many and what proportion of children scored (a) scale score six or more and (b) scale score eight or more in all assessments in the Foundation Stage profile; [45991]

(2) how many and what proportion of children scored (a) scale score six or more and (b) scale score eight or more in (i) mathematical development, (ii) communication, language and literacy and (iii) the mathematical development and communication language and literacy assessments combined in the Foundation Stage Profile. [45993]

Beverley Hughes: My Department will be releasing final statistics for the Foundation Stage Profile (FSP) 2005 in a Statistical First Release on 16 February 2006. These figures will be available on my Department's website http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/index.shtml.

I will write to the hon. Member and provide him with the information he has requested by the end of February.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether it is her policy that the child centred approach to learning as set out in the Foundation Stage should be applied to the reception year of primary school. [45992]

Jacqui Smith: The Foundation Stage is already applied to the reception year of primary schools. The Foundation Stage is a distinct phase of education focusing on the needs of children aged three to the end of the reception year of primary school, when some children will be almost five and others almost six.

Free Trade Goods

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps her Department is taking to encourage the purchase of free trade goods. [43081]

Jacqui Smith: Fair Trade products including tea, coffee, chocolate and biscuits are offered for sale in all DfES head office restaurants. We are currently in discussions with our catering supplier with a view to increasing the amount of Fair Trade products sold.

Grouping/Setting

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in how many subjects she envisages more grouping and setting referred to on page 10 of the White Paper, "Higher Standards, Better Schools for All". [46438]

Jacqui Smith: It is for schools to use their own professional judgment to decide which subjects to group or set pupils by ability. We will continue through the National Strategies and our Gifted and Talented programme to offer advice and guidance to schools on classroom practice so that they can make decisions about how to use pupil setting as part of their overall commitment to personalising and tailoring learning to meet the needs of all their pupils.

Head Teachers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to promote the recruitment of head teachers. [46407]

Jacqui Smith: We are doing more than ever before to provide the incentives, pay and professional development to attract and retain effective head teachers.

The top of the leadership group pay spine in England and Wales has risen by 35 per cent. since 1997 to £93,327 now, with nearly £100,000 available in inner London. Schools and LAs have greater flexibility to award recruitment and retention incentives and they can set a head teacher's salary above the top of the pay spine. Vacancy rates for head teachers are low—0.8 per cent. in 2005.

Through the National College for School Leadership (NCSL), we will continue to develop strong school leaders with the necessary skills to help us achieve our objective of raising standards for every pupil in every school. Since 2001, over 14,000 candidates have completed the National Professional Qualification for Headship, which prepares aspiring heads to take up headship posts in schools.

And we have also asked the NCSL to consider how it can help schools make more effective succession planning arrangements and to work with governor associations and other key partners, including local authorities, to develop advice to governors on recruitment, selection and succession planning.

Home Education

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many parents in Milton Keynes are educating their children at home. [45430]

Jacqui Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 23 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1915–916W.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many parents in Coventry, South are educating their children at home. [42783]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 19 January 2006]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1915W.

Independent Schools

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils aged 11 years in each local education authority transferred to independent secondary schools in each of the last 20 years for which figures are available from (a) local authority schools and (b) grant maintained schools. [46424]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of children of compulsory school age in each local education authority area attended independent schools in the last year for which figures are available. [46494]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is shown in the table.

Annual Schools' Census

Junior Schools

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the average amount of time taken by junior schools to complete the relevant application forms for local education authorities in order to hold (a) a nativity play and (b) other similar events in schools. [46041]

Jacqui Smith: If the forms in question were about health and safety, then we would recommend that local education authorities should not require schools to seek clearance from the authority for on-site events that involve no particularly hazardous activities. Schools can, and do, manage these themselves.

Languages

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the availability of teaching of each of the 20 languages most used in London. [39878]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not hold data centrally on languages spoken by schoolchildren in London. A survey undertaken in 2000 by Philip Baker for the School of Oriental and African Studies[1] indicated that there are over 300 languages spoken in London and that the 20 most common first languages are, in descending order of number of speakers, English, Bengali/Silheti, Panjabi, Gujerati, Hindi/Urdu, Turkish, Arabic, English based Creoles, Yoruba, Somali, Cantonese, Greek, Akan (Ashanti), Portuguese, French, Spanish, Tamil, Farsi, Italian and Vietnamese.

The medium of instruction in maintained schools is English and all pupils learning English as an additional language (EAL) should be supported to acquire English. The Government's 'Aiming High' strategy for raising achievement of pupils learning EAL advocates that schools should make use of pupils first language in the classroom, where appropriate, as a tool for learning alongside learning English.

[1] Baker. P and Eversley, J (eds) (2000) Multilingual Capital, London: Battlebridge

The Department does not hold data centrally on the provision of mother tongue teaching in London, however, it is known from local authority data, where available, that there is widespread provision for teaching community languages through supplementary schools. For example, supplementary schools in Croydon provide teaching in 23 languages and supplementary schools in Islington provide teaching in 30 languages. These schools are usually run by local communities and respond directly to local demand.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the Prime Minister's answer of 18 January 2006, Official Report, column 839, what definitions she uses of (a) aptitude and (b) academic ability in modern languages. [45351]

Jacqui Smith: 'Ability' is defined in statute by section 99(5)(b) of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 as 'either general ability or ability in any particular subject or subjects'. Paragraph 7.11 of the statutory School Admissions Code of Practice defines a pupil with aptitude as 'one who is identified as being able to benefit from teaching in a specific subject, or who demonstrates a particular capacity to succeed in that subject'.

Admission authorities of schools have been able to select up to 10 per cent. of their intake based upon applicant's aptitude in certain prescribed subjects, which includes modern foreign languages. We allow this limited flexibility so that pupils with a relevant aptitude can gain access to particular schools with relevant specialist provision where they might not otherwise have been able to do so.

Learning and Skills Councils (London)

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total budget of London's learning and skills councils was in each year since 2001; and how much was spent on (a) school sixth forms, (b) the further education sector, (c) work-based training for young people, (d) workforce development, (e) adult and community learning, (f) information and advice for adults, (g) education-business links and (h) administrative costs in each year. [46429]

Bill Rammell: I have overall responsibility for the LSC; however the operations of the LSC are managed and overseen by Mark Haysom, the LSC's chief executive. The Grant Letter and Priorities for Success sets the LSC budget for the year including a breakdown of school sixth forms, further education, work-based learning, and PCDL (ACL). Allocations within these overall categories to regional and local levels are a matter for the LSC. Mark Haysom will write to the hon. Gentleman with further information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

The following table shows the total spend by the Greater London Region between 2001–02 and 2004–05 taken from the LSC's published accounts. Note that the LSC did not have responsibility for the funding of school sixth forms in 2001–02.

	Greater London programme expenditure	Total programme expenditure
2001–02	843,690	5,133,291
2002–03	1,226,159	7,356,739
2003–04	1,446,923	8,569,725
2004–05	1,512,792	9,011,547

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to make London's learning and skills councils more accountable to the people who use their services as part of the Government's commitment to devolve decision-making to the lowest appropriate level. [46431]

Bill Rammell: The LSC is currently undergoing a radical restructuring exercise which will enable it to work even more effectively with local partners and stakeholders in identifying and responding to London's learning and skill needs. The existing local office structure will be replaced by a number of specialist local Partnership and Economic Development teams made up of experienced education and training professionals. They will work closely with local partners and stakeholders to ensure that properly funded education and training is available that meets the needs of learners and employers in the London area. These changes are in keeping with the Government's wider public sector reform agenda, which seeks to move responsibility for local delivery closer to the frontline. Each of the local LSC councils in London continue to include representatives from a wide range of local interests, including employers, local authorities and the voluntary and community sector.

The LSC's proposals are currently out to consultation with staff and unions until the end of January, and the final agreed changes will take effect from summer 2006. We will also want to consider in due course the outcomes of the current consultation on the powers and responsibilities of the Greater London Authority.

National Complaints Service

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the proposed powers of the National Complaints Service from Ofsted referred to on page 9 of the White Paper, "Higher Standards, Better Schools for All". [46447]

Jacqui Smith: Subject to the passage of legislation, we intend to give Ofsted the power to investigate complaints by parents about matters which fall within Ofsted's inspection remit. Ofsted will consider complaints which concern the work of a school as a whole, rather than individual pupils or staff, and will expect parents to have previously sought resolution at a local level. In pursuance of an investigation, the school and the local authority may be required to provide information to Ofsted, and the school may be required to arrange a meeting between parents and inspectors. Ofsted will determine, in the light of its investigation, whether further action is necessary. This may include bringing forward a scheduled school inspection or carrying out an inspection without notice.

National Remodelling Team

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the work of the National Remodelling Team. [46583]

Jacqui Smith: The National Remodelling Team (NRT), part of the Training and Development Agency for Schools (TDA), works with my Department and the Workforce Agreement Monitoring Group (WAMG) to support schools in implementing the provisions of the National Agreement on Raising Standards and Tackling Workload that was signed in January 2003 by the Government, employers and the majority of school work force unions.

The NRT has also been supporting the pilots of the extended schools programme and is now supporting the national roll-out.

National Training Programme

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the national training programme, referred to on page 10 of the White Paper, "Higher Standards, Better Schools for All", will be funded. [46439]

Jacqui Smith: Through our existing National Strategies Programme, we will be delivering a national training programme free of charge to schools, to train leading professionals to help develop personalised learning in schools.

In addition, we will be investing £565 million by 2007–08 to support personalisation in primary and secondary schools and a further £60 million in each of the next two years to provide effective one-to-one and small group tuition for the lowest attaining pupils in targeted schools.

Neighbourhood Nurseries

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which (a) private, (b) voluntary sector and (c) public sector organisations participated in the delivery of (i) Neighbourhood Nurseries, (ii) the extended schools programme, (iii) children's trusts and (iv) early excellence centres in each year for which information is available. [43934]

Beverley Hughes: The Department works closely with all sectors and maintains strong links with local authorities, schools, Primary Care Trusts, and other public sector bodies, as well as a wide range of private and voluntary organisations. This enables us to establish and sustain high quality provision that meets children's needs, and offers parents real choice and diversity. We also encourage organisations from different sectors to act together, pooling resources and expertise.

Data are not available on the private, voluntary and public sector organisations that have been involved in the delivery of Neighbourhood Nurseries, the extended schools programme, children's trusts and Early Excellence Centres.

New School Providers

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills who will be authorised to approve or reject the establishment of new schools as proposed in the White Paper, "Higher Standards, Better Schools for All". [46443]

Jacqui Smith: We propose that the decision-maker for proposals for new schools should normally be the local authority in its modernised role as the commissioner, rather than direct provider, of education. There will however be a range of circumstances in which proposals may be referred to schools adjudicator for decision.

North Somerset

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will take steps to increase the average funding per schoolchild in North Somerset to the average level of funding in (a) the West Country and (b) England. [46173]

Jacqui Smith: The level of funding per pupil received through the dedicated schools grant (DSG) reflects the characteristics of children in each authority: authorities receive more funding if they have higher numbers of children living in deprived circumstances. That is because pupils from more deprived backgrounds are likely to have additional educational needs, and to require additional help if they are to have an equal chance to succeed. North Somerset's average level of funding per pupil mainly reflects the authority's lower than average level of deprivation. The Government will review the operation of a number of aspects of the new school funding arrangements, including the DSG distribution, but in doing so it will continue to aim to give all pupils an equal opportunity in life.

One-to-One Tuition

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of pupils she estimates will be eligible for targeted one-to-one tuition in (a) English and (b) mathematics; and what estimate she has made of the cost of the proposed provision. [46445]

Jacqui Smith: Our recent White Paper—Higher Standards, Better Schools for All—sets out this Government's determination to ensure every child masters the basics of literacy and numeracy. There will be an extra investment of £565 million by 2007–08 to support personalisation in primary and secondary schools, focusing particularly on helping children who have fallen behind in English and mathematics. A further £60 million will be available in each of the next two years to provide effective one-to-one and small group tuition for the lowest attaining pupils in targeted schools.

It will be for each school, with support from the National Strategies, School Improvement Partners and other local authority school improvement staff, to decide the type and pattern of provision they need to meet the learning needs of their pupils, and how to make the best use of small group and one-to-one tuition.

Overcrowded Housing

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the impact of overcrowded housing conditions on the educational prospects of children. [42915]

Maria Eagle: A research review commissioned by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in 2003 found some indication that there is a relationship between overcrowding and children's educational attainment, and between overcrowding and children's social and emotional development. However, the research evidence on the effects of overcrowding on attainment is limited. It is also hard to separate any direct effect of overcrowding from the effect of other associated factors, such as poverty and degree of parental involvement in education. Current evidence suggests that any direct effect of overcrowding on attainment is likely to be small.

Parent Councils

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will prescribe the powers of parent councils in (a) trust schools and (b) non-trust schools. [46448]

Jacqui Smith: We will require foundation schools with a foundation (trust schools), where the trust appoints the majority of governors, to establish a parent council. Parent councils will have a consultative and advisory role. We will encourage other schools to have a parent council but will not require them to do so.

Parenting Contracts/Orders

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many parenting (a) contracts and (b) orders have been applied in schools in each of the last five years. [46626]

Jacqui Smith: My Department started to collect data regarding parenting contracts and parenting orders (in cases of non-attendance and exclusions from school) from September 2004. The data are provided at local authority level.

Between September 2004 and 31 July 2005 local authorities in England reported that 6,135 education-related parenting contracts were agreed with parents and 427 education-related parenting orders were imposed by the courts. Data for autumn 2005 will be published in March 2006.

Pension Contributions

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost was of pension contributions incurred by (a) her Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which she is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [39999]

Maria Eagle: The actual cost of the employer pension contributions incurred by the Department for Education and Skills and their Non-Departmental Public Bodies for the last three financial years is set out in the following table:

	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
DfES (SE, NW, S.Yorks)	15,573,000	17,497,000	17,535,000
Adult Learning Inspectorate (E. Mids)	1,418,000	1,610,000	1,646,000
Higher Education Funding Council for England (SW)	906,000	1,016,000	1,073,000
Learning and Skills Council (E.Mids)	15,744,000	16,109,000	16,413,000

	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Partnership for Schools (SE)	—	—	81,000
Qualification and Curriculum Agency (SE)	2,213,000	2,337,000	2,506,000
Training and Development Agency For Schools (SE)	701,000	911,000	1,020,000
Sector Skills Development Agency (S.Yorks)	90,000	267,000	348,000
General Teaching Council (E. Mids)	—	—	538,000

For 2005–06, employers' contributions are payable to the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) at one of four rates in the ranges 16.2 per cent. to 24.6 per cent. of pensionable pay, based on salary bands. The Scheme Actuary reviews employer contributions every four years following a full scheme valuation; last carried out as at 31 March 2003. The contribution rates reflect the cost of benefits as they accrue (net of employee contributions), not the costs as they are actually incurred, and reflect past experience of the scheme.

The planned estimated costs for 2005–06 are:

	Amount (£)
DfES	18,549,000
All	2,212,000
HEFCE	1,566,000
LSC	22,525,000
P4S	104,000
QCA	4,000,000
TDA	1,271,000
SSDA	358,000
GTC	692,000

Post-16 Education

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the (a) further and (b) higher education participation rate was in each ward in each local authority area, broken down by region, for the last year for which figures are available: [46067]

(2) what the staying-on rates were for 16-year-olds in full-time education in each local authority area in 2005. [46071]

Bill Rammell: Participation rates, as a percentage of the local population are not available at ward level. Participation rates for those aged 16 and 17, in schools, FE colleges, LSC funded work-based learning and part-time education are available for local education authorities (LEAs) in England. The latest available figures are for 2003 and these were published in the Statistical First Release "Participation in education and training by 16 and 17-year-olds in each local area in England"—SFR11/2005 on 31 March 2005.

The publication is accessible on the DfES website via the link, http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000568/index.shtml.

LEA detail is available through the link: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000568/SFR11-2005tables_lea.xls.

Participation rates for young people in higher education are available for LEAs and for parliamentary constituencies in England, Wales and Scotland. The latest available figures are for 2000 and were released alongside the report "Young Participation in Higher Education" by HEFCE in January 2005.

The publication is accessible on the HEFCE website via the link, http://www.hefce.ac.uk/pubs/hefce/2005/05_03/.

LEA detail is available through the link, http://www.hefce.ac.uk/widen/polar/extra/lea/.

Primary Schools

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on subsidies for primary schools in the Bournemouth area for daily school milk. [44844]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

The EU funds a scheme which subsidises the provision of milk to primary and nursery schools. In England the Government supplements the EU subsidy for primary schools by payment of an annual maximum of £1.5 million in national aid. Participation in the scheme, which is administered by the Rural Payments Agency, is entirely a matter for schools or local education authorities. Bournemouth Borough Council is on the Agency's register of subsidy claimants.

Protection of Children Act

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many checks against the Protection of Children Act list were made in the last year for which figures are available; and what the average time taken to respond to each check was in the last period for which figures are available. [44897]

Andy Burnham: I have been asked to reply.

The Criminal Records Bureau's Standard and Enhanced Disclosures will include a check against the Protection of Children Act (POCA) list where this is requested on the application form. The total number of Disclosures issued in 2005 containing a check against the POCA list was 2,005,205. There are no figures available to determine the average time taken to process a POCA check because the check forms part of the overall internal CRB Disclosure process and figures are not collated centrally.

Pupil Referral Units

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many places have been provided in off-site pupil referral units in each of the last five years. [46440]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not collect data on the number of places that pupil referral units (PRUs) have available. However, we collect data on the number of pupils who were being educated in PRUs at the time of the annual school census. The table sets out the number of pupils who were attending PRUs only at the time of the census, as well as those who were attending both a PRU and another educational institution for their education.

	Number of pupils attending PRUs only	Number of pupils attending a PRU and another institution
2001	9,290	4,990
2002	9,960	4,970
2003	12,010	5,520
2004	13,040	7,290
2005	14,470	8,010

Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

School Admissions

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many and what percentage of secondary school places were allocated at age 11 years on the basis of aptitude tests in each of the last 20 years for which figures are available in (a) local authority schools and (b) grant maintained schools; [46422]

(2) how many secondary school places in each London borough were allocated at age 11 years on the basis of aptitude tests in each of the last 20 years for which figures are available in (a) local authority schools and (b) grant maintained schools. [46423]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is not collected centrally.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the schools and academies that use banding in their admissions policies. [46436]

Jacqui Smith: Until 1998, admission authorities for schools were not required to seek approval of statutory proposals to introduce banding arrangements. Therefore, we have no data on the number of maintained schools that introduced banding pre-1998, and who continue to operate it. Since 1998, the following 13 maintained schools have introduced banding to their admission policies:

Kingsthorpe Community College
Duston Upper School
Trinity School
Western Favell Upper School
Lings School
Northampton School for Girls
Mereway Upper College
Kings College
The Central Technology College
Holland Park School
Northolt High School
Hull Trinity House School
Cardinal Pole Roman Catholic School

At present, 10 academies include banding in their admission policies. These are:

The Business Academy Bexley
The City of London Academy (Southwark)
The Academy at Peckham
Walsall Academy
Mossbourne
Haberdashers' Aske's Knights Academy
Haberdashers' Aske's Hatcham College Academy
Dixons City Academy
The Macmillan Academy
Unity City Academy

School Leavers

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils left secondary school with no qualifications in each London borough in each year since 1997. [40808]

Jacqui Smith: The figures requested are included in the following table.

School Maintenance

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much public funding has been spent on (a) repairing and (b) rebuilding schools in the Ruislip-Northwood constituency in each year since 1992. [45842]

Jacqui Smith: Capital allocations to local authorities and schools are higher than ever before. In 2005–06 they are £5.5 billion and they are planned to rise to £6.3 billion in 2007–08, an increase from £683 million in 1996–97.

Central records on capital expenditure are held from 1996–97. Allocations are made directly to local authorities and schools and not at constituency level. Capital allocations made to Hillingdon local authority and its schools since 1997 are set out in the following table:

	£ million
1996–97	3.9
1997–98	2.8
1998–99	23.1
1999–2000	5.5
2000–01	10.9
2001–02	8.7
2002–03	25.6
2003–04	14.8
2004–05	18.9
2005–06	12.3

Note:
1998–99 and 2002–03 figures include Private Finance Initiative credits of £18.4 million and £14.6 million respectively.

We expect local authorities and schools to take decisions locally on allocating funds on school repairs and rebuilding schools in accordance with their local asset management plan. Accordingly, records of these categories of capital expenditure are not held centrally.

School Staff (Checks)

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how long foreign nationals may work as teachers in a school before having to register with the General Teaching Council. [44738]

Jacqui Smith: Overseas trained teachers can teach in England for up to four years without Qualified Teacher Status (QTS). If they wish to continue to work in maintained schools for longer than four years they must gain QTS via the appropriate TDA approved route and register with the General Teaching Council (GTC).

Directive 89/48EEC facilitates the free movement of any national of an EEA member state (MS) wishing to pursue a regulated profession in a host MS. Therefore a migrant teacher with the relevant qualification is given automatic recognition under the directive and they are awarded Qualified Teacher Status (QTS) following an application to the GTC. Again, once they have gained QTS they will have to register with the GTC to teach in a maintained school.

School Transport

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will ask the Children's Commissioner to undertake a review of local authority tendering processes for school transport to ensure vulnerable children are protected. [45172]

Jacqui Smith: The Department for Education and Skills advises that employers should carry out criminal record checks on anyone working with children, and is actively considering whether more guidance is needed in relation to child protection and school transport. At the moment, we have no plans to involve the Children's Commissioner.

The Children's Commissioner is independent of Government and free to look at any issue he considers relevant in promoting awareness of the views and interests of children. If the Secretary of State asks the Children's Commissioner to look at a particular matter, unless it involves holding an enquiry into the case of an individual child, he is free to decline.

Schools (Extended Hours)

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools offer extended hours from 8 am to 6 pm; and if she will make a statement. [41302]

Beverley Hughes: Many schools are open before and after normal schools hours offering child care and study support type activities. We know, through a baseline survey of extended services in schools published in September 2005 that 40 per cent. of primary schools and 61 per cent. of secondary schools are providing some before school child care or activities, and that 87 per cent. of primary schools and 95 per cent. of secondary schools are providing some after school child care or activities, though only a small number, 2 per cent. of primary schools and 0.5 per cent. of secondary schools, provided access to the 8 am to 6 pm child care all year round.

We have committed £840 million to developing extended services, including high quality 8 am to 6 pm all year round child care, study support, and before and after school clubs so that they are accessible through all our schools by 2010. We have also appointed the National Remodelling Team to provide support to schools and local authorities in developing extended services. Good progress is being made with 4,400 schools, thus far, indicating their willingness to work on developing extended services.

Schools Finance

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the level was of local authority spending on education (a) in total and (b) per student in Newcastle-upon-Tyne in (i) 2004–05 and (ii) 2005–06; what the dedicated schools grant proposed (A) in total and (B) per student in Newcastle-upon-Tyne is for 2006–07; and what the cash spending increase is (1) in total and (2) per pupil between 2005–06 and 2006–07. [44597]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 24 January 2006]: Total education spending by Newcastle-Upon-Tyne local authority in 2004–05 was £185 million, including spending on provision outside schools. The Department is currently working on figures for spending on school provision for 2004–05 that are comparable with the Dedicated Schools Grant, on both a cash and per pupil basis, and will place them in the Library as soon as they are available.

The Dedicated Schools Grant 2005–06 baseline per pupil for Newcastle-Upon-Tyne is £3,390. In 2006–07 the guaranteed per pupil unit of funding is £3,640, an increase of 7.3 per cent. The total DSG allocation will not be finalised until May 2006 when the January 2006 pupil figures are finalised. In addition, while authorities must apply the whole of their allocation of DSG to their Schools Budget, they are free to add to it from their own resources. Final figures for total budgeted expenditure per pupil for 2006–07 may therefore be higher than the authority's allocation of DSG per pupil for that year.

Shropshire

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the level of direct support grant allocated to those Shropshire schools with deficits for the next financial year. [46272]

Jacqui Smith: The Department for Education and Skills pays dedicated schools grant (DSG) to local authorities, to provide for those items that are included in each local authority's schools budget, which consists of the delegated budgets allocated to individual schools, and a budget for other provision for pupils which local authorities fund centrally. Each local authority then decides, in consultation with its Schools Forum, on the distribution of funding between its schools. The national formula for distribution of DSG does not take account of the level of deficit at an authority's schools and, normally, local authority formulae for distributing funding do not do so either. However, it is open to an authority to distribute additional funding to a school which is in financial difficulties. Where a school is in deficit, it should agree a plan with its local authority to eliminate the deficit over a three-year period.

Skills for Life

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much the Government have allocated to the Skills for Life campaign in each year since its inception; and if she will make a statement. [46315]

Phil Hope: I refer the hon. Member to table 13 of the NAO's report "Skills for Life: Improving adult literacy and numeracy", 15 December 2004, which sets out estimated actual spend on Skills for Life from 2000–01. Copies of this report have been placed in the House Libraries. Confirmed spend for 2004/05 is not yet available.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will increase funding (a) for the skills strategy and (b) to assist those young people who do not have adequate skills in communication, numeracy and literacy. [46081]

Jacqui Smith: The Skills for Life Strategy to address adult literacy, language and numeracy skills, which forms part of the wider Skills Strategy, covers all young people and adults aged 16 and above. Therefore young people aged 16–19, who for whatever reason, have not gained the literacy and numeracy skills they need for life and work, are included in the strategy. Around 39 per cent. of Skills for Life learners are 16–18 year olds. Since 2001, the Government have invested £3.7 billion to develop an infrastructure, put in place standards, curriculum and qualifications and help millions of young people and adults to improve their skills.

As part of the forthcoming comprehensive Spending Review, the Department is actively considering the future resource needs to meet the ambitious Skills for Life aims and the objectives of the wider Skills Strategy.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many cases have been referred to the academies special educational needs dispute resolution service; and from which academies. [45392]

Jacqui Smith: The Academies Special Educational Needs Dispute Resolution Service is an independent service, which Academy Principals can choose to access. As such, no cases are referred to the service, and as an independent resource, information on which academies have called on it is not held centrally.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what budget she has allocated for the academies special educational needs dispute resolution service; for what period of time; and if she will make a statement. [45393]

Jacqui Smith: The Academies SEN Dispute Resolution Service has a budget of £81,500 for the period 1 December 2004 to 30 November 2006. The Academies SEN Dispute Resolution Service was introduced to facilitate timely decisions made at local level about the naming of an Academy in a child's statement of SEN.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on the provision of special needs education in each local authority area (a) in real terms and (b) at today's prices in each of the last 20 years. [46073]

Jacqui Smith: The available information has been placed in the House Libraries. We do not have comparable data prior to 2000–01.

Sure Start

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total Sure Start budget was in each year since its inception; and what the projected budget is in each of the next three years. [46074]

Beverley Hughes: Details of actual and planned expenditure on Sure Start, child care and nursery education from 1999–2000 to 2007–08 are published in Table 12.2 of the Department for Education and Skills' Departmental Report (Cm 6522). To reflect the increasing integration of services for young children and families, from 2003–04 funding for child care and nursery education was merged into Sure Start:

£ million

Teachers

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teaching posts were vacant in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Milton Keynes in each year since 1997; and what the average vacancy rate for local education authorities in England was in each year. [45428]

Jacqui Smith: The following table provides the number of full-time teacher vacancies in maintained nursery, primary, and secondary schools in Milton Keynes local authority and vacancy rates for Milton Keynes and England in each January since 1997.

Milton Keynes local authority was created from within the former Buckinghamshire local authority on 1 April 1997. Therefore, no figures are available for January 1997.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers of (a) Australian, (b) New Zealand, (c) South African, (d) Malawian, (e) Ghanaian, (f) Namibian, (g) Kenyan and (h) Nigerian nationality are working in schools in the UK. [45543]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what financial support her Department has offered to trainee teachers since 1997. [45890]

Jacqui Smith: Since September 2000, we have provided £6,000 bursaries to PGCE trainee teachers in a range of priority subjects. From September 2005, the bursary for mathematics and science trainees rose to £7,000, and from September 2006 it will increase to £9,000 for all priority subject trainees.

We have provided Golden Helios to those who go on to teach priority subjects since 1998 when £5,000 Golden Helios were introduced for postgraduate trainees in mathematics and science. New style £4,000 Golden Helios, paid after induction is completed, were introduced in 2000/01 for those who trained and teach priority subjects, maths, science, modern languages and technology. For those training in maths and science from September 2005, Golden Helios increased to £5,000. In June 2005, I announced Golden Helios from 2006/07 of £5,000 for maths and science trainees and £2,500 for other priority subjects, including extending Golden Hello payments to trainees in RE and Music.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to reduce the level of violent incidents against teachers. [45893]

Jacqui Smith: The great majority of schools are safe and orderly places, but we are determined to reduce the risk of violence to an absolute minimum. To achieve that we are:

legislating to give heads, teachers and other school staff a clear statutory power to discipline pupils, to reaffirm their statutory right to use reasonable force in certain circumstances and to give them a new power to search pupils for weapons; developing specific violence reduction advice and training, in co-operation with associations representing heads and other school staff.

In addition we have:

given every secondary school access to high-quality behaviour management training materials and expert advice from behaviour management consultants;

funded extra support for schools facing the greatest challenges through our Excellence in Cities and Behaviour Improvement Programmes; provided £120 million for school security improvements since 1997;

given schools a legal toolkit on how to ban aggressive parents from the site and have them removed and prosecuted if they flout the ban; and helped to establish over 400 Safer Schools Partnerships that base police officers in schools.

Also, we are:

giving every primary school access to high-quality training and curriculum materials for developing pupils' social, emotional and behavioural skills and developing similar materials for secondary schools.

The Department has confirmed that it is committed to backing head teachers' authority when pupils' behaviour warrants exclusion. We have made clear that heads can permanently exclude pupils who are very disruptive or violent even where this is a first or 'one off' offence. Guidance for exclusion appeal panels makes clear that an exclusion should not normally be overturned in a range of circumstances, including where there has been violence or the threat of violence. For less extreme offences head teachers may exclude pupils for a fixed period or may impose detention.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers in maintained schools in England have left the profession in each year since 1998. [46444]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the number of teachers leaving service is published on the department's website at the following URL:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/VOL/v000633/index.shtml

Table C1c refers. They are also available in the House of Commons Library.

Although the numbers of teachers leaving service has risen since 1998 the number of new entrants has shown a greater increase. As a result the number of teachers in service has risen continually since 1998 and the full-time equivalent number of teachers in service is now 32,700 higher than in 1997. Between 2004 and 2005 the increase was 4,200. Teacher numbers are now at their highest level since 1981.

The numbers of early retirements reduced in 1998–99 following changes in the Teachers' Pensions Regulations and this is reflected in the table.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) full-time teachers and (b) teaching assistants were employed in the Shropshire local education authority area in each year since 1997. [44975]

Jacqui Smith: The following table provides the number of full-time regular teachers and the full-time equivalent number of teaching assistants employed in Shropshire local authority in each January since 1997. Teaching assistant data can only be provided on a FTE basis. The FTE of regular teachers has been provided for consistency.

Telford and Wrekin local authority was created from within the former Shropshire local authority on 1 April 1998. Figures have been provided for this authority for comparison purposes.

Truancy

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether her proposed fines for parents of unsupervised children during school hours will apply to parents in receipt of income support and jobseeker's allowance. [46442]

Jacqui Smith: Yes. The proposed offence will require the parents of pupils who have been excluded from school to ensure that their child is not in a public place during normal school hours without reasonable justification during the first five days of exclusion.

Failure to do so could result in a penalty notice. Failure to pay the penalty will result in prosecution which could lead to a fine of up to £1,000. Courts must take ability to pay into account in setting the level of any fine.

University Places

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the likely effects of the introduction of top-up fees on the level of applications for university admissions in (a) 2005–06 and (b) 2006–07; and if she will make a statement. [41450]

Bill Rammell: Latest figures published by Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) show that accepted applicants from England to full-time undergraduate courses rose by 9 per cent. in 2005/06. This was a larger than usual increase. We might therefore expect a slight fall in application numbers for the 2006 entry and then a return to a long-term upward trend, as experienced in 1997 and 1998 when the last major change to student support arrangements was introduced.

Latest figures for 2006/07, covering students who applied by mid-October to Oxbridge or to medical and dentistry courses, show that applicants from the UK were down by 2 per cent. However, these are early figures and only give a partial picture. The first major milestone in the application cycle is mid-January, which is the advisory closing date for applications from UK domiciled students. Figures for the number of students who had applied by this point will be published by UCAS in mid-February, and these will give a more reliable indication of trends.

Year 12 Pupils

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of year 12 pupils left school before the end of the academic year in the latest year for which figures are available. [46498]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Young Parents (Education)

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what national target she has set for increasing the number of (a) pregnant teenagers and (b) parents aged 16-to-18 years in learning. [45524]

Phil Hope: The teenage pregnancy strategy includes a target—shared with the Connexions service—to increase the proportion of teenage mothers aged 16-to-19 in education, employment or training (EET) to 60 per cent. by 2010.

Youth Clubs

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will estimate how many youth clubs were available for young people in (a) the constituency of Ruislip-Northwood, (b) the London borough of Hillingdon, (c) Greater London and (d) England in each of the last 10 years. [46356]

Maria Eagle: Youth clubs are delivered locally by local authority youth services and national and local voluntary youth organisations. Information is not held centrally on the number of youth clubs run by each individual local authority.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Artists Resale Levy

Ms Gisela Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1760W, on the artists' resale levy, what independent economic research is referred to; and what aspects of this research differ from previous research on this subject. [46123]

Barry Gardiner: The economic research referred to is the 'Scoping Study: Artist's Resale Right' published on the Patent Office website. This was an independent study commissioned to consider the impact of resale right on a range of parties. It considered the number of sales affected, the number of UK artists likely to benefit from resale right and the costs of administering the right. This study was based on the most recent figures available and was able to take in a wider range of data than had previously been possible. The authors of this study spoke to representatives of both the art market and the artists.

Centre for Ecology and Hydrology

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) staff and (b) students were employed at the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology stations in each year since 1996; and if he will make a statement. [43894]

Barry Gardiner: The Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) is wholly owned by the Natural Environment Research Council (NERC). NERC science budget allocation has doubled since 1997 to £334 million for this year, demonstrating our commitment to maintaining the quality of environmental research in the UK. NERC is currently consulting widely with stakeholders on proposals on how best CEH can contribute on a sustainable basis to this. I have asked the Chief Executive of NERC to write to my hon. Friend with details of staff and student numbers at CEH.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what areas of scientific research will be (a) reduced and (b) discontinued following the proposed Centre for Ecology and Hydrology closures. [44852]

Barry Gardiner: The Natural Environment Research Council (NERC) science budget allocation has doubled since 1997 to £334 million for this year, demonstrating our commitment to maintaining the quality of environmental research in the UK. NERC has published a business plan for the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) for consultation. This is available at http://www.nerc.ac.uk/consult/ceh/ceh-businessplan.pdf It contains details of the proposals for the future of CEH, which reflect NERC's consideration of its scientific priorities, and how best CEH can contribute to these on a sustainable basis.

Under the proposed new structure, CEH would continue to deliver its current six science programmes. Final decisions on specific areas of research that would be reduced or discontinued await the outcome of the public and staff consultation processes and subsequent decision by NERC Council.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) domestic awards have been won, (b) international science awards have been won and (c) papers have been published in Nature by scientists working at the laboratories which will be closed under the proposed restructuring of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology. [42555]

Alan Johnson: It will take some time for the Natural Environmental Research Council to collate this data, and I have asked the chief executive of NERC to write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many endangered species in the UK the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology has been credited with saving from extinction. [44853]

Barry Gardiner: The Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) carries out research on, and monitoring of, various aspects of the natural environment, including endangered species. The research findings are used by Government Departments and others in forming policy and taking action, including on endangered species.

Research by CEH or its precursor organisations has contributed to the development of species action plans (SAPs) for at least six plant species, and improved understanding of the lifecycle requirements of, or the impact of human activities on, several vulnerable or threatened animal species including 15 butterfly species, two fish species, the otter, smooth snake, peregrine, sparrowhawk, golden-eagle, capercaillie, black grouse, Scottish crossbill and bullfinch.

The CEH business plan (www.nerc.ac.uk/consult/ceh/businessplan.asp) indicates that research in biodiversity (which includes these areas of research) would be expected to continue following the proposed restructuring.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many environmental research projects Government Departments and agencies have commissioned the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology to undertake in each year since 1997; [44862]

(2) how much funding the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology received in each year since 1997; and what the proposed funding totals are for the next five years. [44863]

Barry Gardiner: The Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) is wholly owned by the Natural Environment Research Council (NERC). The science budget allocation to NERC has doubled since 1997, demonstrating our commitment to maintaining the quality of environmental research in the UK. NERC is currently consulting widely with stakeholders on proposals on how best CEH can contribute on a sustainable basis to this.

NERC has been asked to collate data on projects commissioned at CEH from Government Departments and agencies, and on funding of CEH. I shall ask the chief executive of NERC to write to the hon. Member on these points.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact which the proposed Centre for Ecology and Hydrology closures will have on schools, colleges and universities with which it has educational and training links. [44864]

Barry Gardiner: The Government provide funding to the Natural Environment Research Council (NERC) to support research and related postgraduate training in environmental sciences in the UK. NERC has published a business plan for the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) for consultation. This proposed plan used the output from a strategic review which included information concerning links with schools, colleges and universities. In particular, collaborative research links with universities were one of many factors analysed to inform the proposed retained-site locations.

Although the proposed closure of sites would inevitably affect some local links, particularly with schools, CEH and NERC would continue to support educational outreach activities and interaction with academic and other partners.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research projects commissioned by his Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [33001]

Alan Johnson: A trawl of DTI Directorates and its Agencies has identified some 50 research projects. These are being collated into a table and I will write to the hon. Member with the details very shortly and place copies of my letter in the Libraries of both Houses. Published reports are listed on the Department's website http://www.dti.gov.uk/publications/.

Electricity Generation

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research has been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by the Department into the potential for using waste heat from the chemical industry to produce electricity. [36984]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has commissioned no specific research. However, the Carbon Trust has launched Project Bolt to examine the potential for the commercialisation of projects linking providers and purchasers of waste heat.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to ensure that new EU rules on coal-fired power stations do not lead to a fall in electricity generated from coal. [45699]

Malcolm Wicks: In consultation with industry and with their support, we have done everything possible to ensure that coal fired power stations have been given that maximum degree of flexibility in how they meet EU regulations. For example, the Government have been successful in securing Commission agreement to our proposed implementation of the large combustion plants directive, thereby ensuring that coal-fired power stations which opt in to compliance with the LCPD and invest in flue gas desulphurisation are not subject to an absolute cap on the amount of electricity they generate.

It is, however, for the owners of coal-fired power stations to decide whether to opt in and make the investment, and how much electricity to generate from those stations.

Energy Imports

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much (a) coal and (b) gas was imported during the last year for which figures are available, broken down by country of origin. [46823]

Malcolm Wicks: Imports of coal and other solid fuels by country of origin during 2004 are shown in the table. In the same year 95,363GWh of gas were imported from Norway and 37,670GWh were imported via the Zeebrugge to Bacton interconnector. It is not possible to identify where gas imported through the interconnector was physically sourced.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the peak import rate of gas into the United Kingdom via the Bacton Interconnector has been to date in winter 2005–06; and what the average rate was for the 10 highest days. [46855]

Malcolm Wicks: In the period 1 October 2005 to 24 January 2006, the highest daily import of natural gas through the Bacton-Zeebrugge Interconnector was 379 GWh; this occurred on 9 January. The average rate for the ten highest consecutive days was 310 GWh per day (359 GWh per day based on absolute days).

EU Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which other EU countries have not yet implemented the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [42295]

Malcolm Wicks: Currently, I understand that Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Poland and Spain have not yet fully implemented the requirements of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive.

Food Retail Sector

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what policies his Department has put in place to promote and support small businesses in the food retail sector. [41427]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

Defra provides a wide range of support for small businesses in the food sector, including food retail. For example, in 2004–05, the Department provided an additional £2 million to the Business Link Network to support projects designed to look at different approaches to increase the uptake of advice to small businesses in economically underperforming rural areas. The Department supports the retention of shops in small settlements. In line with this, the Government have assisted local services by extending mandatory rate relief at 50 per cent. to include sole village public houses, petrol stations and village food shops under the village shop scheme. Planning guidance has also been provided to local authorities to adopt a positive approach to planning proposals designed to improve the viability, accessibility or community value of existing services and facilities such as village shops. The Department also provides a range of trade development, consumer awareness and business competitiveness initiatives, as well as funding under various grant schemes, to regional and local food businesses, including assisting small producers to gain access to markets. The Department also currently devotes just under £4 million per year on schemes to encourages innovation in the food sector and pays particular attention to dissemination of research and development results to small and medium sized food and drink companies through, for example, a network of Regional Technology Transfer Centres.

Gas Supply

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to his answer of 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 2328W, on gas supply, whether the planned investment in liquid natural gas import projects includes a facility on Canvey Island; and if he will make a statement. [45683]

Malcolm Wicks: Development of import infrastructure is a commercial matter for market participants. Calor Gas Ltd. submitted planning applications in January 2006 to Castle Point borough council for conversion of the existing LPG (liquid petroleum gas) terminal to a LNG (liquefied natural gas) terminal on Canvey Island. Further details can be found at the website: http://www.canveylng.co.uk/.

Green Ministers

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what work his Department's Green Minister has undertaken during the last 12 months in an official capacity in that role. [16238]

Malcolm Wicks: Following the general election in May, the Cabinet Sub-Committee of Green Ministers (ENV(G)) was replaced by the Ministerial Sub-Committee on Sustainable Development in Government (EE(SD)) whose members are departmental Sustainable Development Ministers.

As the Minister of State for Energy, I was appointed as our departmental Sustainable Development Minister in June 2005. In July, I attended a breakfast seminar for Sustainable Development Ministers to discuss the sustainable development strategy and Ministers role in delivering it.

Manufacturing Jobs

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many manufacturing jobs have been lost in Beverley and Holderness in each year since 1997. [39251]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 9 January 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about manufacturing jobs in Beverley and Holderness. I am replying in her absence. (39251)

While statistics of new jobs created are not available explicitly, statistics from surveys enable comparisons to be made of net changes in numbers of jobs from year to year.

The attached table shows the information requested, relating to net change in manufacturing jobs in Beverley and Holderness, from 1997 to 2004; the latest year for which information is available.

These estimates are from the Annual Business Inquiry and the Annual Employment Survey and, as with any sample survey, are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Change in employee jobs in manufacturing in Beverley and Holderness: 1997–2004

Miners Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many miners' compensation claims have been submitted for Bassetlaw constituents by (a) Raleys, (b) Moss, (c) AMS Law, (d) Wake Smith, (e) Beresfords, (f) BRM, (g) Graysons, (h) Thompsons, (i) Vendside, (j) Kidd Spoor Harper, (k) Robinson King and (l) Stanton Croft solicitors. [45739]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of claims submitted by the listed representatives for Bassetlaw constituents is as follows:

Solicitor	COPD	VWF	Total
Raleys	463	239	702
Moss	461	515	976
AMS	391	514	905
Wake Smith	288	6	294
Beresfords	1,387	735	2,122
BRM	252	0	252
Graysons	636	617	1,253
Thompsons	138	30	168
Vendside	9	1	10
Kidd Spoor	334	164	498
Robinson King	14	19	33
Stanton Croft	0	2	2

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice he has issued to claimants on the practice of solicitors passing miners' compensation cheques directly to claims handlers. [45740]

Malcolm Wicks: No such advice has been issued. The Department is not aware that this is happening. The majority of all damages cheques raised by Capita are made payable to the claimant, but sent to his representative. The exception to this rule is where the claimant provides a form of authority specifically requesting his damages cheque is made payable to his representative.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the solicitors who have been deducting fees from claimants' compensation in respect of coal mining injuries notwithstanding that they are already remunerated by his Department under the British Coal Claims Handling Agreement. [9906]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department does not have a list of solicitors who have been found to be double charging. The supervision of solicitors is a matter for the Law Society who I have written to.

Mining Industry (Nottinghamshire)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry with which agencies dealing with mining industry issues, with an address, staff or telephone number base in Nottinghamshire his Department has had discussions in the last 12 months. [45909]

Malcolm Wicks: The only agencies based in Nottinghamshire the Department has had discussions with in the last 12 months are the Union of Democratic Mineworkers, Vendside and their legal advisors.

Nuclear Power

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 2255W, on nuclear power, whether he has now received the strategy proposals from the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority for the decommissioning and clear up of its sites; and whether it remains his intention to consider and come to a decision on the proposed strategy by 31 March. [45730]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 26 January 2006]: Scottish Ministers and I have received the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority's proposed strategy and will reach a decision on the document before 31 March.

Parliamentary Questions

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will reply to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Ochil and South Perthshire on 16 November 2005, reference 30608, on Scottish Coal. [46383]

Malcolm Wicks: I answered my hon. Friend's question on 26 January 2006.

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will reply to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Na h-Eileanan an Iar on 27 June 2005 reference 8552, on offshore staff registration. [46390]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I answered the hon. Member's question on 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 2174W.

Post Office

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans his Department has to secure the future of the post office network; and if he will make a statement. [45578]

Barry Gardiner: The DTI is backing the efforts of the management of Post Office Ltd. to turn the business around and create a network fit for the 21st century. We have invested over £2 billion in total since 1999 to help them to do so.

We want to see a post office network that meets the needs of today and the future and not those of 20 or 30 years ago. The DTI are discussing with other Government Departments and Post Office Ltd. how we can best achieve this.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) rural and (b) urban sub-post offices there were in (i) England and (ii) the UK in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement. [45583]

Barry Gardiner: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. and the chief executive has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many customers used the Post Office Card Account in each quarter from 2002 to 2006; and if he will make a statement. [45576]

Barry Gardiner: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. (POL) and the chief executive has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the economic impact on the Royal Mail of the loss of the Department of Work and Pensions' card account contract in 2010; what the value of the contract to the Post Office is in 2005–06; and what the estimated percentage income for (a) rural and (b) urban post offices arising from the card account contract is for 2005–06. [45946]

Barry Gardiner: The Post Office Card Account contract will generate revenues of at least £1 billion for Post Office Ltd. between 2003 and 2010. Discussions between Post Office Ltd. and Department of Work and Pensions on what accounts, other than the Post Office Card Account, will be available after 2010 are on-going. The value of the contract to Post Office Ltd. in 2005–06 depends on the numbers of customers using it and customers are able to use their Post Office Card Accounts at any post office branch whether rural or urban.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people are using the Post Office Card Account; how many withdrawals of (a) pensions and (b) other benefits from Post Office Card Accounts there were in each of the last two years (i) in each region, (ii) in rural areas and (iii) in urban areas; and what the total value of such withdrawals was in (A) rural and (B) urban areas. [46058]

Barry Gardiner: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. (POL) and the chief executive has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department plans to take to minimise the impact of the loss of the Post Office Card Account contract on the Post Office network. [46061]

Barry Gardiner: We have always been clear that Government will fund the Post Office Card Account until 2010. Discussions between the Department of Work and Pensions and Post Office Ltd. are continuing about how they take things forward after 2010.

Regional Aid Guidelines

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when his Department will begin its consultation on Article 87 (3) of the Regional Aid Guidelines; and which areas he expects will be included. [46124]

Alun Michael: The European Commission adopted the Regional Aid Guidelines on 21 December 2005. I will be consulting shortly on the best way for the UK's discretionary coverage to be applied.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support his Department is providing in 2005–06 to research into the development of tidal power; and at what locations tidal power is being piloted. [46193]

Malcolm Wicks: For the financial year 2005–06 the DTI has provided funding to tidal power research totalling £2.56 million.

At present one prototype tidal power research device is located in the sea, near Lynmouth in Devon and another is under construction in Strangford Lough in Northern Ireland. In the next year it is anticipated that at least two more prototypes will be installed at the European Marine Energy Centre in Stromness, Orkney and one prototype in the Humber Estuary at Hull.

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessments he has commissioned of the potential for exploiting micro-hydro power generation in Wales as part of the energy review. [46573]

Malcolm Wicks: No assessment has been commissioned on the potential for exploiting micro-hydro generation in Wales as part of the energy review. However, the DTI did commission a report looking into the costs and benefits of a range of micro generation technologies including micro-hydro. This report was published on 12 December 2005 and can be found at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/consultations/pdfs/microgeneration-est-report.pdf

Scottish Coal

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much Scottish Coal received from the Coal Aid Scheme in each month of 2001; and whether any of this assistance was ring-fenced for redundancy assistance. [46542]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 26 January 2006.

Small Business Research Initiative

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the timescale is for making it mandatory for Government departments to implement the Small Business Research Initiative; how that will be enforced; and if he will make a statement. [45285]

Alun Michael [holding answer 26 January 2006]: The Small Business Research Initiative (SBRI) was launched in April 2001 as a cross-departmental Initiative. It is designed to stimulate and increase the demand for research and development (R and D) from high tech small firms and give them the opportunity to demonstrate that they have the ability to undertake and deliver high quality R and D to the public sector. The participating government departments agreed to a target of purchasing at least 2.5 per cent. of their extramural R and D from SMEs by 2004–05. The Research Councils are also participating in their own arrangements.

The Chancellor mandated departments with extramural R and D budgets to take part in the Initiative in his Budget on 16 March 2005, at which time the implementation process commenced.

Compliance with the mandatory requirement is monitored by the DTI's Small Business Service. The present focus is on making a success of the relatively newly introduced mandatory option. To this end, in order to improve access for small firms, departments will be required to use the Supplier Route to Government (CSRG29) website to offer Government R and D contract opportunities, when it is launched shortly.

Until the 16 March Budget participation was voluntary. We aim to publish the voluntary phase performance figures for 2003–04 and 2004–05 under SBRI as soon as possible.

In future, we will publish performance figures on an annual basis. Apparent poor performance by individual departments will be investigated initially by the Small Business Service and Ministers will decide what action to take in order to bring about an improvement.

VAT (Pendle)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many businesses (a) registered and (b) deregistered for VAT in Pendle in each year since 1997. [45929]

Alun Michael: The number of businesses registering and de-registering for VAT in the Pendle constituency, are shown in the table for the period 1997 to 2004. Data for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

VAT registrations and de-registrations in Pendle constituency 1997 to 2004

	Registrations	De-registrations
1997	170	195
1998	180	185
1999	185	170
2000	225	170
2001	215	185
2002	190	160
2003	230	205
2004	205	190

Source:
Business Start-ups and Closures: VAT Registrations and De-registrations 1994–2004, Small Business Service, available from the Libraries of the House and also at http://www.sbs.gov.uk/vats

VAT registration and de-registration data do not capture all business activity. Businesses are unlikely to be registered if they fall below the compulsory VAT threshold. Similarly, businesses that de-register will not necessarily have closed. Only 1.8 million out of 4.3 million enterprises were registered for VAT at the start of 2004.

Telephone Preference Service

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, columns 291–92W, on the Telephone Preference Service, with which regulations the 925 complaints received were concerned. [46011]

Alun Michael: The 925 complaints referred to in the reply as having been considered by the Information Commissioner were complaints under the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 2003 regarding alleged breaches of Regulation 21, which relates to unsolicited direct marketing telephone calls.

Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 2212, on waste electrical and electronic equipment, if he will provide an estimate of the range of unit costs involved in compliance with the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive; and what the Department's estimate is for compliance over the next three years. [46523]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested by the hon. Member can be found in the WEEE Directive partial impact assessment. This is available on the Department of Trade and Industry's website at:

http://www.dti.gov.uk/sustainability/weee/WEEERIA_July_2004.pdf

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what regulations the Government plan to implement to transpose the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive 2002/96/EC into domestic law; and when he will publish such regulations. [34119]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 2 December 2005]: On 14 December 2005, I announced a review of proposals for implementing the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive in the UK. A new timetable for implementation will not be set until the review is concluded.

Wave Power

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding his Department allocated for (a) demonstration and (b) pre-commercial trials of wave power in the UK in each of the last five years. [43313]

Malcolm Wicks: During the five-year period between January 2000 and the present approximately £9.95 million has been committed to a total of 27 wave energy R&D projects concerning all stages of technology development from initial proof of concept to full scale demonstration. This is broken down by year as follows:

Year in which project started	Total funding endorsed
2000	3,061,108
2001	1,289,987
2002	1,968,591
2003	2,934,822
2004	44,780
2005	659,271

A further £50 million 'Marine Renewables Deployment Fund' has been allocated to support the continued development of wave and tidal-stream technologies of which £42 million is for direct support to early-stage pre-commercial trials.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Airspace (Extraordinary Renditions)

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 2468W, on airspace (extraordinary renditions) what media report first caught (a) his and (b) his officials' attention; and on what date. [43481]

Dr. Howells: Press reports and correspondence from Members of Parliament brought these allegations to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's (FCO) attention in the summer of 2004. I cannot say with certainty precisely which press report first caught the attention of FCO ministers and officials.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2839W, on airspace (extraordinary rendition) in which category of (a) records and (b) data renditions should be listed. [43601]

Dr. Howells: Cases of rendition would not be recorded in either such records or such data because the Ministry of Defence records neither the purpose of civil flights using military airfields nor transit passengers on civil flights using military airfields, except VIPs, and because neither national air traffic services data nor the British Airports Authority records include information about passengers or, beyond very broad category types, the purpose of flights.

Information about requests for the use of UK airspace or airfields for the purposes of rendition would be held in the records of the policy branches which provided advice on those requests to Ministers in the Departments concerned.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the US Administration about the obligations in relation to the rendition of terrorist suspects under (a) the European Convention on Human Rights and (b) the UN Convention on Torture. [45320]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to my written answer to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Peter Law) on 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 969W.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what account he has taken of the UK's obligations under the European Convention on Human Rights when (a) considering requests for the rendition of terrorist suspects through UK airspace and (b) making reference to the US Secretary of State's statement on the legality of such renditions.

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's written answer to the right hon. Member for North East Fife (Sir Menzies Campbell) on 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1643W.

In her statement on 5 December 2005, the US Secretary of State said,

> "in conducting such renditions, it is the policy of the United States . . . to comply with its laws and comply with its treaty obligations, including those under the Convention Against Torture".

The United States is not bound by the European Convention on Human Rights, to which it is not a party.

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2006, Official Report, columns 151–52, in what circumstances the Government would assist another state in a rendition operation. [45892]

Dr. Howells: I refer to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Peter Law) on 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 969W.

Arms Trade Treaty

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will begin negotiations within the UN General Assembly for an arms trade treaty. [45554]

Dr. Howells: We are working to build support for the launch of a UN based process to take forward the initiative for an international treaty on the arms trade. In 2005, support was secured from both the EU and the Commonwealth. We will continue to build further support during 2006 with the aim of securing the start of a formal process at the earliest opportunity.

Audible Fire Alarms

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 18 January 2006, Official Report, column 1430W, on audible fire alarms, what plans he has to extend audible fire alarm coverage in his Department's buildings. [45682]

Dr. Howells: Although 91 per cent. of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) UK estate is covered by audible fire alarms featuring voice instructions via a public address system or similar, all of the FCO UK estate is covered by automated audible alarm systems. The FCO carries out regular assessments of its fire precautions and seeks to implement any recommendations arising from these assessments. These may include improvements to existing fire alarm systems.

Burma

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about the confiscation of Muslims' farmlands, including Waqf properties, in Arakan; [45551]

(2) what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about the building of Buddhist pagodas and monasteries on mosque land in Arakan state; [45556]

(3) what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about the prohibition of repairs, renovation and construction of mosques in Arakan state; [45558]

(4) what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about movement restrictions imposed on the Rohingya people; [45559]

(5) what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about the treatment of the Rohingya people. [45804]

Ian Pearson: The UK co-sponsored the latest resolution on human rights abuses in Burma at the UN General Assembly in December. This highlighted the ongoing systematic violation of the human rights including violations of the right to an adequate standard of living, discrimination and violations suffered by persons belonging to ethnic nationalities, women and children. This includes forced relocation; forced labour, including child labour; denial of freedom of assembly, association, expression and movement; wide disrespect for the rule of law, and the confiscation of arable land, crops, livestock and other possessions.

We believe that some of the most serious of these human rights abuses are suffered by the Rohingya population in Northern Rakhine State, and in particular their freedom of religion.

Embassy staff have raised the situation of the Rohingya with Government officials during regular visits to Northern Rakhine State. They also draw the attention of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees representatives in Burma to reports of abuses and encourage them to raise them in their contacts with the local authorities.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about the detention of National League for Democracy Vice Chairman U Tin Oo. [45734]

Ian Pearson: The UK co-sponsored a highly critical Resolution on Burma at the UN General Assembly in December which called for the release of U Tin Oo.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the private banking sector in Burma. [45736]

Ian Pearson: The domestic banking crisis of February 2003, and subsequent restrictions imposed by the State Peace and Development Council (SPDC) on banking transactions have led to problems in the banking sector, with a knock-on effect on the private sector economy. We welcome the SPDC's investigations into money-laundering which have led to the closure of certain banks, but believe that the reports of these investigations should be made public.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about the administrative detention of (a) Kyaw Hsan, (b) Htwe Myint and (c) Thu Wai. [45793]

Ian Pearson: Htwe Myint and Thu Wai are no longer in detention. We are aware of three political prisoners called Kyaw Hsan; we have not raised any of these individual cases with the Burmese Government.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about the continued imprisonment of the Buddhist nuns Ma Than Htay and Ma Thin Thin Oo. [45797]

Ian Pearson: We have made no representations to the Burmese regime about Ma Than Htay and Ma Thin Thin Oo.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the effectiveness of EU sanctions on Burma, (b) the effects EU sanctions are having on (i) the Junta and (ii) ordinary Burmese citizens and (c) the role EU sanctions are playing to bring about the freedom of Aung San Suu Kyi. [46321]

Ian Pearson: We consider that the best interests of the people of Burma continue to be served by a twin-track common position of targeted measures against members of the regime, and humanitarian support to the poorest and most vulnerable. The targeted measures are intended to exert pressure on the regime to enact democratic reforms. We would expect the release of Aung San Suu Kyi to be among the first steps in such a process.

Chad

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he had with the African Union on helping to expedite the return of the former Chadian leader Hissène Habré to stand trial. [46050]

Ian Pearson: There have been no discussions between the Government and the African Union (AU) regarding Hissène Habré. The AU discussed the extradition request for Mr. Habré, submitted by the Belgian authorities to Senegal, at their summit of 16–24 January. The summit agreed to set up a committee of eminent African jurists to consider the case. The European Union has called on the AU to ensure that any decision is in line with the fight against impunity and that the crimes of which Mr. Habré is accused will be judged by a court.

Civil Service (Complaints)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons responsibility for procedures for handling complaints against senior staff were transferred to the Civil Service Commission; what responsibilities (a) Ministers and (b) the Permanent Secretary retain in this regard; when these changes were decided upon; and by whom. [45906]

Dr. Howells: Responsibility for procedures for handling complaints against senior staff has not been transferred to the Civil Service Commissioners. The Foreign and Commonwealth (FCO) complaints procedure encourages any staff member who has a complaint about a work issue to raise this with their line manager in the first instance. Staff also have access to the FCO's Grievance Procedure which is in line with best practice.

If a member of staff believes they are being required to act in a way which is inconsistent with the Civil Service Code, there is a separate procedure to follow which could involve the Civil Service Commissioners. They should raise this in the first instance with their line manager, or one of the FCO's Nominated Officers or Human Resources. They may also approach the Director General for Corporate Affairs or the Permanent Under-Secretary. Staff can also contact the Civil Service Commissioners if they consider the response received is not a reasonable one or if they do not wish to use any internal channels.

Colombia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in Colombia. [45561]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Leeds, West (John Battle), on 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1646W.

The human rights situation in Colombia remains grave. While we acknowledge that there has been a reduction in recent years in some human rights abuses, there is still a lot that needs to be done to improve the situation. During the visit to the UK by Vice-President Santos in late November 2005, my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), Lord Triesman of Tottenham, raised human rights issues. We have made it plain to the Government of Colombia that we are willing to work with them to help bring an improvement to the situation in the country, either as a bilateral partner or through our EU membership. We will continue to look for ways to bring about change, working with other partners such as the UN and civil society, to achieve this goal.

In addition, a Colombian trade union delegation will be visiting the UK in February at FCO expense. FCO officials will meet the delegation to discuss human rights and hear their views on how the Government can best support civil society in Colombia to improve the human rights situation.

Congo

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on the capture of members of the Lord's Resistance Army in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC); and if he will make a statement on the deaths of UN peacekeepers in the DRC. [45819]

Ian Pearson: My noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, issued a statement on 24 January to express his sadness at the deaths of the eight Guatemalan peacekeepers. He has also offered the Guatemalan Government the UK's condolences. The UN Security Council has also issued a presidential statement condemning the killings.

Foreign and Congolese armed groups operating in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) pose a daily threat to vulnerable civilians and to the delicate peace process. We fully support the United Nations' robust action to tackle the threat posed by all of these groups, and in particular the Lord's Resistance Army contingent, based in the DRC. The UK is also determined that there will be no impunity for war crimes or grave human rights abuses. We support the International Criminal Court's efforts to bring to justice the perpetrators of such abuses.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the items valued at over £100 that have been reported as stolen from buildings occupied by his Department in the past 12 months. [43434]

Dr. Howells: The following items have been recorded as lost or stolen from Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) buildings in the UK over the past 12 months:

A digital camera was stolen from an FCO department in January 2005.

An official telephone was reported lost by an FCO department in May 2005.

An FCO team lost four official phones in June 2005.

An official laptop was stolen from a hotel in London in June 2005.

An official laptop was stolen from an FCO department in May 2005.

Two official blackberries were stolen from FCO departments in May and June 2005.

Various bottles of alcohol have been reported stolen by FCO departments over the 12-month period.

Although records of items reported stolen or lost at overseas posts are not held centrally, the following thefts have been reported:

£279 worth of drinks was stolen from the ambassador's residence in Algiers.

A digital camera was stolen from the British embassy at Caracas in May 2005.

To collate detailed information on thefts and losses at all of our overseas posts would incur disproportionate costs.

Diplomatic Missions (Congestion Charge)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries' diplomatic missions have (a) indicated to his Department that they will not pay the London congestion charge and (b) have failed to pay this charge since 1 September 2005. [46025]

Dr. Howells: The Swiss embassy and the African Union Group have informed the Foreign and Commonwealth Office that, as a matter of policy, they do not pay the congestion charge. The US embassy has also informed us that they ceased paying the charge in July 2005. No other missions have indicated to us that they have failed to pay since September 2005.

Transport for London's records indicate outstanding Penalty Charge Notices incurred by individual members of diplomatic missions. These figures, up to 10 November 2005, were reported in my ministerial statement issued on 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 127WS. The following list, provided by Transport for London, updates these figures to 20 January this year.

	Fines outstanding	Amount in £
United Arab Emirates	5,003	469,100
Angola	4,675	441,800
Sudan	3,298	314,370
Nigeria	2,262	216,070
Tanzania	1,691	159,180
Sierra Leone	1,550	147,040
South Africa	1,492	140,440
USA	1,224	107,150
Zimbabwe	1,092	103,640
Kenya	1,088	97,110

Diplomatic Service Appeals Board

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether recent changes in the mandate of the Diplomatic Service Appeals Board affect the right of departmental employees to appeal to the board in cases of complaints against senior management; what steps have been taken to ensure the independence of the board's secretariat in relation to the Department's human resources and management function; and if he will make a statement. [45903]

Dr. Howells: Changes to the mandate of the Diplomatic Service Appeal Board (DSAB) took place in early 2003. Following a review of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Misconduct Procedure and in consultation with the Trade Unions, it was agreed that the DSAB would hear appeals against dismissal and not lesser penalties. This amendment brought the DSAB into line with the Civil Service Appeal Board and provided similar rights of appeal for Diplomatic Service and Home Civil Service staff within the FCO.

The FCO's Grievance Procedure is available for any member of staff to use if they wish to pursue a formal complaint against a colleague. It is in line with statutory requirements and best practice.

The role of Secretary to the Board was transferred in early 2005 within the Human Resources Directorate from the FCO's Conduct Adviser to the Employee Relations Adviser. The latter has no involvement in conduct or disciplinary matters.

Early Retirement

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many departmental staff have been required to take compulsory early retirement on structural grounds under the provisions of FCO Circular 754/01; and if he will make a statement. [45895]

Dr. Howells: Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Circular 754/01, issued in December 2001, gave guidance to FCO employees at senior management level on their options if they were unable to pick up jobs at the relevant appointment board. This included their eligibility to leave the FCO on compulsory early retirement (CER) terms. In order to help achieve the FCO's efficiency targets, in particular the decision to reduce substantially the number of staff in the senior management structure, these provisions were extended to a wider range of senior officers in September 2004, using funding from the Treasury's Efficiency Challenge Fund. This exercise enabled some officers not eligible for CER (i.e. those aged under 50) to leave on compulsory early severance (CES) terms. The numbers taking CER or CES in each of the last five years is as follows:

Number

	CER	CES
2001	8	—
2002	7	—
2003	11	—
2004	15	2
2005	23	7

Egypt

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the (a) transparency and (b) legitimacy of the recent elections in Egypt. [33924]

Dr. Howells: International election observers were not invited to the presidential or parliamentary elections in 2005, and as such it is difficult for us to comment on the transparency of legitimacy of the elections.

We welcomed the holding of the first multi-candidate presidential elections which took place on 7 September, as an important step in the political reform process.

The European Union issued a statement on 9 December 2005 about the parliamentary elections, noting concern about reports of widespread violence, but welcoming the decision to allow domestic groups to monitor the elections. This is available at:

http://www.eu2005.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1115146994806&a=KArticle&aid=1133773133659&date=2005-12-09.

Embassies and Consulates

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the financial and other benefits of running each embassy and consulate. [41407]

Mr. Straw: There is an inherent difficulty in ascribing a financial value to most foreign policy activity. The performance of the UK's Posts and Consulates are measured against each mission's annual objectives. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) reports against its objectives and public service agreements (PSAs) as set out in the Department's Annual Report (Command paper 6533). The contribution of posts is reflected in the performance monitoring against the FCO's PSAs.

Eritrea/Ethiopia (Arms Embargo)

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to monitor the acquisition of weapons by (a) Eritrea and (b) Ethiopia since the lifting of the arms embargo of May 2001. [46211]

Dr. Howells: As there is no arms embargo in force, there are no formal mechanisms for monitoring arms acquisitions by Ethiopia and Eritrea, but we monitor closely developments in Ethiopia and Eritrea.

EU Constitution

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the EU constitution initiative and the prospects for its revival (a) in whole and (b) in part. [46273]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Following the French and Dutch 'no' votes in referendums on the EU constitutional treaty, EU Heads of State and Government agreed on the need for a period of reflection with a view to coming back to the matter during the first half of 2006. The Government will participate constructively in these discussions, but it would not be sensible to pre-empt now where the discussions might end up. In the coming months we need to focus on the EU's policy agenda, including follow-up to the issues discussed at Hampton Court.

Iraq

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 13 June 2005, Official Report, column 137W, on Iraq, what progress has been made with his inquiries with the United States Administration. [28367]

Dr. Howells [holding answer14 November 2005]: I apologise for the delay in providing a substantive answer to the hon. Member's questions on this matter. This is because the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA), to whom the Special Rapporteur's letter was addressed, was dissolved at the end of June 2004. An additional difficulty is that the incident to which it refers is alleged to have happened in February 2004, when there was a great deal of militia activity of this type in Iraq. We are working with the United States Government, via whom the letter was passed to the CPA, to ascertain whether they have any record of what happened to the letter and what action was taken on it. They are still researching the archives.

Given the delay in providing a substantive reply, we will continue to pursue with the US authorities and, exceptionally, I will write to the hon. Member when we have more information, and will place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Israel

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs from what date the UK Government have raised concerns about respect to international humanitarian law with the government of Israel; on how many occasions; and what assessment he has made of the impact of these representations on Israel's human rights record under international law. [42756]

Dr. Howells: We have frequently made clear our concerns with the Israeli Government about respect for international humanitarian law over a number of years. Our Ambassador in Tel Aviv last raised house demolitions, route of the barrier, establishment of new settlements and the expansion of existing settlements in Arab neighbourhoods on 19 December 2005. Israel's respect for international humanitarian law still remains a concern and we will continue to raise these matters.

Madagascar

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from non-governmental organisations on the closure of the British embassy in Madagascar. [45610]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has received representations from 13 non-governmental organisations about the closure of the British embassy in Madagascar. Most express concern about Madagascar's continued development and the conservation of its wildlife.

Somalila

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent visits have been made to (a) Somaliland and (b) Somalia by British officials; and what organisations they met whilst there. [44456]

Ian Pearson: Officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and the Department for International Development (DFID) visited Somaliland on numerous occasions during 2005 and had meetings with the Somaliland authorities, local non-governmental organisations, the UN agencies operating there and the Somaliland Scouts veterans' association. Most recently, a DFID official took part in a joint needs assessment as part of the UN Development Programme aid co-ordination from 16 to 18 January 2006.

Officials from the FCO and DFID have visited Somalia and Puntland on a few occasions during 2005, as part of UN organised and protected missions, for meetings with the Transitional Federal Authorities in Jowhar, the National Aids Commission in Puntland and to assess conditions in the drought affected southern region. A DFID official working under the auspices of the World Food Programme assessed the humanitarian situation in Southern Somalia from 14 to 19 January 2006.

UK Ambassadors

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on which dates during the period from 2000 to 2004 the appointments board selected candidates to serve as ambassador in (a) Beijing, (b) Brasilia and (c) Mexico City. [45896]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office selection board for senior appointments considered candidates for the three posts as follows:

In March 2000 it granted an extension to the then incumbent in Beijing. His successor was appointed following the board's meeting in January 2001.

In November 2001, it granted an extension to the then incumbent in Brasilia. His successor was appointed following the board's meeting in March 2003.

The board recommended a new ambassador in Mexico City for appointment at its meeting in July 2001.

UN Convention Against Corruption

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the UK's planned timetable is for ratification of the UN Convention Against Corruption. [46376]

Ian Pearson: The Government will ratify the United Nations Convention Against Corruption imminently. The instrument of ratification has been sent to New York to be deposited with the UN Secretary General, in accordance with article 67 of the Convention.

United States

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his reply of 20 June 2005, Official Report, column 746W, on US inquiries, whether he has received a reply from the relevant United States Government officials. [45378]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 24 January 2006]: I refer to the reply I gave the hon. Member today (UIN 28367).

Visitor Visas

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what definition his Department uses of a family member in relation to visitor visas. [46876]

Dr. Howells: A family visitor is defined, under the Immigration Appeals (Family Visitor) Regulations 2000, as a person who applies for entry clearance to come to the United Kingdom in order to visit his/her:

husband, wife, civil partner, father, mother, son, daughter, grandfather, grandmother, grandson, granddaughter, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, nephew, niece or first cousin; mother, father, brother or sister of his/her husband or wife/civil partner; husband or wife/civil partner of his/her son or daughter;

his/her stepfather, stepmother, stepson, stepdaughter, stepbrother or stepsister;

a person with whom he/she has lived as a member of an unmarried couple for at least two of the three years before the day on which his/her application for entry clearance was made.

Yugoslavia

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the risks posed to United Kingdom security interests by (a) terrorist cells and (b) the former Yugoslav army material in the former Yugoslavia. [46654]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Our risk assessments—including those in the former Yugoslavia—are informed by the Joint Terrorism Analysis Centre (JTAC). JTAC analyses all intelligence relating to international terrorism, and produces threat assessments for Government Departments and agencies. It is Government policy not to comment on specific risk assessments and threat levels for security reasons: such information could be extremely useful to terrorists.

The risks posed by former Yugoslav army material is predominantly from undiscovered caches, and as such is difficult to quantify. UK troops are trained to respond appropriately to abandoned material: when ordnance is found, appropriate measures are taken to destroy it safely. UK troops also participate in Operation Harvest carried out by the EU Force in Bosnia and Herzegovina, EUFOR, to discover and collect illegal ordnance. In a typical three month period, EUFOR collect some 500 small arms, 200,000 rounds of ammunition, 2,500 hand grenades and over 250kg of explosives. The UK is also currently contributing over £500,000 to destroy surplus stockpiles of small arms, light weaponry and ammunition in Bosnia and Herzegovina. This project includes an initial target of 250,000 small arms and an additional overall aim of 10,000 tonnes of ammunition.

Zimbabwe

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration he has given to requesting the Security Council to refer cases arising from the situation in Zimbabwe to the International Criminal Court. [45845]

Ian Pearson: The grave situation in Zimbabwe is a direct consequence of the policies pursued by the Mugabe regime. We have been active in securing international scrutiny for Zimbabwe's actions, including by the UN Security Council. The report of the United Nations Secretary General's Special Envoy, Anna Tibaijuka, on the recent clearance of housing in Zimbabwe noted that these human rights violations could come under the remit of the International Criminal Court (ICC). However, we judge that there is most unlikely to be agreement in the UN Security Council to refer Zimbabwe to the ICC at present and that failure to secure agreement would constitute a reverse.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the effectiveness of EU sanctions on Zimbabwe and (b) the effects of EU sanctions on (i) President Mugabe's Government and (ii) ordinary Zimbabwean citizens in the last two years. [46323]

Ian Pearson: EU sanctions against leading figures in the Zimbabwe Government continue to place real and significant pressure on the regime. They have the support of the Zimbabwean political opposition and non-governmental organisations, and they send a firm message that the EU is concerned at human rights abuses, but as we have made clear on many previous occasions, the measures we have in place are targeted specifically against the regime. We do not believe it is right to pursue sanctions which would hurt innocent Zimbabweans already suffering from the misrule by the Mugabe regime.

NORTHERN IRELAND

0870 Telephone Numbers

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Northern Ireland Departments used 0870 prefixed telephone numbers for use by the public during 2005. [43629]

Angela E. Smith: The Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency (DVTA) currently uses an 0870 prefixed telephone number for booking driving theory tests by text phone. In addition, an 0870 prefixed number was briefly used by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development during 2005 when the Stage One Appeals element of Single Farm Payments was being administered from Regus House in Clarendon Dock.

Broadband Access

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of homes in Northern Ireland had broadband access by December 2005. [46651]

Angela E. Smith: 100 per cent. of homes in Northern Ireland had access to broadband by December 2005 should they wish to take advantage of it. This is available at speeds of at least 512 kilobits per second. The most recent Government survey in October 2005 indicates that 29 per cent. of households have a broadband connection using either ADSL, cable, radio or satellite technology.

Child Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 14 December 2005, Official Report, column 2093W, on child abuse, which further meetings have taken place involving the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, the Police Service of Northern Ireland and senior representatives of the Roman Catholic Church; what information was provided in relation to each diocese fully within Northern Ireland; what information was provided in relation to each diocese that straddles the border with the Republic of Ireland; when he expects to make recommendations; and whether he plans to initiate an independent public inquiry. [46465]

Mr. Woodward: Since 14 December 2005, officials from the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) and representatives of the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNT) met with senior representatives of the Roman Catholic Church on 20 December 2005. DHSSPS and PSNI are scheduled to meet jointly with senior representatives of the Roman Catholic Church again on 6 February 2006. Since 14 December 2005, DHSSPS also met separately with PSNI on 17 January 2006 and PSNI met separately with legal representatives of the Roman Catholic Church on 17 January 2006.

The Roman Catholic Church has undertaken to supply relevant information relating to allegations of child abuse against clergy to PSNI.

On completion of current consultations, all possible options will be considered including the need for an independent public inquiry and recommendations will be made.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the cost to his Department of sending Christmas cards in 2005. [45922]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office (NIO), excluding its agencies and NDPBs, bought 5,900 cards for Christmas 2005 at a total cost of £6,120. The number actually used is not recorded but should not vary greatly from the number bought. Costs for postage are also not recorded as the cards are distributed by a mixture of Royal Mail and internal courier services.

All expenditure on Christmas cards is made in accordance with normal departmental financial procedures and principles based on those set out in Government Accounting.

Community Restorative Justice

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 1984W, on community restorative justice, when he expects to write to the hon. Member for South Down with the findings of his Department's research. [46834]

Mr. Hanson: I replied to the hon. Gentleman on 19 January 2006.

Community Safety Partnership

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on Community Safety Partnership strategies in Northern Ireland in 2005. [44891]

Mr. Hanson: Strategies developed by Community Safety Partnerships were launched in June last year. £677,750 was made available to CSPs for the 2005–06 financial year to enable them to develop projects to reduce crime, the fear of crime and antisocial behaviour in line with their local strategies.

Crosshill Quarry

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1369W, on Crosshill Quarry, what the terms of reference were for the Health and Safety Executive's investigation into the dismantling of railway carriages in Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin; and what the findings were of that investigation. [46616]

Angela E. Smith: The Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland investigated the dismantling of disused railway carriages at Crosshill Quarry as a result of a complaint made by a representative from the Crumlin Against Asbestos action group that these carriages had been crushed.

The investigation revealed that the carriages had been cut by hydraulic shears into sections to facilitate movement and there was no evidence to indicate that there was any contravention of health and safety at work legislation on the part of the site operators. It was concluded that the movement of these carriages did not pose a health risk to either the operators concerned or members of the public in the vicinity of the quarry.

Dentistry (Special Needs Treatment)

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the waiting lists for special needs treatment at the School of Dentistry, Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast are as a result of a shortage of (a) dental surgeons, (b) anaesthetists and (c) other reasons. [46519]

Mr. Woodward: The current waiting list for learning disabled patients requiring dental treatment under general anaesthesia is largely as a result of unavailability of anaesthetists and suitable facilities to treat this group of patients.

Departmental Finance

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures have been taken by the Northern Ireland Office to implement the 2004 spending review settlement. [44515]

Mr. Woodward: Following the 2004 spending review settlement, the NIO undertook a detailed consultation exercise across its directorates and allocated funding accordingly. Extensive work has also been undertaken to ensure that the Department achieves the efficiency targets set out in the settlement.

Disability Living Allowance

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were in receipt of disability living allowance in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [46331]

Mr. Hanson: The figures requested are shown as follows.

	Number of people
2001	141,451
2002	146,979
2003	153,791
2004	162,529
2005	167,369

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many homeowners in Northern Ireland received grant assistance to install (a) energy efficiency measures and (b) solar panels in 2005. [46790]

Mr. Hanson: (a) In 2005 just over 10,000 households received assistance to install energy efficiency measures through the Warm Homes Scheme, the Replacement and Renovation Grants Schemes and the Disabled Facilities Grant Scheme.

(b) In 2005 approximately 55 households received grant assistance to install solar thermal panels and 15 for the installation of solar photovoltaic panels.

Fishing Fleet

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to assist the new build and modernisation of the Northern Ireland fishing fleet; and how much has been allocated to this in 2006–07. [46781]

Angela E. Smith: In 2006–07 the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development plans to allocate around £1 million towards safety and quality improvements for the Northern Ireland fleet. There is no provision for assistance to new build in the fleet.

In addition, the South Down Fishing Taskforce has allocated £125,000 in 2006–07 to enable the Northern Ireland fleet to upgrade and modernise accommodation on-board fishing vessels.

Guns

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many guns were reported missing in Northern Ireland in each year since 1997 by (a) the armed forces, (b) the police and (c) members of the public with licensed weapons, broken down by the type of weapon. [43749]

Mr. Woodward: The Chief Constable is unable to provide an answer in the form requested as it would involve a manual trawl of files which could be carried out only at disproportionate cost. The total number of firearms reported missing in Northern Ireland since 1997 is 1,228. 22 by the police and 1,206 by civilians (including five reported missing by members of the Ulster Defence Regiment/Royal Irish Regiment who held personal protection weapons on a firearms certificate issued by the Chief Constable). The yearly totals are shown in Table A. The breakdown of the total by firearm type is shown in Table B. A yearly breakdown of the firearm type figures is not available. The MOD is unable to supply information about the armed forces at present and I will write to the hon. Member when the information becomes available.

Table A

	Number of firearms
1997	128
1998	165
1999	132

Healthier Lifestyles

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to promote a healthier lifestyle among people aged 40 and over in Northern Ireland. [46647]

Mr. Woodward: The Investing for Health Strategy provides a framework within which the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety has developed population strategies and programmes on issues such as, physical activity, smoking and food and nutrition, to promote healthier lifestyles, including to those aged 40 and over.

Public information campaigns developed by the Health Promotion Agency on smoking have been targeted at adult smokers aged 30+ and the "Get a Life—Get Active" campaign has aimed, in particular, to encourage 40 to 60-year-olds to undertake regular physical activity. The "Eating Well in Winter" grants programme and "A Guide to Healthier Eating for the over 60s" were both recently launched by the Food Standards Agency in Northern Ireland to encourage and support older people to eat more healthily.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to promote a healthier lifestyle among children in Northern Ireland whom health professionals consider overweight. [46648]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Priorities and Budget 2005–08 report includes a cross-departmental target to stop the increase in levels of obesity in children by 2010. In August 2004, a taskforce was established under the aegis of the Ministerial Group on Public Health to examine options for tackling overweight and obesity in children and young people and to make recommendations on how to stop the rise in levels of obesity in children. Recommendations will be published in February 2006 and will inform revised strategies and action plans on food and nutrition and physical activity.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety is working with other Departments and agencies, including local health and social services boards and trusts, to deliver a range of initiatives to support children in schools and nurseries to adopt healthier lifestyles. These include programmes which aim to promote healthy eating and physical activity as well as programmes that offer direct support to parents and children. Later this year the Health Promotion Agency will launch a new public information campaign, targeted at the parents of young children, to encourage participation in regular physical activity.

Incapacity Benefit

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incapacity benefit recipients there have been in Northern Ireland in each of the last eight years. [46330]

Mr. Hanson: The figures requested are shown as follows.

	Number of people
1998	74,870
1999	71,053
2000	70,176
2001	71,333
2002	71,252
2003	72,208
2004	70,608
2005	69,682

Mental Health and Learning Disabilities Review

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the timescale is for the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety's Mental Health and Learning Disabilities Review; what the estimated cost is; and how much has been spent to date. [45787]

Mr. Woodward: I understand that the Review of Mental Health and Learning Disability aims to complete its task by summer 2006. The estimated cost of the review is around £1.2 million. To date, just over £1 million has been spent.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety's Mental Health and Learning Disabilities Review sub-groups which have completed reports; and when he expects the remainder to complete reports. [45788]

Mr. Woodward: To date, the review has published two reports: from its Adult Mental Health Services Working Committee, and from its Learning Disability Working Committee. I understand that the remaining reports should be completed by summer 2006.

Office Equipment

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) personal computers, (b) laptops, (c) servers, (d) printers, (e) scanners, (f) photocopiers and (g) fax machines (i) his Department, (ii) each (A) non-departmental public body, (B) executive agency and (C) other public body for which his Department is responsible in (1) each English region and (2) Northern Ireland owned in (x) 2003–04 and (y) 2004–05. [40148]

Mr. Hain: Information from Department records indicate that number of personal computers, laptops, servers, printers and scanners are as shown in the following table:

Number

	Personal computers		Laptops		Servers		Printers		Scanners
	NI	London	NI	London	NI	London	NI	London	NI	London

[1] The Northern Ireland Office's four Executive agencies are the Compensation Agency for Northern Ireland, Forensic Science for Northern Ireland, The Northern Ireland Prison Service and the Youth Justice Agency. It is not possible to isolate the number of pieces of equipment each agency owned except at disproportionate cost.

Photocopiers are leased and not owned. Information on small items such as fax machines is not held centrally and could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Information in respect of each non-departmental public body could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Police

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the Garda Siochana have been (a) seconded and (b) transferred to the Police Service of Northern Ireland in each year since the implementation of the Patten report. [44748]

Mr. Woodward: I am advised by the PSNI that since the signing of relevant protocols, one member of the Garda Siochana has taken part in a mutual personnel exchange (without policing powers) with the PSNI.

Prisons (Drug Finds)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many drug finds there have been in Northern Ireland's prisons in each of the last three years; and of what quantities. [46650]

Mr. Woodward: The following table details all drugs found within Northern Ireland prisons in the last three years (January 2003 to December 2005) and the quantities and type of each substance:

	Drug finds
Drug	2003	2004	2005

Public Body Vacancies

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance Northern Ireland departments give to public bodies on the handling of senior post vacancies and recruitment pending implementation of the Review of Public Administration; and whether (a) Equality Commission and (b) legal advice is sought on such guidance. [45187]

Angela E. Smith: The standard guidance issued to the Northern Ireland departments is detailed in the Cabinet Office publication 'non-departmental public bodies: A Guide for Departments.' That guidance states:

'A non-departmental public body's ability to employ and manage staff is an important element of its relative independence from Ministers. While the sponsor department must be careful not to detract from a non-departmental public body's independence, it does have a responsibility to assist a new non-departmental public body in making a sound start in its management policies. The sponsor department should encourage non-departmental public bodies to adopt Human Resource management practices which meet at least the minimum standards expected of public service employers.'

The Department of Finance and Personnel also issued 'Guidance on Codes of Practice for Board Members of Public Bodies' in March 1997. That stated that departments should ensure that executive non-departmental public bodies adopt new or revised codes based on the new guidance.

The guidance states:

'The board should ensure that the body's rules for the recruitment and management of staff provide for appointment and advancement on merit on the basis of equal opportunity for all applicants and staff. In filling senior staff appointments, the board should satisfy itself that an adequate field of qualified candidates is considered, and should always consider the merits of full and open competition. In recruiting external candidates, this should normally be used'.

No guidance has been issued which makes particular reference to the implementation of the Review of Public Administration and no further legal advice or advice from the Equality Commission has been sought.

Schools (Employment of Offenders)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) whether anyone with a conviction for a sexual offence is working in a school in Northern Ireland; [43555]

(2) how many teachers in Northern Ireland have (a) convictions, including spent convictions, and (b) police cautions; how many such convictions and cautions were in respect of sexual offences; and if he will make a statement. [43557]

Angela E. Smith: On 13 January I asked the employing authorities (that is the Education and Library Boards, the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools, and schools which employ their staff directly) to check their records and inform me whether there is any person currently in employment in any capacity in a grant-aided school who is required to notify their details to the Police Service as a sex offender, or who has a history of sex offending. They have confirmed that that there are three persons, none of them teaching staff, with a conviction for a sexual offence who are currently working in schools; none of these persons is on a sex offenders register as all the offences were committed over 15 years ago. In one case the offence was against a minor and involved a girl who was just under age; in the other two cases the offences were against adult females. In each case the employing authority knew of the conviction through the pre-employment check and took professional advice. The advice was, in each case, that the person was not a risk to children, and so employment was offered. The employing authorities remain satisfied that these persons do not pose a risk to children.

I have also asked for similar information from Independent schools and await their replies.

Vetting against all sources is done by a single agency, the PSNI Criminal Records Office (CRO). The CRO checks individuals who apply to work with children, either as employees or those engaged as volunteers, against both List 99 and the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety's list of people who are disqualified from working with children, as well as carrying out a full criminal background check. Employers are informed of all convictions, spent and unspent, including cautions and bind-over orders, no matter when the offence was committed, and non-conviction information which CRO considers to be reliable. These are all made available to the employing authority and are taken into account in the decision on whether to offer employment. The CRO has also confirmed, however, that their pre-employment checks on persons applying to work in schools have not identified any individual on a sex offenders register since the introduction of registration in 1997.

I am unable to confirm the number of teachers who have other types of offences (and this would include, for example, driving offences) as employers' records will show only those who had these convictions at the point at which they were vetted.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people (a) convicted of and (b) having received a caution regarding sexual involvement with children have been employed in schools in Northern Ireland over the last 10 years. [43620]

Angela E. Smith: On 13 January I asked the employing authorities (that is the Education and Library Boards, the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools, and schools which employ their staff directly) to check their records and inform me whether there is any person currently in employment in any capacity in a grant-aided school who is required to notify their details to the Police Service as a sex offender, or who has a history of sex offending. Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) teachers and (b) auxiliary staff who are on the Sex Offenders Register are employed in schools in Northern Ireland. [45026]

Angela E. Smith: The employing authorities for teaching and non-teaching staff in the grant-aided sector have confirmed to me that there is no-one currently in employment in any capacity in a grant-aided school who is required to notify their details to the Police Service under the Sexual Offences Act 2003.

My Department has also written to schools in the independent sector asking for confirmation of their position as regards the employment of persons who are registered sex offenders or who have a history of sex offending.

I will write to the hon. Gentleman with this information.

Sexual Health

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many young people in Northern Ireland aged (a) 16, (b) 15, (c) 14, (d) 13 and (e) under 13 years have attended Brook Advisory Clinic for contraceptive treatment in each of the last five years. [46459]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the number of young people in Northern Ireland attending the Brook Advisory Clinic is not collected centrally.

Sexual Offences Review

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the publication date for the Sexual Offences Review consultation document; and what is the time scale for the review. [45789]

Mr. Hanson: I have asked officials to resume work on a review of the law on sexual offences, with the aim of publishing a paper for consultation before Easter. Although it is too early to be specific, I would like to see legislation in place early next year for a new body of law on sexual offences.

Smoking Ban

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the likely improvement in the health of adults in Northern Ireland within two years of the smoking ban in public places being introduced. [46649]

Mr. Woodward: The introduction of smoke-free legislation will protect employees and the public in general from the increased health risks associated with exposure to second-hand smoke such as lung cancer, ischaemic heart disease, stroke, asthma and other circulatory and respiratory diseases. Experience elsewhere suggests that comprehensive controls also help reduce smoking prevalence.

The draft Smoking (Northern Ireland) Order will be issued for public consultation in February and will be accompanied by a draft Regulatory Impact Assessment, which will address both the health and economic implications of tobacco control measures.

Social Security

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total administration costs associated with the delivery of social security benefits in Northern Ireland were in 2004–05; how many staff are employed in social security administration in Northern Ireland; and what administrative costs per benefit recipient were in 2004–05. [46145]

Mr. Hanson: Information on the cost of administrating social security benefits and the number of staff involved is available from the Social Security Agency Annual Report and Accounts 2004–05. It was published on 31 October 2005 and a copy placed in the Library.

Information on the costs per benefit recipient of administration in 2004–05 is not available.

Special Advisers

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) the special advisers in his Department, (b) their specific areas of expertise and (c) the total cost of employing them in the latest year for which figures are available. [8818]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to him on 4 July 2005, Official Report, column 36W.

Strabane Fire Station

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many part-time fire-fighters in Strabane Fire Station applied to become full-time fire-fighters in each of the last five years; and how many of those applications were successful. [45874]

Mr. Woodward: In the last five years there have been three full-time recruitment exercises carried out within the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service. The number of retained (i.e. part-time) fire-fighters from the Strabane Fire Station who applied for full-time fire-fighter posts was as follows:

Date of recruitment exercise	Applied
January 2001	3
September 2003	7
November 2005	5

In order to comply with current equality legislation, applicants from the Retained Service are required to undergo exactly the same selection process for posts within the full-time fire-fighting service as all other candidates. None of these applicants was successful in that process.

Transport Links

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans are in place to improve transport links (a) between Northern Ireland and Great Britain and (b) within Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [43758]

Mr. Woodward: Air and sea links between NI and GB are market driven and are generally satisfactory. Consequently, the only area Government is currently seeking to improve, through the Scottish Executive and the Northern Ireland administration, is the Ballycastle/Campbeltown ferry service.

The Regional Transportation Strategy 2002–12 for Northern Ireland is the basis upon which all land based transportation initiatives are now taken forward. This is supported by three transport plans, which contain the detailed programmes of major schemes, and transport initiatives that the Department for Regional Development wants to carry out to achieve the Northern Ireland's transportation objectives. Transport plans for the Belfast Metropolitan Area and the Regional Strategic Transport Network were published last year and are available from the Commons Library. The third "sub regional" transport plan that covers the other urban areas and the rural area not covered by the previous two plans will be published later this year.

Treatment Provision

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements are in place for patients in Northern Ireland to be treated in Scotland to ensure speedier treatment and surgery. [46791]

Mr. Woodward: By March this year no-one should be waiting more than 12 months for inpatient or day case treatment; six months for cardiac or cataract surgery; and nine months for major joint replacement surgery.

When a trust is unable to treat a patient within the agreed time, arrangements are in place to transfer patients to another provider for treatment. This may be at a hospital within Northern Ireland, elsewhere in the United Kingdom, including Scotland, or further afield if necessary.

TREASURY

Census

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the accuracy of census figures for (a) houses in multiple occupation and (b) caravan parks; and if he will make a statement. [45668]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 30 January 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question concerning what assessment has been made of the accuracy of census figures for (a) houses of multiple occupation and (b) caravan parks. I am replying in her absence. (45668)

An assessment of the accuracy of Census figures for (a) houses of multiple occupation and (b) caravan parks was not undertaken as part of the Census 2001 Quality Report for England and Wales.

However houses in multiple occupation would be included in the accommodation type 'part of a converted or shared house' and caravan parks in 'a caravan or other mobile or temporary structure' Page 86 of the Census Quality Report refers to the accuracy of responses to the question on accommodation type. The extent of imputation (the proportion of people or households added to the Census count to allow for non-response, so as to provide complete coverage of the population) of each accommodation type by local authority can be found at www.statistics.gov.uk/census2001/imputation_rates_by_variable.asp

A copy of the quality report is available in the House of Commons Library, alternatively it can be found on-line at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk = 14212

Central Government (Administration Costs)

John Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the costs of central Government administration have been in each year since 1998. [46224]

Mr. Des Browne: Outturn against the administration costs limits of central Government Departments is published each year at tables 4 and 5 of the Public Expenditure Outturn White (PEOWP) Paper. The 2004–05 edition of PEOWP (Cm 6639) has been placed in the Library along will all previous editions.

Charitable Status (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many charitable institutions in Northern Ireland have had their charitable status withdrawn in the last 10 years. [46792]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs does not maintain records of the number of charities in Northern Ireland who have had their charitable status withdrawn.

Employment (Denbighshire)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) private sector jobs in (i) agriculture,

(ii) manufacturing and (iii) the service sector and (b) public sector jobs there were in (A) Vale of Clwyd constituency and (B) Denbighshire in each of the last 20 years. [46078]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 30 January 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about private and public sector employment. I am replying in her absence. (46078)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics for the United Kingdom of public sector employment from a quarterly survey of public sector organisations. However, estimates at local area level are not available.

Information at local area level is available from the annual local area Labour Force Survey (LFS) of individual people in households. However, in this source the categorisation of employment in the public or private sector depends upon the responses from the individuals interviewed. As reported by ONS in October 2005 in the publication "Public Sector Employment Trends", some individuals tend to misreport private sector employment as being in the public sector hence leading to overestimates of the share of public sector employment.

With this reservation about the data quality, Table 1 shows the number of persons in private sector employment, by the specified splits, and for the public sector for people resident in the Denbighshire Unitary Authority as shown by the annual local area LFS for the 12 month periods ending February 1999 to February 2004. Table 2 shows similar data for persons resident in the Vale of Clwyd Parliamentary Constituency. Data for earlier years are not available.

These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to a margin of uncertainty. Changes in the estimates from year to year should be treated with particular caution.

Film Industry

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1495W, on the film industry, if he will give details of the specific tax reliefs available for film production in each year since 1997; and what the cost of those reliefs was in each year. [46391]

Dawn Primarolo: Details of the specific tax reliefs for film production can be found in Chapter 3 of the Treasury consultation document "Reform of film tax incentives: Promoting the sustainable production of culturally British films" (July 2005).

Regarding the costs of these reliefs, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 13 December 2005, Official Report, column 1823W.

Financial Ombudsman Service

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints have been received by the Financial Ombudsman Service in relation to the sale of (a) critical illness insurance, (b) payment protection insurance, (c) term life assurance and (d) income protection in each of the last five years. [45470]

John Healey: The Financial Ombudsman Service (FOS) assumed its powers under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 on 1 December 2001, and record data for cases received by product type. The following table shows the number of cases received in the requested product categories by the FOS in each full financial year since year ending 31 March 2001.

Numbers of new cases received by product type

	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Loan protection	513	803	802	833
Income protection	523	726	820	980
Term assurance	376	468	519	504
Critical illness	408	492	582	717

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of the complaints referred to the Financial Ombudsman Service in the last five years related to the suitability of the product purchased; and how many of those complaints were upheld in each year. [45471]

John Healey: The Financial Ombudsman Service records complaint numbers in relation to product type. Unfortunately, as they do not record data (or sub-categorise) by complaint type, figures for complaints received about the suitability of products purchased are not available.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints have been referred to the Financial Ombudsman Service in each of the last five years; and how many were upheld in each year. [45472]

John Healey: The Financial Ombudsman Service (FOS) assumed its powers under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 on 1 December 2001.

The following table shows the number of new inquiries and investigated cases that the Financial Ombudsman Service has received for each year since 31 March 2001. The table shows the percentage breakdown of cases upheld (either wholly or in part) in the consumers favour, for each year that data is available for.

Total number of new inquiries and new cases converted.

Number of front line inquiries	388,239	462,340	548,338	614,148
Number of cases	43,330	62,170	97,901	110,963
Percentage of cases upheld (either wholly or in part)	n/a	34	32	40

n/a = not available.

Fuel Duty

John Hemming: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the level of fuel duty for a liquid fuel produced from (a) biomass and (b) waste cooking oil that is (i) diesel quality and (ii) not diesel quality. [45897]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 2265W.

General Insurance Regulations

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment his Department has made of the effects on consumers of the general insurance regulations introduced in 2005; [45468]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the overall regulatory cost burden on insurance intermediaries following the introduction of general insurance regulation in January 2005. [45469]

John Healey: The FSA commenced regulation of the selling of general insurance in January 2005. The FSA will begin a review of the effectiveness of the general insurance regime in April 2006. This will include seeking feedback from firms and consumer research.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) scope and (b) timescale is of the forthcoming Financial Services Authority's effectiveness review of general insurance regulation. [45473]

John Healey: The FSA will begin a review of the effectiveness of the general insurance regime in April 2006. Findings are expected to be available towards the end of 2006.

The review will focus on how far the FSA conduct of business requirements for general insurance firms are delivering the intended outcomes for consumers.

Pre-Budget Report

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effects on Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency of measures in his pre-Budget report. [45694]

John Healey: The pre-Budget report set out a range of measures to build a strong economy and a fair society for all constituencies in the UK, including Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland. The Government set out the impact of the PBR on the North East in 2005 pre-Budget report: 'What the Pre-Budget Report means for the North East'. This is available on the HM Treasury website.

Tax Credit

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the latest estimate is of the amount of tax credit payments which were fraudulently obtained via the HM Revenue and Customs website; and if he will make a statement. [44799]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 23 January]: HMRC are currently undertaking a programme of work on finalised 2003–04 awards—the first year of working tax credit and child tax credit—to provide more information on the level of claimant error and fraud. This is due to be completed in spring 2006.

HMRC use a number of sophisticated tools to help detect fraudulent claims made for tax credits. Whenever possible this is aimed at stopping fraudulent claims from being paid but they also monitor payments to detect known traits of organised fraud.

I also refer the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois) to the answer I gave on 18 January, Official Report, column 1357.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on tax credit fraud using Network Rail employees' identities. [46413]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member for Yeovil to the statement I made on 18 January 2006, Official Report, column 1357W in response to his earlier question.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many awards of tax credits have been stopped because of suspicion of fraud in each month since 2003–04. [38557]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 10 January 2006, Official Report, column 557–58W. Figures by month could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit claimants appealed (a) successfully and (b) unsuccessfully to (i) the Adjudicator, (ii) the parliamentary ombudsman and (iii) by judicial review an unsuccessful appeal through the HM Revenue and Customs complaints procedure against a decision to change the amount paid in each year for which figures are available, broken down by (A) type of tax credit and (B) region. [43751]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs' (HMRC) tax credits appeals procedure is explained in its leaflet WTC/AP "How to appeal against a tax credits decision or award". The Department's complaints procedure is explained in its Code of Practice 1 "Putting things right—How to complain". The Adjudicator's leaflet AO1 also explains that her office does not look at matters which can be considered on appeal or complaints that have been, or are being, investigated by the ombudsman.

(i) The Adjudicator cannot become involved in appeals against tax credits decisions. For the number of tax credits referrals to the Adjudicator's Office, I refer the hon. Member to the Adjudicator's Office Annual Report for 2005.

(ii) The parliamentary ombudsman, Ann Abraham, is an independent office-holder. She operates under the provisions of the Parliamentary Commissioner Act 1967 (as amended). The parliamentary ombudsman publishes information about the number of investigate complaints she has received in her annual report to Parliament. Her 2004–05 Annual Report, HC 348, was published on 20 July.

(iii) An appeal is a separate matter to a judicial review as described in HMRC guidance available at www.hmrc.gov.uk/manuals/immanual/im5201.htm

Three tax credit claimants have issued proceedings in the Administrative Court. All had been in, but had not exhausted, HMRC's complaints process before issuing proceedings. One was settled by consent, one was withdrawn and one was settled in part and the remainder withdrawn.

Travel Insurance

Annette Brooke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received about age discrimination in the pricing of travel insurance by UK companies; and if he will make a statement. [46386]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: HM Treasury has received a small number of representations from organisations working on behalf of older people. Officials have also discussed this issue with the Association of British Insurers.

The Government does not prescribe the terms and conditions that insurance companies may set when offering insurance. It does not intervene in the decisions of insurance companies when determining whether or not to offer cover. As a rule, insurers use their claims experience and other industry-wide statistics to set the terms on which they offer insurance cover.

Unemployment

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rate of (a) unemployment, (b) long-term unemployment, (c) youth unemployment and (d) economic inactivity was in (i) Denbighshire and (ii) Vale of Clwyd constituency in each of the last 20 years. [46069]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 30 January 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about unemployment and economic inactivity. I am replying in her absence. (46069)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of unemployment and economic inactivity for local areas from the annual local area Labour Force Survey (LFS) following International Labour Organisation definitions.

Table 1 shows rates and levels for all persons unemployed and youth (aged 16 to 24) unemployed resident in the Denbighshire Unitary Authority from the annual local area LFS for each 12 months ending February 1995 to February 2004. Table 2 shows similar data for persons resident in the Vale of Clwyd Parliamentary Constituency. Sample numbers are insufficient to provide estimates of long-term unemployment.

Table 3 shows the rates and levels of economically inactive persons of working age resident in the Denbighshire Unitary Authority and resident in the Vale of Clwyd constituency from the annual local area LFS for each 12 months ending February 1995 to February 2004.

These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to a margin of uncertainty. Changes in the estimates from year to year should be treated with particular caution.

ONS also compiles statistics for local areas of people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA). Table 4 shows the annual average number of ISA claimants, and as a proportion of the resident working age population, those claiming for over 12 months and claimants aged 18 to 24, resident in the Denbighshire Unitary Authority since 1986. Table 5 shows similar data for claimants resident in the Vale of Clwyd constituency since 1996. Proportions for the 18 to 24 age group are not available for parliamentary constituencies.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rate of (a) unemployment, (b) long-term unemployment and (c) youth unemployment was in Milton Keynes in each year since 1997; and how many individuals this represented in each case. [45427]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell dated 30 January 2006.

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question about unemployment. (45427)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of unemployment for local areas from the annual local area labour force survey (LFS) following international labour organisation definitions.

Table 1 shows rates and levels for all persons unemployed and youth (aged 16 to 24) unemployed resident in the Milton Keynes unitary authority from the annual local area LFS for each 12 months ending February 1998 to February 2004 and from the annual population survey for the 12 months ending March 2005. However, for the Milton Keynes unitary authority sample numbers are insufficient to provide estimates of the levels of long-term unemployment.

These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to a margin of uncertainty. Changes in the estimates from year to year should be treated with particular caution.

ONS also compiles statistics for local areas of people claiming jobseeker's allowance (ISA). Table 2 shows the annual average number of ISA claimants, and as a proportion of the resident working age population, and the annual average number of ISA claimants aged 18 to 24, and as a proportion of the resident population aged 18 to 24 and the annual average number of those claiming for over 12 months in the Milton Keynes unitary authority since 1997.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Caravans (Theft)

Hywel Williams: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will review the law relating to the theft of caravans. [42660]

Hazel Blears: I have been asked to reply.

The Government sees no need for a review of the law in this area. Theft of caravans is already a criminal offence and carries a maximum penalty of seven years imprisonment and/or an unlimited fine. We continue to review ways of reducing this type of crime, working with key stakeholders through the Leisure Sector Theft Action Group, a sub group of the Vehicle Crime Reduction Action Team.

Child Contact Arrangements

Margaret Moran: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if the Government will seek to legislate to require the family courts to be satisfied that contact arrangements will be safe for children. [44663]

Ms Harman: The Government are committed to supporting positive contact arrangements following parental separation where it is in the best interests of, and is safe for, the child.

Under the Children Act 1989, when making any decision pertinent to a child's upbringing, his or her welfare must be the court's paramount consideration.

Furthermore, with the introduction in January 2005 of "Gateway" forms, it is now easier for those suffering from domestic violence to bring it to the courts' attention at the start of contact and residence proceedings.

The courts are required by the Children Act to consider any harm that a child may suffer before making a contact order. The definition of "harm" was expressly clarified by Section 120 of the Adoption and Children Act 2002, commenced 31 January 2005, to include harm caused to a child by seeing or hearing the ill-treatment of another person.

In addition, the Children and Adoption Bill, currently before this House, would place a duty on CAFCASS to conduct a risk assessment in any private law proceedings where they are involved. This duty applies not only in cases where issues of harm are raised, but also in cases where the CAFCASS officer suspects that harm may be an issue. The CAFCASS officer is required to inform the court of the results of the risk assessment. That Bill would also allow courts to direct parties in contact proceedings to attend a domestic violence perpetrator programme to address violent behaviour.

These measures, taken together, will ensure that the family courts are in a position to make decisions on what contact arrangements may be safe, based on all the facts, as early as possible in the proceedings.

Civil Legal Aid

Mr. Hands: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the availability of civil legal aid to people living in the borough of Hammersmith and Fulham. [45959]

Bridget Prentice: The Legal Services Commission contracts with service providers throughout England and Wales to provide a range of legal and advice services across different categories of law.

There are currently 19 service providers with a contract to undertake civil legal aid work in Hammersmith and Fulham. Service providers in Hammersmith and Fulham may help people who live outside the area, and people who live in Hammersmith and Fulham may visit a service provider in a different area.

Any person residing in England or Wales can access free quality legal advice and information through Community Legal Service Direct. This service is available direct to the public through a telephone line, website and information leaflets.

Criminal Justice System

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many offenders' cases (a) were brought to court and (b) adjourned; how many trials were cancelled because the defendants were absent in the last year for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [45206]

Ms Harman: Figures relating to how many offenders' cases (a) were brought to court and (b) adjourned; how many trials were cancelled because the defendants were absent in the last year for which figures are available; can be found in the following table.

January 2005 to December 2005	Crown court	Magistrates court[1]
Cases listed for trial	38,264	170,842
Total ineffective trials	5,261	97,104
Defendant not present	1,281	8,555
Reasons for defendant not present
Defendant failed to attend	844	4,686
Defendant not produced by Prison Service	49	2,459
Defendant ill—trial stood out	388	1,410

Departmental Staff

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many civil servants in her Department worked from home for at least one day a week in the last year for which figures are available. [40296]

Ms Harman: My Department does not centrally monitor the number of staff who work from home. The total number of days worked from home could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate costs. My Department's Work Life Balance policy encourages home working through formal agreements, informal and 'ad-hoc' arrangements as part of a range of flexible working options available to all staff. My Department's Work Life Balance policy is considered an example of best practice by external organisations such as Opportunity Now, Working Families and Carers UK.

Deputy Lieutenants (Lancashire)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the appointment of three new deputy lieutenants for Lancashire. [45023]

Ms Harman: Deputy lieutenants are appointed by the Lord Lieutenant in accordance with section 2 of the Lieutenancies Act 1997, subject to confirmation that Her Majesty does not disapprove of their appointment. In November last year, my Department informed the Lord Lieutenant for Lancashire that Her Majesty did not disapprove of the appointment of six new deputy lieutenants. These appointments were subsequently gazetted on 16 December.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs who was consulted on the appointment of three new deputy lieutenants for Lancashire; which geographical area the three newly appointed deputy lieutenants come from; where the existing deputy lieutenants reside; and what steps are taken to ensure (a) that deputy lieutenants represent the geographical diversity of Lancashire and (b) that there is a political balance among the deputy lieutenants. [45024]

Ms Harman: Before appointing any deputy lieutenant, the lord lieutenant is required to satisfy himself that Her Majesty does not disapprove of the appointment. In December 2005, the Lord Lieutenant of Lancashire appointed six new deputy lieutenants. They are: John Barnett, Esq, MBE, 33 North Park Drive, Blackpool FY3 8NJ; Edwin John Booth, Esq, Sykes Farm, Osbaldeston, Blackburn BB2 7LS; Mrs. Davina Margaret Dickson, Pointer House Farm, Langley Lane, Goosnargh, Preston PR3 2JS; Lt. Col. Edward John Downham, MBE, Knight Stainforth Farm, Knight Stainforth, Settle BD24 ODP; David Andrew Jones, Esq, MD, FRCS, Sugarcroft, Vicarage Lane, Blackburn BB1 9HY and Thomas Woodcock, Esq, LVO, Whiteholme, Slaidburn, Clitheroe BB7 3AE.

The allocation of deputy lieutenants to particular geographical areas is a matter for the lord lieutenant and lord lieutenants take geographical location into consideration when appointing deputy lieutenants. Information on membership of political parties is are not held centrally. Deputy lieutenants are, of course, aware that their role is essentially non-political and impartial.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the deputy lieutenants for Lancashire, indicating of which political party those who hold such membership are members. [45025]

Ms Harman: I will place a list of the deputy lieutenants for Lancashire in the Library, shortly. My Department does not keep a record of the political affiliation, if any, of deputy lieutenants.

Government Information

Margaret Moran: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she plans to introduce proposals for custodial sentences for the abuse and unauthorised sale of government information. [44741]

Ms Harman: Custodial sentences are already in place for the unauthorised disclosure of some types of government information, including tax and social security data. My Department, together with the Home Office, is currently considering whether custodial sentences would be an appropriate sanction for unauthorised disclosure of other types of personal information.

Judges (Part-time)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the part-time judges who sit for 20 days a year; and what factors she took into account when deciding not to update previously published lists of part-time judges. [45356]

Ms Harman: There are approximately 6,700 fee-paid judicial postholders. It is the Lord Chancellor's policy that fee-paid judicial post holders, in the majority of jurisdictions, are offered and expected to complete a minimum of 15 sitting days a year provided that the work is available. The number of sitting days completed by each fee-paid judicial office holder is managed and recorded locally (within the circuits/regions or by the tribunal/judicial heads). There is no central record. Since its creation in 2003, my Department has not published a comprehensive list of fee-paid judges.

Judicial Appointments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the judicial appointments made since 1 January. [45444]

Ms Harman: In the period 1 January 2006 to 19 January 2006 my right hon. and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor made the following appointments:

	Number
District judges (magistrates courts)	2
Lay members of the Information Tribunal	15
Members of the Special Immigration Appeals Commission	20

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs in how many cases the Secretary of State has overturned the advice of officials concerning judicial appointments. [45447]

Ms Harman: None. Officials do not make decisions on judicial appointments.

Jury Service

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of hon. Members selected for jury service since the rules were changed to allow this. [45968]

Ms Harman: The employment of those summoned to jury service is not known. When an MP serves as a juror they do so as a private citizen so exact figures relating to the number of MPs called to jury service cannot be given. However, five MPs are known to have been called to jury service since section 321 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 came into force on 5 April 2004.

Legal Services Ombudsman

John Mann: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the most recent annual report of the Legal Services Ombudsman; and if she will make a statement. [45910]

Bridget Prentice: The Legal Service Ombudsman made an annual report to the Secretary of State which he laid before Parliament on 11 July 2005, as required by Schedule 3(5) of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990.

The Government welcome the continued work of the Legal Services Ombudsman in investigating the complaints handling of the professional bodies. The Government also welcome the progress being made by the professional bodies in the service they provide to consumers, as reflected in the Ombudsman's annual report, and looks forward to further improvements in the future.

Mediation Services

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much funding the Government have allocated to mediation and dispute resolution services in each of the last two years. [45423]

Ms Harman: The Department spent a total of £287,922.59 during the financial year 2003–04 and £375,936.40 during the financial year 2004–05 on activities to promote the use of mediation and other alternatives to the court process.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much public money was spent on Mediation Awareness Week, on 24 to 31 October 2005. [45424]

Ms Harman: The Department has spent a total of £70,707.78 on the Mediation Awareness Campaign. The breakdown is as follows:

Publicity/launch	66,516.89
Travel and local funding	4,190.89

Small Claims

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when the Government's (a) review of the small claims limit and (b) consultation paper on the small claims track will be published. [44939]

Ms Harman: The Government plan to publish a consultation paper on the small claims limit. No date has been set.

Voting Systems

Mr. Laws: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 16 January 2006 to question reference 41390, when the review of new voting systems began; who the members are of the review group; when their final report will be completed; whether the report will be published; and if she will make a statement. [44860]

Ms Harman: The review of voting systems began in February 2005. The review is being conducted by officials within my Department. Any decisions on any next steps, if necessary, will be taken in due course.

The review group is at official level within the purview of my Department and the Cabinet Sub-Committee on Electoral Policy. The Cabinet Sub-Committee's members are:

Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State (Chair);

Secretary of State for Scotland;

Lord Privy Seal and Leader of the House of Commons;

Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury and Chief Whip;

Secretary of State for the Home Department;

Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and Secretary of State for Wales;

Minister without Portfolio;

Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs and Lord Chancellor;

Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (Minister for the Cabinet Office);

Chief Secretary to the Treasury;

Minister for Europe;

Minister of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Phil Woolas)

HEALTH

Agenda for Change Programme

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effects of the agenda for change programme in each grade of NHS staff in Gravesham constituency. [36953]

Caroline Flint: No assessment has been made of the effect of the agenda for change pay system by constituency. Local implementation of the system is a matter for the relevant local national health service organisations, subject to compliance with nationally agreed guidance.

Air Ambulances

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to make an announcement on the funding of air ambulances. [44139]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 20 January 2006]: Air ambulances are funded by charities. Since 1 April 2002, the cost of clinical staff on air ambulances has been met by the national health service on a continuing basis. It is for NHS trusts to decide whether they provide any additional funding to air ambulance charities.

Ambulance Service (Sussex)

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received on the proposed plans for the restructuring of ambulance services in the Sussex area. [45795]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 26 January 2006]: The consultation for the proposed configuration of national health service ambulance trusts in England is being led by strategic health authorities (SHAs). SHAs will co-ordinate consultation locally and ensure that relevant authorities and interested parties are able to express their views. A full analysis of the responses received by the SHAs and the Department will be undertaken at the end of the consultation. The consultation will conclude on 22 March 2006.

Barts and the London NHS Trust

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings officials from her Department have had with representatives of the Barts and the London NHS trust; when such meetings took place; what discussions took place at such meetings; and if she will make a statement. [43456]

Jane Kennedy: Since September 2005 departmental officials have met with representatives of the Barts and the London national health service trust on the following dates:

22 September 2005;

26 September 2005;

30 September 2005;

3 October 2005;

17 October 2005;

20 October 2005;

26 October 2005;

7 November 2005;

28 November 2005;

2 December 2005;

7 December 2005;

21 December 2005;

3 January 2006; and

6 January 2006.

These meetings covered a range of general financial and operational issues, but principally the full business case for the trust's Private Finance Initiative project.

Birth Costs

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, columns 111–12W, on birth costs, what the reference costs are for the three resource groups specified for each NHS trust providing maternity care in 2003–04. [42642]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 17 January 2006]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Brain Tumours

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many brain tumour patients she estimates would benefit from the use of (a) carmustine implants and (b) temozolomide; and what the cost of such treatment would be. [42483]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There are around 1,900 new cases of malignant glioma each year in England and Wales. The number of glioma patients who would benefit from treatment with carmustine implants or temozolomide will depend on tumour grading.

According to the British National Formulary (50th edition), the cost of one carmustine implant is £650.38, excluding value added tax. The cost of treatment will depend on the number of implants used and will vary in individual cases. Costs may vary in different settings because of negotiated procurement discounts.

The cost of temozolomide is £17.30 for 5 × 5 milligram tablets, £69.20 for 5 × 20 milligram tablets, £346.00 for 5 × 100 milligram tablets and £865 for 5 × 250 milligram tablets, excluding VAT. The cost of treatment may vary depending on individual circumstances, and in different settings because of negotiated procurement discounts.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the disparity in the availability of temozolomide treatment for brain tumour sufferers in different parts of England. [42485]

Jane Kennedy: In June 2004, Professor Mike Richards, the National Cancer Director published a report into variations in usage of cancer drugs approved by the then National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE), including temozolomide for recurrent malignant glioma.

This report showed considerable variation in drug usage between cancer networks and set out a number of recommendations to address this. One of the recommendations was to ensure that action plans were developed to respond to the report findings.

The action plans were encouraging, confirming that the profile of implementing NICE appraisals has increased and that where problems have been identified they have been, or are in the process of being, addressed.

An update of Professor Richard's report will be published later this year to confirm if variations have been reduced as a result of these actions.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken by her Department (a) to increase and (b) to speed up access to radiotherapy for brain tumour patients. [42486]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This Government are committed to the expansion of radiotherapy capacity. This will increase and improve access to radiotherapy services to all cancer patients. Much has been done already, for example:

the number of linear accelerators (linacs) installed in the national health service increased from 140 to 210 between 1997 and October 2005, an increase of 50 per cent.;

the number of trainee therapy radiographers has doubled and the workforce is now starting to expand; and the number of radiographers has increased from 1407 in 1997 to 1753 in 2004, an increase of 25 per cent.

In addition, a national radiotherapy advisory group, chaired by the National Cancer director, is considering all aspects of planning and delivery of radiotherapy services including: streamlining service delivery; service quality; equipment requirements; training and workforce needs; and future developments. The group will advise Ministers on the development and delivery of high quality radiotherapy services later this year.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken by her Department to improve the survival rates for people with brain tumours. [42488]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence is currently developing guidance on "Improving outcomes in brain and other central nervous system tumours".

This guidance, in conjunction with the significant improvements to cancer services resulting from the national health service cancer plan—such as improved waiting times, more cancer specialists, and more equipment to diagnose and treat cancers—will ensure that survival rates for brain tumour patients improve.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps are being taken by her Department to improve service delivery for brain tumour patients; [42489]

(2) what steps are being taken by her Department to reduce disparities in care within the UK, with particular reference to treatments for brain tumour patients. [42490]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) was formed on 1 April 2005, when the NICE took on the functions of the Health Development Agency to create a single excellence-in-practice organisation responsible for providing national guidance on the promotion of good health and the prevention and treatment of ill health.

NICE is currently preparing guidance on improving outcomes in brain and other central nervous system tumours for use in the national health service in England and Wales. This guidance will give advice on the service configuration for patients with these tumours to improve outcomes.

Implementation of NICE guidance is a developmental standard as set out in 'National Standards Local Action' published in July 2004. The Healthcare Commission is responsible for assessing progress of healthcare organisations towards achieving developmental standards.

Once published, the guidance will form the basis for measures for inclusion in the 'Manual for Cancer Services'. The 'Manual of Cancer Services' is an integral part of the NHS cancer plan and modernisation of cancer services. It supports quality assurance of cancer services and enables quality improvement.

Cancer (Herefordshire)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients normally resident in Hereford have been treated for cancer in Herefordshire in the past 12 months. [42292]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of patients resident in the Herefordshire primary care trust area treated for cancer in Hereford Hospitals National Health Service Trust NHS hospitals in 2004–05 was 1,555.

For the same period the number of finished consultant episodes was 1,998.

Notes:

Finished Consultant Episode (FCE)

An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

Patient counts

Patient counts are based on the unique patient identifier HESID. This identifier is derived based on patient's date of birth, postcode, sex, local patient identifier and NHS number, using an agreed algorithm. Where data are incomplete, HESID might erroneously link episodes or fail to recognise episodes for the same patient. Care is therefore needed, especially where duplicate records persist in the data. The patient count cannot be summed across a table where patients may have episodes in more than one cell.

Diagnosis (Primary Diagnosis)

The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (7 prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.

Ungrossed Data

Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

Hospital Episode Statistics (HES), Health and Social Care Information Centre

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of NHS funding awarded to Herefordshire primary care trust is assigned to treating cancer patients in the county. [42293]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for primary care trusts in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was in Herefordshire for a cancer patient from diagnosis to initial treatment in the last year for which figures are available. [42294]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested.

The table shows the number of days waited from diagnosis to treatment for the most recent quarters available at Herefordshire Hospital National Health Service Trust.

		Waiting time from diagnosis to treatment (days)

Child Protection

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect of forthcoming primary care trust mergers on the number of designated professionals who safeguard children (a) locally and (b) in England; and if she will make a statement. [27253]

Mr. Byrne: Strategic health authorities (SHAs) are making proposals about reconfiguration of primary care trusts (PCTs) in their areas. Regardless of the configuration, each SHA, PCT, NHS trust or NHS foundation trust will be required to link up with the local authority or authorities that cover the same areas in order to set up a local safeguarding children's board (LSCB) by April 2006. The guidance on safeguarding children, "Working Together to Safeguard Children" makes it clear that each LSCB must have access to appropriate expertise and advice.

Children's Hospices

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the funding of children's hospices in England. [37654]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 20 December 2005]: Primary care trusts working with their local partners and stakeholders remain best placed to decide the level and range of palliative care needed by the children and young people in their locality and are able to respond directly to their needs. We have made our manifesto pledge to increase funding for end of life care and this includes care for children and young people. We will make further announcements on this funding in the near future.

Consultants

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been paid by her Department to the consultants McKinseys in each of the last eight years. [34512]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 5 December 2005]: The fees paid in the last five financial years to date are shown in the table. The amounts do not include work relating to Monitor, the statutory name of which is the independent regulator of national health service foundation trusts.

Years prior to this have been archived and the data could be extracted only at disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) letters from hon. Members, (b) letters from members of the public and (c) Parliamentary Questions from (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords were dealt with by her Department in each year since 1995 in respect of the percentage her Department took (A) more than one month and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer; and if she will make a statement. [37387]

Jane Kennedy: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of departments in replying to Members'/ Peers' correspondence. The Report for 2004 was published on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 137–140WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library.

On letters from members of the public, the table shows the totals received since 1999 (we do not have earlier records) and shows, from 2002, the percentage of letters replied to within 20 days. To break that down further would incur a disproportionate cost.

	Letters received from members of the public	Percentage of replies sent within 20 days
1999	28,982	not held
2000	33,546	not held
2001	30,779	not held
2002	28,175	36
2003	32,584	61
2004	30,436	88
2005 to end November	48,335	98

On parliamentary questions, the information is in the following tables. Ministers endeavour to reply to all parliamentary questions within parliamentary deadlines where possible.

House of Lords

	Percentage of parliamentary questions answered more than 20 working days after receipt	Percentage of parliamentary questions answered more than 60 working days after receipt
2003	6.7	0
2004	7.3	0
2005	3.3	0

House of Commons

	Percentage of parliamentary questions answered more than 20 working days after receipt	Percentage of parliamentary questions answered more than 60 working days after receipt
2003	13.8	0.6

Notes:

1. Numbers reflect days taken from receipt, not days after the question was due for answer. Numbers include questions, where answers within a one month timeframe are not possible—for example, those tabled in July for answer in September or October.

2. 2005 figures as at 14 December.

Departmental Equipment

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) personal computers, (b) laptops, (c) servers, (d) printers, (e) scanners, (f) photocopiers and (g) fax machines (i) her Department and (ii) each (A) non-departmental public body, (B) executive agency and (C) other public body for which her Department is responsible in each English region owned in (1) 2003–04 and (2) 2004–05. [40151]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has held asset information, across all asset types since September 2003. The actual number of assets in each category can vary month on month and therefore a snapshot of information shown in the table represents assets held for 2003–04 and 2004–05. The representative month in each year is September. The Department does not hold centrally asset information for non-departmental public bodies, executive agencies or for other public bodies for which it is responsible.

Asset type	September 2003	September 2004
Personal computers	6,766	6,291
Laptops	2,419	2,966
Servers	586	533
Printers	2,548	2,420
Scanners	202	202
Photocopiers	122	122
Fax machines	464	425

Departmental Expenditure

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the annual expenditure on vehicles by (a) her Department and (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which she is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland was in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [39973]

Jane Kennedy: For details of expenditure on ministerial vehicles provided to the Department by the Government Car and Despatch Agency, I refer the hon. Member to the letter of 20 December 2005 from the chief executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker). Copies of this letter are available in the Library.

For the core Department, information is not collected on a consistent basis for the years requested. Nor is information on other public bodies collected centrally. This could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of pension contributions incurred by (a) her Department and (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which she is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [39975]

Jane Kennedy: Employer contributions for the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme are (to the nearest thousand) as follows:

2002–03—£20,022,000

2003–04—£21,096,000

2004–05—£14,985,000

Projected costs for 2005–06 are £13,500,000.

Departmental Research

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research projects commissioned by her Department are being undertaken; and what the publication arrangements are in each case. [32987]

Jane Kennedy: The Department funds research that provides a knowledge base for health and social care policy and, separately, to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the national health service. Details of the projects currently forming part of the Department's national research programmes[1] can be found on the National Research Register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

National programme project findings are placed on the Research Findings Electronic Register (ReFeR) database that can similarly be found on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/research. The researchers concerned are also responsible in each case for publishing the results of the research they undertake. Some national programme co-ordinating centres have freestanding websites and use them separately to disseminate outputs from their programmes.

Details of other research commissioned by the Department are shown in the table.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many civil servants in her Department worked from home for at least one day a week in the last year for which figures are available. [40289]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has a formal home-working scheme under which the home is the employee's place of work for all or some of the working week. The Department's human resource information system currently records four staff as members of this scheme. However, the Department also provides a wide variety of other arrangements which allow staff to work flexibly, and thereby help to promote diversity and the achievement of a better work-life balance, while still ensuring its business is conducted effectively. These include initiatives such as a flexitime scheme, part-time working, job sharing, part-year appointments, which are particularly suitable for people wishing to work only during school term time, compressed hours, fitting the working week into less that five full days, and special leave arrangements to cope with a variety of circumstances.

The Department also allows staff to work at home on an occasional basis at management discretion. This is becoming more widespread with the greater use of information technology, which means staff can carry out more of their work away from the office.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by her Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report, Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People, where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government departments. [37078]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has lead responsibility for recommendations primarily relating to increasing people's ability to live independently. Our first priority for action has been developing pilots for Individual Budgets. The idea behind Individual Budgets is to put people at the centre of the system that delivers their services and give them more choice and control over how resources are used to support their needs. The Department is working with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP), and the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) to take this forward.

We are also working with DfES to take forward a number of recommendations relating to early years and family support and the transition to adulthood, such as pilots in 70 local authorities for year 9 transition reviews for children with learning disabilities.

The Department of Health has supported DWP in its launch of the Office of Disability Issues (ODI). We are working with DWP and the ODI to take forward recommendations on supporting disabled people to find and retain employment.

Drug Prices

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the price paid by the NHS for drugs and medicines compared with the European average; and if she will make a statement. [45490]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 25 January 2006]: Prices for branded medicines in the United Kingdom are broadly comparable to those in Germany and Finland but higher than those in most other European countries, based on 2003 market exchange rates. Further details are available in the Eighth Report to Parliament on the Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme.

Emergency Re-admissions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to question 29552, on emergency re-admissions, if she will provide the figures for quarter 4 of 2004–05 and quarter 1 of 2005–06. [37503]

Mr. Byrne: Total figures by quarter (but not by age) are published in the "Chief Executive's Report to the NHS, Statistical Supplement-December 2005". The statistical supplement is available at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/43/03/04124303.pdf.

More detailed and more specific figures by appropriate age band will be published on the National Centre for Health Outcomes Development's (NCHOD) website www.nchod.nhs.uk in early 2006, though they will not cover the precise age bands as provided in the reply I gave on 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 762W.

There may be small differences between the various sources due to differences in coverage and definition.

Executive Agencies

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) targets, (b) advice and (c) guidance her Department has given to Executive agencies that fall under the remit of her Department on the reorganisation of their administrative functions on a regional basis; and if she will make a statement. [41643]

Jane Kennedy: In response to the Lyons Review, the Department has advised its Executive agencies and other arms length bodies (ALBs) that where opportunities arise, plans should be formulated to relocate posts that are not involved in local service delivery to new locations outside London and the Greater South East. In formulating these plans, agencies are to take account of the guidance being produced by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on choice of location.

For the Department's Executive agencies this work is being taken forward as part of the change programme arising from the Department's ALB review of 2004.

Fake Prescription Drugs

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps are being taken to prevent fake prescription drugs entering the NHS supply chain; [43609]

(2) what procedures are in place to safeguard the supply of prescription drugs to the NHS; [43610]

(3) what research she has evaluated on the number of fatalities within the NHS due to fake medications. [43611]

Jane Kennedy: The Government body responsible for the regulation and licensing of medicines, the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) operates a comprehensive anti-counterfeiting strategy, working with partners and stakeholders to ensure that the current safeguards work effectively and that vigilance against counterfeit medicines entering the legitimate United Kingdom supply chain is maintained. The key elements of this strategy include:

the operation of Europe's largest medicines surveillance scheme to spot-check medicines on the UK market and then undertake laboratory analysis to test for authentication; increased checks by MHRA inspectors for counterfeits when inspecting pharmaceutical manufacturers and distributors; collaborative international enforcement action and a training and education/awareness raising program amongst law enforcement agencies and pharmaceutical stakeholders, conducted domestically, at European level, and internationally between respective national medicines regulators.

This is a long-term strategy which is backed by investment and a significant commitment of resources to minimise the risk of counterfeit medicines reaching patients.

The supply and distribution of medicines is tightly controlled within the European community. All licensed wholesalers must comply with the community's agreed standards of good distribution practice and there exist strict licensing and regulatory requirements enshrined in UK domestic legislation to safeguard patients against potential hazards arising from poor distribution practices, for example, purchasing suspect or counterfeit products, poor storage, failing to establish the bona fides of suppliers and purchasers, inadequate record keeping, avoiding deterioration of the medicinal product, etc. The MHRA will take regulatory action where breaches are identified, which may take the form of revoking licenses or the instigation of criminal proceedings.

The MHRA is unaware of any fatalities within the UK directly attributable to counterfeit medicines, and does not conduct research into this issue.

Folic Acid

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information her Department distributes informing women of child bearing age about folic acid supplementation. [37685]

Caroline Flint: The Department has produced information for women on the benefits of taking folic acid supplementation through a leaflet called 'Folic acid what all women should know' for the national health service. Information on the benefits of folic acid supplementation is also included in the 'Pregnancy Book' for women planning a subsequent pregnancy and all communications on diet and nutrition for women of child bearing age. Mainstream verbal advice is also given by health professionals who come into contact with women who are pregnant or planning pregnancy.

Gene Therapy

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to provide further funding for the MDEX consortium gene therapy clinical trials. [45441]

Jane Kennedy: In 2004, the Department awarded £1.6 million to the muscular dystrophy campaign, headed by Professor Francesco Muntoni at Imperial College London for research on duchenne muscular dystrophy (DMD). If successful, this research should lead to the first UK gene therapy clinical trial aimed at treating DMD. The Government will carefully monitor developments in this area in considering future funding needs.

Genetic Testing

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she is taking to build capacity for genetic testing services in the NHS; [44781]

(2) what funding she has made available for expanding genetic testing services since 1997, broken down by area of expenditure. [44906]

Jane Kennedy: Genetic testing is one component of specialised medical genetics services. These are commissioned by specialised commissioning groups, funded by their constituent primary care trusts (PCTs) from PCTs' normal allocations to provide services for their local populations.

The Government have undertaken a number of initiatives since 2001 to strengthen genetic services. In 2002, nearly £11 million was awarded over up to three years across England to provide new laboratory equipment and pump-prime new substantive posts in both clinical and laboratory services. Over 40 clinical scientist and technical posts were funded.

The genetics White Paper, "Our Inheritance, Our Future—Realising the potential of genetics in the NHS" in June 2003 built further on this investment. Up to £3.5 million is being made available for a programme to increase the laboratory workforce. This will fund up to 90 new laboratory scientist trainees and the equivalent of 10 full time trainer posts. We have also invested £1.5 million so far in a scheme to train 50 new genetics counsellors over a period of five years.

The White Paper committed to £18 million to expand and modernise National health service genetic laboratory capacity. This investment, made during 2004–05 and 2005–06, will support genetics laboratories in delivering the genetics White Paper standards for making test results available more quickly.

We have also invested over 4 million to date on several initiatives, including two national genetics reference laboratories and staffing support for the UK Genetic Testing Network, that help laboratories make best use of their capacity.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which genetic tests are offered by NHS organisations in England; which providers offer genetic testing services; which conditions can be diagnosed by these genetic tests; and if she will make a statement. [44904]

Jane Kennedy: The UK Genetic Testing Network (UKGTN) is a network of the main national health service molecular genetic laboratories in the United Kingdom. It produces the 'NHS Directory of Molecular Genetic Testing' which lists molecular genetic tests available through NHS genetic services (www.ukgtn.org) as well as a database of all UKGTN laboratories and the tests that they offer. As many tests are rare and volumes are often low no laboratory offers all the tests listed but tests are sent to other laboratories as necessary.

In addition to these molecular genetic tests offered through the UKGTN some tests will be offered through other laboratories such as those serving haemophilia services and there are other types of genetic test provided for example through cytogenetics laboratories.

The services in England are shown in the following table; they deal with a wide range of genetic disorders, including inherited cancers. There is a further service at the Royal Marsden NHS Foundation Trust, which deals with inherited cancers only. In general the same trust is host to both the clinical and laboratory services.

Good Hope Hospital

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the contract with Secta at Good Hope Hospital Trust was terminated; and if she will make a statement. [42850]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 24 January 2006]: Birmingham and The Black Country strategic health authority reports that the board of Good Hope Hospital National Health Service Trust reviewed its strategic objectives in conjunction with its franchise partner, Tribal Secta, and decided that the best way to achieve foundation trust status by 2008 was to seek a local NHS partner to work with. As a result, the board has accepted interim management support from Heart of England NHS Foundation Trust and has given the new management team a specific remit to assess whether Good Hope Hospital NHS Trust can stand alone or should seek a merger partner. The contract with Tribal Secta, which was scheduled to run until August 2006, was therefore terminated by mutual agreement eight months early to facilitate the trust's new strategic objective of achieving foundation trust status.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the out-turn against budget at Good Hope Hospital Trust has been in each month of the last five years. [42851]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 24 January 2006]: The information is not available in the format requested. The table shows the annual turnover and out-turn for Good Hope Hospital National Health Service Trust in each of the last five years.

£000

	Turnover	Surplus/deficit
2000–01	71,544	48
2001–02	82,551	53
2002–03	89,050	-839
2003–04	93,715	-5,014
2004–05	106,570	-3,576

Notes:
1. 'Turnover' is the sum of 'income from activities', and 'other operating income'.
2. 'Surplus/deficit' figures relate to the 'retained surplus/deficit for the year' of the trust, in each case.

Greenwich District Hospital

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the change in methodology in the calculation of profit from the sale of the former Greenwich District Hospital site; and who has been affected financially as a consequence of this change. [44324]

Jane Kennedy: This is a local matter. However, the South East London Strategic Health Authority has advised that the methodology used in the calculation of profit of sale of the former Greenwich District Hospital site did not change. The Queen Elizabeth Hospital Trust made a net £1.1 million surplus from the disposal of this site in 2004–05 arising from the difference between the net sale proceeds and the value of the asset in the trust's audited accounts. This benefit reduces the size of the deficit that the trust has to recover.

Home Oxygen Therapy

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average delivery time was for emergency oxygen deliveries to out-patients in the most recent year for which figures are available. [45382]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 24 January 2006]: These figures are not available centrally.

The new home oxygen service, which starts on 1 February 2006, specifically includes the provision of oxygen to patients at home on an emergency basis. Under the new arrangements, where clinical staff order this service, the supplier will deliver oxygen to the patient's home within four hours. The new service contract also includes arrangements for monitoring response times.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the implications of the changed arrangements for home oxygen therapy on (a) waiting times for service and (b) patient safety; and if she will make a statement. [45383]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 24 January 2006]: The new arrangements offer patients a wider range of modern equipment that will support them in the better management of their symptoms at home and help avoid the need for emergency admission to hospital, wherever possible. The new service contract also sets out specific delivery times for home oxygen, including where ordered on an emergency basis and where ordered to support a patient's discharge from hospital.

The new arrangements will continue to ensure that patients receive a safe and efficient home oxygen service. A detailed service specification emphasises the importance of arrangements to assess risks to patients using equipment and the contract makes provision for potential risks to supply. The new service is available on a 24 hours, seven days a week basis. A free phone service allows clinical staff to order the required service and seek advice at any time. Patients also have access to this service to provide support on any problems in using equipment or disruption to supply.

Hospital Admissions (Drug Misuse)

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital admissions with primary diagnoses of mental and behavioural disorders relating to drug misuse took place in each of the last five years. [44119]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Hospital admissions under mental illness specialties with a primary diagnosis of a mental or behavioural disorder and relating to drug misuse, in England between 2000–01 and 2004–05, are shown in the following table.

	Data year
Type of drug	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04[1]	2004–05[1]

Hospital Beds (North-East)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the occupancy rates were for each hospital trust in the North East in the last three years for which figures are available. [44596]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the tables:

Influenza Vaccinations

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of those aged over 65 years are expected to receive influenza vaccinations by the end of winter 2005–06. [34106]

Caroline Flint: Under the new inspection systems national targets are no longer set. Targets are now a local decision. In the Chief Medical Officer letter to health professionals dated 25 July 2005, he said that continued improvement of uptake rates across all groups should be encouraged.

Mal de Debarquement Syndrome

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps her Department is taking to increase awareness of mal de debarquement syndrome; [46387]

(2) how many patients in England were diagnosed as having mal de debarquement syndrome in each of the last three years; [46388]

(3) what treatments for mal de debarquement syndrome are available on the NHS. [46389]

Mr. Byrne: We have no plans to increase awareness of this very rare condition.

Information on the number of patients with mal de debarquement is not collected.

We are not aware of any effective treatment for mal de debarquement.

Maternity Services

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many midwife-led birth centres there are in England; [44934]

(2) what steps she is taking to promote caseload working in maternity services. [44935]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 23 January 2006]: It is a matter for local services to determine how they use their midwifery resources and how far they are able to introduce caseload working in maternity services. Not all midwives are able to undertake this form of working as it requires a great deal of flexibility in terms of their working day. Trusts that have been successful in attracting and retaining their midwifery workforce have in place a variety of care models.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwives there were in the national health service in England, expressed as (a) a headcount and (b) whole-time equivalents, in each of the last 10 years. [44936]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 23 January 2006]: The information requested is shown in the table.

Midwives employed in the national health service as at 30 September each year

	Headcount	Full-time equivalent
1995	22,022	18,034
1996	22,595	18,262
1997	22,385	18,053
1998	22,841	18,168

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she (a) is taking and (b) plans to take to offer women choice over which midwife provides one-to-one continuing care during pregnancy and birth. [44937]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 January 2006]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1064W.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many three-month vacancies for midwives there are in the national health service in England. [44938]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 23 January 2006]: The last survey showed that there were 348 three-month vacancies for midwives in the national health service in England at March 2005. The vacancy rate has fallen from 3.3 per cent. in March 2004 to 1.8 per cent. in March 2005, which is shown in the following table.

Three-month vacancies and vacancy rates March 1999–05

	Vacancy rate (percentage)	Number of vacancies
1999	2.1	400
2000	2.8	510
2001	2.6	470
2002	2.8	530
2003	3.1	572
2004	3.3	619
2005	1.8	348

Notes:
1. Vacancy rates rounded to one decimal place.
2. Number of vacancies rounded to the nearest 10.
3. Three-month vacancies are posts that have been vacant for three months or more as at 30 March that trusts are actively trying to fill.
4. Three-month vacancy rates are three-month vacancies as a percentage of vacancies plus staff in post.

Medical Staff (Pay)

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in requiring the (a) doctors and dentists review body and (b) nurses and other health professionals review body to consider local pay; and if she will make a statement. [44949]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 23 January 2006]: In the Budget on 9 April 2003, the Chancellor announced that public sector pay arrangements, including those for most of the staff groups covered by pay review bodies should include a greater local and regional dimension. In the light of this announcement the terms of reference of the review body on doctors' and dentists' remuneration and the review body for nursing and other health professions were amended in 2003 to ask the review bodies, in reaching their recommendations, to have regard to regional or local variations in labour markets and their impact on recruitment and retention.

Medicine Use Reviews

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps were taken by (a) her Department and (b) the NHS to make the public aware of the availability of medicine use reviews (i) before and (ii) after their introduction; and how much was spent by each for such purposes; [43316]

(2) what estimate her Department made of the number of medicine use reviews that would be conducted in the first (a) six and (b) 12 months of the scheme; [43317]

(3) how many medicine use reviews have been conducted in each quarter since the scheme commenced; [43318]

(4) how much her Department allocated to medicine use reviews in (a) their first and (b) each subsequent year of operation. [43319]

Jane Kennedy: Medicines use review (MURs) is an advanced service within the new community pharmacy contractual framework, which went live from 1 April 2005. Community pharmacists can chose whether or not they undertake MURs, but must meet accreditation requirements if they do. £39 million has been allocated for this service in 2005–06. Each pharmacy contractor can undertake up to a maximum of 250 MURs, if they meet the requirements before 1 January 2006, or 200 MURs, if they meet the requirements from 1 January 2006, in the first year.

The number of MURs conducted monthly since the scheme commenced are shown in the table.

As at 2005:
April	373
May	718
June	870
July	1,688
August	2,241
September	5,037
October	8,696
November	[1]13,646

[1] The figure for November 2005 is provisional and subject to revision.

In the first six months, community pharmacies would have been focusing on meeting the requirements of the essential services, which had to be met by the end of the transition period on 1 October 2005.

The communication strategy for the new community pharmacy contractual framework, developed by the Department, Pharmaceutical Negotiating Committee and NHS Employers, provides for timely dissemination of information and messages at a number of stages by all parties to the strategy. It is important that the public is made aware of the new services at the point they become widely available.

The Department has to date committed £58,450 for printing and distribution of a booklet entitled "Medicines Use Review: Understand Your Medicines" prepared by Medicines Partnership. This booklet is aimed at patients to help them get the most from their MUR. All pharmacies in England were sent copies of the booklet just before Christmas, with a covering letter giving details of the Department's publications orderline at 08701 555 455 to call for further supplies. In addition, the booklet is posted on the Medicines Partnership's website and can be downloaded or viewed, as required www.medicines-partnership.org.

Medicines Management

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will publish the results of the Hospitals Medicines Management Framework Self-Assessment; and if she will make a statement; [43300]

(2) if she will list the statistical information collected by her Department relating to medicines management in hospitals; and if she will make a statement; [43301]

(3) how many hospitals have self-medication systems in place; and if she will make a statement. [43302]

Jane Kennedy: As part of the Department's commitment to reducing administrative burdens on the national health service, statistical information relating to medicines management in hospitals is not collected routinely. However, in 2003 NHS trusts were invited to self-assess their medicines management performance against developmental good practice standards contained in the Department's medicines management framework. Responses were considered by strategic health authorities (SHAs) and, where appropriate, action plans to address areas of weakness would be developed and implemented by the individual trusts. The information collected by SHAs suggested that by the end of 2004 some 67 per cent. of respondents expected to have systems in place to utilise patients' own drugs and enable self-administration, where appropriate. The Department does not hold results centrally for the medicines management framework. In line with "Shifting the Balance of Power", SHAs performance manage this process.

Further information about medicines management in hospitals is expected to be available in summer 2006 when the Healthcare Commission publishes findings from its acute hospital portfolio medicines management review.

Mental Health

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what social and cultural factors she has identified as having (a) an impact on and (b) a correlation with the incidence of mental illnesses; and if she will make a statement. [40897]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department did not directly assess the social and cultural factors that may have an impact on and a correlation with the incidence of mental illnesses. However, the Office for National Statistics' (ONS's) report "Psychiatric Morbidity among Adults Living in Private Households, 2000" shows the associations between the presence of mental disorders and key socio-demographic and economic characteristics for those with different types of mental disorder. This report is available on ONS's website at www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_health/psychmorb.pdf.

"Ethnic Minority Psychiatric Illness Rates in the Community" published by the National Centre for Social Research and the Royal Free and University College Medical School, explores the prevalence of mental disorders by demographic and socio-economic factors for the main ethnic minority groups in England. This report is available at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/02/40/34/04024034.pdf.

The Social Exclusion Unit report, "Mental Health and Social Exclusion", published by the Department in 2004, also identifies a range of factors that can affect the prevalence of mental health problems in the general population. This report is available at www.socialexclusion.gov.uk/page.asp?id=257.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital admissions on mental health grounds in each year since 1997 resulted from the use of (a) pharmaceutical drugs, (b) heroin, (c) cocaine, (d) cannabis, (e) alcohol, (f) nicotine, (g) stimulants and (h) hallucinogens. [43534]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on admissions under mental illness specialties with a primary diagnosis of a mental or behavioural disorder due to psychoactive substance abuse or poisoning, and caused by drugs, in England between 1996–97 and 2004–05, is shown in the following table.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department has taken to develop mental health telephone helpline services. [43891]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has committed funding of £5 million (2004–05 to 2006–07) and is actively supporting the implementation and development of an infrastructure to facilitate mental health helpline providers, working in partnership to achieve increased quality, efficiency, capacity, governance, choice and access in relation to the provision of helpline services 24 hours a day. Members of the Mental Health Helplines Partnership (MHHP) are taking forward a detailed programme of work and progress can be reported in the following areas:

Accredited training: facilitation of accredited training for mental health helpline workers through the Telephone Helplines Association.

Mental Health Helplines Quality Standards (MHHQS): 25 helplines have received accreditation and work is progressing to accredit a further 12.

Targeted Investment Resources: The MHHP has processed over 20 applications for targeted investment and approved 10 to date. Further applications are currently being processed.

Telecommunications solution: Once established this telecommunications solution will enable callers to access mental health helplines 24 hours a day. It is anticipated that a preferred provider will be identified within six months.

MHHP website: Negotiations are at an advanced stage with a preferred provider for the development and maintenance of a website, which will provide partnership updates on all areas of work and helpline services.

Shared Services provision: Later this year work is due to commence on commissioning shared services for MHHP members.

Mental health helplines conference: The MHHP will host a second national mental health helpline conference in May, to share its achievements with service users and key stakeholders.

Midwifery (North Wales)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwifery posts are vacant in each acute NHS trust in the North West. [45176]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 24 January 2006]: Information is not available in the format requested. However, the table shows three month vacancies of qualified nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff in the North West by organisation.

Notes:

Three month vacancy:

1. Three month vacancy information is as at 31 March 2005.
2. Three month vacancies are vacancies which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (whole-time equivalents).
3. Three month vacancy rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three month vacancies plus staff in post.
4. Three month vacancy rates are calculated using staff in post from the Non-Medical Workforce Census September 2004.
5. Percentages are rounded to 1 decimal place
6. — zero.

Staff in post:

1. Staff in post data is from the Non-Medical Workforce Census September 2004.
2. — zero.

General:
1. Vacancy and staff in post numbers are rounded to the nearest whole number.
2. Calculating the vacancy rates using the aforementioned data may not equal the actual vacancy rates.
3. Due to rounding, totals may not equal the sum of component parts.
4. Strategic health authority figures are based on trusts, and do not necessarily reflect the geographical provision of health care.

Mobile Telephone Masts

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's policy is on giving consent to the siting of telephone masts on NHS estates. [45978]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 26 January 2006]: National health service trusts and primary care trusts hold land in their own name and hence, these trusts do not require the consent of the Department when leasing property for the erection of telephone masts and associated base stations.

Multiple Sclerosis

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the clinical trials at the Atkinson Morley Wing of St George's Medical School in Tooting, South London for Aimspro to treat secondary progressive multiple sclerosis are expected to be completed. [44916]

Jane Kennedy: The trial at St George's was halted by the supplier of the product on 1 March 2005 and has not resumed. It is believed that only one patient had completed the trial by the time it was halted.

NHS Finance

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her statement of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 851 on NHS Finance, what extra time the Thames Valley Strategic Health Authority has been given to sort out its financial deficit; and what help the Thames Valley Strategic Health Authority (a) has had and (b) will have (i) from the NHS Bank and (ii) other NHS organisations to sort out its financial deficit. [30762]

Caroline Flint: It is the responsibility of strategic health authorities to deliver both overall financial balance for their local health communities and to ensure each and every body achieves financial balance. Thames Valley SHA agreed with the Department to deliver a balanced financial position across all its organisations for 2005–06, they have not been granted any extra time to resolve their financial problems. The Department's expectation is that this is met.

The Thames Valley SHA has received no general support form the NHS Bank.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 145W, on NHS finance, what the total saving made by the NHS Litigation Authority was; and whether this saving is non-recurrent. [44269]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 20 January 2006]: The total saving against the NHS Litigation Authority's initial 2004–05 budget was £375 million. The reasons for the reduced budget requirement are ongoing and similar savings are anticipated against the 2005–06 initial budget requirement. Clinical negligence provision by definition cannot be forecast with complete accuracy in advance.

NHS Managers (Job Losses)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of job losses among NHS managers as a result of changes to primary care trusts; and what proportion of job losses will be from managers who are also clinicians. [41882]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 16 January 2006]: Ministers have given the go-ahead for all 28 strategic health authorities to begin local consultations on boundary changes to strategic health authorities and primary care trusts. Consultations started on 14 December and will continue for a period of 14 weeks, until 22 March. Until any boundary changes are agreed, it is not possible to calculate the number of job losses.

NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency has spent purchasing gas in each financial year since 2000–01. [42019]

Jane Kennedy: The NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency (NHS PASA) has spent the following on gas in the last five financial years:

2000–01	4,554
2001–02	21,231
2002–03	11,177
2003–04	6,915
2004–05	6,938

Through the NHS PASA framework agreements trusts have spent the following amounts on gas purchases in each financial year since 2000–01:

	£ million
2000–01	[1]63.1
2001–02	[2]48.2
2002–03	[2]71.2
2003–04	[2]62.5
2004–05	[2]79.1
2005–06	[1]148.28

[1] Estimated
[2] Actual

In 2000–01, NHS PASA purchase of gas via the framework agreements accounted for approximately 70 per cent. of the national health service market. In 2005–06, NHS PASA agreements accounted for approximately 85 per cent. of the NHS market.

NHS Trusts (Board Members)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the board members of each NHS trust who have left their positions in the last three years. [45492]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 January 2006]: Information about board members who have left the boards of national health service bodies is not available centrally. The NHS Appointments Commission has information about the appointment of non-executive board members since 2001, when it was established. The NHS Appointments Commission have been asked to write directly to the hon. Member regarding this inquiry.

Northiam and Broad Oak Surgeries

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Minister of State for NHS delivery will provide a written response following his meeting with the hon. Member for Bexhill and Battle on 9 January on Northiam and Broad Oak surgeries. [43955]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 January 2006]: The Minister of State for Delivery, my noble Friend Lord Warner, provided a written response on 23 January 2006.

Palliative Care (Funding)

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the adequacy of funding of palliative care in the Eastern Region of England. [42973]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There are five cancer networks in the East of England and each of the five cancer networks, with their constituent primary care trusts (PCTs), has set out a three-year investment strategy informed by a population needs assessment to identify the specialist palliative care requirement of their resident population. Against this assessment they have invested their allocation from the additional £50 million per annum for specialist palliative care which is now in PCT baselines. Having assessed their local priorities, PCTs can invest more.

Patient Deaths

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have died due to mistakes made by NHS staff in each year since 1997; and what proportion resulted in prosecutions. [43288]

Jane Kennedy: This information is not collected centrally in the form requested.

Several estimates have been made of the number of patient safety incidents that occur each year, and the number of people who die as a result. For example, estimates that have been widely quoted are of 850,000 incidents per year and 40,000 deaths in England. The accuracy of these estimates, and of similar estimates from other countries, has been widely debated. Such estimates are likely to depend on a number of factors including the source of the original data and the definitions used in the original studies from which the estimates were derived.

Many patients, particularly those in acute care settings, are critically ill, and so grading the degree of harm caused by an incident is not straightforward. For example, some deaths following incidents may have occurred as a result of the underlying illness rather than as a result of the incident.

The Government is concerned about assuring and improving the safety of care for NHS patients. As part of our national health service patient safety programme, we established the National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA) in July 2001 to improve the safety of NHS patient care. The NPSA has introduced a national reporting and learning system for patient safety incidents and issued a number of patient safety solutions to the NHS to improve the safety of care for areas of known risk.

The reporting and learning system will, in time, enable us to understand the nature and extent of adverse events in the NHS more fully, and take action to prevent them being repeated. All NHS organisations in England and Wales are now reporting patient safety incidents to the national system.

Patient Safety

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are in place for the (a) monitoring and (b) improvement of the safety of NHS patients who receive treatment from other healthcare providers. [20346]

Jane Kennedy: Health care provided for national health service patients by establishments outside the NHS is covered by the provisions of the Care Standards Act 2000 and the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003.

Those private healthcare establishments, including independent hospitals or clinics, or medical agencies providing services to NHS patients, that are subject to registration with, and inspection by, the Healthcare Commission under the Care Standards Act are required to comply with the Private and Voluntary Healthcare (England) Regulations 2001 and the National Minimum Standards (NMS) for Independent Health Care published in 2002.

Within this framework, the Healthcare Commission uses three essential suitability criteria to determine whether persons, organisations and services are suitable to operate:

fitness of premises—that premises are fit for the purpose of the service;

fitness of persons—that the persons running and managing the service, any person nominated as the responsible individual on behalf of an organisation, and any staff or other persons working for the service are fit to do so; and fitness of services and facilities—that the treatment, services and facilities (including policies and procedures) meet the requirements of the Private and Voluntary Healthcare Regulations, are suitable and safe and meet the needs of the service users as interpreted through the NMS for the service concerned.

The registration process has been designed to assess each application against these criteria. The process includes interviews with the applicants, checks on their character and an inspection or pre-registration visit to the service.

The registered provider is responsible for providing a safe and effective service. This includes having a health and safety policy and risk assessments in place and audit systems to assess the quality of care.

The Healthcare Commission currently inspects all registered establishments annually. Establishments are inspected against the requirements of the 2001 regulations and the NMS. Inspections focus on perceived areas of risk in each establishment. Assessment managers prepare written reports setting out requirements, recommendations, and areas of concern identified during inspections. These reports, which are published and available on the Commission's website, include timetables for compliance with any specific requirements.

In addition, health care provided for NHS patients, be it by the NHS or for the NHS by a non-NHS establishment, is reviewed by the Healthcare Commission under the 2003 Act, against the NHS standards—"Standards for Better Health"—published by the Secretary of State in July 2004. As part of its review process, the Healthcare Commission ensures that services for NHS patients delivered from outside the NHS are commissioned against these standards, including those covering patient safety.

Those services contracted directly by the Department from non-NHS organisations are commissioned using the framework of the "Standards for Better Health" and where appropriate are reviewed against the Private and Voluntary Healthcare Regulations and NMS.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Royal College of Nursing about her plans to give primary care trusts a solely commissioning role. [24403]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has had several discussions with the Royal College of Nursing (RCN) on this issue, and a settlement has now been reached over judicial review proceedings that were issued by the RCN at the end of October 2005.

A letter was issued from the Secretary of State on 8 December 2005 to the RCN General Secretary, Dr. Beverley Malone, which stated that:

"We do not have a policy requirement or timetable for PCTs to divest themselves of provision. We well support PCTs whether or not they divest themselves of service provision, provided that what is being offered is genuinely best for local patient care.

"We have tried to make this clear to the service, and as I said to Parliament on 25 October,

"District Nurses, health visitors and other staff delivering clinical services will continue to be employees by their PCT, unless and until the PCT decides otherwise" and "any such decisions would be driven locally following our White Paper deliberations".

In response to the letter, Dr. Beverly Malone has publicly stated:

"Issuing an application to be granted permission to apply for judicial review is not a step the RCN took lightly. We are, therefore, pleased a settlement has been agreed with the Department of Health and especially welcome the reassurance that there is no policy requirement or timetable for PCTs to divest themselves of provision.

"The RCN looks forward to working closely with the Government to ensure that nurses, and other health care workers, are involved in any decisions made about the future of the NHS."

The RCN have been fully involved in discussions around the White Paper, which is due to be published at the end of January, and will set out a vision for the future of local health and care services that will address questions about how, when and in what settings primary care services are delivered.

Predictive Diallers

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many calls were made from call centres in her Department in 2004–05 using predictive diallers; how many such calls resulted in contact being made with the recipient without a Government agent available to talk to them; and what assessment she has made of the likely impact of Ofcom's policy on silent calls on the use of predictive diallers in departmental call centres. [28172]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has a single call centre, part of a customer service directorate. This centre does not use predictive dialling.

Prescriptions

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department made prior to the change in prescription charge regulations in April 2004 of the number of additional patients per year who would become entitled to free prescriptions; and how many patients have successfully claimed exemption from prescription charges as a result of that change. [45020]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 25 January 2006]: Prior to the change to the prescription charge regulations in April 2004, based on a sample of low income scheme claims, we estimated that around 29,000 claims would move from partial help, which gives no entitlement to free prescriptions, to entitlement to free prescriptions.

For 2004–05, the latest year for which sample data are available, we estimate that around 45,000 low income scheme claims have resulted in entitlement to free prescriptions that would previously have resulted in partial help.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reviews of the prescription charging system her Department has undertaken since 1997; what plans she has to conduct further reviews of the prescription charging system; whether she will place the copies of any review of prescription charges which has been undertaken since 1997 in the Library; and if she will make a statement. [42936]

Jane Kennedy: An internal review of prescription charges was undertaken by departmental officials in conjunction with HM Treasury as part of the formulation of government policy for the 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review. This work fed into the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review which was published by the HM Treasury. There are no plans to undertake a further review.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice her Department issues to (a) primary care trusts and (b) general practitioners on the issue of prescriptions to patients who pay for drugs to ensure that amounts issued by practices in prescriptions are monitored. [41650]

Jane Kennedy: The amounts of drugs prescribed or the duration of prescriptions is a decision reserved for the general practitioner who has clinical responsibility for that particular aspect of a patient's care. The Department has not issued guidance on this issue but informal advice on prescription duration and drug wastage was included in Connect bulletin number 20 issued by the National Prescribing Centre in March 2000. A copy is available in the Library.

Queen Elizabeth Hospital Trust

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made on the impact of the private finance initiative arrangements on the reference cost index of the Queen Elizabeth Hospital Trust; and if she will make a statement. [44321]

Jane Kennedy: The Queen Elizabeth Hospital National Health Service Trust has a reference cost index score of 103 for the year 2003–04. This shows that it is operating at costs 3 per cent. above the national average. An organisation with costs equal to the national average for this activity will score 100. Private finance initiative costs are apportioned to activity by the trusts themselves and not separately identified in reference costs submissions.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the basis is for the change in the discount rate on the Queen Elizabeth Hospital Trust Finance Initiative deferred asset in 2005–06; and if she will make a statement. [44322]

Jane Kennedy: This is a local matter. The South East London Strategic Health Authority (SHA) has advised that following the HM Treasury's discount rate for the provisions for 3.5 per cent. and 2.2 per cent., the Queen Elizabeth Hospital Trust has applied this directive to the deferred asset created to transfer ownership of the private finance initiative hospital back to the national health service over the term of the contract. The SHA further advises that this interpretation of the guidance has recently been clarified by the Department. However, the trust is finding it difficult to contain the impact of the financial pressure resulting from this clarification which was published on 3 January with an effective date of 1 April 2005.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the consortia refinanced the Queen Elizabeth Hospital Trust Private Finance Initiative; and what estimate she has made of the financial effect on the trust if it had shared the reduced costs. [44325]

Jane Kennedy: This is a local matter. The South East London Strategic Health Authority has advised that the Queen Elizabeth Hospital scheme has not been refinanced. It was financed with an index-linked bond. The nature of bond deals make them very hard to refinance without incurring considerable additional costs. It is therefore unlikely that a refinancing will take place as the costs will normally outweigh the benefits.

Rheumatology

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to safeguard the employment of specialist rheumatology nurses and practitioners during the reorganisation of primary care trusts. [32283]

Mr. Byrne: The potential reorganisation of primary care trusts (PCTs) resulting from Commissioning a Patient-led NHS is currently out for local consultation. The Department has commissioned a human resource framework in support of these anticipated changes, which has been written in partnership with colleagues from the service and trade unions, through the Employers Organisation. This framework document sets out for national health service employers best practice and legal employment requirements needed to retain NHS staff during potential organisational restructuring.

Stoma Nurses

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any changes are planned in the provision of stoma nurses. [41985]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 January 2006]: The Department is currently undertaking a consultation about the possible changes to improve the arrangements for the provision of dressings, incontinence appliances, stoma appliances, chemical reagents and other appliances to primary and secondary care. Part of this consultation will review the sponsorship of nurses and manufacturers.

The consultation closes on 23 January and we are not in a position at present to comment on the outcome.

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost per patient treated in hospital was for each strategic health authority in England in each of the last 10 years. [35164]

Mr. Byrne: There is no data collected centrally at individual patient level. Data are collected on a finished consultant episode basis and at national health service trust level, within which one or more hospitals will operate.

Thiomersal

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research her Department has undertaken into thiomersal; and if she will make a statement; [43204]

(2) which paediatric vaccines contain mercury; and if she will make a statement. [43205]

Jane Kennedy: As with all medicinal products, vaccine safety is continually monitored by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) with advice from independent experts. The United Kingdom's Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) and its expert working group on vaccine safety have thoroughly reviewed the safety of thiomersal-containing vaccines, including alleged links with neurodevelopmental disorders, and kept this under close review.

In 2001, the CSM, now the Commission for Human Medicines, conducted a major review of the available evidence and has since then considered new data on a number of occasions as it has emerged. Following concerns in the United States of America (USA) about the possible toxicity of thiomersal-containing vaccines, the Department funded a study using the UK's general practice research database to investigate whether there is a relationship between the amount of thiomersal that an infant receives through vaccination at a young age and subsequent neurological disorders. Data from a study involving over a 100,000 UK children were considered by CSM in 2003. Further studies from Denmark involving almost half a million children and a study from the USA have also specifically investigated the suggested link between mercury-containing vaccines and autism. None of these studies have found any evidence of a causal association with subsequent neurodevelopment disorders, including autism.

The advice of CSM stands that there is no evidence of harm from the very small quantities of thiomersal contained in some vaccines, with the exception of possible allergic reactions, typically skin rashes or local swelling at the site of injection. This view concurs with that of the World Health Organisation, the USA's Institute of Medicine and the European Medicines Agency. The balance of benefits and risks of thiomersal-containing vaccines remains overwhelmingly positive.

None of the vaccines that are currently part of the recommended childhood immunisation programme contain mercury.

Thrombosis

John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions she had on raising thrombosis as a patient safety issue during the UK presidency of the European Union; [41491]

(2) whether the prevention of venous thromboembolism was raised at the Patient Safety Summit held in London on 28 to 30 November 2005. [41492]

Jane Kennedy: The prevention of venous thromboembolism was not raised as a specific patient safety issue during the 2005 UK presidency of the European Union.

However, in response to the Health Committee report on "The prevention of the Venous Thromboembolism (VTE) in Hospitalised Patients" published last year, the Government have established an independent expert working group to help develop a comprehensive strategy for both treatment and prevention of VTE.

The VTE expert group has been asked to report to Chief Medical Officer by summer 2006.

Tooth Decay

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what national targets for tooth decay her Department has set in the last five years; and what the performance against each target has been of each (a) primary care trust and (b) strategic health authority. [35427]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The last national targets were set in 1994 and were for the period 1998–2003. Within this framework, it was for local NHS organisations to decide whether to set individual targets for their locality.

For adults, the target was to reduce the percentage of dentate adults with at least one deep periodontal pocket (greater than 6 millimetres) from 17 per cent. to 10 per cent. The National Adult Dental Health Survey conducted in 1998 showed that 6 per cent. of people aged 45 to 64 had pockets over 6 mm in depth.

For children, the targets were that 12-year-olds should have no more than an average of 1.0 teeth with decay experience, 70 per cent. of five-year-olds should have no decay experience and that five-year-olds should have no more than an average of 1.0 teeth with decay experience. The National Child Health Survey conducted in 2003 found that 12-year-olds in England had an average of 0.7 teeth with obvious decay experience, 59 per cent. of five-year-olds in England had no primary teeth with obvious decay experience and the average number of primary teeth with obvious decay in five-year-olds was 1.5 per cent.

Tuberculosis Vaccination

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent changes there have been to Government policy on the vaccination of children against tuberculosis; and what the present policy is. [39732]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 9 January 2006]: The changes to the bacille calmette guerin vaccination policy were given in the Chief Medical Officer letter to the health profession dated 6 July 2005. A copy of which is available in the Library.

Value for Money

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her statement on the Dimbleby programme that her Department is examining its budget to ensure value for money is achieved, if she will list the programme budgets which are under review. [39355]

Mr. Byrne: It is usual practice to keep all central budgets under review as the financial year progresses as part of prudent financial management.

Vitamin D (Infants)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the optimum age at which breastfed babies will benefit from vitamin D drops; and which variety of vitamin D the Department recommends; [37918]

(2) if she will seek advice from the Food Standards Agency on the levels of vitamin D in various foods for infants and issue appropriate guidance. [37919]

Caroline Flint: The Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy (COMA) recommends that breastfed infants under six months do not need vitamin supplements provided the mother had an adequate vitamin status during pregnancy. From age six months, infants receiving breast milk as their main drink should be given supplements of vitamins A and D. Between the ages of one to five years, vitamins A and D supplements should be given unless adequate vitamin status can be assured from a diverse diet containing vitamins A and D rich foods and from moderate exposure to sunlight.

The Department provides free vitamin supplements to children aged under five under the welfare food scheme, and this supplement provides seven micrograms of vitamin D3 per day. COMA also recommends a supplement for pregnant and breastfeeding mothers of 10 mcg per day which we expect to provide under the healthy start scheme.

The levels of vitamin D in various foods for infants are controlled by the Processed Cereal-based Foods and Baby Food for Infants and Young Children (England) Regulations 2004. These regulations set minimum and maximum levels for the vitamin D content of processed cereal-based foods for infants (0.25 to 0.75 per 100 kilojoules or 1 to 3 per 100 kilocalories).

Waiting Times

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) maximum, (b) average and (c) target waiting times were for (i) inpatient and (ii) first outpatient appointments for each strategic health authority in England in each quarter of the last eight years. [40265]

Mr. Byrne: The Department collects waiting time data by time bands, that is, the number of patients who waited zero to four weeks; four to 13 weeks; 13 to 17 weeks; 17 to 21 weeks; 21 to 26 weeks; and over 26 weeks. It is not possible from those data to calculate precisely the longest any patient had to wait in any given quarter.

Information on average waiting times for first outpatient appointment treatment since 2002–03, when strategic health authority were established, has been placed in the Library.

Target maximum waiting times are shown in the table.

Year end	Maximum inpatient waiting time in months	Maximum waiting time for a first outpatient appointment in months (weeks)
1 April 2002	15	6 (26)
1 April 2003	12	5 (21)
1 April 2004	9	4 (17)
End 2005	6	3 (13)
End 2008	18 weeks for general practitioner referral to start of treatment

Westmorland and Lonsdale

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) residential, (b) nursing and (c) elderly mentally infirm (i) homes and (ii) places were available in Westmorland and Lonsdale in each of the last 10 years, broken down by (A) local authority, (B) private sector and (C) charity and voluntary providers; and what percentage of capacity in each sector was used in each year. [43150]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 January 2006]: Information on the number of care and nursing care homes and places was collected by the Department from 1997 to 2001. The data were collected by health authority and council with social services responsibility areas. This information is shown in tables 1 and 2.

Table 1 shows the number of care homes and places in Cumbria for adults age 18 and over, by type of accommodation at 31 March 1997 to 2001. Table 2 shows the number of care homes and places for older people with mental health problems in Cumbria, by type of accommodation at 31 March 1997 to 2001. Data are not available for the percentage of capacity used each year.

No data is available for 2002.

The Commission for Social Care Inspection produces data on the number of care homes and places registered as at 31 March each year, beginning with 2003. There are some minor definitional differences between this data and those for years up to 2001.

Table 3 shows the number of care homes and places that were registered in Cumbria local authority (LA), of which Westmorland and Lonsdale is part, at 31 March for the years 2003 to 2005, for adults aged 18 and over. Table 4 shows the number of care homes and places for older people with mental health problems in Cumbria LA for the same period. Data are not available for the percentage of capacity used each year.

Data for Westmoreland and Lonsdale constituency is not available separately.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol-related Crime

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many alcohol-related crimes were recorded in west Lancashire in each year since 2002. [45156]

Hazel Blears: From the information collected on recorded crime, it is not possible to identify those offences which are alcohol-related. Such offences are not specifically defined by statute and details of the individual circumstances of offences do not feature in the data series.

Antisocial Behaviour

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new powers have been made available to (a) local councils and (b) police forces to counter antisocial behaviour since May 1997. [45002]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 24 January 2006]: Antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) were introduced in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. The Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 is the single biggest package of measures tackling antisocial behaviour. Powers that have been made available to the police and local authorities include: ASBOs, Acceptable Behaviour Contracts, Crack House Closure Orders, Housing Injunctions, Parenting Orders/Contracts and Dispersal Orders.

The Respect Action Plan proposes to broaden the approach to dealing with all aspects of antisocial behaviour through tackling its causes and building on strong enforcement measures available to police and local authorities. New powers will enable a range of agencies to deliver a robust response to antisocial behaviour.

Asylum/Immigration

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many principal applicants for asylum have been granted indefinite leave to remain (ILR) as a result of the family ILR exercise announced on 24 October 2003; how many of the dependants of principal applicants for asylum already in the UK have also been granted ILR; and how many dependants of principal applicants have subsequently been given leave to join them in the UK. [31458]

Mr. McNulty: Up to and including 30 September 2005, 16,870 principal asylum applicants have been granted indefinite leave to remain (ILR) under the Family ILR Exercise. This figure is included in the information on cases considered under the Family ILR exercise that is published quarterly. Copies are available from the Library and on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

These figures will be updated on 28 February 2006 and will include data up to and including 31 December 2005.

A further 41,525 dependants of these principal applicants have been granted indefinite leave to remain under the Family ILR Exercise. This information is based on internal management information and is not published within the official statistics.

It is not possible to obtain figures for dependants who have subsequently been given leave to join existing families in the UK from internal management information.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether immigration detention centre staff will be subject to the vetting and barring scheme recommended by the Bichard Report. [46057]

Mr. McNulty: All Detainee Custody Officers (DCOs) at all Immigration Removal Centres are subject to enhanced Criminal Record Bureau checks. In addition, all DCOs at those centres which accommodate families with children—Yarl's Wood, Tinsley House and Dungavel—receive regular training in child protection procedures. Legislative measures to establish the new Vetting and Barring Scheme will be introduced shortly. The scheme is intended to cover those working with or having contact with children and vulnerable adults, and this would include those working with detainees in immigration removal centres.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the letter to him dated 5 December 2005 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Bakhtyar Ahmed. [45406]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I responded to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton (Sir Gerald Kaufman) on 25 January 2006.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will reply to the letter of 7 October 2005 from the hon. Member for Aylesbury about the case of Mr. A. N. T. of Aylesbury (reference N1041456; B23827/5) which was acknowledged on 14 October 2005. [42464]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 16 January 2006]: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate replied to the hon. Member's letter on 23 January.

Corruption

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases are on the register of overseas corruption allegations held by the National Criminal Intelligence Service; and how many of these are being investigated. [46374]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply.

The Register of Referrals is now maintained by the Serious Fraud Office. The Department has initial responsibility for assessing reports that a United Kingdom national or other entity has engaged in conduct outside the United Kingdom which may render that person or corporate entity liable for prosecution within the United Kingdom under sections 108 and 109 of the Anti-Terrorism Crime and Security Act 2001.

Sixty-six cases have been entered on the register of which six are currently the subject of investigations by the Serious Fraud Office and four by other authorities.

Crime Statistics

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average number of crimes reported per day was in Lancashire in the last year for which figures are available; and what estimate he has made of the incidence of unreported crime in Lancashire over the same period. [45153]

Hazel Blears: The published data relate to the number of crimes recorded by the police in terms of financial years. For the year 2004–05, Lancashire police recorded 152,043 offences. This figure takes into account the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS) in April 2002. Therefore, figures after April 2002 are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

Estimates of the proportion of crime that is reported to the police can be made at a national level using the British crime survey (BCS), but sample sizes are not sufficiently reliable to estimate reporting rates at the sub-national level. Forty-two per cent. of victims interviewed in the 2004–05 BCS said that the incident had been reported to the police or was known to them. This figure is similar to that for 2003–04 and shows that most crimes (58 per cent. of comparable crimes) are never reported to the police.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of young offenders re-offended in (a) Lancashire and (b) west Lancashire constituency in each year since 2002. [45154]

Fiona Mactaggart: Re-offending rates are not available centrally on a sub-national basis.

National reconviction rates—a commonly used proxy for reoffending—are published on the Home Office website. The data relate to young offenders who were discharged from prison, began a community sentence, or received a pre-court disposal in the first quarters of 2001 and 2002. (www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/rdsolr0805.pdf)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent crimes took place in the London borough of Hammersmith and Fulham in each of the last five years. [45253]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is given in the tables. It is estimated that the effect of the introduction of the national crime recording standard (NCRS) in April 2002 was a 20 per cent. increase nationally in recorded violent crime in its first year.

Table 1: Violent crime in the Hammersmith and Fulham crime and disorder reduction partnership area: 2000–01 and 2001–02

	Number of offences
2000–01	5,498
2001–02	5,845

Note:
The national crime recording standard was introduced in April 2002. Because of this figures before and after that date are not directly comparable.

Table 2: Violent crime in the Hammersmith and Fulham crime and disorder reduction partnership area:—2002–03 to 2004–05

	Number of offences
2002–03	5,856
2003–04	5,701
2004–05	6,234

Note:
The national crime recording standard was introduced in April 2002. Because of this figures before and after that date are not directly comparable.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the most recent estimate is of the time taken to process (a) a standard disclosure and (b) an enhanced disclosure by the Criminal Records Bureau; and whether the average time taken has changed since the system was introduced. [44900]

Andy Burnham: The Criminal Records Bureau's published service standards are to process 93 per cent. of standard disclosure applications within two weeks and 90 per cent. of enhanced disclosure applications within four weeks. The performance achieved for standard disclosures for December 2005 was 99 per cent. with a 12 month average of 99.4 per cent.

For enhanced disclosures, CRB are expected to complete their part of the checking process in 90 per cent. of cases in 12 days before referring these applications to local police forces for them to complete their part of the checking process against local intelligence databases.

The CRB has consistently exceeded its targets in processing disclosures up to the point at which they are referred to police forces. In December 2005, the CRB processed 95.8 per cent. of valid enhanced applications to the police within six days of receipt. This has provided forces with considerably more time to complete their checks within the published service standard.

The CRB has issued over eight million disclosures since the service was launched in March 2002 and more organisations have access to the service than ever before. Each week it is effectively dealing with over 55,000 disclosure applications. In general, the time taken to process disclosures has shortened, especially those that have been issued at the standard level, due to improvements introduced by the CRB.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time taken to process Criminal Records Bureau applications was in (a) September 2005, (b) June 2005, (c) January 2005 and (d) the latest period for which figures are available. [45505]

Andy Burnham: The Criminal Records Bureau's performance is measured against a set of published service standards, which are to process 93 per cent. of standard disclosure applications within two weeks and 90 per cent. of enhanced disclosure applications within four weeks. Standard disclosures are processed entirely within the CRB's internal systems and require no referral to external agencies.

The performance achieved for standard disclosures for January, June, September and December 2005 was 99 per cent., 98.7 per cent., 99.9 per cent. and 99.9 per cent. respectively, with a 12 month average of 99.4 per cent. Enhanced disclosures require a further level of check against local police intelligence databases and the CRB are expected to complete their part of the checking process in 90 per cent. of cases in 12 days before referring these applications to local police forces for them to complete their part of the checking process.

The CRB has consistently exceeded its targets in processing disclosures up to the point at which they are referred to police forces. In January 2005, 95 per cent. of valid applications were progressed by the agency to the police within 10 days. In June, the CRB processed 95 per cent. of valid applications to the police within 11 days. During September, the CRB processed 95 per cent. of valid applications to the police within seven days and in December 2005, the CRB processed 95.8 per cent. of valid enhanced applications to the police within six days of receipt.

This has provided forces with considerably more time to complete their checks within the published service standard.

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the rules under which the Criminal Records Bureau can divulge former convictions, including spent convictions, to prospective employees are consistent with the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974; and if he will make a statement; [46015]

(2) to what types of employer the Criminal Records Bureau is empowered to reveal the spent convictions of job applicants; in respect of what types of employment; and if he will make a statement. [46017]

Andy Burnham: The Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (Exceptions) Order 1975 sets out those occupations and positions exempt from the provisions of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (the Act). This provides that persons employing individuals in those occupations and positions are exempt from the provisions of the Act and may therefore ask an individual to reveal details of all convictions, both 'spent' and 'unspent', under what is termed as an 'exempted question'.

The positions generally involve work with children and vulnerable adults, work involving the administration of justice and other employment of sufficient sensitivity to warrant a higher than normal level of criminal disclosure on public protection grounds. The Exceptions Order is updated periodically, ensuring that it reflects changes in risk to employers and the public.

The Criminal Records Bureau operates under the Police Act 1997. This provides that when applying for one of the two higher level Disclosures, Standard and Enhanced, an application must be accompanied by a statement from a registered person that the Disclosure is required for the purpose of asking an 'exempted question'. Accordingly release of conviction information by the criminal Records Bureau is fully consistent with the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration detention centre staff are (a) trained in child protection procedures and (b) subject to Criminal Records Bureau checks. [46056]

Mr. McNulty: All Detainee Custody Officers (DCOs) at all immigration removal centres are subject to enhanced Criminal Record Bureau checks. In addition, all DCOs at those centres which accommodate families with children—Yarl's Wood, Tinsley House and Dungavel—receive regular training in child protection procedures.

Deportation

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many charter flights have been used to deport illegal immigrants and overstayers in each of the last five years, broken down by (a) destination, (b) date of the flight and (c) cost. [26437]

Mr. McNulty: The immigration and nationality directorate has been using charter flights to effect removals on a regular basis since March 2001. From that time there have been a total of 320 charter operations including a small number of flights operated with other EU member states. The flights have resulted in the removal from the UK of 12,956 individuals who had no permission to remain here. Full details of dates and destinations are provided in the following table.

The cost of charter operations has been:

	Cost of charter operation (£)
2002–03	1,968,025
2003–04	1,226,972
2004–05	1,779,204

Figures for 2001–02 are not available as they were not separated from other public expense removal costs.

DNA Profiles

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances the police are permitted to retain DNA profiles obtained with consent from (a) the victims of crimes and (b) witnesses to crimes; and (i) for how long and (ii) subject to what conditions these profiles may be retained. [46013]

Andy Burnham: A victim or witness to a crime may be asked to consent to provide the police with a DNA sample for elimination purposes as part of the investigation into that crime. They may also consent to their DNA profile being retained on the National DNA Database. In both cases, under section 63 of the Police & Criminal Evidence Act 1984, as amended, their consent must be in writing. Once given, consent to the retention of their sample and DNA profile cannot be withdrawn.

Samples and DNA profiles are normally retained until the individual's 100th birthday or until the notification of death and may only be used for the purposes of prevention and detection of crime, the investigation of an offence, the conduct of a prosecution or for the purposes of identifying a deceased person or body part.

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances the police may retain DNA profiles; and for how long these profiles may be retained. [46014]

Andy Burnham: Under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, as amended, the police may retain DNA samples taken from persons who have been arrested for, informed they will be reported for or charged with a recordable offence and detained in a police station. The police may also take and retain DNA samples from persons convicted of a recordable offence. The samples may only be used for the purposes of prevention and detection of crime, the investigation of an offence, the conduct of a prosecution or for the purposes of identifying a deceased person or body part.

DNA samples are normally retained until the person is 100-years-old or notification of death.

Drug Dealers

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional funding has been made available to police forces to deal with regional drug dealers; and if he will make a statement. [42777]

Hazel Blears: Tackling regional drug dealers is part of core police business and funding for these operations is met from within general grant allocations. The Government has put significant extra resources into the police service in England and Wales over the last few years. On a like-for-like basis, Government grant and central spending on services for the police will have increased by 56 per cent. or almost £4 billion between 2000–01 and 2007–08.

It is a matter for each chief constable and police authority to decide how best to deploy the available resources across the force area, taking into account operational priorities and objectives.

We recognised that capacity in this area needed to be developed and in 2001 provided short-term funding of £6 million to three regional drugs units to develop expertise in tackling cross-regional drugs-markets, in order to disseminate the lessons learned. These were Operation Middle Market (West Midlands), Merseyside Middle Market Unit and Tarian Regional Taskforce (South Wales).

The creation of the Serious Organised Crime Agency in April 2006 will provided enhanced capacity and support to local police forces in tackling serious organised crime at the regional and national level.

Furthermore forthcoming police force restructuring will ensure that forces have the capacity, capability and resilience to effectively deal with regional drug dealers and similar criminality.

Early Release Scheme

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences have been committed by offenders released under the Government's early release scheme during periods they would otherwise have served in custody. [42083]

Fiona Mactaggart: Since the scheme was introduced in January 1999 and for the period ending 30 November 2005, 120,837 offenders have been placed on Home Detention Curfew. Of these, 4,341 offenders have been notified to the National Offender Management Service as having been either cautioned or convicted or awaiting prosecution for 7,506 offences committed while they were subject to the scheme.

Faith Communities

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the publications his Department has produced relating to faith communities since 1989. [35351]

Paul Goggins: Since 1989, five publications have been produced by the Home Office which relate in their entirety to faith communities. However, during this period there have also been numerous publications with occasional references to faith communities in a wider context.

The five publications, focusing entirely on religious issues and listed on the Home Office Library catalogue are:

1. Working Together: Co-operation between Government and Faith Communities

Faith Communities Unit

Home Office, 2004

2. Religion in England and Wales: findings from the 2001 Home Office Citizenship Survey

Home Office Research Study 274

Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate, 2004

3. Tackling Religious Discrimination: practical implications for policy makers and legislators

Home Office Research Study 221

Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate, 2001.

4. Religious Discrimination in England and Wales

Home Office Research Study 220

Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate, 2001

5. Information about Ministers of Religion

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

ISBN 1858935083

Home Office, 2001

Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 987W, on festivals, how much funding his Department made available to fund the (a) Eid/Diwali celebration on 14 November and (b) the internal staff event on 8 November. [37683]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 19 December 2005]: The Home Office funded (a) the external Eid/Diwali celebration on 14 November and (b) the staff event held on 8 November to celebrate Ramadan and Eid at a cost of £8,933 and £7,557 respectively.

Forensic Practitioners (Complaints)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the transparency of the complaints procedure of the Council for the Registration of Forensic Practitioners. [45519]

Andy Burnham: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has no responsibility for the procedures adopted by the Council for handling complaints. The Home Secretary has, therefore, not undertaken any formal assessment of the Council's procedures.

Fresh Talent Working in Scotland

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications have been received for the fresh talent working in Scotland scheme; how many of these (a) were successful, (b) were unsuccessful and (c) are yet to be considered, broken down by (i) country of origin of applicant and (ii) month of application. [29587]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 21 November 2005]: Applications have been received for the fresh talent: working in Scotland scheme at UK visas and the immigration nationality directorate (IND). Data to the end of December 2005 for the IND applications only are in the following table.

Gambling

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of (a) the proportion of all recorded crimes and (b) the total number of crimes which were related to internet gambling addiction in the last year for which figures are available. [44288]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Glass Attacks

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent incidents involving glasses or glass bottles were reported in West Lancashire in 2004–05 resulting in injuries. [45034]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally in the recorded crime series. Details of the individual circumstances of offences do not feature in the data series.

Highways Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females were (i) prosecuted and (ii) convicted during 2004 of an offence under section 131(2) of the Highways Act 1980, including that provision as applied by section 27(6) of the Countryside Act. [41011]

Paul Goggins: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of males and females proceeded against and found guilty at the magistrates courts for offences under a number of sections including section 131 of the Highways Act 1980, England and Wales, 2004 are given in the table. It is not possible to separately identify those offences under section 131 from offences under other sections collected within the same code group.

Historical Sex Abuse Investigations

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the work of the National Centre for Policing Excellence in relation to historical sex abuse investigations. [45521]

Paul Goggins: The National Centre for Policing Excellence (NCPE) was established on 1 April 2003. Its primary goal is "professionalism of policing" through enhancement of the capabilities of those involved in tackling crime.

Any number of forces may be investigating historic child abuse cases at any one time and, as individuals involved in such cases may have moved around the country, there was a chance that individuals could be investigated by more than one police force at the same time. To avoid this duplication the Association of Chief Police Officers asked the Serious Crime Analysis Section (SCAS), part of NCPE, to take over the Historical Institutional Child Abuse Database and keep it operating as long as required. A recent evaluation has indicated that there is still a requirement for such a database.

Guidance on Investigating Serious Sexual Offences was published on behalf of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) by the National Centre for Policing Excellence in September 2005. This document touches on the investigation of historic child abuse cases.

House Building (Aylesbury)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of additional (a) police officers and (b) police stations that will be required as a result of the planned expansion of housing in Aylesbury Vale. [44163]

Hazel Blears: It is for the chief constable of the Thames Valley police, in consultation with the police authority, to determine how many police officers are deployed to the Buckinghamshire Basic Command Unit (BCU) (which includes Alesbury Vale), also whether there is a need for additional police facilities in the area. The police funding formula takes account of the relative needs of policing across England and Wales.

Illegal Fireworks

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal fireworks were seized in (a) West Lancashire, (b) Lancashire and (c) England in each of the last five years for which records are available. [45141]

Hazel Blears: The Home Office does not collect or hold figures on the number of seized illegal fireworks.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 594W.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fines have been imposed by the police for offences relating to fireworks in (a) West Lancashire constituency, (b) Lancashire, (c) the North West and (d) England and Wales since the Fireworks Act 2003 came into force. [45149]

Hazel Blears: Offences under the Fireworks Regulations 2004 (made under section 11 of the Fireworks Act 2003) for breach of the national fireworks curfew, the illegal possession of category four fireworks and the possession by a person under 18 of an adult firework attract penalty notices for disorder, as well as the offence of throwing fireworks. The offences under the Fireworks Regulations 2004 were brought into the scheme with effect from 11 October 2004 and the offence of throwing fireworks has been included in the penalty notice for disorder scheme since it was introduced nationally during 2004.

The numbers of penalty notices issued in Lancashire, the North West and England and Wales in 2004 and provisional data from January to September 2005 are provided in the table. It is not possible to separately identify Penalty Notices issued in West Lancashire constituency as data held centrally is not broken down to that level of detail.

International Arrest Warrants

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to bring before the House his proposals to amend the law to prevent individuals from applying for international arrest warrants. [45861]

Andy Burnham: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave her on 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1363W.

Knives

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been found to be unlawfully carrying knives in public without good reason in each division of Staffordshire police force in each year since the introduction of the Knives Act 1997. [43793]

Hazel Blears: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform for the number of people found guilty at all courts for carrying knives in public without good reason or lawful authority for Staffordshire police force area, 2002–04 are in the following table.

It is not possible to identify those convictions by each division of Staffordshire police as the data are not collected at this level of detail.

Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data, these data are not robust enough at a detailed level and have been excluded from the table.

Migrations Fund

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the size is of the migrations fund to help failed asylum seekers resettle in their own country; and if he will make a statement. [44829]

Mr. McNulty: The total resources available to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate Migration Fund for this financial year are £3.6 million. The Migration Fund was established in 2005 in response to the needs identified in IND's five year plan, "Controlling our Borders: Making migration work for Britain". It is used to finance projects aimed at managing illegal migration and refugee protection in source and transit countries of concern to the UK. The Fund can also assist in other areas, such as in supporting returns, including those of failed asylum seekers. FCO have a parallel, but linked, Migration Fund with objectives similar to that of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate Fund.

National Offender Management Service

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a job description for regional offender managers under the National Offender Management Services structures. [23272]

Fiona Mactaggart: The job description for the post of regional offender manager was contained in the information pack sent to all prospective candidates in the summer of 2004. A copy of the information pack has been placed in the Library for Members to read.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the effectiveness of regional offender managers is to be assessed. [44880]

Fiona Mactaggart: The effectiveness of the regional offender managers will be assessed against the target to deliver a 5 per cent. reduction in re-offending by adults and young offenders by 2007–08 compared to 2002–03, leading to a 10 per cent. reduction by the end of the decade.

NHS Pension Scheme

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many early retirements there were under the NHS Pension Scheme (a) in 2000 and (b) in each year since 2002. [29040]

Mr. Byrne: I have been asked to reply.

The number of early retirements in England and Wales for the financial years 2000 to 2005 is shown in the table. Early retirement includes ill health, redundancy and voluntary early retirement.

	Number
1999–2000	7,766
2000–01	7,556
2001–02	7,419
2002–03	6,511
2003–04	7,583
2004–05	6,806

Overseas Prisoners

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 13 July 2005, Official Report, column 1094W, on overseas prisoners, whether the UK has a bilateral prisoner transfer agreement with the United States; whether not keeping records of transit applications are a standard of such agreements; whether transit applications are recorded electronically at any stage in the process; and by what means records of transit applications are disposed of once the transit has been completed. [38970]

Fiona Mactaggart: The United Kingdom and the United States are both parties to the Council of Europe Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons. The Convention provides for the transfer of sentenced persons to continue serving their sentences in their country of nationality or one with which the sentenced person has close links. Transfer under the Convention requires the consent of both states involved and the prisoner concerned.

Article 16 of the Convention enables contracting parties to transit through UK airports to another contracting party, or to a third party, where transfer of the prisoner has been agreed in accordance with the relevant international agreement. The Convention does not require that records of transit requests be kept. For the purposes of the transfer of sentence prisoners transit only takes place in the United Kingdom through Gatwick and Heathrow and it is the normal practice of states wishing to transit through Heathrow or Gatwick airports to fax a request to the National Offender Management Service. The request would normally contain details of the individual concerned, including sentence and offence details, the agreement under which transfer has been agreed, and flight details. The National Offender Management Service then makes the relevant arrangements for transit. Once transit has been completed the request is destroyed either by shredding or disposal in confidential waste. Secure disposal is used because requests contain personal information about the prisoner. Transit requests are not electronically recorded.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to question 39532, tabled by the right hon. Member for Birkenhead on 19 December 2005. [42011]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 16 January 2006]: I replied to my right hon. Friend on 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 1117W.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer Question 24259 tabled by the hon. Member for St. Ives. [44449]

Mr. McNulty: I replied on 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 1791W.

Police

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces in England and Wales have a dedicated major investigation team. [32864]

Hazel Blears: During the Protective Services Review of summer 2005, the extent to which police forces had a dedicated Major Incident Team (MIT) was assessed. The vast majority of police forces do have some dedicated staff to major crime investigation; however, generally this takes the form of a small, core office team, with the additional investigative staff being drawn from basic command unit's (BCUs), ordinarily the CID. It is believed that, at the time of the assessment, only 13 of the 43 forces of England and Wales had sufficient staff dedicated to MITs to prevent any abstractions from BCU.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether police authorities will receive Government grant to cover (a) the full and (b) part of the cost of the proposals for police force restructuring; and if he will make a statement. [35457]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 7 December 2005]: We will be considering grant arrangements for police authorities in the light of changes to police authority boundaries and of the way the new larger authorities might operate.

Both Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) and the Association of Police Authorities (APA) have been invited to participate fully in a Restructuring Finance Working Group, which has been established to consider the financial aspects of reorganisation.

I announced details of the provisional police funding settlement for 2006–07 and 2007–08 on 5 December and capital grant allocations on 13 January. I have set aside £50 million capital grant for 2006–07 and £75 million for 2007–08 to address prospective force amalgamations.

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of (a) police officers and (b) the population of England and Wales is from ethnic minorities; and what the equivalent figures are for West Yorkshire. [41833]

Hazel Blears: The data requested for (a) police officers from ethnic minorities for each police force area in England and Wales are available from the 'Police Service Strength publication as at 31st March 2005'. This report was published on 25 July 2005 and is available in the Library and on:

www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1205.pdf

The population of England and Wales that are from ethnic minorities is available from the 2001 Census published by the Office for National Statistics.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the manpower allocation of (a) police officers and (b) civilian police staff was in each London borough in each year since 2003–04; and if he will make a statement. [45046]

Hazel Blears: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 2 November 2005 to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Lynne Featherstone), Official Report, column 1117–20W which sets out the published information on police officer numbers for each London borough. Information on the number of police staff each in London borough operational command unit in the Metropolitan Police Service has not been published as it cannot be disaggregated from other police support staff groups. In 2004 the Metropolitan Police Service had 12,144 police staff, in March 2005 this was 13,127 and in September 2005 it was 13,437.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) civilian staff and (b) police officers are employed by Lancashire police force. [45155]

Hazel Blears: As at 30 September 2005, there were 1,734 full-time equivalent police staff (excludes designated officers, police community support officers and traffic wardens) and 3,602 full-time equivalent police officers in Lancashire.

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there are in Caerphilly constituency; and how many there were two years ago. [44099]

Hazel Blears: During 2003–04 Caerphilly was merged with Blaenau Gwent. As at 31 March 2004, the new Basic Command Unit (BCU) had 456 police officers and as at 31 March 2005, Blaenau Gwent had 465 officers.

It is not possible to separate Caerphilly from the rest of the BCU after 2003–04.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers from black or other ethnic minority backgrounds who resigned in each of the last three years stated discrimination from their colleagues as the reason for their resignation. [44837]

Hazel Blears: The reasons for officers resigning are not collected centrally.

The total number of police officers from minority ethnic backgrounds who voluntarily resigned from the 43 forces in England and Wales was 123 as at March 2003, 163 as at March 2004 and 125 as at March 2005.

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces in England and Wales routinely issue in-car satellite navigation systems for use in patrol cars. [44111]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not held centrally.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what impact he expects police force amalgamations to have on crime reduction. [41679]

Hazel Blears: The objective of the restructuring police forces is to enhance the capability and capacity of forces to deal with crime at all levels from cross border, serious and organised crime to local volume crime and disorder. Strategic forces should have sufficient critical mass to maintain neighbourhood policing teams without having to abstract officers from communities to deal with major incidents or investigations elsewhere.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on amending police regulations to enable serving officers to participate in the selection process for parliamentary candidates; and if he will make a statement. [42459]

Hazel Blears: No representations have been received.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether police regulations allow serving officers to participate in the activities of political parties; and if he will make a statement. [42460]

Hazel Blears: Paragraph 1 of Schedule 1 to the Police Regulations 2003 states that "A member of a police force shall at all times abstain from any activity which is likely to interfere with the impartial discharge of his duties or which is likely to give rise to the impression amongst members of the public that it may so interfere; and in particular a member of a police force shall not take any active part in politics".

Prisons

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding the Government provides for support services for prisoners' families. [41573]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government provides support services for prisoners' families in a variety of ways ranging from grants to charities, investing in partnerships, and support provided within prisons themselves. There is no central account which specifically identifies all these resources. The Assisted Prison Visits Scheme for 2004–05 costs £1,870,386 (less staff and running costs.) This scheme provides help with travel costs for close relatives and partners on low incomes.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide career development opportunities for prison officers interested in assisting in the delivery of (a) prison education and (b) effective re-settlement; and if he will make a statement. [44342]

Fiona Mactaggart: Education for offenders in custody is provided under contract. The public sector Prison Service is not normally involved in the direct employment of teachers who deliver this provision. The service is currently developing a new suite of offender management courses. They will be accessible to all appropriate staff who wish to deliver resettlement work.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase (a) public and (b) private sector prison capacity in each of the next five years, broken down by (i) category of establishment and (ii) security status; and if he will make a statement. [44346]

Fiona Mactaggart: Additional prison places are being built under an ongoing funded building programme at existing prisons and will increase total capacity to around 80,400 by 2007. This includes the 1,300 additional places announced by the Home Secretary in September 2004 as well as the completion of an earlier building programme. Additional places will become available at a number of public and private sector prisons in the adult male closed estate. Details of these places are set out in the following table.

All these places are at adult male training or Local prisons and are Category B or C.

Prisons	2006	2007
Public sector	880	640
Private sector	0	300

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many working days were recorded lost in each prison in (a) 1997, (b) 2001 and (c) the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [44355]

Fiona Mactaggart: The following table details the total number of working days lost due to sickness absence within each public sector Prison Service establishment in 2001 and 2005, the last year for which figures are available. Data for 2001 have been adjusted to reflect the amount of under-reporting estimated as high as 8.7 per cent. by the National Audit Office at that time. Data for 2005 remain provisional. Information on working days lost, broken down to the level of establishment, is not available for 1997.

It is estimated that the total number of working days lost across the public sector Prison Service in 1997 was 634,000 compared to 642,000 in 2001 and 609,000 in 2005.

Information relating to privately managed prisons is not available and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the ratios of (a) prison officers and (b) all prison staff to inmates were in (i) 1997, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2005; and if he will make a statement. [44356]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the ratio of officers (including prison officers, senior officers and principal officers) to prisoners and total staff to prisoners is contained in the following table. This information relates to prisoners and staff within the public sector Prison Service only. The information shows a snapshot of ratios on the 31 March each year, as well as the latest available information. Information relating to privately managed prisons is not available and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

	Officer/prisoner ratio	All staff/prisoner ratio

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many individuals have served as governor in each prison since 1997; and if he will make a statement; [44357]

(2) what the average tenure has been since 1997 for governors in (a) each prison, (b) each region and (c) England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [44358]

Fiona Mactaggart: The table contains information on the number of individuals who have held the position of governor in-charge in each public sector Prison Service establishment since 1997 and the average length of tenure over the same period. Temporary appointments are excluded from the figures. The average length of tenure of in-charge governors within the public sector Prison Service was two years 10 months.

Information on contracted prison is not available centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Fiona Mactaggart: All offenders in custody are encouraged to access learning and skills provision.

With the exception of higher education, figures on the numbers enrolled in formal education and training schemes are not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The latter data will however become increasingly available through Learning and Skills Council management information arrangements as they take responsibility for planning and funding offender learning and skills during 2006.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of prison education on levels of offender recidivism; and if he will make a statement. [44362]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government published on 15 December 2005 a Green Paper called 'Reducing Re-Offending through Skills and Employment' (Cm 6702). The Green Paper outlined the Government's assessment of the importance of skills and employment as part of a broad package of interventions to reduce re-offending.

Evidence suggests that employment and a reduction in re-offending are linked and that those with higher skills, for example level two in the National Qualifications Framework, are more likely to be in employment than those without. The Home Office's longitudinal study—Surveying Prisoner Crime Reduction—will assess the impact of a range of interventions, including education.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons have intensive rehabilitation programmes for drugs; what his assessment is of the effectiveness of the programmes; what plans he has to expand the programmes; and if he will make a statement. [44373]

Fiona Mactaggart: Prisons running intensive drug rehabilitation programmes are shown in the following list.. There are currently no plans to expand the delivery of drug treatment programmes. Research evidence shows that it is possible to achieve up to a 10 per cent. decrease in the level of expected re-offending but this can only realistically be achieved where effective through-care arrangements exist and timely community after-care has been made available.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison dogs have been in service in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [44375]

Fiona Mactaggart: The following table details licensed prison dogs in the Prison Service since 1997.

Table showing the number of prison dogs in the Prison Service since 1997

	Patrol dogs	Pro-active	AES	Passive
1997	449	172	75	09
1998	462	178	78	34
1999	462	178	78	34
2000	462	195	78	121
2001	410	208	60	149
2002	381	221	55	179
2003	301	221	43	183
2004	314	236	44	203
2005	267	238	40	224

Notes

1. A patrol dog is a German Shepherd dog used mainly in high security prisons to provide perimeter protection against escape attempts or concerted prisoner indiscipline.

2. A proactive dog is generally one of the gundog breed and is trained to search cells, vehicles and other areas for hidden controlled drugs or drug-contaminated items.

3. An arms and explosive search (AES) dog is generally one of the gundog breeds. It is trained to search cells, areas, vehicles and other areas for hidden firearms, explosives and associated components.

4. A passive drug dog is generally one of the gundog breeds and is trained to search individual or groups of people usually entering a prison for hidden controlled drugs on their person.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the work of prison dogs; and if he will make a statement. [44376]

Fiona Mactaggart: Three reports have been undertaken over the last 10 years, with a further report due later this year on the use of dogs in the high security estate. The number of dog sections has fallen, as high risk prisoners have been concentrated in eight high security prisons. The introduction of drug dogs began in about 1993 and has been expanded to each establishment within the service.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison dogs are designated as (a) passive and (b) pro-active in the detection of drugs; and if he will make a statement. [44377]

Fiona Mactaggart: Currently there are 203-licensed passive and 236 pro-active drug dogs in use in the Prison Service.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of options other than the private finance initiative for the construction of new prisons. [45181]

Fiona Mactaggart: There are no plans to build any new prisons at present. No procurement options have been ruled out.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what forecast he has made of the level of the prison population in each of the last three years; and what the actual level was in each year. [45207]

Fiona Mactaggart: Projections of the prison population are made on the basis of several possible future scenarios (a range of likely changes in sentencing and effects of new legislation, etc.) and are regularly updated. All published projections are available on the Home Office website. Taking the most recent projection for June in each case: in 2003 the projections ranged from 73,600 to 75,800 and the actual value was 73,700; in 2004 the projections ranged from 79,500 to 85,100 and the actual value was 74,500; in 2005 the projections ranged from 76,100 to 76,600 and the actual value was 76,200.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who was responsible for the independent assessment of the performance test of prisons on the Isle of Sheppey. [46048]

Fiona Mactaggart: The proposals made by Her Majesty's Prison Service in respect of the performance improvement test of the prisons on the Isle of Sheppey were independently assessed by the National Offender Management Service.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what selection criteria were used to select the three prisons on the Isle of Sheppey for market testing in 2005; [46052]

(2) what selection criteria were used to select (a) individual prisons and (b) clusters of prisons for market testing. [46053]

Fiona Mactaggart: When the original contracts for the private sector prisons Blakenhurst, Buckley Hall, Doncaster, and Wolds and Service Level Agreement for the public sector prison Manchester were due to expire, the management of each prison was market tested. Brixton prison was selected for market testing on the basis that it is was underperforming. The three prisons on the Isle of Sheppey were the first cluster of prisons to be market tested. The criteria used for selecting the Sheppey cluster were geographical proximity; public sector management; range of security classification; and low likelihood of their being re-roled or closed.

Probation Service

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of how many probation hostel places will be required in each of the next five years; what effect he expects the establishment of the National Offender Management Service to have on demand; and if he will make a statement. [44335]

Fiona Mactaggart: There is a National Offender Management Service (NOMS) instigated review and scoping exercise currently being undertaken to ascertain the level of development required across the Approved Premises (formerly Bail and Probation Hostels) estate. Once complete, this information will be used to inform a national strategy for Approved Premises Development. This will take into account any potential impact of the creation of NOMS which is identified during the review.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms exist to ensure consistency in Probation Service assessments; and if he will make a statement. [44380]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Offender Assessment System (OASys) is the assessment system used across the whole of the National Probation Service. Having a single standard tool provides consistency. The National Probation Directorate has put in place measures to help ensure the quality of OASys completion.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the offender assessment procedures used by the Probation Service; and if he will make a statement. [44385]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Offender Assessment System (OASys) is a good system, as attested by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Probation. It is subject to ongoing improvement but there are no plans to replace it.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many responses were received in response to the consultation paper Restructuring Probation to Reduce Reoffending from Welsh-based (a) organisations and (b) individuals; and how many of these responses were supportive of the Government's position. [45401]

Fiona Mactaggart: Responses were received from:

(a) 10 Welsh-based organisations;

(b) 62 individuals identifying themselves as from Wales.

We will be publishing a summary of all the responses along with our response to the key issues raised. We expect to publish it within the timescale set out in the Cabinet Office guidelines on public consultations.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether in his proposals for restructuring the Probation Service in Wales he plans to allow (a) members of the public and (b) local organisations (i) to be made aware of the applicants for contracts to provide probation services and (ii) to make objections to those service providers' applications. [45402]

Fiona Mactaggart: There are no plans to publish the names of those tendering for a contract to provide probation services. Competitions will be organised in full compliance with the revised EU procurement directives; an objection to a bidder's participation in the competition would be considered in the light of the directives which allow for the disqualification of a bidder under specified circumstances such as fraud.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether in the restructuring proposals for the Probation Service in Wales he plans to give offenders rights to object to being supervised by a particular provider of probation services under contract. [45403]

Fiona Mactaggart: No. Offenders will not be able to object to being supervised by any provider of probations services.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many responses to the consultation paper, Restructuring Probation to reduce Re-offending, were received from individual members of (a) the probation staff, (b) probation services and (c) probation boards in Wales; how many were supportive of the proposals; and if he will publish them. [45415]

Fiona Mactaggart: Responses were received as follows:

(a) 58 respondents identified themselves as individual members of probation staff in Wales;

(b) three respondents identified themselves as individual members of Probation Boards in Wales;

(c) all four Probation Boards in Wales responded.

Work analysing the responses is not yet complete. We will publish a summary of responses and the key points raised within the three-month timescale set out in the Cabinet Office guidelines on public consultations.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he can take during the restructuring of the Probation Service in Wales if employees refuse to accept the transfer of their employment from a probation board to a probation trust or private company. [45416]

Fiona Mactaggart: When probation trusts are established, most staff will transfer from probation boards to the new trusts on the same terms and conditions of employment. If, in due course, work transfers to an alternative provider, staff will generally transfer, with their pay, terms and conditions protected by TUPE and the recent extension of the Two Tier Workforce Agreement. Staff who do not wish to transfer will be free to terminate their contract of employment. The employment status of chief officers will change in the transition from boards to trusts: they will cease to be statutory office holders appointed by the Secretary of State and will instead be appointed and employed by the trust itself. If a chief is not appointed to the trust, he or she will be compensated accordingly.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what responses he has received from the judiciary in Wales to the publication, Restructuring Probation to reduce re-offending; and if he will place copies of those responses in the Library. [45417]

Fiona Mactaggart: Two responses were received from individual members of the judiciary in Wales. We will publish a summary of all responses following the procedures set out in Cabinet Office guidance on consultation.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the Secretary of State for Wales to discuss the Probation Service in Wales and the restructuring proposals for the service. [45418]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Secretary and the Secretary of State for Wales meet regularly but have not specifically discussed the proposals for restructuring the probation service. The Minister of State for Offender Management has, however, discussed the proposals for restructuring probation with the Welsh Assembly Minister for Social Justice.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he expects resources allocated to the Welsh Regional Offender Manager under the National Offender Management Service arrangements to enhance services operationally in Wales. [45475]

Fiona Mactaggart: The prime focus of National Offender Management Service (NOMS) in Wales is to reduce re-offending. The Director of Offender Management Service Wales (directly equivalent to Regional Offender Managers (ROMs) in English regions) will do this through a number of mechanisms.

Over the next three years NOMS in Wales will establish a clear and effective commissioning relationship with service providers. Initially, these will be Prison establishments and Probation areas, although alliances with the voluntary and community sector will be strengthened at the same time.

Prison and Probation provision will be managed through Service Level Agreements with the Director of Offender Management Service Wales, with public protection and decency high on the agenda, alongside reducing re-offending through end-to-end offender management.

A Reducing Re-offending strategy has been jointly developed with the Welsh Assembly Government, work will be planned and carried out in close partnership with all relevant agencies to address the seven pathways which are thought to be most instrumental in improving offenders lives and reducing their criminality.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether contestability will be introduced into the provision of probation services in Wales. [45476]

Fiona Mactaggart: Proposals for the restructuring of the probation service were set out in the Home Office consultation paper Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending, published on 20 October. These proposals would enable the Secretary of State to contract with a range of different providers to deliver all probation services in England and Wales.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for the future of probation boards in Wales. [45477]

Fiona Mactaggart: Proposals for the restructuring of the probation service were set out in the Home Office consultation paper Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending, published on 20 October. Further announcements on our proposals will be made in due course.

Prostitution

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prostitutes were given custodial sentences for soliciting in 2005. [44838]

Fiona Mactaggart: A custodial sentence is not available for the offence of soliciting.

Public Order

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) anti-social behaviour orders, (b) individual support orders, (c) enforced parenting orders and (d) voluntary parenting contracts have been issued in west Lancashire since each was established. [45157]

Hazel Blears: The available information, as notified to the Home Office, on the numbers of antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) issued and the number of individual support orders and parenting orders issued in tandem is given in the table.

The Youth Justice Board collect data on parenting contracts related to crime and antisocial behaviour from youth offending teams (YOTs). These data are collected at YOT area level only.

The number of anti-social behaviour orders (ASBOs) issued, where prohibitions have been imposed in the west Lancashire district council local government authority area, and individual support orders (ISOs) and parenting orders (POs) issued in tandem, as notified to the Home Office, from 1 June 2000[1] to 30 June 2005 (latest available)

	Number
ASBOs issued	13
ISOs issued[2]	—
POs issued[3]	—

[1] From 1 April 1999 to 31 May 2000 data were collected on aggregate numbers only by police force area. During this period five ASBOs were issued within Lancashire.
[2] ISOs, available since 1 May 2004, can be given to persons aged 10 to 17 years being issued with an ASBO at civil proceedings. Two of the 13 people were eligible.
[3] Parenting orders can be given where the offender is under 18 years of age. Six of the 13 people were eligible.

Regional Offender Managers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what protections are in place for regional offender managers should they be unable to meet their legal obligations because the number of prison places required exceeds those commissioned. [45180]

Fiona Mactaggart: The development of the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) has moved responsibility for providing prison places from the Prison Service to the NOMS commissioners, although ultimately that responsibility remains the Secretary of State's. Commissioning decisions will be based upon projections of the future size of the prison population and provision made using the expertise established over many years for procuring sites and building prisons. The Government is keeping the need for any further increase in capacity under review, but will ensure that places are available for those prisoners committed by the courts.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether offices have been (a) rented and (b) purchased by Regional Offender Managers; where each of these offices is located; and what the annual cost is for each. [44942]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 23 January 2006]: Seven Regional Offender Managers (ROMs) have been allocated temporary "serviced" office accommodation, let on a licence for a period of 12 months. The Licence enables the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) to take further space in line with planned expansion but only pay for space actually taken. These seven offices are:

South-west—Exeter

Wales—Cardiff

North-west—Manchester

East Midlands—Leicester

Yorkshire and Humberside—Wakefield

London—London (from April 2006)

South-east—London and Oxford (from April 2006)

The ROM for the North-east is located in a Government building in Newcastle under a three year Memorandum Of Terms of Occupation (MOTO) with a break clause at 18 months.

The ROM for the West Midlands is currently in temporary Government accommodation in Birmingham and will be moved in to Government Office for the West Midlands in April 2006 on a three year MOTO, with breaks.

The ROM for the East of England remains within leased accommodation in Peterborough (former Area Manager for the East of England) where he is likely to remain. The lease is a short-term lease (three years) subject to 12 months notice.

The annual costs for this accommodation (inclusive of VAT) is as follows:

Licences
South-west	92,448
Wales	98,982
North-west	83,748
East Midlands	87,984
Yorkshire and Humberside	64,578
London	135,000
South-east	110,064
MOTOs
North-east	30,000
West Midlands	Approx [1]90,000
Lease
East of England	79,000

[1] Yet to be agreed.

Remand Prisoners

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the reason for the change in the number of (a) women and (b) men remanded into custody in the last three years. [45211]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the size of the remand population, as recorded on the Prison Service IT system, is provided in the table. Changes in the make-up of the remand population are described in the Population in Custody Quarterly Brief available on the Home Office website.

Males and females in the prison population on remand, as at 30 June

	Males	Females	Total
2003	12,001	1,072	13,073
2004	11,544	951	12,495
2005	11,863	1,001	12,864

Reoffending

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued on determining the risk that an offender presents (a) to the public and (b) of reoffending; and if he will make a statement. [44381]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Probation Service assesses risk of harm and likelihood of reconviction using the Offender Assessment System (OASys). The principal source of guidance for staff is the OASys Manual. In addition to the Manual there are various pieces of practice guidance.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to reduce reoffending. [45210]

Fiona Mactaggart: Building on the National Action Plan launched in 2004, in November 2005 we launched the National Reducing Reoffending Delivery Plan, the cornerstones of which are: partnership working at national, regional and local levels; end-to end-offender management under the National Offender Management Service (NOMS); and public protection. The Delivery Plan sets out the key actions the Government intends to take over the next 18 months towards the delivery of our target of reducing re-offending by 10 per cent. by the end of the decade. It also charts the real progress NOMS and its partners have made over the last 18 months in delivering services to offenders that address the reasons for their re-offending. For example, 87 per cent. of prisoners on whom information is recorded now have accommodation to go to on release, the number of educational awards offenders have achieved has risen by 40 per cent. and the number completing a drug treatment course in prison or a drug testing order in the community is up by a third. (Copies of the Delivery Plan were placed in the Library at the time of publication.)

Alongside the Delivery Plan, we announced three important new reducing re-offending alliances. The first of these will build on links with employers at national, regional and local levels to explore how businesses can work with NOMS to improve the employability and training of offenders. The second, the civic society alliance, will involve working with local authorities and other local partners to support the resettlement and reintegration of offenders. The final alliance is with faith groups and the voluntary sector and will address the needs of offenders through the innovative work by faith and voluntary sector groups already under way.

Complementing the alliances, NOMS has published an Action Plan to improve effective engagement and partnership with the voluntary and community sector. Also, as part of the cross-Government "Together We Can" Action Plan, NOMS and the Youth Justice Board have developed a joint approach to working with communities and civil renewal. This has the twin aims of reducing re-offending and increasing public confidence, with a focus on four priorities: public protection; unpaid and reparative work; victims and restorative justice; and community integration.

In December we published, jointly with colleagues in the Department for Education and Skills and the Department for Work and Pensions, a Green Paper, 'Reducing Re-offending Through Skills and Employment'. We have been developing proposals for embedding skills and employment for offenders as key tenets of the broader national delivery plan for reducing re-offending. We hope that this will start a constructive dialogue with our partners about how we can most effectively equip offenders for employment and with the basic skills needed for law-abiding adult life, including engaging employers in the design and delivery of programmes for offenders and drive improvement in the quality of the programmes offered to offenders.

Beyond this, NOMS is about to publish a five year strategy. This will set out the wider vision for how NOMS will work with its many partners to reduce re-offending and cut crime.

Respect Action Plan

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what role he expects residents' associations to play in the Government's Respect Action Plan. [45247]

Hazel Blears: The Respect Action Plan aims to tackle antisocial behaviour and promote respect by empowering individuals and community groups, such as residents' associations, to play an important role in taking a stand and tackling and not tolerating antisocial behaviour. This will be supported by giving people power over their local public services, creating a greater sense of ownership and improving accountability between the providers and the local community.

Sex Offenders Register

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time was between a relevant conviction in court and the sexual offenders register being updated in each of the last five years. [44622]

Paul Goggins: The term "sex offenders register" is a reference to the requirement under Part 2 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 on all offenders who have received a conviction or caution for certain sexual offences to notify certain personal information to the police and, for a period of time set out in legislation, keep the police informed of: any changes to those details; any period of seven days spent at another address, and; any intention to travel overseas for three days or more.

Part 2 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 requires all relevant offenders to make an "initial notification" with the police, at a designated police station, within three days of their caution or conviction. If an offender is serving a term of imprisonment on the day that his "initial notification" falls due, then he must make this notification within three days of his release from imprisonment. Failure to comply with the notification requirements is a criminal offence with a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment.

The Association of Chief Police Officers estimate that 97 per cent. of offenders comply with the notification requirements.

Speed Cameras/Speedmeters

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which models of mobile speed cameras have been purchased by each police force in England and Wales since 2003. [45159]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not recorded centrally.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vehicles were detected by speed cameras exceeding the speed limit on the contraflow between junctions 19 and 20 of the M5 (a) in the first month of operation and (b) to date. [45160]

Paul Goggins: Information on penalties generated by individual speed camera location is not collected centrally.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which speedmeters have been type-approved for police use. [45158]

Paul Goggins: The following list details speedmeters type approved for police use.

Tasers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 470W, on taser stun guns, if he will make a statement on the use of tasers in recent efforts by the police to heighten security in (a) the City of London and (b) England. [44404]

Hazel Blears: I understand from the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) that taser has been fired 97 times by English forces from 21 April 2003 to 10 January 2006. The City of London police have not fired taser.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what regulations are in place governing the private sale and distribution of Tasers; and whether he plans to tighten these regulations. [44419]

Hazel Blears: Tasers are prohibited weapons and cannot be lawfully possessed or sold without the express authority of the Secretary of State under section 5 of the Firearms Act 1968. As such they are already strictly regulated and are not available for private use.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department at how many people Tasers have been fired by each police constabulary in England and Wales, broken down by (a) gender, (b) age and (c) ethnicity. [44420]

Hazel Blears: This information is not collected centrally by the Home Office. However, the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) collect this information from all forces in England and Wales who complete a Taser Deployment Form on each occasion a Taser is deployed. These force returns will be analysed in due course for the information requested and I will write to the hon. Member when complete.

In addition, the report prepared by PricewaterhouseCoopers into the pilot study by five police forces of the Taser electric stun gun, 'Independent Evaluation of the Operational Trial of Taser May 2004' (available on the West Mercia Constabulary's website at www.westmercia.police.uk) contains gender and ethnicity details from the trial.

Temporary Migrants

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many temporary migrants (a) were receiving NHS treatment, (b) had places in state schools and (c) were receiving in-work benefits on 1 December 2005. [44827]

Mr. McNulty: For all of the above requests, the information is not collated centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Terrorism Bill

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions (a) before and (b) after 26 October on which (i) he and (ii) his representatives contacted Hammersmith and Fulham police about the Terrorism Bill, and what form that contact took. [45260]

Hazel Blears: Neither my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary nor his officials in the Home Office have contacted Hammersmith and Fulham police specifically in relation to the Terrorism Bill.

Traffic Offences

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) males and (b) females were convicted of motoring offences in (i) Ruislip-Northwood constituency, (ii) the London borough of Hillingdon, (iii) Greater London and (iv) England in each of the last five years, broken down by offence; [40712]

(2) how many young people of school age have been found guilty of committing a crime in (a) Ruislip-Northwood constituency, (b) the London borough of Hillingdon, (c) Greater London and (d) England in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [40714]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform is provided in the following tables and gives the number of persons found guilty of motoring offences, broken down by sex and type of offence, and the number of young people of school age found guilty of committing a crime in Hillingdon petty sessional area, Greater London and England 2000–04.

In addition to court proceedings statistics, the number of young people of school age Cautioned in Greater London and England are also provided in the table.

It is not possible to identify those offenders in the Ruislip-Northwood constituency, as the data is not collected at this level of detail nor is it possible to identify the number of the Reprimands or Final Warnings given in Hillingdon petty sessional area.

Court statistics for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Access to Work Grants

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of unmet demand for Access to Work grants. [43139]

Mrs. McGuire: In the 2004-05 financial year, a total of 6,037 Access to Work applications nationally were rejected or not pursued by the customer. This represents just under 19 per cent. of the total number of applications received that year. Access to Work Business Centres consider all applications very carefully and only reject applications when they do not meet the Access to Work eligibility criteria.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the projected annual budget is for Access to Work in each of the next three years. [43140]

Mrs. McGuire: Along with other programmes, the figures are currently under consideration in the light of overall priorities.

Adviser Discretion Fund

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many jobcentres are imposing a £50 limit on the maximum amount from the Adviser Discretion Fund which can be granted without a business case. [39308]

Margaret Hodge: The Adviser Discretion Fund enables the purchase of virtually anything that will help people obtain a job, or, if already offered a job, to enable them to accept that offer.

Jobcentre Plus is responsible for the effective management of the Adviser Discretion Fund (ADF). In order to maintain effective controls on ADF expenditure, the payment that advisers can make to a customer was reduced to £100 within a 12 month period. However it remains the case that if individual circumstances justify it, that limited can be raised.

The chief executive of Jobcentre Plus has ensured that field directors and district managers adhere to the national limits and cease, with immediate effect, any variation which reduce the discretionary limit.

Allied Steel and Wire

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of expenditure under the Financial Assistance Scheme on deferred pensioners in the Allied Steel and Wire (Cardiff) pension scheme in (a) 2005-06, and (b) each year from 2006-07 to 2010-11, under the three-year rule. [44259]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 20 January 2006]: The estimated expenditure under the Financial Assistance Scheme on deferred pensioners in the Allied Steel and Wire (Cardiff) pension scheme is £50,450 (before tax deductions) in 2005-06. This covers the first payments made in December and monthly payments for the months January to March.

It will not be possible to provide estimates for subsequent years until we have received full details on eligible members and the extent of their losses from the trustees of the pension scheme. This information is unlikely to be available until the scheme is close to finalising winding up.

Asbestos

John Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the possibility of material containing asbestos being sent to landfill if the European Union Asbestos Worker Protection Directive is implemented. [44557]

Mrs. McGuire: The disposal of asbestos and asbestos contaminated waste is regulated by the waste controls including those regulations implementing the Landfill and Hazardous Waste Directives. These regulations will not be affected by the implementation of amendments to the Asbestos Worker Protection Directive. The legal obligations that currently exist to manage and properly dispose of hazardous waste, such as waste containing asbestos, will remain in place.

John Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the risks associated with the application and removal of textured coatings containing asbestos. [44558]

Mrs. McGuire: The Health and Safety Laboratory has carried out research on the removal of asbestos-containing textured decorative coatings. The Health and Safety Commission's Consultative Document on proposals for revised Asbestos Regulations and an Approved Code of Practice includes a summary of this research and a wider risk assessment.

The Health and Safety Executive has also commissioned some further research on likely exposures to asbestos from textured coating removal, and will evaluate this and other available research, including on risks to the public, as part of the consultation. The supply and use (including application) of asbestos-containing textured decorative coatings is prohibited by the Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations 1999, and textured decorative coatings supplied today no longer contain asbestos.

John Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to remove certain processes from the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [44559]

Mrs. McGuire: The Health and Safety Commission's (HSC) consultation on revised Asbestos Regulations and an Approved Code of Practice ends tomorrow, 31 January. HSC will take account of the views of consultees before making recommendations for final regulations.

The Consultative Document does not contain any proposals to remove processes from the Control of Asbestos at Work (CAW) Regulations; all processes currently covered by these regulations would remain so.

It is proposed that work with asbestos-containing textured decorative coatings is removed from the Health and Safety Executive's licensing regime, due to the much lower level of risk arising from work with these materials than previously indicated. It would, however, still be a requirement under CAW Regulations that this work is undertaken by properly trained workers using suitable controls to reduce exposure, based on a written plan of work.

Benefits

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed both incapacity benefit and income support in each year since 1997. [42541]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is in the following table.

Income support claimants also in receipt of incapacity benefit or severe disability allowance: Great Britain

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he plans to locate administration of benefit services outside the United Kingdom. [45888]

Margaret Hodge: The Department has no intention of moving any of its jobs outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made on the simplification of (a) structures and (b) payment systems for in-work benefits. [45235]

Mr. Plaskitt: The in-work benefits administered by the Department for Work and Pensions are housing benefit and council tax benefits.

On 24 January 2006 we published our Green Paper "A new deal for welfare: empowering people to work". This details our proposals for simplification and reform of housing benefit in the private sector and consults on the direction of reform for social sector.

We are also continuing our programme of measures to simplify housing benefit and council tax benefits rules to align more closely with pension credit and tax credits.

No changes have been made in payment systems in respect of housing benefit.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many incapacity benefit claimants in the borough of Hammersmith and Fulham have been receiving the benefit for five years or more. [45257]

Mrs. McGuire: As at May 2005, 3,900 people in the London borough of Hammersmith and Fulham had been claiming incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance for five years or more.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the value of (a) unemployment benefit, (b) income support, (c) invalidity benefit and (d) the basic state pension was as a proportion of average full-time earnings in each year from 1977-78. [41442]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of gross domestic product was spent on (a) unemployment benefits, (b) invalidity benefits, (c) disability benefits and (d) income support in each year since 1978-79. [41441]

[1] This figure is the number of housing benefit recipients with at least one non-dependant.
[2] This figure is the total number of non-dependants.
[3] Figures under £2,500 are subject to a high degree of sampling variation and should be used only as a guide to the situation.
[4] Denotes nil or negligible.

Notes:
1. The data refers to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.
2. The caseloads are rounded to the nearest thousand, and percentages to one decimal place. Totals may not sum due to rounding.
3. Housing benefit figures exclude any extended payment cases.

Claims refused are all those claims where no monetary amount of incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance was awarded. Many of these claims will be National Insurance contribution-only cases. Other benefits may be awarded.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people leaving incapacity benefit in (a) the last six months, (b) the last 12 months and (c) the last seven years represented (i) transfers to other social security benefits, (ii) people moving from benefit into employment and (iii) people moving off benefit to unknown destinations. [43338]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is in the table.

Incapacity benefit (IB) and severe disablement allowance (SDA) leavers by destination during periods shown

	IB/SDA claims ending in the last six months[1]	IB/SDA claims ending in the last 12 months[2]	IB/SDA claims ending in the last seven years[2]
Total number of claims ending	355,400	707,400	5,336,800
Transfer to other benefits[4]	83,900	166,000	1,334,000
Return to IB/SDA[5]	16,700	32,400	268,600
Reach retirement age or are recorded as moving to state pension	29,000	60,900	448,500
Recorded as death of claimant	13,100	25,800	183,400
Recorded as returned to work[6]	14,500	26,700	136,500
Residual unknown destinations	198,200	395,500	2,965,800

[1] IB SDA claims ending in the last 12 months includes IB/SDA claims terminating from 1 March 2004 to 28 February 2005, this is the latest year for which figures are available.
[2] IB SDA claims ending in the last seven years include IB/SDA claims terminating from 1 March 1998 to 28 February 2005.
[3] Those transferring to other benefits include those moving onto income support pension credit, jobseeker's allowance, working families tax credit, disabled persons tax credit within 90 days of the IB/SDA claim ending.
[4] Return to IB/SDA includes those claimants who make another claim to IB/SDA within 90 days of their previous claim terminating.
[5] It is known that the number recorded as returning to work underestimates the true situation. It is not possible to determine the number that moved to employment, however the "Destinations of Benefit Leavers 2004" report showed that 62 per cent. of IS, JSA and IB leavers entered employment of 16 hours or more a week.
[6] Destinations of terminated IB/SDA claims are assigned in the priority order shown above.

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. IB/SDA claims ending in the last six months include IB/SDA claims terminating from 1 September 2004 to 28 February 2005.
3. Figures for the "last six months" and "last 12 months" given above will increase significantly following receipt of late notifications.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of people making a fresh claim for incapacity benefit in each year since 2000 had been in receipt of incapacity benefit during the previous 12 months. [43340]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is in the table.

Incapacity benefit (IB) commencements where the claimant had formerly claimed IB in the previous 12 months: Great Britain

	All commencements	Commencements with former IB claim in previous 12 months
			Percentage

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will list other benefits available to incapacity benefit recipients; and what changes there have been in recipient numbers of each benefit in each of the last five years; [43344]

(2) how many claimants of incapacity benefit were in receipt of (a) incapacity benefit only, (b) incapacity benefit in combination with each other benefit to which a claimant may also be entitled and (c) each other (i) benefit and (ii) combination of benefits to which a claimant may be entitled in each of the last five years; and what the average weekly level of benefit received by a claimant was in each case. [43346]

Mrs. McGuire: The key benefits that can be paid with incapacity benefit (IB) and severe disablement allowance (SDA) are: income support (IS); disability living allowance (DLA); housing benefit (HB); and council tax benefit (CTB).

IB and SDA claimants may also have underlying entitlement to bereavement benefits and carers allowance, although there would be no monetary value.

Industrial injuries disablement benefit and war disablement pension can be paid in addition to incapacity benefit, where a claimant is entitled to these benefits.

The available figures for the key benefits are in the tables. Because they are from different data sources, the housing benefit and council tax benefit figures cannot be combined with the other benefits and an overlap exists between the figures in the tables.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average length of time for an appeal by a claimant against a decision on non-entitlement to incapacity benefit to be heard was in each year since 2000. [43349]

Mrs. McGuire: This is a matter for Dr. Christina Townsend, chief executive of the Appeals Service. She will respond to the hon. Member.

Letter from Christina Townsend, dated January 2006:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to your question regarding what the average length of time for an appeal by a claimant against a decision on non-entitlement to incapacity benefit to be heard was in each year since 2000.

The information you have asked for is set out in the table below.

Average Appeal Durations from Lodged to Outcome

Weeks

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005[1]
All IB	22.59	22.28	20.72	19.63	18.9
IBPCA	21.88	21.79	20.59	19.63	18.78
IB Non-PCA	27.05	25.61	21.64	19.64	19.83

[1] Years are represented from January to December in each instance except 2005 where January to September has been used.

Notes:
1. All figures are subject to change as more up to date data becomes available.
2. "Lodged" denotes when an appeal is submitted to the first tier agency. Lodged data only enters the GAPS database when the Appeal reaches the Appeals Service.
3. Duration is derived by calculating the time difference from when an appeal is lodged until when it is cleared. It is represented in weeks.
4. PCA is the Personal Capability Assessment.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in the Eastern region had their invalidity benefit reduced because of failure to attend interviews in each of the last five years. [45714]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available on a regional basis.

British Sign Language

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on (a) his Department's projects to support access to British Sign Language and (b) the recruitment of tutors for this purpose. [45242]

Mrs. McGuire: My Department has recently provided a total of £1.5 million funding for:

six initiatives to contribute to establishing a GB wide framework to support the recruitment, training and deployment of BSL tutors, to enhance their numbers, status and levels of qualification; and four initiatives to promote access for BSL users through awareness raising among employers, among service providers and in the wider community.

Examples of these projects include:

a project which developed online curriculum material and established online learning facilities;

a project which developed a family sign language curriculum that will allow BSL tutors to deliver appropriate training in BSL to the families of deaf children; and a project providing practical workplace solutions at the point of need for interaction between deaf BSL users and hearing people—an extensive online resource covering BSL awareness for employers and colleagues, including the deaf person's first day in a new job; opportunities to learn BSL from basic signs through to quite advanced levels; and work specific BSL dictionaries to be accessed by both deaf and hearing people.

BSL tutors were involved in developing, piloting and using the materials produced by the projects. A conference was held on 7 December 2005 to disseminate lessons learned and to raise awareness of and promote take-up of project outputs and products.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many deduction of earnings orders were imposed by the Child Support Agency in each year from 1991 to 1994; and if he will make a statement. [44737]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Child Support Agency did not start operating until 1993. The information requested is not available covering the period 1993–94.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what plans he has to give the Child Support Agency powers to use (a) travel bans and (b) passport withdrawal as a child support enforcement tool; and if he will make a statement; [44779]

(2) what plans he has to tag non-resident parents who are not compliant with child maintenance assessments issued by the Child Support Agency, and if he will make a statement. [44732]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Secretary of State will make an announcement on child support shortly.

Child Support

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents have been found to be avoiding paying the correct amount of child support in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) the UK in each year since 1997. [21041]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 30 January 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents have been found guilty of avoiding paying the rightful amount of child support in (a) Jarrow constituency (b) South Tyneside (c) the North East and (d) the UK in each year since 1997.

Detailed information relating to committal proceedings is only available from the period from March 1999. Owing to the format in which this data is held, it is not possible to provide this data for the specific geographical areas requested on a yearly basis and only total numbers to date can be provided.

	Number of non resident parents sentenced since March 1999
South Tyneside	2
North East of England	[1]41
Nationally	496

[1] includes two sentences passed in the South Tyneside court.

It is not possible to identify which, if any, cases were heard in the Jarrow court.

These sentences will include suspended sentences, committal to prison or disqualification from holding or obtaining a driving licence.

I hope you find this response helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff have left the Child Support Agency in each of the last six years; and if he will make a statement. [21855]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the latest estimate is of the time taken to action a Child Support Agency case clerically; and if he will make a statement. [21962]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 30 January 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the latest estimate is of the time taken to action a Child Support Agency case clerically; and if he will make a statement.

The latest estimate of the average time taken to clear a case once it has been set up clerically is 16 weeks. This is based upon a sample of a third of the clerical caseload of 15,000 cases.

I hope you find this answer useful.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Child Support Agency cases there were in each year from 1997 to 2005 in (a) England, (b) Northamptonshire and (c) Wellingborough. [26799]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Such information as is available is presented in the attached table. I apologise for the fact that this information cannot currently be disaggregated to the geographical level requested from February 2003 onwards.

I hope you find this helpful.

Number of CSA cases with a full maintenance assessment for England, Northamptonshire and Wellingborough 1997–2003

As at February	England	Northamptonshire	Wellingborough
1997	420,000	4,000	1,000
1998	558,000	7,000	1,000
1999	693,000	8,000	2,000
2000	789,000	9,000	2,000
2001	833,000	10,000	2,000
2002	862,000	10,000	2,000
2003	796,000	8,000	2,000

Notes

1 The figures are rounded to the nearest thousand, and are a 'snapshot' at end of February each year.

2 The analysis presented includes those cases with a full maintenance assessment only, as it is not possible to provide disaggregated volumes for pre-assessed cases or those with an interim maintenance assessment.

3 Northamptonshire is based on the following local authority areas: Corby, Daventry, East Northamptonshire, Kettering, Northampton, South Northamptonshire, Wellingborough.

4 Wellingborough analysis is based on Wellingborough parliamentary constituency.

5 Robust information covering the period from March 2003 to present is not currently available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many requests to HM Revenue and Customs for information regarding the income of non-resident parents were made by the Child Support Agency in each month over the last three years; and what the average time taken to respond was. [30001]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 30 January 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many requests to HM Revenue and Customs for information regarding the income of non-resident parents were made by the Child Support Agency in each month over the last three years; and what the average time taken to respond was.

The Agency requests earnings information from two areas of HMRC, they are the Centre for Revenue Intelligence and the National Insurance Contributions Office.

Requests for earnings information originate from the Agency's caseworkers who are familiar with the standards underpinning the Service Level Agreement which details the services to be provided and the timescales for the provision of those services. Where these are not met, caseworkers will escalate on a case by case basis either directly with HMRC via their "Trace Champion" or through a central Service Level Agreement Team to resolve any specific issues.

Because of these arrangements the Agency does not generate internal management information on either requests or timescales.

The Centre for Revenue Intelligence does hold information on requests made for earnings from the Agency. These are shown in the table at annex A.

The arrangements with National Insurance Contributions Office are similar to that of The Centre for Revenue Intelligence although caseworkers will go directly to the central Service Level Agreement Team if the service falls below the required standard.

The National Insurance Contributions Office holds information on total Department of Work and Pensions referrals, however this is not disaggregated for the Child Support Agency.

I hope you find this useful.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of change requests made by Ministers in relation to the CS2 computer system on the operations of the Child Support Agency. [30016]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 30 January 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of change requests made by Ministers in relation to the CS2 computer system on the operations of the Child Support Agency.

Change requests are made by the Agency not Ministers. Senior Agency officials rigorously review the reason for any change request to ensure it will deliver significant operational benefit. EDS are then asked to conduct impact assessments against all aspects of their IT service and provide a documented response. This response is reviewed by senior Agency officials who, based on the information provided, make a final decision on whether to proceed with the change.

Change requests are primarily made to incorporate new or amended functionality. This may be required for various reasons, but predominantly to address needs that could not be foreseen at the system development stage—such as incorporating the requirement to transfer responsibility for payment of maintenance from Girobank to the Alliance and Leicester, for example.

The changes requested have improved the degree of support that the system provides to staff while processing cases and delivering customer service. This has included enhancements to our mechanisms for distributing workload, our automated exchange of information with Jobcentre Plus and the quality of automatically produced customer notifications.

I hope you find this helpful.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) absence rates due to sickness and (b) turnover rates for Child Support Agency staff were for each month of the last calendar year. [30025]

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total cost of compensation payments made to clients of the Child Support Agency for administrative errors was in each of the last five years. [30030]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 30 January 2006:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the total cost of compensation payments made to clients of the Child Support Agency for administrative errors was in each of the last five years.

Financial redress is made to clients in cases where maladministration has occurred. The Agency does not hold robust information to distinguish administrative errors from other acts of maladministration.

The following table summarises the financial redress payments made to clients in each of the last five financial years, as outlined in the Agency's Annual Report and Accounts.

	£ Financial redress paid to clients
2000-01	3,053,000
2001-02	2,590,000
2002-03	2,478,000
2003-04	2,331,000
2004-05	3,043,000

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many stuck cases were held by the Child Support Agency during the last calendar year, broken down by month. [30040]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 30 January 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many stuck cases were held by the Child Support Agency during the last calendar year broken down by month.

There are still a number of defects in the CS2 computer system which can prevent some cases from progressing. The figures in the table below show the total number of cases requiring technical intervention to progress against all identified defects. These figures include cases currently being progressed clerically and cases for which no further action is required but which cannot be closed without technical intervention. The clerical process allows staff to progress these cases off-line to ensure that any money paid in by the non-resident parent is paid out to the parent with care.

Month	Total number of cases unable to progress without technical intervention
November 2004	36,128
December 2004	25,931
January 2005	30,109
February 2005	28,983
March 2005	25,420
April 2005	25,877
May 2005	21,295
June 2005	23,713
July 2005	25,557
August 2005	26,757
September 2005	28,237
October 2005	29,354
November 2005	32,830

Work is ongoing to remedy these problems, and future IT releases are planned during 2006 and 2007 to resolve the various system performance issues and build on the improvements already made.

I hope you find this helpful.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) face-to-face interviews have been provided, (b) complaints have been received, (c) cases have been referred to the Independent Case Examiner and (d) cases have been raised by hon. and right hon. Members with the Child Support Agency in each year since 1997; what the average cost of each has been in each year; and how policy on each has changed since 1997. [33431]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 1 December 2005]: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Information on face-to-face interviews is only available for 2002-03 for old scheme cases on CSCS, and in 2004-05 for all schemes. Details are included in the following table.

Face to face interviews carried out by the CSA

	Number
2002-03	67,195
2003-04	[1]
2004-05	26,136

[1] Robust information covering the period 2003-04 is not currently available.

Under the new legislation (introduced in March 2003), calculating maintenance requires less information and is quicker to establish therefore reducing the need for face-to-face interviews. This will have contributed to the fall in the numbers of interviews between 2002-03 and 2004-05.

The agency's face-to-face service was replaced in September 2005 with the Client Interviewing Service. This service provides interviews for clients who require assistance. It also uses Compliance Inspector Teams to pursue clients, employers and other parties who fail to co-operate with the agency when required to do so.

Unfortunately, it is not possible currently to provide estimates of the average cost of carrying out face-to-face interviews.

(b) The following table provides information on the number of complaints received by the agency since 1997.

During 2003-04 a three-tier complaints process was introduced. Stage 1 complaints are dealt with by the complaints resolution team located within each of the agency's six business units. Stage 2 complaints are an escalation to the relevant area director when the client is not satisfied with the outcome of stage 1; and stage 3 is an escalation to the chief executive if the client remains dissatisfied.

Unfortunately, it is not possible currently to provide estimates of the average cost of dealing with agency complaints.

Agency complaints—number of cases received by the agency 1997 to 2005

	1997-98	1998-99	1999-2000	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05
Stage 1 complaints received (written)	27,875	28,073	21,015	19,634	15,493	15,182	24,809	29,213
Stage 1 complaints received (telephone)	[1]					[2]	7,458	10,570
Chief executive complaints	[3]			4,096	4,555	7,804	[4]	[5]
Treat official complaints	[6]			2,609	2,869	1,344	1,521	1,108
MP complaints to business units	[3]			4,175	4,818	4,537	5,317	8,871

[1] While the agency did receive stage 1 telephone complaints prior to 2002-03, their volumes were not recorded, thus preventing meaningful comparison with later years.
[2] Although 671 stage 1 telephone complaints were recorded between December 2002 and March 2003, their volumes were not recorded throughout the whole year, thus preventing meaningful comparison with later years.
[3] While the agency did receive complaints directly to the chief executive, treat official complaints, and MP complaints to business units prior to 2000-01, their volumes were not recorded, thus preventing meaningful comparison with later years.
[4] During 2003-04 complaints sent directly to the chief executive were not recorded separately from those complaints which were escalated to him as part of the three stage process. Therefore, although 7,183 complaints in total were received during 2003-04, it is not possible to separate out those complaints received by the chief executive directly (as opposed to those escalated via the complaints process), thus preventing meaningful comparison with data for earlier years.
[5] In April and May of 2004, the chief executive received a total of 1,435 complaints but it is not possible to separate out those complaints received by the chief executive directly, as opposed to those escalated to stage 3 of the complaints process. From June 2004 to March 2005, after which time such complaints were recorded separately, the chief executive received 4,352 direct complaints and 2,549 complaints escalated upwards from stage 2. Again, these recording issues prevent meaningful comparison of this category with earlier years.
[6] Treat official letters are those received by a Minister from a member of the public, and referred for initial consideration to an official of the agency.
Note:
The agency has a three-tier complaints process which comprises of: stage 1 complaints from clients which are dealt with by the Complaints Resolution Team located within each of the agency's six business units; stage 2 complaints which are an escalation to the relevant area director when the client is not satisfied with the outcome of stage 1; and stage 3 which is an escalation to the chief executive if the client remains dissatisfied.

(c) The following table shows the volume of complaints received, accepted and cleared by the Independent Case Examiner (ICE), together with the annual budget and cost per cleared case.

The ICE can only accept cases that have completed the final stage of the agency's complaints process in the six months prior to the referral to ICE. Cases that concern matters of law, Government policy, have been (or are being) investigated by the parliamentary and health service ombudsman, cannot be accepted. Cases which cannot be accepted are referred back to the agency.

Unit cost (£)	5,028	1,943	1,504	1,900	2,350	2,080	2,499	2,016

Notes:
1. Figures shown represent complaints received into ICE from Great Britain and Northern Ireland CSA clients.
2. Unit cost is annual budget divided by the volume of cleared cases.

(d) Unfortunately, it is not possible to say how many case specific complaints have been raised by hon. and right hon. Members. While the information presented in the table at part (b) shows complaints sent to business units by MPs; these can relate to both case specific and general issues, and cannot be broken down to identify the former. In addition, cases shown as being received by the chief executive are from MPs and also other bodies such as solicitors, pressure groups, local councillors and citizens advice bureaux. Again, this information recorded cannot be broken down further.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total amount of compensation paid to clients by the Child Support Agency (CSA) has been since 1997; and (a) how many and (b) what proportion of complaints about the CSA have been upheld by the Independent Case Examiner since 1997. [35395]

Mr. Plaskitt: The following table summarises the compensation payments made to clients in each year since 1997, as outlined in the agency's Annual Report and Accounts.

£ million

	Amount of compensation paid
1997–98	1.101
1998–99	4.351
1999–2000	3.075
2000–01	3.053
2001–02	2.590
2002–03	2.478
2003–04	2.331
2004–05	3.043

The following table shows how many full investigations were carried out by ICE on complaints raised about the CSA, and the outcome of those investigations.

CSA (GB) complaints fully investigated by ICE

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many customer complaints were made to the Child Support Agency in each year from 1996–97. [41332]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the requested information.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 30 January 2006:

In reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many customer complaints were made to the Child Support Agency in each year from 1996–97 to 2005–06 to date.

The volumes of complaints received direct from clients, their representatives and MPs to the Child Support Agency or to our Ministers, for which information is available, are in the attached table.

It should be noted that it is difficult to use this information to make meaningful comparisons over time due to changes in the way that information has been recorded. In particular whilst the volume of stage 1 written complaints undoubtedly rose between 2002–03 and 2003–04, this is likely to have been due in part to more rigorous recording of complaints received at the time, and the introduction by the Agency of a three tier complaints process during 2003–04.

It should also be noted that the volume of complaints has stabilised. In the twelve months up to November 2005, the Agency received a total of 54,000 complaints, this compares to 55,000 for the 12 months up to May 2005 (the earliest period for which comparable data for total numbers of complaints received is available).

Further, to put the attached figures into context, the 54,000 complaints received in the 12 months to November 2005 represent less than 4% of the 1.4 million cases dealt with by the CSA.

I hope you find this answer useful.

Agency complaints—number of cases received in the agency 1997 to 2005

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	April–November 2005
Stage 1 complaints received (written)	27,875	28,073	21,015	19,634	15,493	15,182	24,809	29,213	18,087
Stage 1 Complaints received (telephone)	[1]	[1]	[1]	[1]	[1]	[2]	7,458	10,570	7,038
Chief Executive Complaints	[3]	[3]	[3]	4,096	4,555	7,804	[4]	[4]	3,857
Treat Official Complaints	[3]	[3]	[3]	2,609	2,869	1,344	1,521	1,108	817
MP Complaints to Business Units	[3]	[3]	[3]	4,175	4,818	4,537	5,317	8,871	6,488

[1] While the agency did receive stage 1 telephone complaints prior to 2002–03, their volumes were not recorded, thus preventing meaningful comparison with later years.

[2] Although 671 stage 1 telephone complaints were recorded between December 2002 and March 2003, their volumes were not recorded throughout the whole year, thus preventing meaningful comparison with later years.

[3] While the agency did receive complaints directly to the Chief Executive, treat official complaints, and MP complaints to Business Units prior to 2000–01, their volumes were not recorded, thus preventing meaningful comparison with later years.

[4] During 2003–04 complaints sent directly to the Chief Executive were not recorded separately from those complaints which were escalated to him as part of the 3 stage process. Therefore, although 7,183 complaints in total were received during 2003–04, it is not possible to separate out those complaints received by the Chief Executive directly (as opposed to those escalated via the complaints process), thus preventing meaningful comparison with data for earlier years.

[1] In April and May of 2004, the Chief Executive received a total of 1,435 complaints but is not possible to separate out those complaints received by the Chief Executive directly, as opposed to those escalated to stage 3 of the complaints process). From June 2004-March 2005, after which time such complaints were recorded separately, the Chief Executive received 4,352 direct complaints and 2,549 complaints escalated upwards from stage 2. Again, these recording issues prevent meaningful comparison of this category with earlier years.
[2] Treat official letters are those received by a Minister from a member of the public, and referred for initial consideration to an official of the agency.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many child support cases were referred to the special payments department at the Child Support Agency in each year since 2001; how many special payments were made; what the total cost of the special payments was; and how many people were paid special payments. [42010]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer on 16 January 2006]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the right hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 30 January 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many child support cases were referred to the special payments department at the Child Support Agency in each year since 2001; how many special payments were made; what the total cost of the special payments was; and how many people were paid special payments.

The Agency does not hold sufficiently robust information to give you precisely the information requested. I apologise for this but can give you information on the number of cases referred to special payments, how many special payments have been made and the total cost of special payments between the period 1 December 2001 and 31st December 2005.

I am unable to state how many people received payments from the Child Support Agency because the Agency records the number of payments made and an individual may have received more than one payment.

The table below contains the available information.

Period	Cases referred to special payments	How many special payments made	Total cost of special payments in £ million
1 December 2001 to 31 March 2002	4,053	2,758	0.662
1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003	11,513	9,522	2.478
1 April 2003 to 31 March 2004	10,482	6,883	2.331
1 April 2004 to 31 March 2005	13,112	10,144	3.043
1 April 2005 to 31 December 2005	10,340	7,616	2.760

Notes:
1. The Agency does not hold sufficiently robust information prior to 1 December 2001 to provide data over the entire period requested.
2. Compensation payments cover financial redress, which are made to clients in cases where maladministration has occurred. The Agency does not hold robust information to distinguish administrative errors from other acts of maladministration.
3. Consolatory payments are made in support of an apology made by the Agency to any individual. Actual financial loss payments are made in those cases where maladministration has directly caused the customer to incur additional expenditure that would not have been incurred otherwise.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what powers the Independent Case Examiner has (a) to award and (b) to recommend the awarding of compensation by the Child Support Agency (CSA) in cases where the Examiner considers that the CSA has failed claimants. [44231]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Independent Case Examiner has no statutory authority to award compensation. However, she has authority to recommend the consideration of financial redress by the Child Support Agency in cases where she has identified maladministration in the way that the agency dealt with a client. Such recommendations may include the consideration of compensation for actual financial loss and consolatory payments in recognition of difficulties, anxiety and distress caused by agency maladministration.

The agency has agreed to implement her recommendations in all but exceptional circumstances, giving written reasons for not doing so to both the Case Examiner and the client. The agency decides the amount of the award in line with Department for Work and Pensions Guidance.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in how many cases in each of the last five years the Independent Case Examiner has found failure by the Child Support Agency; and in how many cases the Examiner recommended that the Agency should pay compensation. [44232]

Mr. Plaskitt: The following table describes all of the information requested.

[1] Complaints are cleared by resolution on the basis that the Agency will take agreed action to address the issues raised.
[2] Some cases include more than one recommendation where several instances of maladministration have been identified.
[3] For similar reasons, some cases will include more than one recommendation for financial redress. Financial redress may include consolatory payments, ex gratia payments, actual financial loss, deferment of arrears, advance payments of maintenance, interest payments, or refunds of maintenance paid.
Note
All figures include the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what account is taken by the Child Support Agency of jointly incurred debts when assessing maintenance payments; [44570]

(2) why an overdraft incurred as a result of being unable to pay maintenance and debt repayments is not considered in Child Support Agency assessments. [44602]

Mr. Plaskitt: In the new scheme a non-resident parent can apply for a "variation" to the maintenance calculation to have "special expenses" taken into account. In the old scheme either parent can apply for a "departure" from the formula. One of the grounds on which a variation or departure can be applied for is where the non-resident parent (or in the old scheme the absent parent or parent with care) has expenses relating to debts which arose before the non-resident parent became a non-resident parent, and at the time that the non-resident parent and the parent with care were living together.

The debts must have been incurred for the joint benefit of both parents, or their children, or for the benefit of the other parent but where the person applying remains legally responsible for the repayments.

Expenses relating to a bank overdraft can be taken into account but only where at the time it was taken out it was agreed to be for a specified amount and repayable over a specified period.

Only the expenses exceeding a certain threshold are allowed. In the current scheme the threshold is set at £10 a week where the non-resident parent's net weekly income is below £200, and £15 a week where it is £200 or more. In the old scheme the threshold is £15 a week for all cases.

A departure or variation is only allowed where it is "just and equitable" to do so. Broadly this means that the result of the variation or departure must be fair taking account of all the circumstances of the case, and, in particular, the welfare of any child likely to be affected. This includes the child for whom maintenance is paid as well as any other children living with either parent.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2006, Official Report, column 611W, on the Child Support Agency, how many outstanding applications from people in (a) Guildford and (b) Surrey were received more than (i) six months and (ii) 12 months ago. [45645]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available at the geographical level requested.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many formal complaints his Department has received regarding the Child Support Agency from people in the borough of Hammersmith and Fulham in each year since 1997. [45960]

Mr. Plaskitt: This information requested is not available at the geographical level requested.

Customer Management Computer Systems

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost was of implementing the Customer Management computer systems (a) CMS, (b) CMS2 and (c) CMS3. [34251]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 30 January 2006:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning what the cost was of implementing the Customer Management computer systems (a) CMS, (b) CMS2 and (c) CMS3. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Firstly, the CMS system is not yet fully deployed across the Jobcentre Plus network of local offices and contact centres and consequently there will be implementation costs not yet incurred.

CMS and CMS2 were inter-related developments of the system and the costs were not separated. CMS3 was a release designed to improve the operation of the system based on lessons learned from the earliest deployment in a live environment.

The total cost of CMS and CMS2 to 31 October 2005 was £243.6 million. The cost of CMS3 is estimated to be £9.98 million.

A copy of the CMS business case was given to the Work and Pensions Parliamentary Select Committee in November 2005 and shows that savings of £61.5 million are estimated for each year when CMS is fully deployed and the resulting changes in working practices and culture have become the norm. Total savings are expected to exceed total costs over the 10 years up to 2012–13 by £98 million.

I hope this is helpful.

Departmental Computers (Identity Theft)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to change departmental computer systems to prevent identity theft. [45367]

Mr. Plaskitt: DWP operates a formal security accreditation process for all departmental computer systems to ensure that confidence can be placed in the appropriateness and effectiveness of security controls within these systems, and to ensure compliance with legal and regulatory requirements.

DWP recognizes that Identity and Access Management is a critical element of a robust IT system security capability. DWP are working closely with leading IT security vendors and integrators to ensure that effective Identity and Access Management IT controls are designed into new DWP IT systems and which will complement and strengthen existing security controls within legacy IT systems.

The Department is continuously reviewing and revising its strategy, capabilities and operations in this area to ensure that the Department's security controls remain effective and are capable of addressing emerging threats such as identify theft.

Departmental Efficiency Savings

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what efficiency savings have been made by his central Department since 1 January 2004; and if he will make a statement. [41460]

Margaret Hodge: The Department is on track to meet its Gershon review efficiency targets, the baselines for which are March 2004. Progress against the targets has been reported in the Department's Autumn Performance Report which was laid before Parliament on 15 December 2005.

Disability

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will make a statement on the initial activity undertaken by his Department in response to those recommendations in the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit Report Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People where lead responsibility was assigned to all Government Departments. [37082]

Mrs. McGuire: The new Office for Disability Issues (ODI) will report annually to the Prime Minister on cross-government progress in implementing the Strategy Unit report, Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People. The first report is due to be published by summer 2006. It will contain an assessment of the activity undertaken both by the ODI and by relevant Government Departments to fulfil the responsibilities and recommendations set out in Strategy Unit's report.

The Department for Work and Pensions has responded positively to the recommendations of the Strategy Unit report and, working closely with colleagues from other Departments, established the cross-government ministerial steering group that is taking forward the Government's strategy to deliver substantive equality for disabled people by 2025. The Department co-ordinated cross-government efforts in setting up the Office for Disability Issues, which was launched on 1 December this year, and partnered with the Department of Health and ODPM in the development of the pilots for individual budgets, announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health on 21 November 2005. The Department is also leading an exercise to appoint people onto an advisory group that will work with disability organisations, disabled people, and Government officials to develop proposals for a national forum for organisations of disabled people.

The Department for Work and Pensions is also committed to taking forward the recommendations in the Life Chances report on employment, working with other Government Departments to achieve these. Progress against these recommendations will be published in the ODI annual report. The Life Chances report, and the recommendations within it are key in helping the Department for Work and Pensions in reviewing the employment services offered to disabled people, and in considering how best to reform incapacity benefit to ensure that disabled people are empowered and supported within the labour market.

Work is underway on a project to research information and advice required by disabled people and review existing cross-government provision. We will work with other Departments to develop proposals to improve the provision of information and advice about services to disabled people. The Directgov website for disabled people, www.directgov.uk/disability is now the central point for all information from Government. It has been warmly received by disabled people and organisations and continues to grow in popularity and interest. All Departments contribute to the information and services and it is now written and co-ordinated within the Office for Disability Issues.

Disability Benefits Unit

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the Disability and Carers Service's reorganisation of the Disability Benefits Unit to operate on a regional basis; and if he will make a statement; [41112]

(2) if he will list the private sector firms that have been contracted for the reorganisation of the Disability and Carers Service; and what the value was of each such contract; [41113]

(3) how many staff hours he expects to be taken up by the (a) reorganisation of the Disability Benefits Unit and (b) subsequent training of staff; and what this represents in terms of financial cost; [41114]

(4) what advice he has received from the Disability and Carers Service on the likely impact on assessment of claims during the reorganisation of the Disability Benefits Unit; and if he will make a statement. [41115]

Mrs. McGuire: The reorganisation of the Disability Benefits Unit is a matter fro the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated January 2006:

In reply to four of your recent Parliamentary Questions about the reorganisation of the Disability Benefits Unit, the Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, on behalf of the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

You asked what assessment he had made of the Disability and Carers Service's reorganisation of the Disability Benefits Unit to operate on a regional basis.

The Disability Benefit Unit (DBU) is the largest of the Disability and Carers Service's (DCS) operational sites and has responsibility for the ongoing management of approx 4.5 million cases where Attendance Allowance or Disability Living Allowance is in payment. It also deals with new claims for these benefits from people living in the south of England.

The decision to reorganise on a regional basis was made in order to improve service delivery to customers and their representatives, by reducing the number of people and teams that have to be involved in handling claims and changes of circumstances. Under the current organisation, a claim or change of circumstances could be dealt with by one of a number of functional teams dealing with customers from any part of Britain. The new model joins holistic benefit teams in the DBU with their counterparts dealing with new claims in our regional centres, the Disability Benefit Centres (DBC). Customers will continue to contact DCS through the national Customer Care Helpline (CCH) and the underlying structural changes should not be obvious to them, except that their business will be dealt with more efficiently and effectively.

You also asked if he would list the private sector firms that have been contracted for the reorganisation of the Disability and Carers Service, and what the value was of each such contract.

The total cost of accommodation, infrastructure and IT changes has been budgeted at £444,000. The changes are being made through the DWP's normal partners, Land Security Trillium, EDS and BT.

You also asked how many staff hours he expected to be taken up by the (a) reorganisation of the Disability Benefits Unit and (b) subsequent training of staff; and what this represents in terms of financial cost.

In answer to part (a) of your question, the notional staff cost associated with the move is 79,617, based on an assumption that each member of staff will be non-productive for half a day during implementation.

In answer to part (b) of your question, most staff will continue to carry out the same work as they are currently but, over the coming months, a programme of learning and development will be used to refresh or broaden the skills of those who require it. A skills audit of all staff is being carried out currently and that will be used to assess the training needs and costs. Whilst the full cost has not yet been assessed, it is worth mentioning that some training of this nature would have been undertaken as part of the normal life of the unit; the key difference is that the skills audit will facilitate precise targeting of the training.

Finally, you asked what advice he had received from the Disability and Carers Service on the likely impact on assessment of claims during the reorganisation of the Disability Benefits Unit.

The expectation is that, in the immediate term, there will be minimal disruption to services. Pre-implementation activities have included the deployment of a dedicated team that has ensured there are no bottlenecks of work in the DBU and contingency plans exist should, unexpectedly, there be difficulties in the immediate period after the changes. The CCH will be open for its normal hours, and provide the full range of services, throughout the implementation period. In the medium term, the expectation is that the unit will function more effectively and efficiently and there will be gains in terms of improvements in quality, time taken to deal with cases, overall customer care and efficiency.

I hope this is helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed the mobility component of disability living allowance in each year since 1997 in (a) Leeds West constituency and (b) Leeds metropolitan district. [41869]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated 30 January 2006:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many people claimed the mobility component of disability living allowance in each year between 1997 to 2005 in (a) Leeds West constituency and (b) Leeds Metropolitan district.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

The information requested is not available. Such information as is available is in the following table:

Discretionary Housing Payments

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to ensure that local authorities make use of discretionary housing payment funding to help those facing (a) unsustainable housing benefit shortfalls, (b) eviction and (c) homelessness. [43098]

Mr. Plaskitt: Discretionary Housing Payments can be made, subject to an annual cash limit, where a person is entitled to housing benefit or council tax benefit and the local authority consider that they are in need of further financial help with their eligible rent or council tax.

When the Discretionary Housing Payments scheme was introduced in July 2001, general guidance was issued all local authorities, setting out the conditions for entitlement to an award. However, the decision on whether to make a Discretionary Housing Payment is entirely at the discretion of the local authority concerned so we cannot prescribe whether or not an authority must make a payment in any particular circumstances.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2005, Official Report, column 2253W, on discretionary housing payments, if he will prioritise the use of the returned funding to help those affected by unsustainable housing benefit shortfalls, eviction and homelessness. [44303]

Mr. Plaskitt: Discretionary housing payments are intended for people who have a shortfall between their housing benefit or council tax benefit and their eligible rent or council tax liability.

The level of Government contribution, which currently stands at £20 millon, is reviewed on an annual basis. Where a local authority does not use its Government contribution in full, the amount is recovered in the subsequent financial year.

While the award of discretionary housing payments is entirely at the discretion of the local authority concerned, we would expect those at risk of eviction and homelessness to be among those considered for such awards.

Employment (Over-60-year-olds)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether over-60-year-olds who are seeking work are (a) included in unemployment statistics and (b) required to sign on at Jobcentre Plus. [46743]

Margaret Hodge: To be entitled to jobseeker's allowance (JSA) a claimant has to be under state pension age, currently 60 for women and 65 for men. Anyone who claims jobseeker's allowance has to be available for and actively seeking work, and has to sign on at their local jobcentre.

The Office for National Statistics publishes information each month on the number of JSA claimants. It also publishes the International Labour Organisation (ILO) measure of unemployment, derived from the Labour Force Survey. This is based on criteria set down by the ILO, and counts all those who are actively seeking and available for work, regardless of their benefit status. The ILO measure includes those who are claiming JSA, but also those who are actively seeking work but are not eligible for, or choose not to, claim benefit.

EU Presidency (Outcomes)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the significant outcomes of the recent British EU presidency in the areas of responsibility of his Department. [45196]

Mr. Plaskitt: The main focus of legislative work was the Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council which took place on 8 and 9 December 2005. A written statement on the outcomes of this council appeared in Hansard on 14 July, but the main item of interest to my Department was that partial political agreement was reached on the Progress social spending programme.

External Consultants

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department has paid since 2004 to external consultants who had previously been employed by the Department in any capacity within the previous five years. [41207]

Margaret Hodge: The information required to answer this question is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Individuals who have previously been employed by the Department are required to obtain permission before being given work as external consultants but details of such approvals are not collated centrally.

Financial Assistance Scheme

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of expenditure under the Financial Assistance Scheme in (a) 2005–06 and (b) each year from 2006–07 to 2010–11, under the three-year rule. [44260]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 20 January 2006]: It will not be possible to provide firm estimates until we have assessed the eligibility of each scheme and its members. Our latest estimates in current cash terms, based on data provided by a limited number of schemes in late 2004, are shown in the following table. The estimates will change in light of improved information. Over the longer term we estimate expenditure to average £20 million over 20 years.

£ million cash

	Pay 80 per cent. to those within three years of scheme pension age
2005–06	0.5
2006–07	10
2007–08	15
2008–09	25
2009–10	30
2010–11	30

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of expenditure under the Financial Assistance Scheme over each of the next five financial years if the three-year rule were to be extended to a five-year rule. [44270]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 20 January 2006]: It will not be possible to provide firm estimates until we have assessed the eligibility of each scheme and its members. Our current estimates, based on data provided by a limited number of schemes in late 2004, in current cash terms are shown in the following table. These estimates will change in light of improved information.

£ million cash

	Pay 80 per cent. to those within five years of scheme pension age
2005–06	0.5
2006–07	10
2007–08	15
2008–09	30
2009–10	40
2010–11	40

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in respect of how many company pension funds in wind-up and eligible for assistance under the Financial Assistance Scheme the three-year rule will apply to (a) 0 to 5 per cent., (b) 5 to 10 per cent., (c) 10 to 15 per cent., (d) 15 to 20 per cent., (e) 20 to 25 per cent., (f) 25 to 30 per cent. and (g) more than 30 per cent. of deferred pensioners; and what the total number of deferred pensioners is in each category. [44272]

Mr. Timms: We are not yet able to provide the information required. We will not know how many deferred members will be eligible for assistance from the Financial Assistance Scheme until we have assessed the eligibility of each scheme and its members. It is therefore unlikely that this information will be available until a significant proportion of pension schemes have completed winding up.

Job Vacancies (Easington)

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many notified job vacancies there were in the Easington travel to work area in each year since 2002. [44302]

Margaret Hodge: The number of monthly job vacancies notified to Jobcentre Plus in Easington parliamentary constituency since November 2004 is shown in the table.

Period	Number of notified job vacancies
November 2004	521
December 2004	601
January 2005	418
February 2005	515
March 2005	439
April 2005	381
May 2005	313
June 2005	409
July 2005	504

December 2005	474

Source:
Jobcentre Plus Labour Market System

Easington is not a defined travel to work area in its own right. Additionally, Jobcentre Plus handles only a proportion of vacancies notified by employers. Consequently the figures do not represent the total number of job vacancies available in Easington. Jobcentre Plus vacancy data by parliamentary constituency was made available for the first time in June 2005 with back data to November 2004.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the time taking to issue new contracts to training providers of Government-funded Jobcentre Plus training programmes. [42249]

Margaret Hodge: We are introducing new contracting procedures to reduce bureaucracy and improve performance. Bringing in these changes has been complex and we had to be sure that they delivered the outcomes we wanted.

New contracts will be in place from July 2006.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many calls to helplines dealing with claims for jobseeker's allowance (a) were received, (b) were handled, (c) received an engaged or busy tone and (d) were abandoned by the caller in each month since January 2004; and if he will make a statement. [24951]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 30 January 2006:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the calls to helplines for Jobseeker's Allowance, since January 2004. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

It may be helpful if I explain that Jobcentre Plus is introducing a new approach to claiming working age benefits where customers call a contact centre to establish their claim. This approach is being rolled out gradually across the country.

The information provided in this response relates to these rolled out areas only and covers the period from June 2004 when we started to collate information centrally.

	Calls offered	Calls answered	Calls abandoned[1]
June 2004	314,085	247,607	68,815
July 2004	414,980	322,863	91,128
August 2004	319,777	253,283	66,891

October 2004	321,743	280,409	39,560
November 2004	336,494	296,002	37,790
December 2004	357,550	293,692	63,073
January 2005	410,165	328,861	82,138
February 2005	356,548	305,519	54,074
March 2005	457,642	345,015	111,564
April 2005	400,621	284,399	110,243
May 2005	393,297	291,769	101,057
June 2005	561,180	391,730	168,700
July 2005	525,392	303,090	221,686
August 2005	533,636	280,233	251,922
September 2005	717,701	419,703	296,864

[1] Calls answered and calls abandoned do not equal calls offered, because of short abandoned calls. Short abandoned calls are calls that are abandoned before the end of the greeting message and are therefore not offered to an agent and could never be answered.

Your question also includes reference to engaged or busy lines. The telephony system used allows calls to enter into a queue without receiving an engaged or busy tone. If all operators are busy an appropriate message is placed on incoming calls and customers are placed in a queue.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total cost was of providing interviews, signing on and job referrals for jobseeker's allowance recipients in 2004-05. [44957]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 23 January 2006]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 30 January 2006:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning what the total cost was of providing interviews, signing on and job referrals for Jobseeker's Allowance recipients in 2004-05. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The total cost of providing interviews, signing on and job referrals for Jobseeker's Allowance recipients is not available from our records. The information you require could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Medical Examining Centres

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many medical examining centres there were in (a) 1997, (b) 2001 and (c) 2005; what plans there are to close any medical examining centres over the next five years; what assessment he has made of (i) average distances and (ii) furthest distances travelled by benefit claimants for medical assessments in each year; and what assistance is available for transport costs. [36738]

Mrs. McGuire: In August 1997 there were 137 medical examination centres (MECs), in December 2001 there were 121, and in July 2005 there were 125. These figures relate to permanent sites. In addition medical services use up to 40 casual hire centres, which are used as and when required.

Under plans agreed with the Secretary of State, the contractor (Atos Origin) is to close 11 MECs. However, three large regional centres are to be opened to service the areas affected by the MECs closures.

Information on actual distances travelled by benefit claimants is not collected. However, no customer is required to travel more than 90 minutes each way on public transport to attend a MEC. Where customers cannot get to an examination centre within 90 minutes using public transport, or where it is clear that they would have health-related difficulties in travelling, alternative arrangements are made.

All claimants who attend an appointment at a MEC are entitled to claim full reimbursement of pubic transport fares or where they have travelled by other means, such as by car, expenses can be claimed at set rates. Details of expenses which can be claimed are sent to the customer with their appointment documentation.

National Insurance Number

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many national insurance numbers have been issued. [44115]

Mr. Plaskitt: There are approximately 72 million national insurance numbers currently in issue. This exceeds current UK adult population because the total includes numbers retained for deceased people, for those in receipt of benefit living outside of the UK and for customers who are abroad.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to answer questions (a) 18786, (b) 18787, (c) 18634, (d) 18859, (e) 19631, (f) 20012, (g) 21436, (h) 21433, (i) 21437, (j) 21434, (k) 21441, (l) 21445, (m) 21444, (n) 21439, (o) 21442, (p) 21438, (q) 21452, (r) 21451, (s) 21586, (t) 21581, (u) 21582, (v) 21590, (w) 21857, (x) 21962, (y) 21957, (z) 21961, (aa) 24135, (bb) 21854, (cc) 21853, (dd) 21855, (ee) 23680, (ff) 23393, (gg) 24538, (hh) 24540, (ii) 24573, (jj) 24951, (kk) 28422, (ll) 28420, (mm) 28385, (nn) 29986, (oo) 30004, (pp) 30001, (qq) 29988, (rr) 30002, (ss) 30068, (tt) 30064, (uu) 30566, (vv) 29999, (ww) 30066, (xx) 30971, (yy) 31021, (zz) 31208, (aaa) 31196, (bbb) 32506, (ccc) 32505, (ddd) 32250, (eee) 32726, (fff) 33295, (ggg) 33701, (hhh) 33435, (iii) 34170, (jjj) 35360, (kkk) 35371, (lll) 35361, (mmm) 35364, (nnn) 35372, (ooo) 35373, (ppp) 35376, (qqq) 35395 and (rrr) 35359, tabled by the hon. Member for Yeovil. [40858]

Mr. Plaskitt: My ministerial colleagues and I have replied to 28 of these 70 questions tabled by the hon. Member.

We attach importance to answering parliamentary questions promptly and will endeavour to respond to all questions within parliamentary deadlines where possible.

Pathways to Work

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people on incapacity benefits in the Pathways to Work pilots have helped back into work since the initiative began. [44098]

Margaret Hodge: There have been almost 150,000 people started on the Pathways to Work programme, including 11,200 existing customers. Nearly 80,000 people have attended mandatory work focused interviews. Of these, 17,670 people volunteered to take advantage of the Choices programme.

With our support, 19,500 people have entered employment, including 3,220 who volunteered to take part in the Pathways initiative. This has resulted in an 8 percentage point increase in people leaving incapacity benefits after six months in the Pathways areas compared to the rest of the country.

Pathways to Work

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Pathways to Work pilots in getting existing incapacity benefit claimants back into work. [40759]

Margaret Hodge: The early evidence from our Pathways pilots is extremely positive and indicates that this is the most effective labour market intervention that has been tested anywhere in the developed world.

All new claimants have to join the pilot, but they can voluntarily select to take advantage of the employment support programmes. 150,000 started on the programme between October 2003 and August 2005 of whom 11,200 were existing customers.

There have been nearly 80,000 mandatory work focussed interviews. 17,670 voluntarily agreed to take advantage of the Choices package, including 8,540 new deal for disabled people registrations and 7,490 condition management referrals.

There have been 19,500 job entries, 3,220 from existing customers. As a result there has been an 8 percentage point increase in people leaving incapacity benefits within six months in Pathways areas compared to the rest of the country.

Pensions

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he plans to introduce legislation which requires (a) employers to contribute to their employees' pensions and (b) individuals to save for their retirement. [32758]

Mr. Timms: The Government is reflecting on the recommendations in the Pensions Commission's second report and is committed to consulting with the public and stakeholders on these key issues.

No decisions have been taken on any proposed changes and there are no plans to bring forward legislation in the current session of Parliament to reform the pensions system.

The Government plans to publish a White paper in the spring in response to the Pensions Commission's report. The White Paper will set out what legislation will be needed and a planned timetable for reforms.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have left incapacity benefit since 2001 owing to the receipt of an occupational pension. [44509]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Personal Capability Assessment

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken was for the completion of a Personal Capability Assessment for (a) incapacity benefit claimants and (b) income support claimants in each year since 2000. [43345]

Mrs. McGuire: The average examination time taken to complete a Personal Capability Assessment is set out in the following table:

	Average National PCA Exam Time
2000	37.8
2001	37.1
2002	35.2
2003	35.8
2004	37.8
2005	37.7

Note
The figures provided are in minutes, per calendar year.

The Personal Capability Assessment for incapacity benefit is identical to that for income support. Separate timings are, therefore, not kept.

Although an average examination time is provided, doctors spend as long as is required to carry out an appropriate assessment, depending on the nature of the individual's physical and /or mental disabilities.

Private Banks

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations his Department has (a) made to and (b) received from private banks regarding those who have been diagnosed as having a terminal illness and face financial hardship. [42974]

Mrs. McGuire: We have not made or received any such representations.

Terminally Ill People

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were diagnosed as terminally ill in the latest year for which figures are available; and how many of those claimed attendance allowance. [41287]

Mrs. McGuire: Information about the numbers of people diagnosed as terminally ill is not available. In the 12 months to 31 December 2005 there were 36,900 claims for Attendance Allowance under the Department's "Special Rules" which apply to terminally ill people who have a progressive illness and who are not expected to live longer than six months[1].

Work and Pensions Insurance Office (Milton Keynes)

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to close the Work and Pensions Insurance Office in Central Milton Keynes. [44824]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated January 2006:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what plans he has to close the Work and Pensions Insurance Office in Central Milton Keynes. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

I assume you are referring to the National Insurance number service provided from Bowback House in Milton Keynes. Bowback House is not closing. It is being developed to deliver Social Fund services for the whole of the South East region. However, it will no longer be a designated interview location for National Insurance number applications.

Under a new process being introduced to improve the National Insurance number allocation process, customers in the South East needing a National Insurance number will telephone a national contact centre where staff will book an interview at a convenient location.

Work-focused Interviews

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the unit costs are of work-focused interviews for (a) jobseeker's allowance, (b) incapacity benefit and (c) income support applicants. [44954]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 23 January 2006]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 30 January 2006:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning what the unit costs are for work-focussed interviews for (a) jobseeker's allowance applicants, (b) incapacity benefit applicants and (c) income support applicants. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The information relating to work-focussed interviews is not gathered separately from the cost of administering benefits. In response to PSA target requirements, we do publish the unit costs for Job Broking and Benefit Processing every year in our Annual Report and Accounts. The PSA unit costs for job broking activities and benefit processing for 2004/05 were as shown in the table below.

Benefit	Unit cost (£)
Job Broking	197.64
Benefit Processing	28.07

TRANSPORT

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether local authorities running alternative concessionary travel token schemes will be required to discontinue such schemes under the free bus pass scheme. [46247]

Ms Buck: No. As now, a person entitled to the statutory minimum can agree to give up that entitlement and accept an alternative concessionary fare scheme instead (e.g. tokens). They would then forego their entitlement to the statutory minimum for an agreed period. However, they must have the option to choose the statutory minimum.

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of whether local authorities will discontinue concessionary travel token schemes other than the free bus pass scheme to fund the free bus pass scheme. [46253]

Ms Buck: None. However, the Department for Transport will be monitoring the introduction of the improvement in the statutory minimum, including the impacts on local schemes.

Cross-country Rail Links

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve cross-country rail links between the East and West Coast main lines. [46685]

Derek Twigg: The Trans-Pennine Express (TPE) franchise was specifically created to improve the links between the major cities of Yorkshire and the North East England and those in the North West. 51 new three-car diesel units will be delivered and phased into service by TPE during 2006 to enhance the quality of these links.

Crossrail

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the conclusions are of the most recent assessment carried out by or commissioned by his Department on the feasibility and viability of the Crossrail project; and if he will make a statement. [46691]

Derek Twigg: In 2003, the Department commissioned Sir Adrian Montague to review the business case for Crossrail. His report was published in July 2004 and is available on DfT's website at www.dft.gov.uk

The Department subsequently worked closely with Cross London Rail Links Limited (CLRLL)—the company held jointly by the Department and TfL to take forward the development of Crossrail to refine the scheme in preparation for the deposit of the Crossrail hybrid Bill in February 2005.

The Crossrail environmental statement (ES) and its accompanying technical reports, which were published alongside the Bill, set out the refined scheme in detail, how it would be constructed, and how it would be operated. It can be found at www.Crossrail.co.uk.

CLRLL has also published a revised economic appraisal of Crossrail taking into account the changes adopted as a result of Sir Adrian Montague's review, as well as changes to the DfT appraisal guidance. It can also be found at www.Crossrail.co.uk.

Free Bus Travel

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will extend off-peak free bus travel on weekdays, at weekends and on bank holidays to those under the age of 16 years. [45695]

Ms Buck: It is already open to individual local authorities to offer concessionary bus travel to those under 16. There are no plans at present to make such provision statutory.

Greater Western Franchise

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the passenger revenue for the Greater Western franchise was for each of the last five years, broken down by rail operator. [42159]

Derek Twigg: Franchise agreements do not normally require operators to provide passenger revenue figures as a matter of routine. Where operators do provide these figures, they do so on a commercially confidential basis.

M1

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reason the M1 motorway was closed on Monday 16 January in the vicinity of junction 28; upon whose authority the closure took place; why the closure was deemed necessary; and if he will make a statement. [46695]

Dr. Ladyman: At approximately 12:45 hours on Monday 16 January 2006, Derbyshire police firearms response team were called to attend a potentially serious incident on the M1 motorway, adjacent to the northbound off slip road at junction 29.

For reasons of safety to road users, the Derbyshire police closed the northbound carriageway of the M1 at junction 28 and traffic was prevented from entering the motorway.

The southbound carriageway of the M1 between junctions 28 to 30 was also closed by Derbyshire police, with the agreement of South Yorkshire police, at approximately 13.30 hours.

After investigating the incident and finding there was no cause for concern, the police reopened both carriageways and slip roads of the M1 at 14.15 hours.

M181

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next expects the M181 motorway to be resurfaced. [46696]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency currently has no resurfacing works programmed for M181. However, the Agency will be undertaking a study of the M181 road surface, depending on the findings of this study, resurfacing on parts of this route may be carried out within the next three years. Localised repairs are expected to be undertaken sooner to ensure user safety.

The strategic road network is maintained in a safe and serviceable condition on a whole life cost principle, identifying the appropriate maintenance treatment at the optimum intervention time.

Ministerial Visits

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times he has visited (a) Dacorum and (b) Hertfordshire in his official capacity in the last 12 months; and what the purpose was of each visit. [29924]

Ms Buck: The Secretary of State has not made any visits to (a) Dacorum or (b) Hertfordshire in his official capacity since November 2004.

Private Aircraft

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Chicago Convention requires private aircraft operators to request permission from the Government to land in the UK. [45976]

Ms Buck: The Chicago Convention on International Civil Aviation sets out the rights and obligations that apply to contracting states. Article 5 of the Convention provides that non-commercial, privately operated aircraft may fly into, transit across and stop in other states' territories for non-traffic purposes (such as for refuelling) without requiring prior permission.

Railways

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet hon. Members from the north east to discuss (a) the Northern Rail franchise and (b) the north east England rail regional planning assessment. [45535]

Derek Twigg: I should be happy to arrange a meeting.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what safety provision is available for rail users at each rail station in Hampshire; what the times are of the first and last train at each station; at what times there is no staff cover at each station; at which stations security guards are located; what the name is of the lead train operating company in each case; and what improvement plans there are for (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07. [47253]

Derek Twigg: These are matters for the train operator responsible for the station concerned. All stations in Hampshire are operated by South West Trains except the following:

Emsworth and Warblington which are operated by Southern,

Dean, Dunbridge and Romsey, which are operated by Wessex, and Bramley which is operated by First Great Western Link.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of (a) Network Rail and (b) the British Transport police in preventing trespassing onto railway lines (i) in England and (ii) in West Lancashire constituency; and what further steps are planned. [45013]

Derek Twigg: Primary responsibility for preventing trespass on the national rail network lies with Network Rail, who work closely with the British Transport police, others in the rail industry and the wider community.

I have asked Network Rail to write directly to my hon. Friend about work to prevent trespassing on the network in West Lancashire.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what account he has taken of projected increases in rail passenger kilometres travelled when (a) allocating funding for (i) subsidies and (ii) rolling stock and (b) awarding franchises. [45355]

Derek Twigg: Invitations to tender for replacement franchises include an estimate of growth in passenger kilometres in the franchise area. Bidders are expected to take account of this when submitting their bids by specifying the rolling stock needed to deal with expected passenger numbers. Their proposals, and the resulting subsidy or premium profile, are taken into account in awarding the franchise.

Road Charging

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to allow local authorities to impose levies or charges for road use; and if he will make a statement. [46692]

Dr. Ladyman: In the Future of Transport White Paper (Cm 6234) the Government set out that, without radical measures, including more effective demand management, road congestion would get worse. That is why we need to look at whether road pricing would allow us to get more out of the network, particularly at peak times.

A national scheme of road pricing which covered all roads, charging motorists on the basis of distance travelled and varied according to how congested a road is, could potentially cut urban congestion by nearly half. But moving to a national system of road pricing would be a huge and complex task. That is why the Road Pricing Feasibility Study, which was published alongside the White Paper, recommended that local or regional schemes should be used to pilot approaches to road pricing.

The Secretary of State announced on 5 July 2005, Official Report, column 172, that the Government would ensure that up to £200 million would be available from the Transport Innovation Fund to support local pilots that combine demand management, specifically road pricing, with better public transport. If more good schemes emerge, then more would be made available.

The Transport Innovation Fund guidance, Official Report, column 66WS, 27 January 2006, sets out how local authorities and areas can bid for this funding.

Because the development of these schemes will be a complex undertaking the Government have made £18 million of pump priming funding available between 2005–06 and 2007–08 to help support the work of local authorities in developing local demand management schemes. The first allocation to seven areas was announced in 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 4WS.

Local highway authorities in England and Wales already have discretionary powers under the Transport Act 2000 to introduce such road user charging (road pricing) schemes. For a scheme to come into force an Order has to be approved by the appropriate national authority, which is the Secretary of State for transport in England.

Off-road Cycleways

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the length in miles was of off-road cycleways in each local authority area in each of the last 20 years. [46077]

Derek Twigg: Information on cycle tracks (off-road cycleways) in English local authorities has only been collected since 2001–02 and is set out in the table, which has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

The information is provided by local authorities on an annual basis as part of their annual performance reports on the local transport plans. It is not verified by the Department. Responsibility for the accuracy of the data rests with individual authorities. The data are incomplete and include estimates.

A breakdown of cycle tracks by London borough is not available. Transport for London estimates that there are approximately 200 km of off-road cycle routes. The Welsh Assembly Government do not currently collect this information centrally.

Road Safety

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fatalities have occurred in each year between 2000 and 2005 as a result of motor accidents caused by drivers (a) using mobile phones and (b) smoking while driving. [47489]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available. However, from 1 January 2005, information on contributory factors to accidents has been collected for personal injury road accidents reported at scene by a police officer. One of the factors is "driver using mobile phone". Subject to quality tests, first results should be available in autumn 2006.

Trams (Leeds)

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent, including consultants' and civil servants' costs, considering the revised tram proposals in Leeds from May 2004. [47121]

Derek Twigg: We did not keep a record of the time civil servants spent considering the revised tram proposals. The Department did not commission any consultants directly to consider the revised tram proposals in Leeds from May 2004.

The Department did, however, commission consultants Atkins to carry out a study into a high quality bus alternative for Leeds. As part of this study, Atkins and West Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive's (WYPTE's) advisers considered the revised tram proposals in the context of a comparison with a high quality bus alternative. The cost to the Department of commissioning Atkins, and paying a share of WYPTE's advisers, is £93,000.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Abandoned Vehicles

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many abandoned vehicles were removed and destroyed in each local authority in Gloucestershire in each of the last five years. [46432]

Mr. Bradshaw: Results for abandoned vehicles removed and destroyed have been reported in the Defra Municipal Waste Management Survey from 2000–01 until 2003–04. Results for 2004–05 onwards are being collected through WasteDataFlow and will be released when they are available. The results for local authorities in Gloucestershire are shown in the following table.

Local authority	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04
Cheltenham	n/a	648	696	n/a
Cotswold	67	154	368	119
Forest of Dean	186	360	466	360
Gloucester	700	896	1,200	685
Stroud	51	257	450	350
Tewkesbury	115	150	n/a	140

n/a = results not available

Animal Welfare Bill

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times she has met representatives from the (a) RSPCA, (b) British Veterinary Association and (c) representative body of the Council of Docked Breeds to discuss the Animal Welfare Bill. [46830]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has held meetings at all levels with a variety of groups to discuss the Animal Welfare Bill.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what public meetings are planned to be held on avian influenza; and where they will be held. [46495]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra has not organised any public meetings on Avian Influenza, however, we are running a series of regional meetings for poultry producers and others associated with the industry on a range of Avian Influenza issues.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the cost to the (a) chicken, (b) turkey, (c) emu, (d) duck, (e) goose, (f) game bird and (g) ostrich and rhea farming industries of an avian influenza pandemic. [46597]

Mr. Bradshaw: No estimates have been made of the cost to the poultry industry in the event of an outbreak of avian influenza. Any action taken to control the disease should be proportionate and decided upon in the light of an overall assessment of the risks, costs and benefits in a particular situation.

The cost to the industry in the event of an outbreak will depend on the circumstances prevailing at the time—not least in respect of the scale of any outbreak.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the Government will make funds available to (a) Vietnam, (b) Turkey and (c) other countries for the purposes of controlling the spread of avian influenza in those countries. [46954]

Mr. Bradshaw: As outlined at the pledging conference held in Beijing on 17 and 18 January this year, the UK Government will assist countries at-risk or affected by avian influenza. The Department for International Development will provide £20 million over the next three years to support country, regional or global activities.

UK research bodies are also keen to collaborate with affected and at-risk countries. The Medical Research Council recently announced a £10 million collaborative programme which can support such partnerships as required.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to ban the spreading of poultry manure as a measure against an outbreak of avian influenza; and if she will make a statement. [47499]

Mr. Bradshaw: Directive 2005/94/EC on the control of avian influenza, adopted on 20 December 2005, contains amended provisions on manure and would be implemented immediately in an outbreak of the disease.

Under the directive, following an outbreak of highly pathogenic avian influenza, the movement of manure would be controlled in the surveillance zone, which extends for a minimum of 10 km around the infected premises. In these zones, no used litter or poultry manure may be removed from, or spread on, any premises unless authorised under biosecurity measures. This provision can be extended to a wider area if necessary to reduce the risk of the spread of disease.

The same measures will be put in place following an outbreak of low pathogenic avian influenza. However, the restricted zone would be of a minimum of 1 km around the infected premises.

Bovine TB

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions with farmers' representatives she has had on potential market distortions arising from pre-tested cattle from an infected area selling at a premium. [46158]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 30 January 2006]: The effect of pre-movement testing on cattle prices was considered in the report of the Tuberculosis Pre-Movement Testing Stakeholder Group and in a Regulatory Impact Assessment, available on the Defra website at: www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/premovement/index.htm

Pre-movement testing will be introduced in England on 20 February. We will keep the policy under review.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to investigate the effects of the new requirement to test for bovine TB in all cattle over 15 months before movement on the holding of live auction markets. [46350]

Mr. Bradshaw: Pre-movement testing will be introduced in England on 20 February and will apply to cattle over 15 months of age moving out of one to two year tested herds, unless the herd or the movement meets any of the exemptions as defined in the TB (England) Order 2005 (as amended).

The possible impact of pre-movement testing on markets was considered in the report of the Tuberculosis Pre-Movement Testing Stakeholder Group and assessed in the regulatory impact assessment, available on the Defra website at: www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/premovement/index.htm.

We will keep the policy under review.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent on the random badger culling trial (RBCT) since 1998; and what estimate she has made of the total cost of the RBCT. [46731]

Mr. Bradshaw: The randomised badger culling trial began in December 1998. To the end of 2004–05 the cost was approximately £32 million. Surveying and analytical work is continuing and is expected to cost approximately £7 million in 2005–06.

Brazilian Beef

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the (a) use of slave labour and (b) clearing of rainforest in the production of Brazilian beef exported to the UK. [46623]

Mr. Morley: The information is as follows.

(a) The Brazilian Government is committed to eradicating slave labour practices. Legislation has now been prepared to confiscate farms that practise forced and child labour. This issue continues to be a matter of serious concern and our embassy in Brazil is monitoring developments closely. We welcome the engagement of civil society in Brazil and internationally on this issue.

More broadly, the Government have played a leading role in ensuring that the international framework to tackle abuses of workers' rights throughout the world is in place, particularly through its work with the International Labour Organisation (ILO) whose 1998 Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work and its Follow-Up works towards the elimination of forced labour and child labour, the ending of discrimination in employment and the right to organise and collective bargaining; and has provided specific support to the ILO's action programme on combating forced labour.

(b) With regard to deforestation, the UK has contributed £14 million to the multi-donor pilot programme for the preservation of Brazilian rain forests and is a major contributor to the global environment facility (GEF) which is creating and maintaining protected areas in the region through the Amazon Region Protected Areas Programme. The managers of the GEF have approved or endorsed funding for 29 projects in Brazil, with a value of approximately £150 million. The UK also continues to support projects in the Amazon through multilateral organisations, including the European Commission and the World Bank.

In terms of beef exports to the UK, our records indicate that there was a slight decrease in the amount of Brazilian beef entering the UK in 2005 compared to 2004. The UK still needs to import beef as, until very recently, we were only 70 per cent. self-sufficient in beef production. However, we do expect beef imports to now fall.

Climate Change

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what scientific monitoring her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated in relation to (i) climate change in general and (ii) temperature and salinity changes in the gulf stream; and if she will make a statement. [45599]

Mr. Morley: Climate change monitoring funded by DEFRA includes the accurate monitoring of global sea surface temperature by the AATSR (Advanced Along Track Scanning Radiometer) satellite instrument. DEFRA also contribute financially to the Argo project: a global array of over 2,000 free-drifting profiling floats that measure the temperature and salinity of the upper 2,000 m of the ocean. The Hadley Centre (UK Met Office), as part of their contract with DEFRA, monitor scientific developments in monitoring climate change that are relevant to DEFRA's needs.

The responses of the gulf stream and other components of the North Atlantic Thermohaline Circulation are being investigated in a major joint research programme by the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science, (CEFAS) (funded by DEFRA and its predecessor Departments since 1985). This study monitors two components of the ocean circulation off SE Greenland that are of key importance to climate. This study and the measurement of warm, salty flows passing into Arctic to the NW of Scotland, funded by the Scottish Executive and predecessors for over 100 years, form important elements of the international Arctic-Subarctic Ocean Flux Study (ASOF), which investigates all aspects of the role of the Northern Seas in Climate; ASOF, now the largest ocean-observing system in the Northern Hemisphere, is chaired by CEFAS. The Hadley Centre, funded by my Department, is also investigating the issue of gulf stream stability and evaluating research by others in this field.

Departmental Vehicles

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average fuel efficiency of her Department's vehicles has been in each year since 1997. [21417]

Jim Knight: Information on fuel use is not collected for vehicles in the Defra or Executive Agencies fleet.

Domestic Water Rates

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average annual domestic water rates were for (a) each area of England and (b) each water supplier over the last five years. [45597]

Mr. Morley: Figures for average annual domestic water and sewerage charges are not collected on a regional basis.

Tables placed in the Library of the House show the average annual domestic water and sewerage bills for each of the water and sewerage undertakers in England and Wales for each of the last five years. For ease of comparison the figures are quoted in 2005–06 prices.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many meetings of the EU (a) Committee for the adaptation to scientific and technical progress of the directive on a limit value for lead in the air, (b) Advisory Committee for the implementation of the directive on the reduction of sulphur content of certain liquid fuels, (c) Committee for the adaptation to technical progress and the implementation of the directive on the control of volatile organic compound emissions resulting from the storage of petrol and its distribution from terminals to service stations and (d) Committee for the implementation of the directive relating to the availability of consumer information on fuel economy and carbon dioxide emissions in respect of the marketing of new passenger cars have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; which other UK representatives were present; what provision was made for representation of the devolved Governments; and if she will make a statement. [39021]

Mr. Bradshaw: There were no meetings of the Committee for the adaptation to scientific and technical progress of the directive on a limit value for lead in the air, the Advisory Committee for the implementation of the directive on the reduction of sulphur content of certain liquid fuels, or the Committee for the adaptation to technical progress and the implementation of the directive on the control of volatile organic compound emissions resulting from the storage of petrol and its distribution from terminals to service stations, during the UK presidency.

There were no meetings of the Committee for the implementation of the directive relating to the availability of consumer information on fuel economy and carbon dioxide emissions in respect of the marketing of new passenger cars, during the UK presidency.

EU Emissions Trading Scheme

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government will publish the draft National Allocation Plan for phase II of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. [46608]

Mr. Morley: A National Allocation Plan (NAP) for Phase II (2008 to 2012) must be submitted to the European Commission by 30 June 2006, with a final installation-level allocation by 31 December. The Commission has recently published additional guidance on the preparation of NAPs and member states' approaches to the second phase and we are assessing the impact of this on the development of policy options. We intend to publish a draft policy NAP this spring.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what methodology has been employed in the setting of the cap on emissions in the National Allocation Plan for phase II of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. [46609]

Mr. Morley: The Government are currently considering the total level of allowances (the cap) for the second phase of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. An announcement will be made in due course.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the EU Emissions Trading Scheme is the key lever with which the Government hope to meet their target of a 20 per cent. reduction in carbon dioxide emissions by 2010. [46610]

Mr. Morley: The EU Emissions Trading is a central plank of the Government's strategy to tackle climate change. The Government are currently considering the total level of allowances (the cap) for the second phase of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme and the proportion that the scheme should contribute to the UK's 2010 carbon dioxide goal. An announcement will be made in due course.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment has been made of the effect of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme on the profitability of the power generation sector in phase I of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. [46611]

Mr. Morley: A report commissioned by DTI was published in December 2005 that provides an assessment of the impact of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme on investment and pricing within the UK power generation sector in terms of electricity prices impacts, profitability and security of supply.

This report found that, in the event of full pass-through of marginal costs, the EU Emissions Trading Scheme would result in an estimated increased profitability for the UK power generation sector of approximately £800 million/year over phase I (based on the current annual allocation of 130MtCO2).

Fallen Goats

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will remove the requirement that fallen goats must be collected by her Department's approved agents; and if she will make a statement. [45702]

Mr. Bradshaw: All eligible fallen goats must be collected by approved agents because of our legal obligation to test for Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathy (TSEs).

Fallen Stock collections are undertaken within a preference list system organised by the Rural Payments Agency (RPA). This system is essential to ensure notified goats are collected promptly and submitted for testing. Goat keepers are required to report all eligible fallen goats to a free dedicated TSE Surveillance helpline, who co-ordinate the collection process with the appropriate contractor.

We expect the current goat surveillance requirements to be reviewed by the European Commission during 2006.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the names of agents approved by her Department for collecting fallen goats in Devon. [45703]

Mr. Bradshaw: Fallen Stock collections are carried out under a preference list system organised by the Rural Payments Agency (RPA). The RPA has contracts with Prosper De Maulder (Exeter) Ltd. and Cremtor to collect fallen goats in Devon.

The RPA is currently taking forward a competitive tender exercise, which may result in some changes to the collection network.

Farm Subsidies

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with farmers' representatives on compensation for (a) indebtedness and (b) interest paid thereon resulting from late single farm payments. [46157]

Jim Knight [holding answer 30 January 2006]: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, and the rest of the Defra ministerial team meet regularly with farmers' representatives, when the timing of payments under the single payment scheme (SPS) and the related impact on the agricultural industry are regular topics of discussion. The most recent such meeting was with the President of the National Farmers Union on 25 January, when my noble Friend, Lord Bach, reconfirmed the Government's longstanding commitment to commence SPS payments, whether full or partial, in February.

Flood Defences

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department has spent on flood defences in 2005–06; and if she will make a statement. [46026]

Mr. Morley: Defra has paid £5.8 million to date in this financial year in capital grants to local authorities and Internal Drainage Boards in respect of flood defence works. Defra will pay £445.2 million to the Environment Agency as Flood Defence Grant in Aid for its flood defence work including the flood warning service.

In addition to Defra grants, £3.8 million in credit approvals (Supported Capital Expenditure (Revenue)) has been given to local authorities. These credit approvals are used by the ODPM in the calculation which determines the Revenue Support Grant, paid to authorities.

Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade Processes

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the UK Government are taking to prevent circumvention through third party countries of the voluntary partnership agreements under the Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade processes. [46426]

Mr. Morley: We recognise that a bilateral agreement such as the Voluntary Partnership Agreements outlined in the EU's Forestry Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) regulation will never be watertight. Partner countries can import and export timber to third countries outside of the FLEGT scheme. The Commission's original proposal attempted to tackle this issue by requiring all imports of timber into the EU to require a certificate of origin. Customs experts felt it would not work in practice and risked a challenge under the WTO by putting a requirement on third countries.

Despite concerted efforts by member states, no alternative measure to tackle this problem through the licensing system has been found. Instead, circumvention is tackled by making it explicit that timber defined as "legally produced" will include timber imported from third countries (and therefore which could be illegally felled) and making it a requirement for Partner Countries to report on timber import levels and their actions to tackle circumvention.

The Government see the bilateral approach of the Forests Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) dossier as an important way to develop experience in tackling illegal logging and to build the consensus that could lead to a multilateral agreement. The UK is working very hard with other consuming countries to address issues of trade with third party countries.

Illegal logging was one of two topics of discussion at the first ever G8 Environment and Development Ministerial meeting in Derbyshire in March 2005. Ministers agreed to a range of actions, and officials will meet in 2006 to review progress. The UK has also led in promoting and supporting Regional Forest Law Enforcement and Governance (FLEG) processes in order to intensify national efforts and strengthen bilateral, regional and multi-lateral collaboration to address violations of forest law and forest crime.

Horses

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps her Department is taking to establish the ownership of horses that are (a) running free and (b) tethered on public land; [45755]

(2) what steps she is taking to protect the welfare of horses whose ownership is not clear and who are tethered on public land; [45756]

(3) if she will take steps to ensure that the relevant legislation is enforced where privately-owned horses are (a) running free and (b) are tethered on public land in Wellingborough constituency. [46070]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Animals Act 1971 and the Highways Act 1980 contain provisions that relate to stray horses. And responsibility for enforcing this legislation lies with the police and local authorities.

The Protection Against Cruel Tethering Act 1988 created a specific offence under the Protection of Animals Act 1911 of causing unnecessary suffering to a horse, ass or mule by the manner or condition of its tethering. Anyone can seek to bring a prosecution where there is evidence of cruelty, either by tethering or by allowing horses to run free.

The Animal Welfare Bill will introduce a positive duty to ensure the welfare of animals, and will allow for intervention before an animal suffers. Anyone deliberately abandoning a horse is likely to be found guilty under the Bill's new Welfare or Cruelty Offences. Alongside the Bill we intend to produce a code of practice on tethering and keeping of horses and ponies. This will also address issues relating to stray animals.

Illegal Timber

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the UK Government's policy is towards legislation to ban illegal timber imports into the EU. [46427]

Mr. Morley: As part of the 2003 FLEGT Action Plan, the European Commission committed itself to exploring additional options to tackle illegal logging. This includes looking at outright ban on the importation of illegal timber. Government will need to look at the impact and practicality of such an option carefully, particularly the impact of requiring all timber to be identified as "legal"; whether that could be enforced and the effect of such a measure on developing countries that rely on income from timber.

The UK Government believe that, in the long term, a multilateral approach would be the best way to tackle illegal logging. However, we recognise the need to build consensus with producing countries to achieve this. The Forestry Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) regulation, with its innovative approach of balancing bilateral trade agreements and development assistance for improving forest governance, will play a key role in realising this consensus.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make an assessment of the options for legislation to prevent illegal timber entering the UK. [46428]

Mr. Morley: As part of the Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Action Plan agreed in 2003, the European Commission committed itself to looking at additional options for preventing the importation of illegally logged timber into the EU. Government are frustrated at the time that it has taken the European Commission to produce this report and have made efforts at official and ministerial level to assist with its delivery.

Preliminary research on additional options will now be discussed in Brussels on 31 January 2006. This will include an assessment of existing national legislation in the UK that could be used to prevent the entry of illegal timber by creating a market for legal timber supplies.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate the Government have made of the volume of illegal timber entering the UK in each of the past five years. [46628]

Mr. Morley: The UK is the world's fourth largest importer of wood products. However, we are unable to estimate how much illegally logged timber is coming into the UK as timber is not identified as legal or illegal at Ports of Entry.

Once the recently adopted EU Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Regulation comes into force it will enable member states to enter into Partnership Agreements with developing countries and provide them with assistance to tackle illegal logging. This assistance will include a licensing system designed to identify products and license them for export to the EU. It will be reinforced by powers for HM Customs to take a range of actions relating to unlicensed products from partner countries; this will allow member states to prohibit the import of illegal timber from those countries into the EU for the first time.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had about illegal timber in the past 12 months. [46629]

Mr. Morley: The Government have used their presidencies of the G8 and EU to really focus on the issue of illegal logging and to promote the FLEGT Action Plan.

Illegal logging was one of two topics of discussion at the first ever G8 Environment and Development Ministerial meeting in Derbyshire in March 2005. G8 Ministers agreed to a range of actions to tackle illegal logging and officials will meet in 2006 to review progress. Under the UK presidency of the EU, the EU Forest Law Enforcement, Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Regulation was adopted at the EU Agriculture Council in December 2005.

Defra works very closely with the Department for International Development and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on illegal logging and Ministers continually raise the issue of illegal logging at appropriate bilateral and multi-lateral events. In particular my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for International Development (Mr. Thomas) was present at the first ministerial meeting of the Europe-North Asia (ENA) Forestry Law Enforcement and Governance (FLEG) process in St. Petersburg in December 2005.

Ministers have also engaged in dialogue through a range of outreach events; addressed international stakeholder meetings at Chatham House and participated in Round Tables with Industry. Ministerial evidence was submitted to the Environment Audit Committee in November 2005.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action the Government are taking to tackle imports of illegal timber. [46630]

Mr. Morley: The principal action being taken by Government to tackle the import of illegally logged timber is implementation of the Forestry Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) regulation. This developed out of the European Commission's FLEGT Action Plan, published in May 2003. It describes a package of measures to tackle illegal logging, including proposals that the EU enters into partnership agreements with timber producing countries to establish a licensing system designed to identify products and license them for export to the EU.

The Government are delighted that the proposal for a licensing system was adopted by the EU in December 2005, under the UK's Presidency. Government believe that as a first step to address illegal logging, it is necessary to build consensus with producing countries and make sure that we do not discriminate against legitimate trade. The EU FLEGT licensing scheme, with its innovative approach of bilateral trade agreements and development assistance for improving forest governance, will achieve this in the first instance.

Although formal negotiations have not yet started with any country, discussions leading to negotiations have been underway with several countries where illegal logging is recognised to be a problem, and we hope that the first agreements will be in place during 2006. The UK is leading the negotiations with Ghana.

The Department for International Development (DfID) has recently announced that it will be setting aside £24 million over the next five years for this FLEGT negotiation process and for tackling illegal logging more generally.

The FLEGT Action Plan also proposes that the Commission look at other options to tackle illegal logging, including using Government procurement and introducing legislation to prevent the importation of illegally logged timber at a member state or EU level. They will be preliminarily discussed in Brussels at the end of January, after which a final report will be presented at Council to EU Ministers later this year.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures the Government has in place to quantify the volume of illegal timber entering the UK; and what targets have been set for replacing such imports with legal and sustainable timber. [46631]

Mr. Morley: The UK is the world's fourth largest importer of wood products. However, we have been unable to estimate how much illegally logged timber is coming into the UK as timber is not identified as legal or illegal at Ports of Entry.

Once the recently adopted EU Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Regulation comes into force it will enable member states to enter into Partnership Agreements with developing countries and provide them with assistance to tackle illegal logging. This assistance will include a licensing system designed to identify products as legal and license them for export to the EU. This will allow us to quantify the amount of legal timber entering the UK for the first time.

The Department for International Development has committed £24 million for its illegal logging programme and we hope under Partnership Agreements, to establish licensing schemes with as many producer countries as possible.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what further plans the Government have for legislation on the import of illegal timber within the EU. [46632]

Mr. Morley: Following the adoption of the Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Regulation by the EU in December 2005, the focus of Government is on its implementation and the development of Partnership Agreements with producer countries.

We are waiting the results of the European Commission's Alternative Options paper. We have, along with other member states and civil society groups, been frustrated at the time it has taken the Commission to produce this report. However, we have encouraged the Commission—at official and ministerial level—to make progress and we are pleased that there is now to be an open workshop on analysing future options for EU member states Governments, industry and green groups representatives in Brussels on 31 January 2006.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government have made of the EU Commission's proposals for further action on tackling illegal timber imports. [46633]

Mr. Morley: When the European Commission published its proposal to tackle illegal logging, the Forestry Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Action Plan, it made the proposal for bilateral agreements and that it would investigate 'additional options' that went beyond this.

Government are frustrated at the time that it has taken the European Commission to produce this report and has made efforts at official and Ministerial level to assist with its delivery. Preliminary research on additional options will now be discussed in Brussels on 31 January 2006. This will include an assessment of existing national legislation in the UK that could be used to prevent the entry of illegal timber.

PG5/2(04)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 488W, on PG5/2(04), whether the Government are providing extra funding to local authorities to meet the cost of implementing the new regulations. [47076]

Mr. Bradshaw: In accordance with the Polluter Pays Principle, the Government do not provide funding for any sector regulated under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations to finance measures to reduce emissions.

Public Procurement

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to ensure that social criteria are included in decision-making on public procurement. [46646]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 January 2006]: The Department published its sustainable procurement strategy and toolkit in December and it can be found at http://defraweb/corporate/sdstrategy/operations/partf.htm

Defra is awaiting the note on social issues and criteria in public procurement being prepared by the Office of Government Commerce (OGC) and will, in the light of this note, the National Action Plan being prepared by the Sustainable Procurement Taskforce and the new public procurement rules coming into effect on 31 January 2006, take all appropriate steps to ensure social criteria are included in its public procurement. Public procurement policy in the UK is the responsibility of the OGC.

Sea Bass

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research she has commissioned on the effectiveness of the 12 mile ban on sea bass pair trawling. [45673]

Mr. Bradshaw: There is on-going research funded by the Department and carried out by the Sea Mammal Research Unit to monitor bycatch in all relevant UK fishery sectors and to develop mitigation measures to reduce the bycatch of marine mammals. The Department also obtains strandings data under the Defra-funded Cetacean and Turtle Strandings Scheme, carried out by the Natural History Museum in partnership with the Institute of Zoology and Scottish Agricultural College.

Post mortems from strandings can identify whether dolphins have died as a result of bycatch (if the carcasses are in a good enough state) but cannot at this stage identify individual fisheries such as the bass pair trawl fishery. Research into net marks found on cetaceans is also being undertaken but is at a very early stage.

Results for the 2004-05 pair trawl fishery for bass show a marked decrease from the preceding year for the total numbers of dolphins observed as bycatch and the number of dolphins stranding in the south west coast has similarly decreased this year. It would however be speculative on the basis of one year's data alone to link these reductions and further analysis of the effectiveness of the 12 mile ban on sea bass pair trawling will be undertaken as further data becomes available.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action the Government are taking at European Union level to protect sea bass. [45674]

Mr. Bradshaw: Current European Union legislation protects sea bass by specifying a minimum size of 36cm below which bass cannot be landed and corresponding mesh sizes to be used for both fixed and trawl gear when bass is targeted. The most recent scientific advice from the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea reports that stocks appear to be fished sustainably.

Defra is currently conducting a consultation to explore the potential to increase the number and size of bass available to commercial and recreational fishermen.

Solid Waste (Thermal Processing)

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the proportion of bottom ash produced as a portion of waste entering each solid waste thermal processing facility in England in each of the last three years. [46027]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Environment Agency conducted a study, 'Solid residues from municipal waste incinerators in England and Wales', which was published in 2002. This is the most recent collation of site-specific information available and contains information for the period 1996 to 2000 inclusive. The range of values is not anticipated to have changed significantly since the date of the report. For the plants operating at that time, the proportion of bottom ash produced in the years 1998 to 2000, expressed as a percentage by weight of waste input, is as follows:

	1998	1999	2000
Bolton	[1]	[1]	39.3
Coventry	22.6	20.2	16.5
Dudley	24.1	21.5	21.2
Edmonton	29.0	26.7	31.5
Nottingham	24.9	24.6	23.7
SELCHP	26.8	26.4	24.6
Sheffield	23.9	35.3	38.5
Stoke on Trent	25.6	25.6	24.8
Billingham	28.3	33.1	35.9
Tyseley	22.8	21.8	22.9
Wolverhampton	26.5	26.9	24.2

[1] Not in operation

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much bottom ash from each solid waste thermal processing facility in England was (a) used for bulk fill, road construction or asphalt, (b) used in construction blocks, (c) sent to landfill and (d) stockpiled in each of the last three years. [46028]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Environment Agency conducted a study, 'Solid Residues from Municipal Waste Incinerators in England and Wales', published in 2002. This report provides the most recent collation of information available, which is for the period 1996 to 2000 inclusive.

The plants identified in the report produced a total incinerator bottom ash (IBA) output of 642,000 tonnes in 2000. We are unable to identify specific fates for IBA from each incinerator.

The disposal and recovery options used for total IBA output (in 2000) were as follows:

	Percentage
(a) Bulk fill, road construction, asphalt, etc.	28.6
(b) Construction blocks	7.1
(c) Sent to landfill	46.9
(d) Stockpiled	14.1
(e) Other	3.3

Space Debris

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on space debris. [46497]

Barry Gardiner: I have been asked to reply.

Space debris can comprise either natural debris such as the remains of comets and asteroids or man made debris such as elements of non-operational satellites and launcher equipment.

Space debris is an important concern because of the damage that, potentially, it can do to operational satellites or occasionally through earth impact.

Managing space debris effectively requires an international consensus. The UK is working actively through the United Nations and the Inter-Agency Space Debris Coordination Group to secure international agreement on space debris mitigation practices.

Whales

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many whales have become stranded and have perished around the shore of the United Kingdom in each year since 1997; and what research she has commissioned into the causes. [45930]

Mr. Bradshaw: Between 1 January 1997 and 23 January 2006 a total of 360 whales were reported as stranded in the United Kingdom, and three were reported as bycatch. Table 1 provides detailed figures, broken down by year.

These data are collected under the Defra-funded Cetacean and Turtle Strandings Scheme. The scheme is carried out by the Natural History Museum in partnership with the Institute of Zoology and Scottish Agricultural College. Not only are all stranded animals recorded, but post-mortem examinations are carried out on some of the animal carcasses to establish the exact cause of death.

The information received from this scheme has helped to inform the commissioning of two further research projects. The first is looking into the effect of acoustic noise on cetaceans, through examination of cetacean 'ears' removed during post-mortem examination. The second, an observer monitoring scheme, places observers on certain fishing vessels to observe whether there are any incidents of bycatch.

Table 1—Total numbers of stranded whales for 1997—up to 23 January 2006

Whaling

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make representations to the Norwegian and Japanese Governments against their commercial whaling activities; and if she will make a statement. [46689]

Mr. Bradshaw: With colleagues from 16 other countries HM ambassador in Tokyo delivered a Demarche to the Government of Japan on 16 January, protesting in the strongest terms on Japan's plans to expand its so-called 'scientific' whaling activities. The UK Government, in common with those of a majority of International Whaling Commission (IWC) members, have regularly criticised Japanese scientific whaling programmes in both the North Pacific (JARPN) and the Southern ocean (JARPA) as being of little scientific value and urged Japan to terminate them forthwith.

We will continue to press Norway to desist from commercial whaling, which we believe contrary to the spirit of the IWC moratorium. We make our objections very clear to Norway regarding their whaling activities and will make further protests prior to and during the annual meeting of the Commission which takes place later this year.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Brazilian Beef

Mr. Crabb: To ask the honourable Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how much Brazilian beef was procured for use by the House Refreshment Department in the last year for which figures are available. [47119]

Nick Harvey: The Refreshment Department has not purchased any Brazilian beef in the last year.

Public Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how much the Commission allocated for public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [46039]

Nick Harvey: Public relations and information services are an integral part of a number of House activities for which budgets are not specifically allocated, and to which costs are not directly attributed. The figures that are available show:

	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05
Education Unit	305	294	315
Information Office	771	787	751
Visitor Tours (net of income)	47	37	62
Broadcasting	1,414	407	265
Media and Communications Services	54	79	172
Websites
Explore Parliament	30	105	45
Early Day Motions	14	14	14
Other	89	96	77

Figures are not available for earlier years. Exceptional costs were incurred in 2002-03 for refitting broadcasting equipment in the House of Commons Chamber, and in 2003-04 on infrastructure as well as webcasting systems. Major projects being undertaken in 2005-06 include the establishment of a web centre and further web developments for which budgets totalling £1.3 million have been allocated. The table does not include the costs of the printing and publishing contract with The Stationery Office.

Recycled Waste

Keith Vaz: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, what proportion of waste from offices of the House was recycled over the period 2000 to 2005. [47500]

Nick Harvey: Data are not separately collected which could distinguish between waste recycled from offices and from other parts of the estate. The proportion of waste recycled from the whole estate (including the House of Lords) since records began is as follows:

	Percentage
2002-03	38.8
2003-04	26.2
2004-05	29.3
2005-06	[1]36.7

[1] April to December 2005

Comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

PRIME MINISTER

Parliamentary Pay and Allowances

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to request the Senior Salaries Review Body to carry out a review of parliamentary pay and allowances. [46958]

The Prime Minister: A review of parliamentary pay and allowances carried out by the Senior Salaries Review Body (SSRB) in 1996 included a recommendation, accepted by the Government, that parliamentary pay should be reviewed every three years, starting in 2000.

Wilson Doctrine

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish those sections of the report from the Interception of Communications Commissioner which are relevant to the Wilson Doctrine; if he will put any proposed changes to the doctrine to a vote on the floor of the House; and if he will make a statement. [46813]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my written ministerial statement, 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 173WS, and my answers at Prime Minister's questions on 18 and 25 January.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the extra £1 billion funding for the recent deployment to Afghanistan will be drawn from his Department's existing budget. [46976]

John Reid: The additional cost of operations is recovered from the Treasury Reserve.

Apache Helicopter Fleet

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many (a) pilots and (b) engineers for the Apache helicopter fleet are expected (i) to leave and (ii) to be recruited to the service in (A) one month and (B) three months' time; [43863]

(2) how many (a) pilots and (b) engineers for the Apache helicopter fleet have (i) left and (ii) been recruited to the service in each quarter of each of the last three years. [43864]

Mr. Touhig: No Apache pilots are expected to leave the service in the next three months.

Individuals are not recruited into the Army to pilot specific aircraft. Approximately 30 officers per year are directly recruited into the Army Air Corps following officer training at the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst. The Army Air Corps selects its non-commissioned pilots from either within the Army Air Corps or from other branches of the Army. Once trained, a pilot carries out conversion to type training for a particular aircraft.

Six Apache pilots have left the Army Air Corps since 2002.

Four engineers are expected to leave within one month and 13 engineers are expected to leave within three months.

Engineers are not directly recruited to maintain specific aircraft. Engineering support for the Apache aircraft is carried out by aeronautical engineering officers and aviation technicians who have previously completed training on a range of Army aircraft. The Apache training course throughput for 2004 was 166 engineers. The training throughput for 2005 was 132.

Aeronautical engineering officers, artificers and technicians in the Career Employment Groups (CEGs) of avionics and aircraft cover the full range of Army helicopters and aircraft. The following figures indicate how many soldiers in these CEGs left the Army in the last three years. Not all of these will have held specialist qualifications for the Apache.

Bowman Digital Communications System

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effect the planned conversion to the BOWMAN digital communications system will have on missions undertaken by 16 Air Assault Brigade in 2006; and if he will make a statement. [42996]

Mr. Ingram: The BOWMAN conversion programme has been drawn up to take full account of planned operational deployments. 16 Air Assault Brigade is scheduled to complete the full BOWMAN conversion package by the middle of 2007. Elements of the Brigade completed part of the conversion to the BOWMAN family of radios at the end of 2005, thus ensuring that, if deployed, they are equipped with an effective and appropriate suite of communications systems.

Correspondence/Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) letters from hon. Members, (b) letters from members of the public and (c) Parliamentary Questions from (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords were dealt with by his Department in each year since 1995; in respect of the percentage his Department took (A) more than one month and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer; and if he will make a statement. [37398]

Mr. Touhig: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/Peers correspondence. The Report for 2004 was published on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 137–140WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

Details of the number of letters from members of the public are not held centrally, though every effort is made by the Department to handle all correspondence effectively and efficiently.

For parliamentary questions, Defence Ministers aim to ensure that Members receive a substantive response to their named day question on the day named and endeavour to answer ordinary written questions within a working week of being tabled. Unfortunately this is not always possible but the Department makes every effort to achieve these timescales.

Information relating to the percentage of answers that took more than one month and more than three months to answer is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, I am able to provide details of the total number of parliamentary questions from hon. Members and Lords dealt with by the Department in each year since 1995. This is set out in the following table:

	Ordinary Written	Named Day Written	Oral	Lords Written	Lords Oral	Total
1995	1,615	—	234	170	21	2,040
1996	1,281	—	257	143	25	1,706
1997	1,103	—	231	201	24	1,559
1998	1,176	—	254	232	21	1,683
1999	1,464	1,041	270	264	20	3,059
2000	1,427	1,225	336	227	21	3,236
2001	1,368	1,202	272	166	25	3,033
2002	2,798	1,261	267	242	21	4,589
2003	3,596	680	198	405	28	4,907
2004	3,163	687	226	440	44	4,560
2005	2,658	628	179	315	34	3,814

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) on 2 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1067–1068W, in which I advised of our plans to introduce a new toolkit to better track and handle all parliamentary questions and correspondence later in the year; this should enable us to better monitor our performance

Falklands Garrison

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2053W, on the Falklands garrison, if he will break down the costs of maintaining the Falklands garrison in 2004–05 by main cost area. [44607]

Mr. Ingram: The costs of maintaining the Falklands garrison in Financial Year 2004–05, broken down by main cost area, were as follows:

	£ million
Operating costs
Personnel	31.5
Infrastructure	10.4
Consumables (including fuel)	13.2
Equipment Support	3.3
Contract Support	9.3
Receipts	-2.4
Non-cash costs
Depreciation	38.4
Cost of capital	9.4

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the (a) total and (b) net cost of (i) integrating the proposed identity card scheme into his Department's IT systems and (ii) the ongoing operation of the scheme within his Department. [31106]

Mr. Touhig: The Department has not finalised its estimates of the cost of using the ID Cards Scheme to support the services which it oversees.

Iraq

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has (a) sought and (b) received from (i) the US armed forces and (ii) other coalition armed forces concerning the administration to their forces of nerve agent pre-treatment tablets during the 2003 invasion of Iraq. [44220]

Mr. Touhig: My Department has no record of formal information exchange at a policy level with the US armed forces or other coalition armed forces concerning the use of Nerve Agent Pre-treatment Sets tablets by their armed forces during Operation TELIC. Day-to-day desk officer level exchanges of information may have taken place but this has not been formally recorded.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the security situation in Al-Samawah, Iraq. [46586]

Mr. Ingram: The security situation in As-Samawah is currently stable.

International Security Assistance Force

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rules of engagement will govern the handling of captured prisoners by British forces under International Security Assistance Force command; and whether those rules will differ from those relating to prisoners captured by British forces participating in Operation Enduring Freedom. [45560]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 20 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1648–49, to the right hon. and learned Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram).

MONUC

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what discussions he has had with his EU counterparts on the request by United Nations Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC) for a deployment of an EU force for the purpose of enhancing MONUC's quick reaction capability during and immediately after the electoral process in the Democratic Republic of Congo; [45796]

(2) how many British troops will be deployed to the Democratic Republic of the Congo as part of the wider EU deployment. [45798]

Mr. Ingram: The request, from the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations, sought possible support for its mission in the Democratic Republic of Congo by having available a force that could, if necessary, be deployed during the forthcoming election period. No decision has been taken on the nature of the EU response. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Defence, discussed this request during his meeting with the French Defence Minister, Michèle Alliot-Marie, on 24 January. They agreed that the EU should look to consider the request favourably. Any request for UK forces to be involved would need to be assessed taking into account our heavy operational commitments at that time.

Public and Commercial Services Union

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Ministers from his Department met representatives from the Public and Commercial Services Union during the Union's lobby of Parliament on 25 January; and if he will make a statement. [46789]

Mr. Touhig: No Ministers from the Department met representatives from the Public and Commercial Services Union during their lobby of Parliament on 25 January.

The Department was disappointed that the TUs took the Day of Action as they had been fully consulted on the proposals for restructuring in the Ministry of Defence. MOD has had a number of meetings with the TUs to address their concerns and will continue to work with them through discussion, to deliver a more effective, efficient service.

QinetiQ

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what aspects of the QinetiQ flotation makes it unsuitable for private investors. [44179]

John Reid: The QinetiQ flotation is not unsuitable for private investors. Private investors are able to apply for shares through a private client stockbroker if they so wish, although there is no guarantee any specific applicant will be successful. Based on advice from our financial advisers, the Government do not believe that significant expenditure on a retail offering to encourage private investors to apply for shares would present value for money for the taxpayer. Once trading has commenced private investors will also be able to buy shares in the normal way.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether proceeds from the sale of QinetiQ will be kept by the Ministry of Defence. [42422]

John Reid: We have agreed with HM Treasury that the Ministry of Defence will be able to retain a substantial proportion of the QinetiQ receipts for reinvestment in the defence programme.

Sea Cadets

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many sea cadets there were in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [45686]

Mr. Touhig: Statistics on the number of sea cadets are published by the Defence Analytical Services Agency (DASA) and can be found in Tri-Service Publication number seven (TSP 07), a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Details can also be found on the DASA website at: www.dasa.mod.uk/natstats/tsp7/tsp7tab2.html.

Territorial Army

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when a Territorial Army applicant becomes officially classified as a recruit; and what percentage of Territorial Army recruits did not complete basic Phase 1 and 2 training in each of the last five years. [43688]

Mr. Touhig: A Territorial Army applicant is officially classed as a recruit once he or she has been Attested. Information on the number of Territorial Army recruits who did not complete basic Phase 1 and 2 training in each of the last five years is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Tristars

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Tristars are available to transport soldiers to and from (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan; [45585]

(2) how many C-17s are available to transport soldiers to and from (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan. [45687]

Mr. Ingram: Two of the RAF fleet of Tristars are typically available for use in moving passengers to and from Iraq. Two of the RAF C17s are also typically available for both Iraq and Afghanistan, but the service for Iraq normally carries only freight while that for Afghanistan carries a mix of passengers and freight.

War Pensions Committee

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the procedure is for resolving long-outstanding claims for war disablement pensions. [45286]

Mr. Touhig: The Veterans Agency is set key performance targets to process war pension claims.

Internal targets, specific to the measurement of performance of older cases, are set at the start of each financial year, thus ensuring that the momentum on each case is sustained. Additionally, operational managers within the Veterans Agency have access to information in respect of these cases, enabling them to direct action to keep them on track.

As a result of this proactive approach, the number of un-cleared claims in excess of 12-months-old has reduced considerably. At the end of December 2005, there were 82 such cases.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Alcohol Sales

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many 24-hour licences for the sale of alcohol were granted to (a) licensed premises, (b) supermarkets and (c) off-licences in 2005. [45962]

James Purnell: Based on a DCMS telephone survey of licensing authorities, we estimate that around 1,000 licences have been granted permitting the sale of alcohol for 24 hours. Of these, approximately 330 have been for pubs and nightclubs, approximately 360 for supermarkets, and approximately 130 for off-licences and convenience stores.

Anniversary Events

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much (a) Lottery funding and (b) grant in aid has been spent on commemorating anniversary events since 1990, broken down by event celebrated; and if she will make a statement. [45994]

Mr. Caborn: The amount of grant in aid funding spent on commemorating anniversary events since 1990, broken down by event, is not collected centrally. Similarly, the Lottery Awards Database does not hold this information in the form requested.

Grant in aid funding from a variety of Government Departments and other public bodies will have contributed to many anniversary and commemorative events since 1990. In addition Lottery funding will also have been used to support such events at the national level and may also have supported celebrations at a more local level.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Royal Pigeon Racing Association on a possible avian influenza pandemic in the United Kingdom. [46601]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

Regular meetings are held between my officials and a number of key stakeholders, including the Royal Pigeon Racing Association (RPRA), to discuss the latest issues and developments on avian influenza (AI). The RPRA are also provided with regular updates and informed if there are any AI press notices, statements or any AI related EU decisions.

Civil Servants (Overseas Visits)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what costs were incurred by her Department as a result of sending civil servants on overseas visits in each of the last 10 years. [46288]

Mr. Lammy: The following table shows overall departmental expenditure for overseas travel and subsistence by officials. Expenditure for the earlier year is not recorded in the format requested and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

All official travel is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the civil service management code.

Officials overseas travel and subsistence

2005-06[1]	175,941.40
2004-05	278,761.80
2003-04	235,210.16
2002-03	195,442.41
2001-02	129,164.75
2000-01	188,337.76
1999-2000	193,742.97
1998-99	151,307.28
1997-98	175,061.96

Departmental Sustainable Development

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what reduction in water consumption her Department made between 1 April 2002 and 31 March 2005. [46890]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport signed up for the Office for Government Commerce's "Watermark" project in 2002, but their consultants were unable to identify opportunities for reductions in water consumption.

The Department is about to undergo a water usage audit by the utility supplier, Thames Water, and will follow their recommendations.

The Department will commence refurbishment of its main headquarters building in the next financial year, and is planning to install water saving devices as part of the project.

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of non-office sites on her Department's estate where there are opportunities for significant savings in water consumption. [46891]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport does not have any non-office sites on its estate.

Film Council

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much funding the Government allocated to the UK Film Council in each of the last five years. [45706]

James Purnell: Government funding directly allocated to UK Film Council in each of the last five years is detailed in the table:

£ million

	Grant In Aid	Lottery	Other[1]
2004-05	24.11	29.9	0.8
2003-04	24.11	28.4	—
2002-03	24.11	32.4	—
2001-02	20.86	36.6	—
2000-01	21.76	34.1	—

[1] In 2004-05, a £0.8 million modernisation award was made to the British Film Institute by the DCMS and administered by UK Film Council.

Licensed Premises

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many licensed premises there were in (a) 1994 and (b) 2004. [45880]

James Purnell: The number of premises licensed for the retail sale of intoxicating liquor and registered clubs in England and Wales as at 30 June in each year was as follows:

	1994	2004
On-licence	111,212	113,370
Off-licence	47,735	46,582
Registered clubs	24,239	19,913

Source:
DCMS Statistical Bulletin 'Liquor Licensing, October 2004'

Statistics for theatres are not available for 1994 and 2004, but in 1995 there were 272 licensed theatres, and in 2001 there were 218.

Licensing Act

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effects of the Licensing Act 2003 on levels of crime and disorder in Coventry South. [44629]

James Purnell [holding answer 25 January 2006]: It is too early to draw any firm conclusions about the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 on the level of crime and disorder, either across the country or in any one area.

The Government will continue to monitor the impact of the new legislation closely, including a programme of evaluation being conducted by the Home Office into the impact of the licensing reforms on crime and disorder.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what total revenue has been raised from sports and community clubs as a result of the Licensing Act 2003; and if she will make a statement. [45810]

James Purnell: The Department does not currently hold that information.

The level of fees under the Licensing Act 2003 is currently being reviewed by the Independent Licensing Fees Review Panel, chaired by Sir Les Elton. The Government published the Panel's Interim Report on 5 December. In their report, the Panel have identified nine areas of activity that they wish to consider further during the next stage of their work. Two of those areas are licensing authority income and costs and the consequence of the new fees regime on not-for-profit groups. The full Interim Report can be accessed at: http://www.culture.gov.uk/alcohol_and_entertainment/monitoring_and_evaluation/ifreview.htm. The Panel have recently written to all Licensing Authorities in England and Wales to request details of the income they have received under the new licensing regime from different licensed sectors, including sports clubs and village and community halls, which they believe they require in order to support them in the next stage of their work. The Panel are due to present their Final Report and recommendations to Government in the autumn.

Media Company Relocation (Manchester)

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the North West Regional Development Agency on location of media companies in Manchester; and whether public funding will be made available to such companies to relocate. [45001]

James Purnell [holding answer 24 January 2006]: I have corresponded with the North West Regional Development Agency (NWDA), regarding the BBC's Out of London initiative. Officials have also had contact with the agency. The NWDA, with other public sector partners, is supporting the relocation of media companies to the Northwest and has committed, in principle, up to £50 million, covering areas such as infrastructure and skills development. North West Vision, the regional screen agency sponsored by the NWDA, also operates the Regional Attraction Fund and the Merseyside Film and Television Fund for this purpose.

Public Houses

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will commission research into the role played by public houses in the culture of the United Kingdom. [45878]

James Purnell: I have no plans to commission specific research in this area, although my Department will be carrying out research into the provision of live music across all venues, including pubs, during 2006. My Department is also discussing issues around live music with the 10 Scrutiny Councils.

The Government recognises the cultural importance of public houses in the UK, as centres of entertainment, as hubs for local communities, as a diverse and vibrant part of the hospitality industry and as a unique British institution that helps make our country so attractive to overseas visitors. The reforms introduced by the Licensing Act 2003 will offer pubs greater flexibility to meet the demands of customers and to broaden their already important cultural role.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the number of rural pubs which have closed in each of the last 10 years. [45879]

James Purnell: The Department does not hold information specifically on rural pub closures. However, the Government recognise that access to local pubs, as well as other services, is essential to ensuring that rural communities thrive and helps combat social exclusion. That is why, in settlements of less than 3,000 people, the Government have extended 50 per cent. rate relief to pubs, as well as village shops, petrol stations and small scale, non-agricultural enterprises on farms.

Also, the Countryside Agency has been a key partner in supporting the 'pub is the hub' initiative which is encouraging diversification by rural pubs to further enhance their contribution and help sustain them as businesses. In the longer term, licensing reform will cut costs for such businesses and allow them to use the flexibility offered to better meet the needs of local people and visitors.

Sports Governance

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will implement an inquiry into the governance of rugby union; and if she will make a statement. [46900]

Mr. Caborn: It is not for the Government to implement an inquiry into the governance of rugby union.

However, by working with Sport England and UK Sport, the Government are keen to ensure that sporting national governing bodies are fit for purpose in the 21st century. As a result we have supported a number of sporting governing bodies as they have undergone the process of reviewing and modernising their governance structures.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received on (a) governance, (b) regulation and (c) trading practices of association football. [46898]

Mr. Caborn: I have had numerous representations about the governance, regulation and trading practices of football.

I continue to urge the Football Association to implement the Burns Review recommendations.

The FA must use this review to ensure they are fit for purpose in the 21st century and make the necessary changes without delay.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will implement an inquiry into sports governance; and if she will make a statement. [46901]

Mr. Caborn: Working with UK Sport and Sport England, the Government have supported a number of reviews into the governance of our sporting national governing bodies to ensure that these bodies are fit for purpose in the 21st century.

While it is not for Government to implement reviews into governance, we continue to encourage best practice in governance, and UK Sport and Sport England monitor each sport as part of their funding agreements.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Start-ups

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new business start-ups there were in (a) Swindon, (b) Wiltshire and (c) the South-West in (i) 2004 and (ii) 2005. [46825]

Alun Michael: According to Barclays Bank's latest survey of business creation, which includes non-VAT registered firms, there were 1,800 business start-ups in Swindon Unitary Authority in 2004.

Barclays data show that there were 4,800 business start-ups in the county of Wiltshire that is, not including the Swindon Unitary Authority in 2004 and 48,100 business start-ups in the whole of the South West. Data for 2005 will be available in spring 2006.

DTI figures based solely on VAT registrations for Swindon Unitary Authority, Wiltshire County and the South West Government Office Region are shown in the table for 2004. Data for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

VAT registrations, 2004

Swindon UA	495
Wiltshire County	1,450
South West GOR	15,310

Source:
Business Start-ups and Closures: VAT Registrations and De-registrations 1994–2004, Small Business Service, available from the Library of the House and also at http://www.sbs.gov.uk/vats

VAT registrations do not capture all start-up activity. Businesses are unlikely to be registered if they fall below the compulsory VAT threshold. Only 1.8 million out of 4.3 million enterprises were registered for VAT at the start of 2004.

Compensation (UK Courts)

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will assess the merits of introducing legislation to allow individuals who are denied justice in their own country to seek compensation in UK courts for (a) environmental and (b) human rights abuses committed by United Kingdom companies abroad. [38686]

Ian Pearson: The Government are not considering legislation on this issue.

UK companies that operate overseas are subject to the laws applicable in those countries which will take account of the particular circumstances and practices of each host country.

We actively encourage UK-based international companies which operate in other countries to apply high standards of corporate behaviour, including adhering to relevant internationally agreed standards which respect human rights and the environment.

In April 2005, the UN Commission on Human Rights appointed a Special Representative of the Secretary General to take forward work on the area of business and human rights. The two year mandate of the Special Representative includes the identification and clarification of standards of corporate responsibility and accountability for transnational corporations with regard to human rights, as well as an elaboration of the role of States in effectively regulating and adjudicating the role of business.

The UK also plays a leading role in ensuring that the international framework to promote and to tackle abuses of workers rights throughout the world is in place, particularly through its work with the International Labour Organisation (ILO), which is the UN specialized agency responsible for developing, promoting and monitoring labour standards. We play an active role in the ILO Committee on Multinational Enterprises and support the promotion and follow-up of the ILO Declaration of Principles Concerning Multinational Enterprises and Social Policy which seeks to enhance the positive social and labour effects of multinational corporations' operations throughout the world.

The Government also strongly supports the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises as a standard of good corporate behaviour and as a model to assist companies to develop their own codes of conduct. The issues they cover include labour relations and environmental and social impacts.

Directorships

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people are registered as directors who are under the age of 16 years. [47504]

Alun Michael: On 31 December 2005, there were 431 directors under the age of 16. All these appointments were to companies registered in England and Wales.

Employment Status Review

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the results of the employment status review initiated in 2002 will be announced. [47210]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government intend to respond to the Employment Status Review shortly.

Energy Review

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which organisations were invited to the launch of the Energy Review, Our Energy Challenge, on 23 January; and what criteria were used to decide upon suitability of invitees. [46565]

Malcolm Wicks: A range of organisations were invited to the launch of the Energy Review to ensure a broad and diverse set of participants and views. Attendees included representatives from unions; energy providers; energy generators; industry associations; network operators; non-governmental organisations with an interest in energy, environment or fuel poverty issues; regulatory bodies; official advisory bodies to the Government; national, devolved, regional and local government and Government Agencies; think tanks and academia.

The launch of the Energy Review, Our Energy Challenge, on 23 January was the first outreach event in a twelve week consultation period. In the weeks until April 14, Ministers and officials will continue to engage with the stakeholders invited to the launch event and others, including parliamentary bodies. The consultation is open to all and details of how to feed in comments are available on the DTI website (www.dti.gov.uk/energy/review).

Energy Technology Safety

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what aspects of (a) renewable energy technologies and (b) distributed generation are being examined by the Health and Safety Executive in respect of their potential risk to workers and the public. [46570]

Malcolm Wicks: In the context of the Energy Review, the Health and Safety Executive has been asked to prepare an expert report on the potential health and safety risks to workers and the public arising from recent and potential energy developments, including an increasing penetration of renewable technologies and distributed generation. The report will include an assessment of the health and safety risks associated with developments, such as wind, wave, and biomass generation projects, and their approach to ensuring that such risks are managed sensibly by industry.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what contracts the Export Credits Guarantee Department has paid out claims in each of the last five years; and for what amounts in each case. [42566]

Ian Pearson: The Export Credits Guarantee Department has paid out claims totalling £1.1 billion over the last five financial years (2000–01 to 2004–05), which can be broken down as follows:

2000–01	298,310,783
2001–02	249,952,289
2002–03	261,449,499
2003–04	211,431,465
2004–05	87,334,763

A breakdown of claims payments by financial year, sector and case will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Green Ministers

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry at which meetings his Department has been represented regarding the delivery of sustainable development across Government as co-ordinated by the Ministerial Sub-committee of Green Ministers. [16245]

Malcolm Wicks: Following the general election in May, the Cabinet Sub-committee of Green Ministers (ENV(G)) was replaced by the Ministerial Sub-Committee on Sustainable Development in Government (EE(SD)) whose members are departmental Sustainable Development Ministers.

As the Minister of State for Energy I was appointed as our departmental Sustainable Development Minister in June 2005. In July, I attended a breakfast seminar for Sustainable Development Ministers to discuss the sustainable development strategy and Ministers role in delivering it.

Harworth Colliery

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to respond to the loan guarantee proposal made by UK Coal with regard to Harworth Colliery. [45839]

Malcolm Wicks: The proposal is under active consideration. A response will be given to UK Coal plc as soon as possible.

Indian Companies

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the five Indian companies with a presence in the UK (a) information technology, (b) pharmaceutical and (c) food sector, which had the greatest turnover in the UK in 2004–05. [42727]

Ian Pearson: According to publicly accessible information from Companies House (2004 figures), the following Indian companies are the top five in their sector in the UK based on turnover:

IT sector

1. Mastek (UK) Ltd.—($46,586,000)
2. NUT Technology Ltd.—($38,444,000)
3. Patni Computer Systems (UK) Ltd.—($17,698,000)
4. Citisoft Public Limited Company—($16,955,000)
5. Zensar Technologies (UK) Ltd.—($14, 954,000)

Pharma sector

1. Wockhardt UK Ltd.—($77,154,000)
2. C P Pharmaceutical Ltd.—($75,311,000)
3. Wallis Licensing Ltd.—($23,471,000)
4. Niche Generics Ltd.—($20,881,000)
5. Wallis Laboratory Ltd.—(n.a)

Food and Drink sector

1. Tetley GB Ltd.—($287,380,000)
2. Associated Coffee Merchants (International) Ltd.—($42,310,000)
3. Complete Coffee Ltd.—($42,281,000)
4. The Tetley Group Ltd.—($8,147,000)
5. Tetley Overseas Ltd.—($2,259,000)

Miners Compensation

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which (a) law firms and (b) other organisations have received payments from his Department for work undertaken in relation to miners' compensation; and how much was paid in each case, listed in descending order. [45598]

Malcolm Wicks: On (a) , a table detailing the sums paid to individual law firms for handling miners' compensation claims has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

On (b) , other sums the Department has paid in relation to the coal health schemes since 2000 are set out in the following table:

Organisation	Role	Sum paid (£ million)
SEMA/ATOS	Medical assessment process	198.6
IRISC/Capita	Claims handling	125.4
Healthcall	Medical assessment process	117.2
Hays/Iron Mountain	Records management	24.9
Nabarro Nathanson	Legal advice	21.4
PWC	Audit/Consultancy	11.6
Deloitte	Consultancy	9.3
Irwin Mitchell	Legal costs	4.2
Hugh James	Legal costs	2.8
Thompson (Edinburgh)	Legal costs	2.5
Capita Health Solutions	Medical assessment process	2.3
Ernst and Young	Audit Consultancy	1.9
McClure Naismith	Legal advice	1.7
Business Healthcare	Records management	1.5
AON	Medical assessment process	1.1
Thompson and Co.	Legal costs	0.6

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much compensation has been paid to ex-miners in the Easington constituency in respect of (a) vibration white finger and (b) chronic bronchitis and emphysema in each year since 2002. [47007]

Malcolm Wicks: The level of compensation paid to claimants in Easington since 2002 is as follows:

£ million

	VWF	COPD
2002	7.7	7.0
2003	7.9	11.4
2004	8.4	11.5
2005	7.5	12.9
Total	31.5	42.8

The COPD scheme includes chronic bronchitis and emphysema.

National Debtline

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many additional staff are planned to be recruited by National Debtline; how long the training process takes before these staff will be able to take calls; and if he will make a statement. [45498]

Mr. Sutcliffe: National Debtline is planning to increase staff numbers from a total of 67 at present to 99 by January 2007 and 119 by January 2008. Typically, newly recruited advisers spend their first three months in classroom training and do not take calls during this period. They are then able to take calls but continue to be closely supervised for the next six months, until they are fully trained.

Non-Fossil Fuel

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he decided to transfer funds out of the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation Fund to the Treasury on 20 September; and for what reasons. [38362]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 December 2005]: Funds in the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation Fund were transferred into the Consolidated Fund on 20 September 2005 after the Treasury concluded, in the light of legal advice, that the funds were hereditary revenues and so were required by law to be paid into the Consolidated Fund. DTI concurred with this view.

HM Treasury notified Ofgem on 16 August 2005.

Small Business Service

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the national targets are for the Small Business Service; and what the performance of offices covering south Devon are in relation to those targets. [46614]

Alun Michael: The Small Business Service (SBS) is responsible for delivering results against the DTI public service agreement (PSA) target 6 as follows:

"To help build an enterprise society in which small firms of all kinds thrive and achieve their potential—with (i) an increase in the number of people considering going into business, (ii) an improvement in the overall productivity of small firms, and (iii) more enterprise in disadvantaged communities."

National performance against these targets is shown in the DTI Autumn Performance Report published in December 2005, a copy of which is available in the Libraries of the House, and also at www.dti.gov.uk/about_dti_documents.html.

For PSA 6 (iii) from the 2002 spending review, enterprise in disadvantaged areas is measured by the gap in VAT registrations per 10,000 resident adults in the 20 per cent. most and 20 per cent. least deprived areas of England. The area of south Devon is served by Business Link Devon and Cornwall. The latest figures are as follows:

VAT Registrations per 10,000 resident adults

England	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004
Rate per 10,000 adults—most deprived areas	25.4	25.5	26.2	28.6	27.7
Rate per 10,000 adults—least deprived areas	42.4	39.9	42.5	45.3	42.4
Gap	40	36	38	37	35
Devon and Cornwall Business Link area
Rate per 10,000 adults—most deprived areas	34.8	32.1	37.0	44.8	38.4
Rate per 10,000 adults—least deprived areas	22.6	23.7	24.1	30.2	24.1
Gap	-54	-35	-53	-48	-59

The results for Devon and Cornwall show that there are more registrations per head of population in the most deprived areas than in the least deprived areas.

Data for Devon and Cornwall relating to all other targets are not available and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sunday Trading

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which company has been appointed to undertake the independent economic cost-benefit analysis changes in Sunday trading law; what his estimate is of the total cost of this review; and if he will publish the analysis once completed. [45509]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Loughborough (Mr. Reed) on 24 January 2006, Official Report, columns 2001-02W. Indepen Consulting Ltd. have been chosen to conduct an independent cost-benefit analysis of the impact of further liberalisation of Sunday Trading. The cost of the study is commercially confidential. It is our intention to publish the cost benefit analysis after its completion in the spring.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

African Nations (Avian Flu)

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance his Department is giving to African nations to help them prevent an avian influenza pandemic. [46528]

Hilary Benn: The threats of avian and human pandemic influenza are of global significance and require a co-ordinated global response. On 18 January, at the International Pledging Conference on Avian and Human Pandemic Influenza in Beijing, the UK committed to providing £20 million of DFID funds through multilateral channels to help achieve this.

In addition, through our on-going involvement in Africa, DFID is keeping abreast of the country's own plans and the activities of donors relating to avian flu. We are discussing, with individual African countries the use of our bilateral aid programmes to help develop and implement integrated influenza strategies. For example, DFID have committed £1 million to prevention and control of the disease in Ethiopia. £700,000 will be used for early detection, prevention and control. An additional £300,000 will be used to establish a national focal point to address the threat posed by a human influenza pandemic.

DFID also continues to help African countries to build comprehensive, sustainable health services which will address human influenza in addition to other diseases such as HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis.

Aid Criteria/Conditionality

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the difference between his Department's definitions of aid criteria and aid conditionality. [46524]

Hilary Benn: DFID's aid allocation to particular countries is guided by a formula which takes into account the country's level of poverty and consequent need for aid, and its institutional capacity to make effective use of aid. We also take account of how much aid countries receive from other donors. Once allocated, the aid is spent through a range of channels as appropriate in the country context. These can include support through Governments to deliver their poverty reduction plans, support through civil society organisations or through international organisations such as the UN.

DFID believes that effective aid partnerships with developing country Governments depend on shared commitments to reducing poverty and achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDG)s; respecting human rights and other international obligations; and strengthening public financial management to reduce the risk of corruption. DFID uses these commitments both as our criteria for deciding whether to provide aid through Government, and as conditions for our aid. Once aid has been committed to a partner Government, DFID will only reduce it if the Government moves away from one of these three partnership commitments.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had in the EU on amending its agricultural policies to assist developing countries. [45425]

Mr. Thomas: The Government have regular discussions with EU and other countries regarding their agricultural policies. Securing a good outcome to the current World Trade Organisation (WTO) trade negotiations, including on agriculture, is a Government priority.

Recently, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development hosted an informal meeting of EU Development Ministers during the WTO Ministerial Conference in Hong Kong, where we discussed how Europe could contribute to a successful outcome to the talks, including on agriculture. The Hong Kong ministerial did not achieve as much as we had hoped but there was agreement to end all agricultural export subsidies by 2013, which will help to remove one source of unfair competition for developing country agricultural producers.

Departmental Websites

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the cost of maintaining his main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46307]

Mr. Thomas: The cost of maintaining the main DFID website (http://www.dfid.gov.uk) for the last year was £121,983.

Numbers of unique visitors for the last 12 months were as follows:

	Number
December 2004	18,845
January 2005	20,001
February 2005	20,154
March 2005	19,631
April 2006	18,893
May 2005	23,455
June 2005	18,218
July 2005	19,894
August 2005	20,913
September 2005	24,166
October 2005	26,555
November 2005	28,208
Total	258,933

Eritrea/Ethiopia

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance he is providing to (a) Eritrea and (b) Ethiopia in 2005–06 to achieve the millennium development goal on drinking water supply and waste water. [46212]

Hilary Benn: In Eritrea, DFID is funding through the International Rescue Committee, an Emergency Environmental Health programme which provides access to potable water and sanitation facilities. We also contributed £1.3 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) 2005 Appeal for Eritrea which included water and sanitation work.

Water and sanitation is an integral part of our humanitarian policy for Eritrea and we expect to make further contributions in this sector next year.

DFID is working with key partners such as the African Development Bank and the World Bank to design a water and sanitation investment programme for Ethiopia. We are providing an adviser to assist the Ministry of Water in implementing the increasing number of water and sanitation programmes in the country. Ethiopia is the largest beneficiary among East African countries of the EU water facility's first phase of funding approvals.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he had with (a) members of the Prime Minister's African Commission (b) the President of Ethiopia before and after his decision to suspend UK bilateral aid to Ethiopia. [46559]

Hilary Benn: I have had a number of discussions with Prime Minister Meles of Ethiopia about developments in Ethiopia, most recently in Addis Ababa on 18 January, when I informed him that in the current political circumstances we will not provide general budget support which the Ethiopian Government can use for any purpose. I have had no discussions with other former members of the Commission for Africa regarding this subject.

Bilateral aid to Ethiopia has not been suspended. The UK remains committed to supporting poor people in Ethiopia. We are working with other donors and the Government of Ethiopia to design a new, more accountable mechanism for providing assistance, so that basic services can continue to be provided throughout the country.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action his Department is taking, in conjunction with the Global Fund, to tackle the spread of AIDS in Africa. [46450]

Mr. Thomas: HIV and AIDS in Africa is a priority for DFID, as outlined in "Taking Action: the UK government's strategy for tackling HIV and AIDS in the Developing World". The strategy commits the UK Government to spending £1.5 billion over the next three years on HIV-related work.

The UK has committed £359 million to the Global Fund to Fight HIV/AIDS, TB and Malaria (2002–08). In July 2005, the UK doubled funding to the Global Fund to £100 million for 2006 and the same for 2007. Of total Global Fund resources, 56 per cent. of funding is spent on HIV/AIDS and 60 per cent. will go to sub-Saharan Africa.

Across its 16 priority countries in Africa, DFID is working closely with governments and other development partners (including the Global Fund) to strengthen national comprehensive HIV and AIDS prevention, treatment and care services. We also address broader issues which affect HIV and AIDS such as human rights and health and education services. In countries such as Mozambique, DFID focuses on supporting national government decision-making processes in line with the "3 ones" principles (ie developing one national HIV/AIDS strategy, one co-ordinating body and one monitoring and evaluation system). In countries where working with the Government has been more difficult, such as Zimbabwe, we have been supporting UN agencies and civil society organisations to provide a range of HIV and AIDS services to vulnerable populations.

Horn of Africa

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 925W, on the Horn of Africa, how much of the bilateral aid was diverted to (a) the Ethiopian Government, (b) non-governmental agencies and (c) other organisations operating in that country. [46652]

Hilary Benn: DFID has not diverted aid to non-governmental agencies. Although we are not providing general budget support, which the Government is able to use for any purpose, we continue to support other Government programmes such as the Productive Safety Nets programme and programmes with NGOs working in HIV/AIDS and other development activities.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 925W, on the Horn of Africa, what assessment he has made of the impact of his decision to suspend bilateral aid to the Ethiopian Government upon his Department's efforts to provide humanitarian assistance to those worst affected by the crop failure in that country. [46653]

Hilary Benn: I have not suspended bilateral aid to Ethiopia. In the current political circumstances I have decided that we will not provide general budget support which is a form of aid the Ethiopian Government can use for any purpose.

The UK remains committed to supporting poor people in Ethiopia. Along with other donors we continue to support the Government of Ethiopia's Productive Safety Nets programme which provides assistance specifically to those communities and households most vulnerable to crop failure. In addition, we are continuing to work with the Government and the United Nations to provide emergency humanitarian assistance where appropriate.

Kenya

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State, Department for International Development, what additional support he is making available to the World Food Programme in Kenya; what assessment he has made of the humanitarian situation in Kenya following his recent visit; and if he will make a statement. [47496]

Hilary Benn: The UK has committed a further £3 million UK contribution in response to the food crisis in Kenya. Of this new commitment, £1 million will be channelled through the World Food Programme (WFP) for food and the balance of £2 million will be used to help with access to water. The total UK contribution stands at £13.8 million since June 2004, out of which £6.3 million has been provided through the WFP.

An estimated total of £2.5 million people mostly in the north eastern and eastern parts of Kenya are affected by the drought. The results of a national assessment due in a week's time will determine the level of current and future needs but it is clear from my recent visit that the levels of malnutrition are unacceptably high and urgent action is needed by all parties; Government, donors, NGOs, and communities to help save the lives of those at risk.

Food aid is critical in saving lives in an emergency but, on its own, it will not prevent another crisis happening. Each drought increases the numbers of people facing hunger. People are unable to escape poverty even in good years because they have lost or sold the assets they need to rebuild their lives. If people are to escape from this trap they need concerted effort by Governments to invest in these areas. Our support to education and health go some way towards helping. The provision of safety nets such as timely, adequate and guaranteed payments of cash or food on a regular basis to the neediest also helps rebuild lives.

Millennium Development Goals

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what arrangements have been made by the UK to deliver the commitment made at the Millennium Review Summit of September 2005 to adopt, by 2006, comprehensive national strategies to achieve the millennium development goals. [46588]

Hilary Benn: National strategies to achieve the Millennium Development Goals must be prepared and adopted by developing countries. The UK is encouraging partner countries to adopt new strategies, or to enhance their current national poverty reduction strategies, to plan for achieving the Millennium Development Goals. We are working with other donors to develop a programme of donor meetings with individual partner countries to agree aid support for these plans.

Pakistan (Earthquake)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much funding has been (a) pledged and (b) delivered by the British Government to assist in the aftermath of the Pakistan earthquake. [45807]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has pledged a total of £58 million (including £1.6 million of the UK share of EC humanitarian funding) to meet relief needs and a further £70 million towards reconstruction. To date, over £52 million out of the £58 million pledged for relief has been committed to United Nations agencies, the Red Cross Movement, non-governmental organisations and DFID direct action. We are continuing to support the relief effort and expect the balance of our pledge to be programmed through relief organisations during the winter months.

The European Commission has pledged €93.6 million (around £63.7 million) to relief and reconstruction. The UK's share of this is around £11 million.

Pan-African Trade

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to encourage pan-African trade. [46529]

Hilary Benn: Many African countries lack the physical, human and institutional capacity to take advantage of either regional or global trade opportunities. Infrastructure, an enabling climate for the private sector and more efficient customs at borders are high priorities for regional trade.

DFID has committed to trebling 'aid for trade' to £100 million by 2010—aid which will be used to build up the country's capacity to trade, develop infrastructure to facilitate trade and provide transitional support as global trade barriers are removed. For example, we have pledged $20 million in support of a new Infrastructure Consortium in Africa to better co-ordinate and target financing for regional infrastructure. We have also pledged $30 million towards an Investment Climate Facility which will help make Africa a better place for business and commerce (e.g. by reforming customs to support regional trade integration). Under the UK presidency, G7 Finance Ministers also endorsed Aid for Trade, calling on the international community to increase its global contribution to $4 billion.

In addition, DFID is helping build the trading capacity of pan-African institutions (such as the African Union-New Partnership for African Development and Regional Economic Communities in southern, east and west Africa). For example, DFID's Regional Trade Facilitation Programme in southern Africa has helped countries to analyse their trading interests so they can participate more effectively in trade negotiations. We are also developing trade programmes in southern Africa to facilitate cross-border trade by establishing One Stop Border Posts.

Public Information

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the total expenditure on information campaigns and advertising was for his Department for each year since 1997. [45802]

Mr. Thomas: The expenditure on information campaigns which is managed by our publicity unit is as follows:

1996–97	579,916
1997–98	399,755
1998–99	674,531
1999–2000	879,354
2000–01	1,484,281
2001–02	1,286,053
2002–03	[1]1,300,000
2003–04	773,772
2004–05	[1]496,616

[1] Estimate

The expenditure on advertising, which is principally for recruitment and tenders is only available from 2000; figures prior to 2000 are not available as records were not held centrally prior to this date.

1999–2000	751,972
2000–01	1,208,192
2001–02	914,571
2002–03	849,196
2003–04	700,077
2004–05	397,776

Russia

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his Department's policy is regarding the Russian Government's new legislation restricting UK non-governmental organisation operations in Russia. [46526]

Mr. Thomas: In 2005, under our EU presidency as well as bilaterally, the UK ambassador and his staff in Moscow, advocated to the Russian Authorities that the non-governmental organisation (NGO) law be implemented in line with the Council of Europe standards. This was also a position supported by other partners. The new legislation comes into effect on 10 April 2006 and DFID and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) will be monitoring the situation as the legislation is implemented.

DFID is not providing direct support to any UK NGOs operating in Russia at present. However there are international NGOs working in the North Caucasus that are being funded through DFID and the United Nations.

The international community, including international and Russian NGOs are concerned about the potential impact of the changes introduced in the new NGO law. DFID is concerned that the law is ambiguous and could have a serious impact on the legitimate activity of civil society organisations in Russia.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adult Education (Hammersmith and Fulham)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which further education colleges in Hammersmith and Fulham will receive (a) a decrease and (b) an increase in their funding for adult education, not including for basic skills courses, in 2006-07. [45268]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) has not yet made allocations to further education (FE) providers for 2006-07. On 21 October I set out the Government's priorities for the learning and skills sector and the impact on funding in 2006-07 and 2007-08, and full details can be found in "Priorities for Success" on the LSC's website. Following my Department's grant letter to the LSC, budgets have been allocated to LSC regions, and local LSCs will provide provisional allocations to FE colleges and providers for the 2006-07 academic year by the end of this month. Final agreed budgets are expected to be confirmed in May.

Bullying (Hammersmith and Fulham)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding will be made available to schools in Hammersmith and Fulham for anti-bullying campaigns in 2006-07. [45256]

Jacqui Smith: Ring-fenced funding for anti bullying campaigns is not made available on either a local authority or school by school basis. Rather it is a matter for schools and local authorities to decide how much of their budget they devote to this important work.

Support for anti-bullying work is embedded in the behaviour and attendance strands of the National Strategies which have at least one consultant in place in each local authority. In addition, support is also provided through DfES funded Anti Bullying Alliance co-ordinators in each Government Office region.

At a national level the Department has funded a number of initiatives to tackle bullying. Since 1997 this has included events to disseminate good practice, plus development of guidance and resources for schools. We have supported an award scheme to share and celebrate the excellent work of schools and young people. We have funded the voluntary sector to embed effective practice and offer training and support to schools. We have run public information campaigns encouraging children to 'tell someone' and to support their friends, as well as providing information and support to parents.

Class Sizes

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her Department's target is for the average class size in primary schools. [45450]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 31 January 2006]: There is a statutory requirement on local authorities and schools to limit the size of infant classes for five, six, and seven-year-olds taught by one teacher to 30 or fewer pupils. There is no legal requirement to limit class sizes in any other age group, but since 1997 the average class sizes in primary schools have fallen from 27.5 to 26.2.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on external consultants and advisers by (a) her Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body and (ii) executive agency for which her Department is responsible and (c) each independent statutory body, organisation and body financially sponsored by her Department in each year since May 1997. [39089]

Bill Rammell: The Department for Education and Skills spent the following sums from administration costs on consultancy (as defined by the Office for Government Commerce (OGC)):

£ million

	Amount
1997-98	3.9
1998-99	5.0
1999-00	3.7
2000-01	4.3
2001-02	5.0
2002-03	4.0
2003-04	4.7
2004-05	3.9

The total cost of consultancy charged to programmes from November to March 2004-05 was £4.4 million. A further £9.5 million was spent in this period on other external expert advisers on education and children's matters to assist with policy implementation and delivery. The costs charged to programmes before November 2004 were not recorded centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Consultancy firms also supply a range of services which are not consultancy under the OGC definition.

The Department does not hold the requested information on its NDPBs and other sponsored organisations. It could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Extended Schools Programme

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in which constituencies (a) (i) neighbourhood nurseries and (ii) children's trusts are located and (b) the extended schools programme is operating. [43932]

Beverley Hughes: Sure Start funding was made available to 142 of the 150 local authorities to support the development and delivery of Neighbourhood Nurseries in the most disadvantaged areas of the country. Information on the constituencies in which Neighbourhood Nursery projects are located could only be obtained at disproportionate cost, but the 142 participating LAs are listed as follows:

Children's trusts are partnerships between local authorities, primary care trusts and others who have an interest in improving outcomes for children and young people. There is progress towards putting these partnerships in place in all local authorities, when children's trusts will impact on every constituency.

All 150 local authorities have received Government funding for 2005–06 to enable them to start up, or expand, extended services available through their schools; and since April 2005, the National Remodelling Team has been working with all local authorities to support them. It is, however, for individual authorities to decide whether to roll out the programme to all schools simultaneously, or on an area by area basis. Information on the constituencies in which extended schools are located could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Faith Schools

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many new faith schools have been set up in each year since 1997. [46532]

Jacqui Smith: The following table shows the numbers of new maintained schools with a religious character that have been established each year since 1997:

Faith	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	Total per Faith
Roman Catholic	4	1	5	1			1		1	13
Roman Catholic Church of England					1			1		2
Church of England	2	5	2	3	6	10	10	10	7	55
Church of England Methodist						1		1	1	3
Jewish	3	3	1					2	2	11
Muslim	2				2			1	1	6
Sikh		2								2
Greek Orthodox			1							1
Seventh Day Adventist	1									1
Total per year	12	11	9	4	9	11	11	15	12	94

The table excludes schools established from the amalgamation or reorganisation of existing schools with a religious character.

In addition to the above, eight Academies with a religious character (six Christian, one Roman Catholic and one Church of England) have opened since 1997, three of which replaced existing schools with a religious character.

Grants (West Lancashire)

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much West Lancashire constituency has received from the (a) Excellence in Cities, (b) Education Action Zone and (c) Leadership Incentive Grant Scheme in each year since the schemes began. [45012]

Jacqui Smith: Schools in the West Lancashire constituency have benefited from Excellence in Cities (EiC) funding since September 2001 and the Leadership Incentive Grant scheme (LIG) since September 2003. There was no Education Action Zone (EAZ) in the constituency and the EAZ programme has now finished. From September 2004, under the EiC Primary Expansion, funding has been allocated to local authorities in respect of all primary schools with 35 per cent. or more pupils eligible for free school meals. This includes all primary schools in West Lancashire that meet the criteria. Actual allocations vary as the funding formula is linked to pupil numbers, but funding is in the region of £110 per pupil.

A breakdown of the EiC/Excellence Cluster and LIG funding by year for West Lancashire is given in the following table.

	Excellence cluster	LIG
2001–02	389,000	n/a
2002–03	666,500	n/a
2003–04	666,500	500,000
2004–05[1]	703,560	520,000
2005–06[1]	731,702	540,000

[1] All figures for 2004–05 and 2005–06 include a 4 per cent. uplift on the previous year.

Heritage Restoration

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to increase skills training opportunities for those wishing to pursue skills relevant to heritage restoration; and what support she has made available to the Heritage Academy partnership between Woodchester Mansion Trust, Cirencester College, the Royal Agricultural College and Stroud College. [42186]

Phil Hope: ConstructionSkills is part of the Government's Skills for Business Network and jointly funds the National Heritage Training Group (NHTG) with English Heritage. The NHTG has a UK-wide remit to develop skills and training provision for the traditional building crafts sector carrying out skills research, action planning, and work on qualifications. The NHTG is also part of a partnership with English Heritage, the National Trust Commission and others that recently submitted a successful application for a £900,000 grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund. This will support a Traditional Building Skills Bursary Scheme for England and Wales to encourage the uptake in qualifications in conservation from January 2006. The Heritage Lottery Fund is also supporting a further nine partnerships providing training in heritage restoration skills with total funding of just under £7 million.

ConstructionSkills and English Heritage were actively engaged in a conference on designing heritage skills training partnerships held at Woodchester Mansion in September 2005 and are providing ongoing advice and support through the NHTG as the academy takes forward plans to develop a Centre of Excellence in the South West.

Key Stages

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many schools were included in the 2005 Key Stage 4 Contextual Value Added Pilot Scheme; [47058]

(2) what plans her Department has to use fine grades as a measure of pupil performance; [47059]

(3) what assessment she has made of the results of the 2005 Key Stage 4 Contextual Value Added Pilot Scheme; [47057]

(4) whether she plans to include the (a) contextual value added and (b) value added measure in the 2006 achievement and attainment tables. [47060]

Jacqui Smith: On 19 January 2006 the Department published the Contextual Value Added (CVA) Pilot Achievement and Attainment Tables, showing results for the 430 schools who have been involved in the CVA pilot. The pilot was designed to test the feasibility of including CVA in the tables, the methodology for which includes the use of fine grades.

The pilot is currently being evaluated, both in terms of the impact on schools, and from a data handling and processing perspective. Evaluation of the pilot will be completed by the end of March 2006. Subject to the evaluation findings, we intend to replace the existing value added measure with the new CVA measure in the 2006 secondary achievement and attainment tables.

List 99

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many appeals against a ban on working with children have been made by people on (a) the Sex Offenders Register, but not on List 99 and (b) on List 99 in each of the last 10 years. [43926]

Ruth Kelly: Someone who is on the Sex Offenders Register but not on List 99 is not banned from working with children to the extent that he is not subject to a complete or partial bar from doing work to which section 142 of the Education Act 2002 applies.

The annual number of appeals, to the Care Standards Tribunal in respect of listing on List 99, lodged in each calendar year is as follows:

	Number
2001	1
2002	3
2003	3
2004	3
2005	6

Prior to 2000 there was no right of appeal to an independent tribunal. The first hearing was heard in 2001.

Pupil Exclusions (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupil exclusions there have been in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Coventry, South in each year since 1997. [46167]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is shown in the table.

Maintained primary and secondary schools: number of permanent exclusions 1996/97 to 2003/04—Coventry, South parliamentary constituency

	Number of permanent exclusions
	Primary		Secondary
	Number	Percentage[1]	Number	Percentage[1]

Safeguarding Children

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to her oral statement of 19 January 2006, Official Report, columns 966–70, on safeguarding children, whether all (a) health professionals, (b) social workers and (c) peripatetic teaching staff who work with children in schools will be subject to Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) checks; and what level of CRB checks will be made on those workers for whom checks will be required. [45377]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 24 January 2006]: Child care organisations proposing to offer employment in a child care position are, subject to limited exceptions, required to check whether a person is on the Protection of Children Act List of people who are unsuitable to work with children. If a person is on that list, the organisation must not offer the position. In practice, a check against the Protection of Children Act List can only be made by carrying out a CRB check. Child care organisations include organisations concerned with the provision of social services or health care services to child.

Current guidance advises that a Criminal Records Bureau Disclosure at enhanced level is applicable for a position whose normal duties include caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of children and for all other individuals whose normal duties include working in a school or an educational establishment a standard level Disclosure is applicable.

In addition, I said in my statement of 19 January that I will require mandatory Criminal Records Bureau checks for all newly appointed school employees and that my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary would be restating how the current system operates, what will change and the priority that is attached to this area.

School Performance Data

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the cost was to her Department of producing the performance and assessment data for schools issued in December 2005; [46392]

(2) what estimate she has made of the cost of correcting and re-issuing the performance and assessment data for schools first published in December 2005; [46645]

(3) when schools will receive corrected performance and assessment data. [46644]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 30 January 2006]: The performance and assessment reports are produced by Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Maurice Smith, has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Maurice Smith, dated 30 January 2006:

PARLIAMENTARY QUESTIONS 46392 46644 46645: PANDA REPORTS

Your recent parliamentary questions have been referred to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of schools, for reply.

In sum, you asked:

the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost was to her Department of producing performance and assessment data for schools issued in December 2005. (PQ 46392)

the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the cost of correcting and re-issuing the performance and assessment data for schools first published in December 2005. (PQ 46645)

the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when schools will receive corrected performance and assessment data. (PQ 46644)

In response to PQ 46392, the PANDA (Performance and Assessment) report issued to all mainstream maintained secondary schools in England on 23 December 2005 was part of a series of reports published in 2005/06. Six sets of PANDA reports have been produced and made available to schools so far in 2005/06.

For all 18,000 mainstream maintained primary schools in England the following PANDAs were produced:

A PANDA based on 2004 validated data

A "New Style" PANDA based on 2004 validated data

A "New Style" PANDA based on 2005 unvalidated data

For all 3,400 mainstream maintained secondary schools in England the following PANDAs were produced:

A PANDA based on 2004 validated data

A "New Style" PANDA based on 2004 validated data

A "New Style" PANDA based on 2005 unvalidated data

The total cost to Ofsted of developing, producing and supporting schools and inspectors in using the PANDAs in 2005/06 was £290,000. Appendix A provides a breakdown of these costs.

This annual cost includes the development costs associated with the release of a "New Style" PANDA in September 2005. This and subsequent PANDAs contained new analysis using more sophisticated techniques and improved presentations.

It is not possible to identify the exact cost of producing the PANDA reports released on 23 December 2005 since the direct staff costs incurred cannot be attributed separately to the development, production and support to schools and inspectors in their use of the PANDA. However the cost of developing, producing and supporting schools and inspectors in the use of this particular PANDA has been estimated to be £50,000, equal to 1/6th of the annual cost of producing the six sets of PANDA reports released in 2005/06.

In response to PQ 46645, the "New Style" PANDA based on 2005 unvalidated data and released on 23 December 2005 contained an error. The analysis in table 3.4.14 excluded A* grades from the calculations. The error required one line of programming code to be corrected. Following the correction, the production of the revised documents required IT processing time which incurred no additional cost. The only additional cost was for a letter sent to all secondary schools informing them of the error and the remedial action being taken. This additional letter cost £1,500.

In response to PQ 46644, a corrected "New Style" PANDA based on 2005 unvalidated data was made available for schools to download from the Ofsted website on 26 January 2006.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Jacqui Smith and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

APPENDIX A

2005/06 costs for PANDA development, production and support

Direct staff costs (including staff on-costs, NI, pension etc) = £210,000

Comprising of:

0.5 FTE Band A (Grade 7 equivalent)

1 FTE B1 (SEO equivalent)

2 FTE B2s (HEO equivalent)

2 FTE B3s (EO equivalent)

1 FTE C1s (AO equivalent)

Cost of distribution of 66,000 letters to schools = £30,000

Cost of website hosting and maintenance = £50,000

Total 2005/06 cost for PANDA development, production and support = £290,000

Schools (Leicestershire)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools in Leicestershire were classed as outstanding in their last Ofsted report. [44841]

Jacqui Smith: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Maurice Smith, has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Maurice Smith, dated 26 January 2006:

Your recent parliamentary question has been passed to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for reply.

You asked how many schools in Leicestershire were classed as outstanding in their last Ofsted report.

Inspectors have made judgements about schools' overall effectiveness since January 2000. Until July 2005 this judgement was made using a seven point scale, with the highest being excellent. Since September 2005 the judgement has been made using a four point scale. This response relates to schools judged to be either excellent or outstanding in their most recent inspection. Not quite all schools in Leicester City and Leicestershire, 92% and 97%, respectively, were inspected between January 2000 and December 2005.

Three schools in Leicester City and two in Leicestershire were judged to be excellent, using the pre-September 2005 framework. One* school in Leicester City and three* schools in Leicestershire were judged to be outstanding, using the framework now in use.

*Please note that these figures include 3 schools that had pilot inspections during 2004-05.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Jacqui Smith and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Trust Schools

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether representatives of companies from the (a) banking, (b) supermarket, (c) tobacco, (d) oil and energy, (e) fast food, (f) construction and (g) IT industries have (i) expressed an interest in, (ii) requested information about and (iii) corresponded with her Department about trust schools. [44543]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 20 January 2006]: We welcome the involvement of partners from all sectors of the community and across the economy in forming charitable trusts to support schools.

We are engaged in ongoing discussions with a range of organisations, including representatives of companies from banking, construction and IT industries. The recent Trust School Prospectus (www.dfes.gov.uk/publications/schoolswhitepaper) included some of these companies: Microsoft is interested in developing existing links with Monkseaton Language college into a trust, and Solihull local authority is working with a private sector business consortium on a regeneration project—as part of this a shared trust for several primary schools could help to ensure a close link between the schools, the local community and the regeneration project.

We have had no contact with supermarkets, fast food companies or companies in the tobacco or oil and energy industries.

It will be for individual school governing bodies to decide whether they want to acquire a trust, and to choose who they want to work with. Local authorities will be able to refer a school's decision to acquire a particular trust to the schools adjudicator if it is clear that the school has not taken proper account of the views of the majority of parents, or if there are serious concerns about the impact of the acquisition of the trust on school standards.

William Gibson

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the (a) head teacher and (b) governing body of Porchester School in Bournemouth knew that before his appointment William Gibson had a conviction for indecently assaulting a girl of 15 years of age and a conviction for fraud, forgery and theft. [43400]

Ruth Kelly: My Department does not hold this information.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2838W, on Afghanistan, how much of the Afghan Counter Narcotics Trust Fund will be ring-fenced; for what purposes; how much cash will be required for the wages and salaries of counter-narcotics staff; what mechanisms are in place to safeguard these funds; and how much of the pledged US funding has been transferred into the fund. [46270]

Dr. Howells: The Counter Narcotics Trust Fund (CNTF) has been created to give the Afghans greater ownership of the counter-narcotics agenda and ensure assistance is targeted effectively. The Government of Afghanistan are encouraging international donors to make un-earmarked contributions to the fund to give the Government maximum flexibility to allocate funding in accordance with the four priorities highlighted in its National Drugs Control Strategy: disrupting the drugs trade by targeting traffickers and their backers; strengthening and diversifying legal rural livelihoods; reducing the demand for illicit drugs and treatment of problem drug users; and developing state institutions at the central and provincial level. However, in recognition of the budgetary and policy constraints under which different donors operate, it will be possible to earmark funds for one or more of the following eight pillars of activity (building institutions, information campaign, alternative livelihoods, criminal justice, law enforcement, eradication, demand reduction, regional co-operation). It is not envisaged that the wages of permanent counter-narcotics staff working for the Ministry of Counter Narcotics will be funded through the CNTF—rather the fund will be used to cover projectised activity. The United Nations Development Programme will administer the fund which will ensure transparency and accountability.

The UK commitment of £30 million includes an initial £10 million from our Afghan Drugs Inter-Departmental Unit and £20 million from the Department for International Development (DFID). DFID's commitment will be available for alternative livelihoods, institution building, and drug demand reduction and treatment of addicts—pillars consistent with UK poverty reduction objectives.

The US has not yet officially announced its pledge to the fund. We expect that they will do so during the London conference taking place on 31 January-1 February.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of how much heroin was produced in Afghanistan in each of the last two years; how much of that was exported to the UK in each year; what estimates he has made of the levels so far in 2006; and if he will make a statement. [46378]

Dr. Howells: In November 2005, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) confirmed the opium poppy cultivation and opium production figures for the 2004-05 season from their annual survey. They estimated that opium production was around 4,100 metric tonnes, a decrease of only 100 tonnes (2.4 per cent.) compared to 2004, despite a significant reduction in cultivation (a 21 per cent. reduction in poppy cultivation from 131,000 hectares in 2004 to 104,000 ha in 2005). Good weather and an absence of crop disease were responsible for the increase in yield in 2005.

The UNODC publishes figures for global illicit cultivation of opium poppy and production of opium and heroin in its annual World Drugs Report. Full details can be found on their website http://www.unodc.org. According to the 2005 report, the potential heroin production for 2004 was estimated as 500 tonnes, if all the opium produced was converted to heroin. Figures for heroin production in 2005 in Afghanistan will not be available until the publication of the Report in June this year.

We estimate that around 95 per cent. of heroin in the UK originates in Afghanistan.

While the figures for heroin and opium production for this season (2005 06) in Afghanistan are unavailable until later this year, the UNODC will provide an early indication of 2005 06 cultivation trends in their Rapid Assessment Survey, which is due to be published next month.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has received of Iranian assistance to terrorists and insurgent forces in Afghanistan. [46978]

Dr. Howells: Iran has links to a variety of groups in Afghanistan but the Government have no evidence of Iranian assistance to terrorist and insurgent forces in Afghanistan. Iran has stated that it supports the long-term reconstruction of Afghanistan and the efforts of the Government of Afghanistan and the international community to build stability and security. We welcome this commitment.

Belarus

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Government in Belarus regarding the treatment of Pastor Ernst Sabilo and the Belarusian Evangelical Church in Minsk in relation to restrictions placed on them by the Belarusian authorities. [46698]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government continue to raise human rights issues with the Belarusian authorities, both bilaterally and with EU partners. Throughout 2005 we raised the issue of restrictions on freedom of worship, most notably in a resolution critical of Belarus' human rights record sponsored by the EU at the UN Commission on Human Rights. The Government have not made any separate representations to the Government of Belarus specifically concerning Pastor Sabilo or the Belarusian Evangelical Church. In the course of 2005, our ambassador in Minsk also met with leaders of Churches under pressure from the authorities to hear their concerns.

Bolivia

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with President Evo Morales of Bolivia on the security of British business interests in that country from nationalisation. [46275]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not yet met President Evo Morales. But we have made clear to the new Government the importance we attach to building a stable and prosperous society, founded on a sound economy. We have also set out our view that a number of British companies present in Bolivia are well placed to make an important contribution to the country's future prosperity.

We shall continue to take every appropriate opportunity to reiterate this message with President Morales and relevant Members of his Administration.

Burma

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of how much (a) heroin and (b) methamphetamine was produced in Burma in each of the last two years; how much of that was exported to the UK in each year; what estimates he has made of the levels so far in 2006; and if he will make a statement. [46377]

Dr. Howells: The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) estimates that opiate cultivation in Myanmar has declined from 44,200 hectares in 2004 to 32,800 hectares in 2005. This represents a 26 per cent. fall in cultivation. In 2004, Myanmar produced 370 metric tons of opium. In 2005, the total estimated production of opium was around 312 metric tons, a 16 per cent. decrease compared with the previous year and a 76 per cent. decrease from 1998. Estimates for 2006 are not yet available.

The UNODC estimates that about half the global production of amphetamines (mainly methamphetamine) take place in East and South East Asia, out of a total world production of 332 metric tons in 2003. Figures for 2004 and 2005 and estimates for 2006 are not yet available. The 2005 the Office of National Drug Control Policy National Drug Threat Assessment reports that Burmese criminal groups are the principal producers of methamphetamine tablets in South East Asia, with several hundred million tablets annually distributed to drugs markets in Thailand, China and India.

There is no evidence that drugs produced in or smuggled via Burma reach the UK in significant quantities.

China

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the transfer of Chinese missile technology to Iran; and if the Government support lifting the EU arms embargo on China. [47425]

Dr. Howells: Countering the threat of missile proliferation remains one of the Government's strategic priorities, particularly where such proliferation might contribute to the delivery of weapons of mass destruction. We seek to monitor missile-related transfers to Iran in this context. Assessments of proliferation activity often draw on highly classified information; it is impossible, therefore, to comment on specific aspects.

The Government support the decision of the European Council in December 2003 to review the EU arms embargo on China. This review is on-going—it was last discussed by EU Foreign Ministers at December's General Affairs and External Relations Council. The Government do not wish to exclude any options for the review, or to pre-empt the conclusion of the review. There is no consensus at present in the EU for lift. Further consultations in the EU and with other international partners are necessary before any decision is taken. In the context of these discussions the EU recalls the European Council Conclusions in December 2004 that any decision on the arms embargo would not result in an increase of arms exports to China in either quantitative or qualitative terms.

Early Retirement

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of his Department's employees have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46867]

Mr. Straw: The number of Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) employees who took early retirement due to ill health in each of the past three calendar years was:

	Number
2003	9
2004	7
2005	2

Prior to the introduction of electronic records in September 2002, the FCO did not maintain records in a form that distinguished separately those retiring for medical reasons. To collate the information requested would incur disproportionate costs.

EU Arms Exports

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Ethiopia as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46838]

(2) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Eritrea as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46839]

(3) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Iran as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46840]

(4) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Liberia as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46841]

(5) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Libya as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46842]

(6) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Namibia as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46843]

(7) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Sudan as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46844]

(8) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Syria as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46845]

(9) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Tajikistan as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46846]

(10) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Kyrgyzstan as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports [46847]

(11) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Zambia as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46848]

(12) if he will make a statement on EU arms exports to Zimbabwe as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports; [46849]

(13) if he will make a statement on UK arms exports to the Democratic Republic of the Congo licensed by the Government as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports. [46850]

Dr. Howells: The EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports was adopted on 8 June 1998. It represents a politically binding commitment by EU member states to apply common criteria when assessing export licence applications for the export of items on the common EU military list. Decisions made under the code are a matter for each individual member state.

Licence applications in the UK for the export of military and other controlled goods are rigorously assessed on a case by case basis against the Consolidated EU and national export licensing criteria, taking account of the circumstances prevailing at the time and other relevant announced Government policies. The Government will not issue licences where to do so would be inconsistent with the criteria or other relevant commitments. Further detail on UK export licence decisions for 2004 is contained in the United Kingdom Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls 2004, which was presented to Parliament on 21 July 2005.

Family Member Permits (EEA)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many European economic area family member permits were issued by British missions overseas in each of the last three years. [47320]

Dr. Howells: The information on EEA family member permits issued by British missions overseas in the last three years is as follows:

EEA family permits issued

	Number
2002-03	20,016
2003-04	21,441
2004-05	24,930

UKvisas compiles statistics by financial year. Further entry clearance statistics in addition to those provided can be found on the UKvisas website at: www.ukvisas.gov.uk 'Entry Clearance: Facts and Figures'.

Migrant Smuggling

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the death toll of migrants being smuggled to countries around the horn of Africa; what representations he has made to (a) the countries involved and (b) the UN; and if he will make a statement. [47491]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We are aware that migrants transit the horn of Africa through a number of routes and that there have been tragic incidents involving loss of life, but there are no reliable statistics. My hon. Friend the Minister for the Middle East, (Dr. Howells), raised this issue most recently with the Yemeni authorities on 24 January. We are helping the Yemeni Government to establish an effective coast guard. The Department for International Development have granted £500,000 to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to help the protection of internally displaced communities in the horn of Africa. I also refer my hon. Friend to the answer my hon. Friend, the Minister of State at the Home Office, gave the hon. Member for Ashford (Damian Green) on 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 1114W.

Nepal

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Nepal about the detention under house arrest of the leaders of Nepal's five principal political parties. [46222]

Dr. Howells: The UK is deeply troubled by recent political developments in Nepal. Following the arrest and detention of the leaders of the five main political parties on 19 January, I issued a statement in which I said, "The UK is extremely concerned by the King's actions, and we can see no grounds for these anti-democratic measures. I call on the King urgently to release those arrested, and to find ways to resume dialogue with the political parties." The statement is available at: http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029391638&a=KArticle&aid=1136906017567%20&year=2006&month=2006-01-02&date=2006-01-19

The following day I summoned the Nepalese ambassador to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to explain his Government's actions to senior officials and urged the Government of Nepal to release all of the political prisoners detained in the most recent round-up of activists and party leaders.

The UK also joined EU partners in issuing a statement by EU Heads of Mission in Nepal deploring all of the recent arrests including of party leaders, political activists, members of civil society and human rights defenders. This is available at: http://www.ambkathmandu.um.dk/en/menu/TheEmbassy/News/StatementOfTheEUHeadsOfMissionInNepal.htm

We view the recent arrests and the suspension of the right to free association as a severe setback to democracy and we continue to urge the King to urgently find ways to resume dialogue with the political parties. We are encouraged to note that many of the party leaders who were detained have now been released. But 200 political party activists are still in detention including one of the top party leaders who is still being held under house arrest.

Russia

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government plans to take during Russia's presidency of the G8 to encourage (a) democracy and (b) a free media in that country; and if he will make a statement. [46294]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: In the run up to the Russian presidency of the G8, the UK has encouraged the Russian authorities to maintain the high standards on the promotion of democratic and civil freedoms upheld by successive G8 presidencies. The UK, along with other G8 members, reiterated this message at the first preparatory meeting for the St Petersburg Summit, held in Moscow last week. These efforts are in keeping with our ongoing EU and bilateral dialogues with Russia, where we continue to emphasise that respect for democracy, the rule of law, human rights and fundamental freedoms, a free and independent media, and the effective application of common values by independent judicial systems are key elements of our relations with Russia.

Statutory Instruments

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the statutory instruments introduced by his Department since 6 May 2005. [46201]

Dr. Howells: Statutory Instruments prepared by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and coming into force after 6 May 2005 are:

Statutory Instruments

2005/1260	The Child Abduction and Custody (Parties to Conventions) (Amendment) Order 2005
2005/1258	The Sudan (United Nations Measures) (Overseas Territories) Order 2005

2005/3542	The Civil Partnership Act 2004 (International Immunities and Privileges, Companies and Adoption) Order 2005

UK Arms Exports

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on UK arms exports to China licensed by the Government as referred to in the Seventh Annual Report on the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports. [46837]

Dr. Howells: Licence applications for the export of military and other controlled goods are rigorously assessed on a case by case basis against the Consolidated EU and National Export Licensing Criteria, taking account of the circumstances prevailing at the time and other relevant announced Government policies. The Government will not issue licences where to do so would be inconsistent with the criteria or other relevant commitments. The Government continues to implement the EU Arms Embargo on China as set out by the then Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the late Derek Fatchett, in his reply to the hon. Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker) on 3 June 1998, Official Report, columns 240–241.

Visitor Visas

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the merits of introducing charges for visitor visas. [46877]

Dr. Howells: People who apply for entry clearance to visit the United Kingdom are charged:

£50—for single, double and multiple visits, when the visa is valid for up to six months;

£85—for multiple visits, when the visa is valid for one, two, five or 10 years.

Entry clearance application fees are set to reflect the actual cost of processing each application. UKvisas does not receive any subsidy from the taxpayer and is mandated by Treasury guidelines to recover the cost of the UK's global entry clearance operation through its fees. The Government believes that those who benefit from the service should pay for it.

Whaling (Norway)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 195W, on Norway whaling, what the estimated cost is of cleaning up old whaling stations on South Georgia; and what steps the Government is taking to encourage a greater contribution from the Norwegian Government. [46047]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The cost of cleaning up the former whaling station at Grytviken was approximately £6.7 million. This cost has been borne exclusively by the Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands. It is difficult to estimate the cost of carrying out a similar operation at Leith Harbour, Stromness and Husvik whaling stations, but it is unlikely to be less than £20 to £25 million.

Although Norwegian commercial interests and personnel were heavily involved in the whaling industry in South Georgia, the Norwegian Government has never had any direct responsibility for the whaling stations on South Georgia. It has indicated that it is not in a position to make a financial contribution towards the environmental clean-up.

Younas Case (Pakistan)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made in the Younas case currently before the High Court in Pakistan; and if he will take steps to reiterate the Government's case against the use of the death penalty and for the need for a fair trial conducted without fear of intimidation. [47517]

Dr. Howells: We have not made any further representations on this case since the answer that my right hon. Friend, the Minister for Europe, (Mr. Alexander), gave my hon. Friend on 29 November 2005, Official Report, column 300W. We were concerned to learn about the apparent misuse of the Blasphemy Law in Pakistan and are monitoring this case closely. Mr. Masih's application for bail was heard on 31 January. The court has not yet announced its decision on this application. We continue to lobby, both bilaterally and as part of the EU, on minority issues in Pakistan, in particular the misuses of the Blasphemy Law. In December 2005, as presidency the UK delivered an EU démarche on human rights to the Government of Pakistan, which encouraged the repeal of the Blasphemy Laws and the death penalty.

SCOTLAND

Audible Fire Alarms

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the premises occupied by his Department is fitted with audible fire alarms. [42873]

David Cairns: 100 per cent.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the cost to his Department of sending Christmas cards in 2005. [45923]

David Cairns: The total cost of official Christmas cards issued by the Scotland Office and by the Office of the Advocate-General for Scotland in 2005 was £1,034. This cost comprised that of purchasing the cards (£808) and the cost of postage (£226).

Departmental Equipment

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) personal computers, (b) laptops, (c) servers, (d) printers, (e) scanners, (f) photocopiers and (g) fax machine his Department owned in (i) Scotland and (ii) each English region in (A) 2003–04 and (B) 2004–05. [40113]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office does not maintain a central record of all electrical devices owned. The information requested could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Estate

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the former (a) buildings and (b) land of his Department which has been sold since 7 May 1997; what the sale price for each (i) was at the time of sale and (ii) is at current prices; and whether the money accrued was (A) retained by his Department and (B) claimed by the Treasury. [40130]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999; since that date, no property or land has been sold.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the annual expenditure on (a) fixture and fittings, (b) general office expenses and (c) office equipment was of his Department in (i) Scotland and (ii) each English region in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06 in each case. [40114]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office and Office of the Advocate General have premises in London and Scotland but do not record expenditure in a way which would allow the accurate allocation of expenditure between the buildings. The total costs were:

£000

	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Furniture and Fittings	26	4	25
General Office Expenses	1,759	1,788	1,621
Office Equipment	58	6	22

The Offices spent £16,945 on furniture and fittings, £846,008 on general office expenses, and £36,295 on office equipment between 1 April and 31 December 2005.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the expenditure on (a) buildings and (b) insurance of buildings and staff was of his Department in (i) Scotland and (ii) each English region in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06 in each case. [40115]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office spent the following on repairs and maintenance:

	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Scotland	38,712	67,289	41,643
London	60,598	112,564	332,485

The Office has spent £11,314 in Scotland and £97,045 in London on repairs and maintenance of buildings between 1 April and 31 December 2005. The Office has not purchased any buildings or staff insurance.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the annual expenditure on training and development by his Department was in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [40128]

David Cairns: The total direct expenditure by the Scotland Office on training was:

2002–03	25,202
2003–04	23,483
2004–05	11,123

The Office spent £8,460 on training between 1 April and 31 December 2005.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department spent on bottled water in 2004–05. [40327]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office spent £2,418 on bottled water in 2004–05.

Departmental Functions

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which functions of his core Department are carried out in (a) England and (b) London; and what administrative costs were associated with these functions for each area in the last year. [39825]

David Cairns: The most readily available information about the functions and costs of the Scotland Office are set out in the Annual Report 2005 (Cm 6544), copies of which are available in the Library.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what functions in his Department are carried out in Scotland; and what the administration costs of these functions were in the last year for which figures are available. [40016]

David Cairns: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave today to PQ 39825 from the hon. Member for Moray.

Departmental Jobs

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of jobs in his Department are located in (a) Scotland and (b) Greater London. [39862]

David Cairns: Figures for the Scotland Office, including the Office of the Advocate-General for Scotland, are published in table D of the Civil Service Statistics 2004 which is available on the Cabinet Office Statistics website: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/civil_service_statistics/index.asp.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil servants in his Department worked from home for at least one day a week in the last year for which figures are available. [40285]

David Cairns: All the staff in the Scotland Office are on loan from the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA).

Although no staff in the Scotland Office have formally worked from home in the last year, both the Scottish Executive and the DCA are committed to achieving a work life balance for all staff. Both Departments fully recognise the broad context of diversity and promotion of homeworking as one of several ways in which staff can work flexibly.

Domestic Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the valuation of domestic property in Scotland for taxation purposes is an (a) devolved and (b) reserved matter. [39502]

David Cairns: This matter is devolved.

Older People (Care)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has held with the Scottish Executive on policy on care for older people. [40610]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend and I meet regularly with Scottish Executive Ministers to discuss a range of issues but care for older people is largely a devolved matter.

Pension Contributions

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the cost of pension contributions incurred by his Department was in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [40129]

David Cairns: The pension contributions incurred by the Scotland Office were:

2002–03	273,694
2003–04	271,431
2004–05	233,906

For 2005–06, employers' contributions are payable to the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) at one of four rates in the ranges 16.2 to 24.6 per cent. of pensionable pay, based on salary bands. The Scheme Actuary reviews employer contributions every four years following a full scheme valuation; last carried out as at 31 March 2003. The contribution rates reflect the cost of benefits as they accrue (net of employee contributions), not the costs as they are actually incurred, and reflect past experience of the scheme. The planned costs for 2005–06 are not available.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol-free Zones

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many alcohol-free zones there are in each local authority area. [45653]

Paul Goggins: The Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 enables local authorities to restrict antisocial public drinking by introducing a Designated Public Place Order (DPPO) in areas where there is a problem with alcohol misuse behaviour. These are sometimes mistakenly referred to as alcohol-free zones. Once in place a DPPO provides the police with the power to enforce the restriction, where necessary because of antisocial alcohol misuse, by confiscating both opened and sealed containers. There are currently 331 DPPOs and some areas have introduced more than one. A full list of the DPPOs currently in place can be found on the following website: www.crimereduction.gov.uk/alcoholorders09.htm

Asylum Seekers

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many asylum decisions have been taken in each month of the last two years; and how many have been judged as late and opportunistic; [42060]

(2) what the average time is which has elapsed before asylum applicants judged late and opportunistic are deported; and what measures are in place to ensure that such applicants are deported quickly; [42053]

(3) what the average cost has been of dealing with each asylum applicant judged late and opportunistic; [42054]

(4) how many asylum applicants judged late and opportunistic have been considered unsuitable for detention in each month of the past two years; and where they have been located; [42055]

(5) what the nine asylum routes are under the New Asylum Model; [42056]

(6) what arrangements are in place to detain those asylum applicants that are judged late and opportunistic; and how many such applicants have been detained; [42058]

(7) if he will make a statement on the New Asylum Model; [42057]

(8) how many asylum applicants judged late and opportunistic have been deported in each month of the last two years. [42059]

Mr. McNulty: Information on asylum initial decisions by month is published quarterly. Copies are available from the Library and from the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html "Late and opportunistic" is not, however, a category of asylum decision, but a part of a casework-handling process which has not, prior to the advent of the New Asylum Model (NAM) in 2005, been dealt with as a discrete category. We have not as yet decided the appropriate format in which to publish NAM data.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers accommodated in (a) England, (b) Cambridgeshire, (c) Peterborough City Council Unitary Authority and (d) Peterborough constituency, were granted (i) asylum, (ii) indefinite leave to remain and (iii) refugee status in each of the last 10 years; and how many illegal immigrants who had been accommodated in each area have been deported in each of the last 10 years. [46064]

Mr. McNulty: Statistics on the location of persons who were granted indefinite leave to remain and those who were granted refugee status in each of the last 10 years is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by the examination of individual case records.

Data on asylum seekers supported by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) broken down by parliamentary constituency are also available from the Library.

Information on the number of people who were deported from the UK is published on an annual basis in the Home Office Command Paper, "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom". It is not possible to break this information down by the region that they were residing in.

Community Safety Officers

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many additional police community safety officers were allocated to each English police force in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; how many he estimates will be allocated in each year to 2008–09; and if he will make a statement. [45590]

Hazel Blears: Community Support Officers (CSOs) are police staff who are employed by police authorities. In March 2005 there were 6,300 CSOs in England and Wales. Under the Neighbourhood Policing Fund (NPF) we are investing £88 million in 2006–07 and £340 million in 2007–08 to help the police service to recruit 24,000 CSOs by 2008. We are currently considering proposals from forces for recruitment of CSOs over the next two years. An announcement on NPF allocations will be made shortly.

Computer Misuse Act

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will bring forward proposals to update the Computer Misuse Act 1990 to ensure reasonable penalties for misuse. [44740]

Paul Goggins: The Police and Justice Bill was introduced in the House of Commons on 25 January 2006. Clauses 33 to 36 relate to computer misuse and in particular the Computer Misuse Act 1990. Specifically, we are seeking to amend:

Section 1(3) of the Act to increase the term of imprisonment for an offence of unauthorised access to a computer system from six months to two years;

Section 3(7) of the Act to increase the term of imprisonment for an offence of unauthorised modification of computer material from five to 10 years; and

Section 3 of the Act to clarify that all means of interference with a computer system are criminalised; in particular, ensuring that adequate provision is made to criminalise all forms of Denial of Service attacks.

Correspondence

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to send a substantive reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Clwyd, West of 11 October 2005, reference M24593/5. [46149]

Mr. McNulty: I replied to the hon. Member for Clwyd, West on 27 January 2006.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Department will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood of 6 December 2005 on behalf of Harmesh Kumar Sharmar (Home Office reference S1172939, acknowledgement reference B29103/5). [46416]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate replied to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood on 27 January 2006.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil servants in his Department worked from home for at least one day a week in the last year for which figures are available. [40288]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office offers a range of flexible working options to help staff balance their work and home lives. This includes the option of working from home.

The Department does not record ad hoc occasions or informal home working arrangements and as a result is only able to provide the number of staff by area who have a formally agreed home working pattern.

[1] These data cover the year to August 2004 as this is the last period for which data are available. Data on home working rates for 2005 are not centrally available owing to the move to a new personnel system.

[2] This does not include staff who are directly employed by the 42 Probation Boards.

[3] Data are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many disciplinary actions against civil servants employed in his Department (a) were commenced and (b) resulted in a sanction being applied in each of the last five years. [43492]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Figures for disciplinary action and sanctions for the Home Office and its Agencies are shown in the table. Disciplinary action against staff may only be taken following an investigation. The figures for 'cases' therefore refers to the number of investigations undertaken in any given year and the result of some investigations—where no evidence of misconduct is found—will not lead to any sanction. Sanctions may range from a verbal or written warning; a bar on applying for promotion; withholding of pay increases and/or bonus payments; suspension from duty with loss of pay; downgrading; and dismissal (this list is not exhaustive).

Core Home Office and Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND)

Decisions in respect of the disciplinary process were delegated to the line management chain with effect from January 2005. It is not possible to link investigations to specific sanctions applied in relation to each investigation except at disproportionate cost.

HM Prison Service (HMPS)

Decisions in respect of the disciplinary process are devolved to a local level in the Prison Service. The information required is not collated centrally in the requested format and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

United Kingdom Passport Services (UKPS)

The disciplinary process was devolved from HQ to Regional Offices on October 2002. Cases that are 'not found' are not recorded, as is true for any case dealt with informally by managers.

[3] Figures for investigations 'not found' are not recorded. Data are not available pre-2004.

Departmental Website

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of maintaining his main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46306]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following document gives the user statistics for www.homeoffice.gov.uk. We measure site use by counting page impressions—requests for a complete page of information—rather than hits, which are generally understood to be requests for each of the files making up a page. A page can consist of any number of files, so that page impressions are more meaningful than hits as a measure of use.

The running costs of the main departmental website—www.homeoffice.gov.uk—are met from the existing budget for running all of the core Home Office sites, which was £500,000 for the 2005–06 financial year. Separate totals are not kept for the maintenance costs of individual sites, including the main departmental website.

DNA Database

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 1523W from the Leader of the House, that the Home Secretary is reviewing the cases of 24,000 children on the DNA National Police Database who have not been charged or cautioned for any offence, when he plans to make a statement about the review. [46913]

Andy Burnham: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary is not reviewing the cases of individuals, children or adults, whose DNA samples have been retained even though they have not been charged or cautioned.

From an operational perspective, the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) has for some time been developing guidelines to allow, in exceptional circumstances only, the removal of individual profiles from the database. These will be issued shortly.

DNA Profiles

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 16 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1111–12W, on DNA profiles, whether all the 24,000 individuals were still under 18 years on 1 December 2005 when the information was collated. [45933]

Andy Burnham: Yes. On one December 2005, there were 24,168 persons under the age of 18 on the National DNA Database who had been arrested and had a DNA sample taken but who had subsequently not been charged or cautioned for any offence.

Drug Seizures (Livingston)

Mr. Devine: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much property was seized by the Drug Enforcement Agency in Livingston in 2005. [44023]

Paul Goggins: This is a matter for the Scottish Executive and my hon. Friend may wish to write to them about this issue.

Exclusions

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals have been excluded from the UK as Muslim extremists in the last five years; and how many individuals from around the world are on his Department's database as having demonstrated unacceptable behaviour. [41337]

Mr. Charles Clarke: 22 individuals have been excluded on grounds of unacceptable behaviour since the list of such behaviours was published on 24 August 2005. The 22 individuals include anti-abortionists, animal rights activists and extremists from different religious backgrounds.

Identity Cards

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many written representations in support of the Government's introduction of national identity cards he has received since 1 October 2005; and if he will list the individuals and organisations which made those representations. [43586]

Andy Burnham: Since October 2005, the Identity Cards Programme Team has received 31 written representations from individuals in support of the Identity Cards Scheme. It would not be appropriate to list the names of the individuals who wrote these representations, as they have not given their permission for their names to be disclosed.

Since October 2005, the Identity Cards Programme has received no written representations from organisations either in support or otherwise of the Identity Cards Scheme. However a number of organisations responded to the consultation on the Identity Cards Bill in July 2004.

The consultation documents and a list of who responded can be found on the website at www.identitycards.gov.uk.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the technical specifications for the identity card database will allow two-way data sharing with the CORE database. [44103]

Andy Burnham: The Identity Cards Programme is currently specifying technical requirements for the National Identity Register (NIR) in advance of a procurement process. There is no specific requirement that the National Identity Register must be able to conduct two-way data sharing with the CORE database. The Government set out the role of the National Identity Register and the Identity Cards Scheme in relation to electoral registration and voting in its evidence to the House of Commons Constitutional Affairs and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister: Housing, Planning, Local Government and the Regions Committees published by the Committees on 16 March 2005.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has received from representatives of (a) Christian, (b) Hindu, (c) Muslim and (d) Sikh communities relating to the photographic element of the proposed identity card scheme in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [45541]

Andy Burnham: In the last 12 months, the Identity Cards Programme has received four representations from individuals concerning the photographic element of identity cards. None of the correspondents disclosed their religion, and the focus of their representations was a concern that individuals required by their religion to cover their face should not be exempted from the requirement to have their photograph taken.

In December 2004, the Identity Cards Programme conducted a special issues research which included individuals from various faith groups. The full results can be found on the website at www.identitycards.gov.uk. However, Muslim and Sikh women expressed concerns about removing their religious garments at an enrolment centre.

A head and shoulders photograph showing features of the face will be included on the card. Regulations about types of photographs will be in line with those currently in place for passports and driving licence photographs. The UK Passport Service exercises its discretion as far as possible. However, the over-riding rule (set by international standards) is that the applicant's photo should show a full face and that all features should be clearly distinguishable.

At some DVLA offices, Muslim women are offered a facility to go to a private office and reveal their face to a female member of staff so that their face can be matched against the photograph. The operation of ID cards will include guidance along these lines to ensure discretion and sensitivity.

Identity Fraud

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the levels of identity fraud in other countries (a) with and (b) without identity cards. [45369]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 24 January 2006]: The most recent study of identity fraud in other countries is contained in the 2002 Cabinet Office publication "Identity Fraud: A Study". This study is available from the publications archive page on the identity cards website—www.identitycards.gov.uk. Chapter 6 summarises the results of research on the extent and nature of identity fraud overseas and action taken to counter identity fraud. The countries examined which had an identity card scheme were, the Netherlands, Belgium, Finland, France, Spain and Germany. The other countries involved were, the USA, Canada, Denmark, Ireland, Australia and New Zealand, all of which do not have identity cards.

One of the main conclusions of the research was that all countries experience difficulty in establishing levels of identity fraud. The research also suggests that countries which use existing identifiers as pseudo "identity numbers", such as the social security number in the USA, encounter many problems with identity fraud and with establishing the validity of the number, not least because it was not intended to be used for the wide variety of purposes that have become commonplace in the absence of a securely issued identity number.

IMPACT

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment has been made of the additional (a) manpower and (b) resources required by police forces in England and Wales to implement and use the IMPACT Nominal Index; what the total cost is of implementing and using the IMPACT Nominal Index in each force; and if he will make a statement; [45280]

(2) what the total cost is of implementing and using the IMPACT Nominal Index in each child abuse investigation unit; and if he will make a statement. [45281]

Hazel Blears: The IMPACT Nominal Index (INI) was delivered to a child abuse investigation unit (CAIU) in each police force in England and Wales on 23 December in accordance with recommendation two of Sir Michael Bichard's report following the murder of the Soham schoolgirls. It is already proving its value to the police service in enabling officers to establish whether other forces hold relevant information on people of interest to them.

There is currently no available information on the overall cost to forces of using and implementing the system, though an evaluation of the way in which it is used and the resource consequences is in hand. However, preliminary modelling carried out by the IMPACT Programme last year indicated that using the system and responding to requests for information generated by users in other forces could theoretically require up to 600 staff costing around £11 million per annum across the 43 forces if the INI was deployed to, and used to its full extent by, all CAIUs. For this reason, the INI is being gradually deployed to forces over an extended period to allow for the evaluation of the consequential demands.

Most of the other costs associated with developing and deploying the INI have been borne centrally.

IRA Deaths (Gibraltar)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the SAS soldiers responsible for the deaths of three IRA terrorists in Gibraltar in 1998 could face charges as a result of (a) the ruling of the European Court of Human Rights on 4 May 2001 and (b) the historic investigations by the Royal Military Police and Police Service of Northern Ireland. [32651]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 28 November 2005]: I have been asked to reply.

The ruling of the European Court of Human Rights on 4 May 2001 relating to deaths in Northern Ireland involving the security forces found that the United Kingdom failed in those cases to meet its obligations to secure the right to life in Article 2 of the European Convention of Human Rights. Objections similar to those raised in the ruling of 4 May 2001 were made to the investigation and inquest into the deaths of the three IRA terrorists in Gibraltar, but the inquest jury decided by a majority that the deaths were lawful. I understand that the Gibraltar case does not come within the remit of the historic inquiry team of the Police Service of Northern Ireland, which is to review unresolved deaths that took place in Northern Ireland only. Furthermore, the Royal Military Police is not investigating these deaths.

IT Systems

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the performance of the Libra IT system; and if he will make a statement. [42637]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

There are two distinct parts to the Libra IT system. Libra Office Automation has provided infrastructure and modern office automation services, including e-mail, word and internet access, to more than 12,000 users in magistrates courts since 2003. The system consistently exceeds performance levels for availability.

The Libra case management application has been subject to a rigorous process of system testing and user acceptance testing, which commenced in April 2005. The application is currently in live operation at Kingston magistrates court and in trial operation at a further three pilot sites to ensure that a robust solution is delivered prior to commitment to national rollout.

Khat

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will add khat to the list of substances controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. [43565]

Paul Goggins: No. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced in Parliament on 19 January that he had accepted the advice of the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs that khat should not be controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971.

Life Sentences

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time served in prison by offenders given a life sentence was between 1976 and 1995. [43131]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the length of time served for those released in 1994 to 2004 can be found in table 10.5 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin 17/05: Offender Management Caseload Statistics, England and Wales, 2004, published on 16 December 2005, and also available on the Home Office website.

For the equivalent information for the years 1983 to 1993, see table 8.5 in Prison Statistics, England and Wales, 1993, Cm. 2893; for the years 1978 to 1988 see table 8.5 in Prison Statistics, England and Wales, 1988, Cm. 825. Copies of all these reports can be found in the Library.

Ministerial Visits

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) flights and (b) helicopter flights have been taken by Ministers within his Department for (i) UK and (ii) overseas visits in each year since 1996; on how many occasions (A) charter flights were used and (B) first and club class tickets were obtained; and who accompanied the Ministers on each trip. [27812]

Mr. Charles Clarke: All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are in the Library.

In respect of overseas travel by Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The list indicates when non-scheduled flights were used, and shows how many officials accompanied Ministers in those circumstances. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Library. These report information reaching back to 1995–96. Information for 2005–06 will be published after the end of the financial year.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions on which he and the Ministers in his Department have undertaken overseas visits in the course of their ministerial duties since 1 January 2005; and what the (a) purpose and (b) duration was of each visit. [44967]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In respect of overseas travel by Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of the lists are available in the Library. These report information reaching back to 1995–96. Information for 2005–06 will be published after the end of the financial year.

All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Library.

National Policing Agency

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from police forces and police authorities requesting the establishment of a national policing agency dedicated to countering terrorism and domestic extremism. [40557]

Hazel Blears: No official representations have been made by either police forces or police authorities requesting the establishment of a national policing agency dedicated to countering terrorism and domestic extremism.

There are appropriate regional and national CT structures in place to combat the terrorist threat. The Association of Chief Police Officers' Committee on Terrorism and Allied Matters sets policy and strategic direction for counter terrorism policing at a national level. Police counter-terrorist efforts are co-ordinated regionally and nationally through the Regional Intelligence Cells, the work of the National Coordinator of Special Branch and the National Coordinator of Terrorist Investigations while ensuring that force special branches maintain the essential link to local policing and local communities. The Metropolitan Police Service also has national counter terrorism responsibilities including a number of specialist units which provide support to forces. As with other aspects of policing, these structures are kept under constant review.

National Wildlife Crime Intelligence Unit

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future of the National Wildlife Crime Intelligence Unit after the establishment of the Serious Organised Crime Agency. [45846]

Paul Goggins: As wildlife crime does not fit within the remit of the Serious Organised Crime Agency, discussions are currently taking place in order to find a long-term location for the National Wildlife Crime Intelligence Unit, so that it can continue its valuable work in the future.

Police

Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many business plans for police forces in Wales were received by 21 December 2005. [41835]

Hazel Blears: A joint submission from all four Welsh forces was received on 23 December 2005.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the allocation was of (a) police officers and (b) civilian police staff in each of the three basic command units in the Cambridgeshire constabulary area in (i) 2002–03, (ii) 2003–04 and (iii) 2004–05. [45464]

Hazel Blears: The available information relating to the numbers of police officers in each basic command unit (BCD) within Cambridgeshire police force area, is provided in the following table.

Information on the allocation of police staff in each BCD within Cambridgeshire has not been published as this figure cannot be disaggregated from other police support staff groups. As at 31 March 2003 Cambridgeshire had 786 police staff, as at 31 March 2004 this was 838 and as at 31 March 2005 this was 832.

Police strength (full-time equivalents)[1] in Cambridgeshire, by basic command unit (BCU) and year

[1] Contains full-time equivalen[illegible] have been rounded to the nearest whole number. Beca[illegible]ng, there may be an apparent discrepancy between to[illegible] the sums of the constituent items.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library copies of the business plans and implementation plans he has received relating to police force restructuring. [44279]

Hazel Blears: No. As part of the process for determining viable options, police forces and authorities have submitted detailed and sensitive data on protective services. I will not be placing this information in the Library although some of this may be available directly from forces and authorities.

Policy Reviews

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the policy reviews his Department has conducted in each year since 1997. [44329]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department maintains all of its key policies under review. In 2004 the Department used this ongoing review work to inform Confident Communities in a Secure Britain, which sets out the Department's policy priorities until 2008. The Department has subsequently published 'Controlling our Borders: Making Migration Work for Britain' and, in conjunction with the Department of Constitutional Affairs and Office of the Attorney-General, Cutting Crime, Delivering Justice, setting out our respective five-year strategic visions on asylum and immigration and criminal justice. Copies of these documents are available on the Home Office websites (www.homeoffice.gov.uk; www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk).

In addition, the Department monitors the functioning of its policies. Key policies and reviews which are publicly disclosable are placed on the Department website to enable full public access.

Prisons

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to publish all the data from the Prisons Resettlement Survey 2003. [21787]

Fiona Mactaggart: The key findings from the 2003 resettlement survey were published in February 2005 in "Home Office Research Findings 248". This was published as an online publication and can be found at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/rfpubs1.html

The findings from this survey (and equivalent surveys for 2001 and 2004) form the basis of a reconviction study which is currently being undertaken. This will include an analysis of any association between a range of factors (such as having employment and/or accommodation arranged and having received a visit during custody from a family member or partner) and subsequent proven reoffending. Initial results will be available in early summer, with publication later in the year.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons have a service level agreement; and if he will make a statement. [34320]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Office for Contracted Prisons has performance management responsibilities for the three service level agreement (SLA) prisons (Her Majesty's Prison Blakenhurst, Her Majesty's Prison Buckley Hall and Her Majesty's Prison Manchester) who operate contracts won by the public sector following a commercial tendering process.

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prisoners (i) entering adult prisons and (ii) leaving prison on release from their first sentence and (b) under 21-year-olds entering young offender institutions on their first custodial sentence could not read or write to a sufficiently high standard to apply for a job via a job centre in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [41547]

Phil Hope: I have been asked to reply.

We do not collate the information requested centrally, however Home Office statistics show that 37 per cent. of prisoners have reading skills below level 1. (Prison Statistics for England and Wales 2002).

As a result of learning and skills provision in prisons, the number of basic skills awards achieved by offenders in custody exceeded 63,000 in 2004–05 and the national probation directorate exceeded its annual target for basic skills awards with nearly 9,500 awards achieved by offenders in the community.

The Green Paper, "Reducing Re-offending through Skills and Employment" (Cm 6702) launched by Ruth Kelly on 15 December, set out the Government's strategy to improve the skills and job prospects of all offenders, so that more offenders secure employment in order to reduce reoffending.

Prostitution

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) cases have been reported and (b) persons have been prosecuted for employing a prostitute (i) under the age of consent and (ii) who has no right to work in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years for which information is available. [45711]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 26 January 2006]: Prior to the Sexual Offences Act 2003 coming into force the relevant offences were related to brothel keeping and living on the earnings of a prostitute. The 2003 Act introduced a new offence relating to the abuse of children through prostitution and pornography. The available statistics are set out in the table, but it is not possible to break them down in terms of the age or immigration status of the victim.

Recorded offences

	Exploitation of prostitution[1]	Abuse of children through prostitution or pornography[2]

2002–03	127	n/a
2003–04	183	n/a
2004–05	117	98

[1] Keeping a brothel is a summary offence and not included in the recorded crime series. The exploitation of prostitution group includes living on immoral earnings.

[2] The Sexual Offences Act 2003 came into force in 2004.

Racial and Religious Hatred Bill

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the role of the Attorney-General in relation to prosecutions under the Racial and Religious Hatred Bill. [46020]

Paul Goggins: The requirement for the Attorney-General to give his consent to any prosecution brought under the provisions of the Racial and Religious Hatred Bill is something that has been raised on a number of occasions during the passage of the Bill through Parliament. The Home Office has also received a considerable number of letters about this provision from MPs and members of the public.

The Government believe the need for the consent of the Attorney-General for prosecutions to proceed is an important safeguard that will help to prevent spurious and vexatious cases coming to court. This provision already applies to the existing offence of incitement to racial hatred.

Railway Enthusiasts (Anti-terrorism Legislation)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Transport and (b) the British Transport Police on the application of anti-terrorism legislation to the activities of railway enthusiasts who choose to photograph trains and stations. [43446]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The application of anti-terrorism legislation in relation to rail enthusiasts is not an issue that has been raised in discussions between myself, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport or the British Transport Police.

Rail enthusiasts can be a valuable asset in the fight against terrorism. They have experience and knowledge of the railway system that can enable them to identify anything suspicious or out of the ordinary. All members of the public are encouraged to be vigilant and report any such concerns to the police.

The use of anti-terrorist powers should always be an appropriate and proportionate response to the threat. That threat remains real and serious, and in the light of the terrorist attacks on seven and 21 July last year, it is quite right that the police should take every measure to safeguard security around our transport infrastructure. While the police do not target the use of anti-terrorist powers against rail enthusiasts, photographing trains and railway stations can be an indicator of possible hostile terrorist reconnaissance and officers who encounter such activity may deem it appropriate to use stop and search powers under the Terrorism Act 2000, when appropriate.

Rape

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the level of specialist services available to rape victims. [45745]

Paul Goggins: The Government are currently conducting a mapping exercise of specialist support services for victims of sexual violence in England and Wales. Over the last two years £4 million from the Home Office Victims Fund has been used to support the development of sexual assault referral centres and strengthen specialist voluntary sector services for victims of sexual violence. A further £1.25 million will be made available for voluntary sector sexual violence services in 2006–07.

Rates

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid by the National Offender Management Service in rates to each relevant local authority in the UK in 2004–05; and how much was paid (a) in each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (b) in London. [39116]

Fiona Mactaggart: The rates paid by the Prison Service in England and Wales in 2004–05 was £25,504,569.79 and is shown as follows by:

Country

English regions

Billing authority

London figures are included under English regions. Wales is not divided into regions.

The total rates paid by the Probation Services in England and Wales in 2004–05 were £8,209,424.33.

Probation rates are shown as follows by:

three probation divisions (represent separate contractual regions for estate management and facilities management services)

10 NOMS regions

Probation Board (42 boards across England and Wales)

London figures are included under board and region (identical breakdown).

Rental Costs

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid in rent for properties by the National Offender Management Service in 2004–05 (a) in total, (b) in each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) in London. [39175]

Fiona Mactaggart: The total rent paid by the Prison Service in England and Wales in 2004–05 was £3,957,000. This is broken down by region. The Prison Service does not pay any rent in respect of its London headquarters buildings as these are part of the former Common User Estate owned by the Home Office. Rents paid to other Government Departments have been excluded.

The SW region includes the rent paid for the Weare mooring.

The total rent paid by the Probation Services in England and Wales in 2004–05 was £14,958,782.38.

Reoffending Rates

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reoffending rate was for individuals serving (a) custodial sentences and (b) community service orders in (i) England, (ii) the West Midlands and (iii) Tamworth constituency in 2004–05. [37830]

Fiona Mactaggart: Reoffending rates are not currently available on a regional basis.

National reoffending rates are published in 'Adult reoffending: results from the 2002 cohort'. Home Office Statistical Bulletin 25/05'. This is available on the Home Office's website, http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/hosbpubs1.html.

Security Clearance

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Ms L.W., of Chillington in Totnes constituency, will receive the confirmation of security clearance to commence duties as an higher executive officer with the Home Office; and for what reasons there has been the delay since (a) she was offered the position on 23 August and (b) human resources department confirmed her clearance to the hon. Member for Totnes in October. [32149]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The delay between 22 August and 24 October was largely because Ms L.W.'s application was temporarily misplaced within the Human Resources Directorate of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND). The team dealing with the application were, at the time, processing an exceptionally large number of applications. Ms L.W. was granted provisional clearance on 24 October to enable her to take up her post in IND on a conditional basis. Ms L.W. was placed on the next available training course which began on Monday 28 November. Ms L.W.'s necessary pre-employment checks have now been completed and she has been informed of this.

Substance Abuse Offences

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 26 October 2005 to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam, Official Report, column 406W, on substance abuse offences, how many people in the South West region were convicted for (a) drunkenness, (b) driving after consuming alcohol or taking drugs and (c) causing death by dangerous driving when under the influence of drink or drugs in (i) 2003, (ii) 2004 and (iii) 2005. [45250]

Paul Goggins: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of persons convicted for drunkenness, driving after consuming alcohol or taking drugs and causing death by dangerous driving when under the influence of drink or drugs in the South West region, 2003–04 is given in the following table. Court statistics for 2005 will be available in the autumn.

Number of offenders found guilty at all courts for various offences in the South West region, 2003 and 2004[1]

[4] Includes offences under sections 4(1),4(2), 5(1)(a), 5(1)(b), 6(4) and 7(6) Road traffic Act 1988

[5] Includes offences under Road Traffic Act 1988 S.1 as added by Road Traffic Act 1991 S.1 and Road Traffic Act 1988 S.3A as added by Road Traffic Act 1991 S.3 and amended by Criminal Justice Act 1993 S.6

Tasers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances tasers have been fired in each police constabulary in England. [44421]

Hazel Blears: I have indicated to the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) that I am content for taser to be made available to Authorised Firearms Officers as a less lethal option for use in situations where a firearms authority has been granted alongside conventional firearms.

Authorised Firearms Officers (AFOs) are, in accordance with the ACPO Manual of Guidance on Police Use of Firearms, issued with firearms where the authorising officer has reason to suppose that they, in the course of their duty, may have to protect themselves or others from a person who is:

in possession of a firearm, or has immediate access to a firearm, or is otherwise so dangerous that the officer's use of a firearm may be necessary.

Telephone Tapping

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) discussions his Department has had and (b) research he has commissioned on changing the policy on tapping right hon. and hon. Members' telephone lines; and if he will make a statement. [45847]

Mr. Charles Clarke: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister informed Parliament on 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 173WS, the Government are considering advice from the Interception of Communications Commissioner on this matter. I and my officials have been consulted as part as this process. I have not commissioned any research.

Under-age Drinking

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) businesses and (b) individuals were prosecuted for supplying alcohol to youths under the age of 18 years in (i) England, (ii) Lancashire and (iii) West Lancashire constituency in each of the past five years. [45150]

Paul Goggins: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform for the number of (a) businesses and (b) individuals prosecuted for supplying alcohol to youths under the age of 18 years in (i) England, (ii) Lancashire in each of the past five years is shown in the table.

The offence of selling alcohol to persons aged under 18 years of age was introduced to the penalty notice for disorder scheme from 1 November 2004 aimed at staff working in licensed premises found to commit this offence. Data from 2004 and provisional data from January to September 2005 showing the number of Penalty Notices for Disorder (PND) issued for the sale of alcohol to persons under the age of 18 are provided in the following table.

It is not possible to identify those prosecuted or issued with PNDs in the West Lancashire constituency because centrally available data is not broken down to that level of detail.

The Licensing Act 2003 came into force on 24 November 2005. Data for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

Defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts for offences relating to the sale of alcohol to underage persons in (i) England, and (ii) Lancashire, 2000 to 2004 1

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Solicitor-General (1) on how many occasions the Law Officer's Department have consulted citizens' juries on departmental polices in the last five years; [46194]

(2) on how many occasions the Law Officer's policy has been changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens' jury in the last five years; [46195]

(3) on how many occasions when a citizens' jury has been consulted by the Law Officers' Department the recommendations of the jury have differed from existing departmental policy. [46196]

The Solicitor-General: None of my Departments have consulted citizens' juries over the last five years and no changes have been made to departmental policies to reflect recommendations from citizens' juries

Law Officers (Castle Point)

Bob Spink: To ask the Solicitor-General how many staff employed by the Law Officers live in Castle Point. [42822]

The Solicitor-General: The Serious Fraud Office, the Treasury Solicitor's Department and HMCPS Inspectorate have no records of any staff living in Castle Point.

The number of staff employed by the Crown Prosecution Service and the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office who live in Castle Point is withheld under section 12a. of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Bob Spink: To ask the Solicitor-General what (a) land and (b) property is owned by the Law Officers in Castle Point. [42899]

The Solicitor-General: None of the Law Officers' Departments owns any land or property in the Castle Point.

CABINET OFFICE

Minister Without Portfolio

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster for what reason a Government car has been made available to the Minister without Portfolio. [46953]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Minister without Portfolio has the use of an official car to assist him in executing his Government duties. He uses the car in accordance with the requirements of Travel by Ministers.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Judiciary

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House how many motions calling for the removal of a member of the judiciary were tabled in each session of Parliament since 1976. [47486]

Mr. Hoon: Readily available information indicates six occasions on which a motion for a Humble Address for the removal of a High Court Judge has been tabled since 1976. (No such motion for an Address to remove a judge has been passed in either House since 1830.)

Equivalent information is not available for motions relating to other members of the judiciary. Such motions would not take the form of an Address. Further information can be obtained from the Journal Office.

WALES

Departmental Equipment

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) personal computers, (b) laptops, (c) servers, (d) printers, (e) scanners, (f) photocopiers and (g) fax machine his Department owned in (i) Wales and (ii) each English region in (A) 2003–04 and (B) 2004–05. [40098]

Mr. Hain: In June 2003 the Wales Office became a separate entity within the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA). All computer equipment needs are provided to the Wales Office under DCA's contract with Liberata UK, in line with the Government private finance initiative.

Industrial Heritage Museums

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with (a) the Welsh Assembly Government Minister for Culture and (b) Cadw in respect of opportunities to promote tourism and employment through the establishment of industrial heritage museums. [46564]

Nick Ainger: I have regular discussions with the Assembly Minister for Culture, Welsh Language and Sport about matters affecting his portfolio, which includes responsibility for Cadw.

I share the Assembly Government's recognition of our industrial heritage as a valuable resource for the development of tourism. The "Herian" initiative in South Wales, for example, aims to develop a sustainable approach to interpreting and promoting the area's unique and fascinating industrial heritage for the benefit of visitors and local communities.

RAF St Athan

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what elements made up the £15.9 million spent on land acquisition and development costs at RAF St. Athan since its acquisition by the Welsh Development Agency in 2003. [44849]

Mr. Hain: Wales is home to some major aerospace companies and is therefore well placed to capitalise on the growth in this sector. To that end, the WDA completed the acquisition of a 125-year lease of RAF St. Athan on 14 August 2003 with the objective of redeveloping the site to create a world-class aviation business park.

The acquisition costs include the following elements:

	Acquisition costs (£000)
Purchase of RAF St. Athan site	8,000
Purchase of additional land	3,397
Feasibility studies, fees, works	2,314
Airfield costs	1,551
Remediation and demolitions	675
Total	15,937

Royal Shrewsbury Hospital

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to secure access to the services of the Royal Shrewsbury hospital for Welsh patients. [39892]

Nick Ainger: Responsibility for the provision of health care in Wales rests with the Welsh Assembly Government. I have regular discussions with the Assembly Minister for Health and Social Services, Dr. Brian Gibbons.

From these discussions, I understand that an agreement for treating Welsh patients during 2005–06 is in place between the Royal Shrewsbury and Telford NHS Trust and Powys local health board. Both bodies will ensure that Welsh patients will receive health services when needed.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Antrim Area Hospital (Pain Clinic)

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what additional financial resources have been put in place to provide for referrals to the Pain Clinic, Antrim area hospital in each of the past four years. [46342]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Health and Social Services Board has advised that the following investments have been made on a year on year basis in the pain management service in the United Hospitals Health and Social Services Trust:

	Amount (£)
2002-03	176,000
2003-04	156,000
2004-05	142,000
2005-06	158,000

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) priority and (b) routine referrals have been made for appointments at the Pain Clinic, Antrim area hospital in each of the past four years. [46343]

Mr. Woodward: The total number of referrals (priority and routine) received at Antrim area hospital in each of the last four years is shown in the following table. The outpatient referral system does not provide a breakdown between priority and routine cases at referral stage.

	Total referrals to pain clinic at Antrim area hospital
2002	178
2003	226
2004	253
2005	202

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he plans to introduce to reduce out-patient waiting times for (a) priority and (b) routine appointments at the Pain Clinic, Antrim area hospital; and if he will make a statement. [46344]

Mr. Woodward: I recently announced a total redesign of the way in which out-patient services are delivered to ensure that, by March 2008, no patient will be waiting more than 13 weeks for their out-patient appointment following referral by their GP.

Central to this will be the development of a new range of clinical assessment and diagnostic services—Integrated Clinical Assessment and Treatment Services (ICATS), provided in a variety of primary and secondary care settings. This will ensure that all patients are seen quickly by the most appropriate healthcare professional and will include a range of assessment, treatment, diagnostic and advisory services. Waiting times for pain management services will be addressed with the development of ICATS.

Children and Young People's Funding Package

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) when he will publish for consultation proposals for activities and programmes to be funded under the Children and Young People's funding package announced in Budget and Priorities 2006 to 2008; [45779]

(2) what plans he has to consult directly with (a) children, (b) young people, (c) their families and (d) the wider children's sector on the proposals for the Children and Young People's funding package; [45780]

(3) what equality impact assessment has been made of the Children and Young People's funding proposals; [45781]

(4) what dedicated funding will be made available from the Children and Young People's funding package for (a) children with disabilities, (b) black and minority ethnic children and (c) children with mental health needs; [45782]

(5) how the Children and Young People's funding package interacts with the overarching Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister's Children and Young People's Strategy; [45783]

(6) how he plans to deliver the Children and Young People's funding package; and what steps he will take to ensure that the voluntary and community sector are involved in the delivery process; [45784]

(7) what planning meetings have taken place in respect of Children and Young People's funding in the last 12 months; and which (a) statutory and (b) non-statutory bodies were involved in each meeting. [45785]

Angela E. Smith: The Children's and Young People's Funding Package will be published in the next few weeks. The detailed content of the package will be available then. The package will contain a range of provision to reduce underachievement and improve the life chances of children and young people by enhancing their educational development and fostering their health, well-being and social inclusion through the integrated delivery of the support and services necessary to ensure that every child has the best start in life.

The various elements will be costed and the funding included in the baselines of the Departments which will deliver the elements concerned.

Each element will be subject to appropriate consultation and to equality impact assessments. For the purposes of the package, high-level equality impact assessments (screening) have been conducted.

The Children and Young People's Unit of the Office of the First and Deputy First Minister has been involved throughout to ensure that the package is consistent with the aims of the 10-year Children's Strategy.

Delivery mechanisms for each element of the package will be taken forward separately by the Departments concerned, and each will take appropriate steps to ensure that the voluntary and community sectors are appropriately engaged in the development and delivery of that element.

The Department of Education leads on the Children's and Young People's Funding Package. Planning meetings have been held since 12 October 2005, as follows:

12 October: DE meeting with SoS Special Adviser.

11 November: Department of Education, the Education and Training Inspectorate, the Office of the First and Deputy First Minister, the Department of Social Development, the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure, the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, the Department of Finance and Personnel.

24 November: Department of Education, the Education and Training Inspectorate, the Department of Social Development, the Office of the First and Deputy First Minister, the Department of Social Development, the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure, the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, the Department of Finance and Personnel.

6 December: Department of Education, SoS Special Adviser, Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, Department of Finance and Personnel.

8 December: Department of Education with NI Children's Commissioner.

12 December: Department of Education, SoS Special Adviser, Office of the First and Deputy First Minister, Department of Finance and Personnel.

Crime

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the recorded crime figures for (a) murder, (b) manslaughter, (c) grievous bodily harm, (d) assault, (e) burglary, (f) armed robbery, (g) riotous behaviour and (h) theft in Northern Ireland were in each of the last six years. [44892]

Mr. Woodward: I refer the hon. Member to the Chief Constable's Annual Reports which contain the information requested. These are available on the Police Service of Northern Ireland website at www.psni.police.uk.

Dentistry

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many anaesthetists were available to undertake treatments at the School of Dentistry, Royal Victoria hospital Belfast on the last date for which figures are available. [46520]

Mr. Woodward: There is currently one anaesthetist available for treatment at the School of Dentistry, Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dentists are undergoing special needs training in the School of Dentistry, Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast. [46545]

Mr. Woodward: The responsibility for and expertise in treating patients with special needs rests primarily with the Community Dental Services. Special needs dentistry is soon to become a recognised specialty, but as yet no Royal College Higher Training programme has been developed. In the interim, the eastern health and social services board, in collaboration with the School of Dentistry, has put in place plans to train eight further community dentists in oral surgery skills for special needs patients.

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many special needs patients are on the waiting list for dental treatment at the School of Dentistry, Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast (a) from each health board area and (b) in total. [46547]

Mr. Woodward: The (a) total and (b) numbers broken down by health board, of special needs patients on the waiting list for dental treatment at the school of Dentistry, Royal Victoria hospital, as at 27 January 2006 are shown in the following table:

(b) Health board of residence	Number waiting at 27 January 2006

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many specialist dentists are available to undertake special care treatment at the School of Dentistry, Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast. [46548]

Mr. Woodward: There is currently one specialist dentist who works two sessions per week for special needs treatment at the School of Dentistry, Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people work in each of the directorates within the Northern Ireland Office, broken down by (a) sex and (b) community background. [44513]

Mr. Woodward: The following table shows the composition of the Northern Ireland Office (excluding Agencies) as at 19 January 2006. Gender figures relate to the total Core Department, including NIO staff in London, while community background figures relate only to staff working in Northern Ireland.

	Number
Protestant	453
Roman Catholic	155
Not Determined	49
Total	657
Male	335
Female	405
Total	740

The purpose for collecting this personal data is to enable the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Civil Service to monitor the effectiveness of their policies on equality of opportunity. Such monitoring is not undertaken or appropriate at the level of directorates, branches or offices.

Devolution

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on devolution in Northern Ireland. [43748]

Mr. Hain: On 11 January, in a statement to the House, I made clear that "this Government believes that 2006 can be the year for restoration of the Assembly and will work to that end as a matter of the utmost priority".

Elections to the Northern Ireland Assembly are due in May 2007. In order that those elections are meaningful, we require an Assembly exercising its full responsibilities. The need for progress toward genuine political engagement is urgent.

2006 can and must be a year of historic progress in Northern Ireland. It must be a year in which we see a fully inclusive, power-sharing Executive restored so that locally elected politicians can take the decisions that affect the everyday lives of the people of Northern Ireland.

Digital Hearing Aids

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients were awaiting the supply of new digital hearing aids in each of the health and social services board areas on the last date for which figures are available. [46337]

Mr. Woodward: Information is currently available in respect of the northern and southern health and social services boards only. At 30 September 2005, there were 272 people in the northern health and social services board area, and 1,437 people in the southern health and social services board area, who were waiting for a digital hearing aid to be fitted.

Information is not currently available in respect of the eastern and western health and social services boards. I will write to the hon. Member with the relevant information as soon as it is available and place a copy in the Library.

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent steps have been taken to improve the provision of digital hearing aids in each of the health and social services board areas. [46338]

Mr. Woodward: Direct referral by a GP to an audiology clinic is being piloted in a number of health and social services trusts in order to reduce waiting times for those awaiting an assessment for a digital hearing aid.

The Department is also considering the feasibility of implementing direct referrals to all health and social services trusts. However, any new proposals will be determined on the basis of what best meets the clinical requirements of individual patients.

A departmental led group focussing on the modernisation of audiology services will be established in the near future, as part of a review of physical and sensory disability policy. This group will be tasked with making recommendations in respect of further improving current service provision and reducing waiting times.

Long-term Unemployment

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to encourage small businesses to recruit long-term unemployed people from disadvantaged communities; and if he will make a statement. [46341]

Angela E. Smith: Following the Taskforce Report on Employability and Long Term Unemployment, the Department for Employment and Learning created a number of targeted initiatives in the most disadvantaged areas (characterised by low employment and high social deprivation) of West Belfast, Greater Shankill, Londonderry (both Foyle and Waterside) and Strabane.

The component parts of targeted initiatives are a stakeholders forum, employers forum, a transitional employment programme and job assist centres. As part of the Targeted Initiatives programme, employment liaison officers in the Department of Employment and Learning engage with employers to assist with employment issues and match long term unemployed clients with job opportunities.

Invest NI may also include a condition, when offering assistance to larger client companies, setting a target to recruit a percentage of workers from programmes such as new deal and bridge to employment.

Meals on Wheels

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the level of meals on wheels service provision is in each of the Health and Social Services Board areas; and what the cost of such provision was in each of the board areas, in each of the past three years. [46339]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the cost of meals and numbers of meals provided[1] is shown in the table, for the position during the financial year 2003–04, the latest year for which such information is available. Information for previous years is not available on a comparable basis. The information is shown according to Health and Social Services Trust, as the analysis is not available by Board area.[2] The latest available information on number of recipients, shown in the table, is for the position at 31 March 2005.

[1] Information relates to all meals provided, including frozen meals (cook/chill meals service), and not only to meals on wheels. Armagh and Dungannon HSS Trust does not provide a meals service of this kind.

[2] Information is not available by Board area, as the information is collected according to Trust. Some Trusts may provide a meals service to recipients outside their area.

Mobile Phone Tracking

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether technology is available to the Police Service of Northern Ireland to allow it to use mobile phone tracking to pursue investigations into (a) missing persons and (b) missing persons believed to be underwater. [46817]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Service of Northern Ireland utilises the same technology as is available in the rest of the United Kingdom. Its use is governed by the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 (RIPA).

Section 4.1 of the RIPA Codes of Practice for Communications outlines special rules for matters of public interest in relations to deaths, serious injuries and vulnerable persons allowing police to obtain billing, incoming call data and cell site analysis. In 'life at risk' cases, this can be done immediately. Results will depend on the network coverage in the area, whether the phone is switched off or on and the technology available to each individual service provider.

With regard to a missing person underwater, the same technology can be applied as outlined above. Its effectiveness would depend on whether the mobile phone had been rendered inoperable by immersion in water.

Physiotherapy

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were on waiting lists for physiotherapy treatment in each of the health board areas on the last date for which figures are available. [46518]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the number of people on waiting lists for physiotherapy treatment is not collected centrally. However, information is collected centrally on completed waiting times for a first out-patient appointment of an episode of care with a community physiotherapist. The total number of persons attending their first out-patient appointment, and their waiting times are shown in the following table. The table contains information for the quarter ending 30 September 2005 (the latest date for which such information is available). Of the 18,373 persons who attended their first out-patient appointment, 3,143 (17 per cent.) had waited for between three and six months and a further 1,157 (6 per cent.) had waited for six months or more.

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the possible impact of the cancellation of the physiotherapy degree course for 2005–06 at the University of Ulster on physiotherapy waiting lists in Northern Ireland. [46690]

Mr. Woodward: Entry to the Physiotherapy degree course at the University of Ulster is being deferred for the academic year 2006–07. This decision is part of a phased move to change the duration of the course from four years to three years, which is in line with courses in England, Wales and Scotland. Plans have been put in place to ensure that there will be no year without a supply of graduates available for employment in the Health and Personal Social Services.

Police Officers (Criminal Convictions)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police officers serving in the Police Service of Northern Ireland have criminal convictions broken down by rank; and if he will make a statement. [44564]

Mr. Woodward: At present 200 officers remain in the PSNI with convictions. The breakdown by rank is as follows:

	Number
Sergeant	19
Constable	148
Reserve officer full-time	28
Reserve officer part-time	5

The majority of the offences concerned are traffic offences. People with serious criminal or terrorist backgrounds are not considered suitable to serve in the police service.

Prisoners (Nationality)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many and what percentage of (a) female and (b) male prisoners in Northern Ireland are citizens of the Irish Republic; [46543]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1588W, on Male Prisoners (Nationality), whether the statistics provided omit prisoners of Irish nationality; and if he will make a statement. [46660]

Mr. Woodward: Upon committal each prisoner is required to record whether they are from Great Britain, Northern Ireland, the Republic of Ireland or Other (another country).

However, as the Belfast Agreement recognises the birthright of all the people of Northern Ireland to identify themselves as Irish or British, or both, as they may so choose, it is not possible to state definitively how many prisoners have "Irish nationality".

Nationality details provided in my answer of 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1588W, refer only to those who stated their nationality was "other".

Sexual Health

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many girls in Northern Ireland aged (a) 16, (b) 15, (c) 14 and (d) 13 years have been given (i) oral contraception and (ii) contraceptive implants on the NHS in each of the last five years. [46457]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not available.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how funding has been allocated through the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy 2002 07; and how the allocated money has been spent by (a) the Department and (b) boards in preparation for the final publicatron of the Sexual Health Promotion Strategy and Action Plan. [46460]

Mr. Woodward: In 2002 03 the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety allocated £300,000 to voluntary and community organisations for projects dealing with issues around teenage pregnancy. In addition, the Department allocated funding to health and social services boards, on a capitation basis, to take forward work on the Teenage Pregnancy and Parenthood Strategy and Action Plan as follows:

2003 04	400,000
2004 05	300,000
2005 06	400,000

Boards spent the allocated funding on a range of programmes and initiatives which can broadly be grouped under the headings of public information awareness, education, training, services and support. Examples include leaflets and tool kits, parenting and craft classes, promotional materials, young mums' clinics, family planning and women's aid.

The Sexual Health Promotion Strategy and Action Plan is the subject of separate funding arrangements. In 2005 06, a total of £325,000 was allocated to boards for work on sexual health promotion.

Single Equality Bill

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on (a) the status of and (b) results of consultation upon the Single Equality Bill. [47479]

Angela E. Smith: A summary of the responses to the consultation on the Single Equality Bill, which ended in November 2004, was published in March 2005.

Having met with political parties over the summer, work is on-going and is being fully informed by all the responses received.

Speech Therapy

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were on waiting lists for speech therapy in each of the (a) health boards and (b) education and library boards on the last date for which figures are available. [46517]

Mr. Woodward: Children with speech and language therapy requirements, as part of their Statements of Special Educational Needs, are referred to the Health and Social Services Trusts for therapeutic provision. Education and Library Boards do not separately keep waiting lists for this provision.

Information on the number of people awaiting speech therapy assessment in Health and Social Services Boards is not collected centrally. However, information is collected centrally on completed waiting times for a first out-patient appointment of an episode of care with a community speech and language therapist. The following table contains information for the quarter ending 30 September 2005 (the latest date for which such information is available) and shows that, of the 2,939 persons who attended their first out-patient appointment, 638 (22 per cent.) had waited for between three and six months, and a further 119 (4 per cent.) had waited for six months or more.

Suspicious Deaths

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many suspicious deaths have occurred in Northern Ireland over each of the last seven years; and in how many such cases nobody has been found guilty. [43753]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Service of Northern Ireland have advised that their interpretation of 'suspicious death' is murder and manslaughter. I would refer the hon. Member to the Chief Constable's Annual Reports, which contain statistics for these offences along with details of clearance rates. These reports are available on the PSNI website www.psni.police.uk

Waiting Times

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what initiatives have been introduced to reduce waiting times for out-patient appointments across health and personal social services. [46345]

Mr. Woodward: I recently announced a total redesign of the way in which out-patient services are delivered to ensure that, by March 2008, no patient will be waiting more than 13 weeks for their out-patient appointment following referral by their GP.

Central to this will be the development of a new range of clinical assessment and diagnostic services—Integrated Clinical Assessment and Treatment Services (ICATS), provided in a variety of primary and secondary care settings. This will ensure that all patients are seen quickly by the most appropriate healthcare professional and will include a range of assessment, treatment, diagnostic and advisory services. A new Electronic Referrals Management System is being established to support ICATS and to ensure that patients have a central point of contact and will be informed of the next step in their treatment within five days of being referred by a GP.

The way in which out-patient waiting lists are managed and monitored is also being improved. Partial booking systems are already being implemented in all out-patient specialties and Out-patient Improvement Managers are being put in place in all trusts to ensure that services are more responsive to patients' needs.

Water Supply

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many households in Northern Ireland are not connected to the mains water supply, broken down by constituency. [45482]

Mr. Woodward: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan, dated 30 January 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about how many households in Northern Ireland are not connected to the mains water supply, broken down by constituency (45482). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

It is estimated that less than 1 per cent. of households in Northern Ireland are not connected to the public water supply. Water Service does not, at present, have a database of all household customers connected to mains water and cannot therefore supply the information on a constituency basis. However, a comprehensive customer database is currently being developed in preparation for the proposed introduction of domestic charging from April 2007 and this will identify any households not connected to the public water supply.

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the cost of completing the connection of all households in Northern Ireland to the mains water supply. [45483]

Mr. Woodward: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan, dated 30 January 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question if he will estimate the cost of completing the connection of all households in Northern Ireland to the mains water supply (45483). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

It is estimated that less than 1 per cent. of households in Northern Ireland are currently not served by the public water supply and connecting all these, wholly at the public expense, could cost up to £20 million.

While Water Service currently has a duty to provide water services, it is not required to do anything which is not practicable at a reasonable cost. For this reason, Water Service has always operated a policy of reasonable cost allowances for the purpose of determining whether applications for first time services can be fully met at public expense. The allowances for watermain schemes are £5,000 for properties, which were occupied and on which rates were being paid on or before 31 May 2000, and £2,900 for other properties. The higher reasonable cost allowance for existing properties not connected to the public watermain reflects the importance attached to reducing the number of such properties. The policy provides Water Service with an objective mechanism to consider applications for new water services in a consistent and equitable manner. The policy seeks to strike a balance between the interests of householders and taxpayers, within the context of resources made available for water services.

Where the cost of providing a first-time service exceeds the total reasonable cost allowance, Water Service will proceed with the scheme if he householders who will benefit from the scheme agree to meet the balance.

TREASURY

Basic Bank Accounts

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have taken up basic bank accounts in the UK since they were introduced; and what percentage of all UK personal bank accounts are basic bank accounts. [45900]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government does not collect data on the numbers of basic bank accounts. The latest data from the British Bankers Association show that between April 2003 and September 2005, a net total of 1.52 million basic bank accounts were opened (1.96 million opened and 0.44 million closed). Over the same period, a net total of 6 million accounts that offer withdrawals on demand were opened so 25 per cent. of all accounts offering withdrawal on demand opened between April 2003 and September 2005 were basic bank accounts.

Bio-fuel Discounts

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the legal basis is for HM Revenue and Customs' policy of restricting bio-fuel discounts to producers who use transesterification processes for production. [45805]

John Healey: Fuel produced from vegetable oil is eligible for the rate of duty for biodiesel (currently 27.10 pence per litre) if it meets the legal definition of biodiesel for tax purposes set out in section 2AA of the Hydrocarbon Oil Duties Act 1979. In other cases, it is liable to duty at the main road fuel rate, currently at 47.10 pence per litre, as has been the case since Royal Assent to the Finance Act 2002.

Capital Gains Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether a domestic property that pays business rates, in addition to council tax, due to a householder working at home, may be liable for capital gains tax on sale of the property. [46962]

Dawn Primarolo: Business rates, council tax and capital gains tax liabilities are assessed on different criteria. Gains made on the disposal of a main home are generally exempt from capital gains tax. Full relief may also be available where partial business use has been made of a property, depending on the facts of the individual case.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to his Department of sending Christmas cards in 2005. [45927]

John Healey: The cost to the Treasury of purchasing official Christmas cards for Christmas 2005 was £7,532 plus VAT, including envelopes. The Treasury purchases its Christmas cards from the charity Card Aid, who will make a donation of £2,126 from the cost of 2005 cards to the Disasters Emergency Committee on behalf of the Treasury. Information on the cost of posting Christmas cards is not available. All expenditure incurred on official Christmas cards is made in accordance with the principle of propriety set out in Government Accounting.

Cole Layer Trumble

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department have had with the company, Cole Layer Trumble, or their representatives, in the last five years. [47026]

Dawn Primarolo: So far as I am aware, no meetings involving Treasury Ministers or officials have been held with Cole Layer Trumble or their representatives. Staff of the Valuation Office Agency, an Executive Agency of Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs, have had regular liaison with representatives of Cole Layer Trumble during development of the Agency's Automated Valuation Model (AVM).

Data Protection Act

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the types of data (a) HM Revenue and Customs and (b) the Valuation Office Agency is permitted to hold under the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1998. [47027]

Dawn Primarolo: The types of data that HMRC and the Valuation Office Agency hold and process under the provisions of the Data Protection Act are detailed in their notification to the Information Commissioner. This is on the Information Commissioner's public register held on his website under registration number Z9034158.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the items valued at over £100 that have been reported as stolen from Treasury buildings in the past 12 months. [43441]

John Healey: Three laptop computers were reported as stolen during 2005.

EU Budget

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the estimated (a) net and (b) gross contribution to the EU to be paid by the UK will be in (i) 2007, (ii) 2008, (iii) 2009 and (iv) 2010 following decisions at the recent summit. [40045]

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value of (a) the UK's gross contribution to the EU including overseas aid spending, (b) the UK abatement, (c) UK receipts of EU spending and (d) the UK net contribution to the EU budget will be in constant pound terms in each year from 2007 to 2013 under the recently agreed budget. [40951]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 9 January 2006]: Based on the European Commission's forecasts and assumptions, and using the Financial Perspective table agreed on 17 December 2005, Treasury estimates for the UK's gross contribution to the EC budget, the abatement, UK receipts and the UK net contribution to the EC budget are:

£ billion 2004 prices (payments)

	Gross contribution before abatement	Abatement	Receipts	Net contribution
2007	-14.2	3.9	5.6	-4.7
2008	-14.6	4.6 / 4.7	5.2	-4.6 / -4.7
2009	-13.7	4.8 / 4.9	4.2	-4.6 / -4.7
2010	-14.4	3.8 / 3.9	4.6	-6.0 / -6.1
2011-13	-14.1 / -14.5	3.5 / 4.1	4.2	-6.0 / -6.8

As the Prime Minister said in his statement to the House on 19 December, while the UK's net contribution will rise over the next financing period compared to 2000-06, France and Italy's contribution will rise twice as fast. The abatement will also rise, not fall.

The UK's actual financing share, receipts and abatement are all dependent on a number of variables, including the actual rate of spending in each policy area in each member state, and the pound-euro exchange rate.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his estimate is of the (a) net and (b) gross contributions France will make to the European Union during the next budget cycle; [40546]

(2) what his estimate is of the (a) gross and (b) net contributions per head of population for each household in the United Kingdom to the European Union during the next budget cycle. [40547]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Based on the European Commission's forecasts and assumptions, and using the Financial Perspective table agreed on 17 December 2005, Treasury estimates for France and the UK's net and gross contributions to the EC budget are:

2004 prices (payments)

2007-13	Total (€ billion) Gross contribution after abatement	Total (€ billion) Net contribution	Per capita (€) Gross contribution after abatement	Per capita (€) Net contribution
France	-135.2 / -134.9	-48.7 / -48.3	-2,242 / -2,236	-808 / -801
UK	-102.6 / -104.0	-56.1 / -57.5	-1,702 / -1,725	-930 / -954

The UK's actual financing share, receipts and abatement are all dependent on a number of variables, including the actual rate of spending in each policy area in each member state, and the pound-euro exchange rate.

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to enable the House to vote on a motion to approve the recently agreed changes in the UK rebate from the EU budget. [46226]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The changes to the financing of the EC budget agreed at the December European Council, including the change to the application of the UK abatement in respect of expenditure in the new member states of the European Union, will be incorporated in a new EU 'own resources decision'. This decision will in due course require ratification by each member state. In the UK this will be by means of a European Communities (Finance) Bill, which will be primary legislation subject to the usual procedures and will be brought forward as parliamentary time allows.

European Commissioner for Trade

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what dates he has held meetings with the European Commissioner for Trade since October 2004; [47429]

(2) what telephone conversations he has held with the European Commissioner for Trade since October 2004. [47430]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Treasury Ministers and officials have conversations and discussions with a wide range of organisations and individuals as part of the process of policy development, analysis and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of every such discussion.

European Court of Justice

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Court of Justice's preliminary rulings on the acts referred to in Article 35 of the Treaty on European Union, as referred to in Official Journal L327 of 14 December 2005. [46485]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I have been asked to reply.

Article 35 of the Treaty on European Union (within Title VI of that Treaty, on Police and Judicial Co-operation in Criminal Matters) provides that the European Court of Justice may have jurisdiction to give preliminary rulings on certain questions referred to it by domestic courts in the member states. Member states can choose whether or not to accept such jurisdiction by declaration.

The notice in the Official Journal to which the hon. Member refers lists those member states which have made such a declaration. The United Kingdom has not made such a declaration.

Financial Services Authority

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff have been employed by the Financial Services Authority in each year since its creation. [45568]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is an operational matter for the FSA. I understand that the Chairman of the FSA will write to the hon. Member directly.

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the service offered by the Financial Services Authority (FSA) to professionals seeking guidance and interpretation of FSA rules and guidelines; and if he will make a statement. [45573]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The matters raised in this question are the responsibility of the Financial Services Authority (FSA), whose day-to-day operations are independent from Government control and influence.

However, as part of the Treasury's Two-Year Review of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (FSMA), the FSA has improved its provision of advice and guidance. The FSA Contact Centre remit has been extended to cover large firms in addition to consumers and small firms. All calls and correspondence received through the Contact Centres are subject to revised service standards with tracking and delivery mechanisms to ensure that these standards are delivered consistently. Finally, public reporting against all service standards is moving to a bi-annual basis.

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the authorisation procedure operated by the Financial Services Authority for the authorisation of (a) individuals and (b) institutions to offer financial advice; and if he will make a statement. [45656]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have made no such assessment. This is an operational matter for the FSA, and its authorisation procedure is published on its website at www.fsa.gov.uk/Pages/doing/how/index.shtml.

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many applications from (a) individuals and (b) institutions for authorisation to issue financial advice have been received by the Financial Services Authority in each year since its creation; and how many in each category were successful. [45662]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is an operational matter for the FSA. The Chairman of the FSA will write to the hon. Member directly.

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes the Financial Services Authority plans to make to the fees it levies; and if he will make a statement. [45824]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is an operational matter for the FSA. I understand that the chairman of the FSA will write to the hon. Member directly.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the Financial Services Authority budget was spent on (a) financial capability and (b) staff entertainment in (i) 2001, (ii) 2002, (iii) 2003 and (iv) 2004. [46216]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is an operational matter for the FSA. I understand that the Chairman of the FSA will shortly write to the hon. Member directly about this matter.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Financial Services Authority has raised through fines of financial services companies in each year since its inception. [46217]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is an operational matter for the FSA. I understand that the Chairman of the FSA will shortly write to the hon. Member directly about this matter.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Financial Services Authority spent on engagement with (a) local councils and (b) devolved administrations in each of the last three years. [46219]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is an operational matter for the FSA. I understand that the Chairman of the FSA will shortly write to the hon. Member directly about this matter.

HM Revenue and Customs

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the number of staff required to provide a walk-in service for HM Revenue and Customs on the Isle of Wight following the proposed closure of the Newport office. [46177]

Dawn Primarolo: The lease at 33 St. James Street, Newport, Isle of Wight will expire on 24 March 2006, although HMRC occupation of the building has been extended until 31 May 2006.

HMRC will continue to provide a face-to-face service for its customers on the Isle of Wight and new premises are being sought for the Enquiry Centre. The Isle of Wight Enquiry Centre is currently staffed by the equivalent of 6.68 full-time staff; there are no plans to change the level of staffing.

Identity Theft

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to change HM Revenue and Customs computer systems to prevent identity theft; and what discussions he has had with other Departments about any implications of the threat of identity theft for (a) existing computerised systems and (b) systems being developed. [45366]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC are planning to place stronger and more consistent controls on how a claimant can change their identity details on departmental systems. This includes better methods of authentication when customers contact HMRC.

HMRC are working with DWP to seek common standards of identity authentication.

As set out in my statement of 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 41WS, I met with the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Leigh (Andy Burnham) and the banking industry on 23 January to discuss the application of the Government's identity fraud strategy.

Inheritance Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the role of the Valuation Office Agency is in the assessment of inheritance tax. [47025]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency provides valuation advice to Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs through its District Valuer Services business stream. This covers the provision of valuations of land, buildings, lordships of the manor, growing crops, live and dead farming stock, plant, machinery and fixtures, which are required for the assessment of inheritance tax. At the request of HMRC the VOA also undertakes negotiations with taxpayers or their agents to resolve any differences of opinion on valuation matters.

Insolvency

Peter Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list individuals and corporate entities who (a) have been and (b) will be granted exemption prior to the issuance of any Lloyds market reorganisation order under the provisions of Statutory Instrument 2005, No. 1998, on insolvency. [45811]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A court can make a Lloyd's Market Reorganisation Order upon application by the Society of Lloyd's or the FSA or both. The reorganisation order will specify the persons to which it will apply. It will be a matter for the courts to decide who should be excluded from the order. The court can consider applications for exclusion of particular assets or particular persons at the time of the original application or at any time subsequently.

Master Netting Agreement

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the administration of the master netting agreement of the European Central Bank, with particular reference to potential obligations on the UK Government's maintenance of current practice with regard to European Central Bank's Guideline ECB/2005/15 as expressed in OJ L345 vol. 48 of 8 December 2005. [46486]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: ECB Guideline ECB/2000/1, which has now been amended by Guideline ECB/2005/15, is addressed to the national central banks of the member states that have adopted the euro in accordance with the treaty. The application of the guidelines and of the master netting agreements is a matter for them and their counterparties.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many visits abroad the Paymaster General has made in relation to the Treasury interest in child care policy since 2001. [45179]

Dawn Primarolo: None personally, but Treasury officials maintain strong links with officials from overseas who work on child care policy issues.

National Insurance

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the revenue from national insurance contributions was in each year from 2003–04; what the estimate is for 2006–07; and what assessment he has made of the impact on revenue of the National Insurance Contributions Act 2002 in respect of NHS employers' contributions being calculated as a percentage of all earnings. [46798]

Dawn Primarolo: National insurance contribution receipts are published in Table PSF6 of Public Sector Finances. A link to the most recent publication is given as follows.

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/pdfdir/psf0106.pdf

Estimates of receipts in 2005–06 and 2006–07 were published in Table B14 of the December 2005 pre-Budget report. A link is given as follows.

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/FA6/58/pbr05_annexB_246.pdf

Estimates of national health service secondary (employers') national insurance contributions for Great Britain in 2002–03 and 2003–04 are given in Appendix 6 of the Government Actuary's Report on the Up-rating and Re-rating orders, 2003. http://www.gad.gov.uk/Publications/docs/2003uprating.pdf.

National Lottery

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to allow 100 per cent. of proceeds from the national lottery to go directly to good causes. [46024]

John Healey: The taxation of the lottery is a principle that has been accepted by Parliament since the lottery was established in 1994. The lottery is a mainstream gambling activity and should, like other gambling activities, make a contribution to revenues for the funding of essential public services.

Payment Protection Insurance

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date his officials last met the (a) Financial Services Authority and (b) Office of Fair Trading to discuss their payment protection insurance inquiries. [46215]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: HM Treasury officials meet a wide range of organisations, including the Financial Services Authority (FSA) and the Office of Fair Trading (OFT), as part of the process of policy development and analysis. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings.

Under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (FSMA), the FSA is an independent body that regulates financial services in the UK. The Enterprise Act 2002 established the OFT as an independent authority, and as such it is for the OFT to enforce competition law and to investigate markets that may not be working well for consumers.

QinetiQ

Mike Penning: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the loss to the Treasury of the Carlyle share of QinetiQ; and if he will make a statement. [46784]

Mr. Des Browne: The Government believe that it has achieved value from its sale of a minority stake in QinetiQ to its strategic partner, the Carlyle Group.

Self-invested Personal Pension

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether a regulatory impact assessment has been prepared on his decision to withdraw the right to hold residential property in a self-invested personal pension. [47028]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) covering all additional legislative changes on Pension Simplification announced since April 2004 will be published alongside the Finance Bill 2006.

Stakeholder Pensions

Gregory Barker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average tax relief will be for stakeholder pensions following implementation of the Finance Act 2004; and what the rate was in each of the last three years. [47165]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We do not hold information on the average rate of tax relief for stakeholder pensions. But contributions to stakeholder pensions are tax relieved at the contributor's marginal rate of income tax and this will continue to be the position after the implementation of the Finance Act 2004.

Statutory Instruments

John Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the statutory instruments introduced by his Department since 6 May 2005. [46206]

John Healey: The information requested in respect of the Treasury and HM Revenue and Customs is as follows:

Tax Arrears

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1735W, on tax arrears, in how many cases over the last two years where a review has been notified to a taxpayer and it subsequently resulted in a bill to the taxpayer, interest has not been levied; what proportion of such cases that represented; and for what reasons the interest was not levied. [46060]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, normally where an adjustment has been made to an assessment of tax, the interest follows automatically, and is calculated and charged by the computer systems of HM Revenue and Customs.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1735W, on tax arrears, if he will make it his policy to notify the taxpayer (a) that interest will be charged, (b) of the date it is to be levied from and (c) the interest rate, at the time the review is notified; and if he will make a statement. [46084]

Dawn Primarolo: Whenever an enquiry is opened into a tax return, HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) sends the taxpayer a code of practice with the opening letter. The code of practice says that "interest will be charged from the original due date on any tax paid after that date. This includes additional amounts as a result of our enquiry."

Rates of interest are available from the HMRC internet website: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/rates/interest.htm or from any HMRC local office.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1735W, on tax arrears, what (a) the longest and (b) the average period was between the date interest was charged from and the date the review was made known to the taxpayer in relation to (i) businesses and (ii) individual taxpayers in the last period for which figures are available; and what the amount of interest charged for the period was in each case. [46120]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1735W, on tax arrears, whether the rate of interest charged is the same in every case; how it is determined; and what the rate is. [46121]

Dawn Primarolo: The rates of interest are laid down by statutory formulae. The rates are available on the internet website of HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC): http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/rates/interest.htm or from any HMRC local office.

Tax Credits

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland were in receipt of (i) less than £1,000, (ii) between £1,000 and £2,500, (iii) between £2,500 and £5,000, (iv) between £5,000 and £10,000, (v) between £10,000 and £20,000 and (vi) above £20,000 in working tax credits and child tax credits in each of the last three years. [45106]

Dawn Primarolo: The average number of in-work families in England in 2003-04 by level of annualised finalised tax credit entitlement is shown in the following table:

Thousand

2003-04 entitlement[1]	Number of awards
Under £1,000[2]	1,737
Between £1,000 and £2,500	477
Between £2,500 and £5,000	547
Between £5,000 and £10,000	756

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the online system for claiming tax credits will become fully operative. [45222]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC take fraud very seriously and as part of their ongoing compliance work have identified and stopped attempts to defraud the tax credit system by making claims through the tax credits e-portal. In the light of this, HMRC has closed the tax credits e-portal while it makes enhancements to ensure that the system remains secure.

The current plan is a series of strengthening measures to be implemented through planned IT releases and HMRC will reopen the portal once this work provides the necessary assurance.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will commission research into the impact of recovery in year of overpaid tax credits. [19720]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 518W.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many software errors generating incorrect payments have been discovered in computer systems used to administer tax credits in each year for which figures are available. [43662]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to provide the information in the format requested.

Details of errors were included in the Report of the Comptroller and Auditor General for 2003–04, which can be found with the Board's Annual Report and Accounts for 2003–04 at www.hmrc.gov.uk/pdfs/report2004.pdf.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when his Department first became aware that personal data held by HM Revenue and Customs was being used in relation to tax credit fraud; [44973]

(2) what his latest estimate is of the cost of organised fraud of the tax credit system in each quarter since April 2003; and if he will make a statement; [45678]

(3) when HM Revenue and Customs first detected organised fraudulent use of the tax credit system; and if he will make a statement; [45691]

(4) what recommendations officials in HM Revenue and Customs made to the Paymaster General in June 2005 about organised attempts to defraud the tax credits system; and what steps were taken as a result; [45692]

(5) when HM Revenue and Customs first considered closing the e-portal to reduce the risks of organised fraud of the tax credit system. [45693]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers I gave him on 18 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1357–58W) and 24 January 2006, Official Report, columns 2048–49W.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what sanctions are faced by individuals from other EU member states who are found to be fraudulently claiming (a) working tax credit and (b) child tax credit; [45330]

(2) if he will investigate the extent to which workers from the new EU accession countries are fraudulently claiming tax credits. [45332]

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what investigation he has undertaken into possible fraud against the tax credit system by migrant workers from other EU member states; and if he will make a statement. [45306]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 24 January 2006]: HMRC use a number of sophisticated tools to help them detect wrong and fraudulent claims. Cases requiring compliance intervention are selected using a risk-based approach, which examines the overall features of a claim, not the individual's nationality.

In addition, HMRC also consider all allegations of fraud seriously and will investigate any matter where there is sufficient risk. Where it is established that a claimant has provided incorrect or fraudulent information, HMRC have a number of measures available to them including the use of financial penalties. In the most serious cases HMRC will investigate with a view to securing a criminal prosecution under the new criminal offence of tax credit fraud.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) tax credit awards, (b) tax credit awards where the claimant was in receipt of the maximum tax credits to which they were entitled and (c) tax credit awards where the claimant received only the family element of the child tax credit there were in 2003–04; and what the (i) total value and (ii) average award was of tax credits in each category in that period. [45836]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 26 January 2006]: For parts (a) and (c) I refer the hon. Member to the publication "Child and Working Tax Credits Finalised Annual Awards 2003–04" (http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-annual-0304.pdf).

(b) The following shows additional analyses based on the same data, and cover only the in-work period of families with awards where the claimant was in receipt of the maximum tax credits to which they were entitled in 2003–04:

	2003–04
Average number during 2003–04 (thousand)	484
Total entitlement during 2003–04 (£ million)	3,179
Average annualised entitlement (£)	6,568

Anne Milton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 12 January 2006, Official Report, column 773W, on tax credits, how many tax credit applications are being processed; and how many of these applications were received (a) up to six months ago and (b) more than six months ago. [46046]

Dawn Primarolo: At 31 December 2005, around 155,000 claims for tax credits were being processed. At 23 January 2006, around 117,000 claims for tax credits were being processed. Information about the length of time that these claims have been outstanding is not available. HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) has Service Delivery Agreement targets for deciding tax credit claims within 5 working days and 30 working days. The Department's Annual Report reported its progress against those targets. It reported that, for 2004–05, 95.9 per cent. of all new claims, renewals and changes of circumstances were decided within 30 working days of receipt.

With the small percentage of claims that have not been decided within 30 working days, HMRC are verifying information and will be in touch with claimants to obtain further information.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many home visits were arranged by HM Revenue and Customs claimant compliance officers to investigate tax credit claims in each month of 2005; [46475]

(2) what criteria are used to select individuals for a home visit by claimant compliance officers investigating tax credit claims; [46476]

(3) what his most recent estimate is of the cost of a home visit carried out by HM Customs and Revenue claimant compliance officers investigating tax credit claims. [46477]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the number of visits HMRC claimant compliance officers have made to claimants as part of their investigations into fraud and error is not available.

HMRC uses its discretion in each case to determine the best way to obtain the information they need during their investigations. In the majority of instances, this can be done without the need to arrange a meeting with the customer. Where it is determined that a face to face meeting would be appropriate, HMRC give the claimant the option to meet on HMRC premises or at the claimant's home address.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many claims for tax credits were made by severely disabled adult workers without children in each month from April 2003 to January 2006; and if he will make a statement; [45679]

(2) how many claims for child tax credit for disabled children were made in each month since April 2003. [45681]

Dawn Primarolo: The characteristics of adults and children as initially captured in all tax credits claims, including rejected claims, are not available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The numbers of tax credits awards to in-work families with particular characteristics at selected dates from July 2003 to December 2005 are available in publications on the HMRC website:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-quarterly-stats.htm.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Valuation Office Agency operates an incentive scheme for staff for (a) council tax valuations and (b) business rate valuations. [47223]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency does not operate an incentive scheme for valuations.

VAT (Charities)

John Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will (a) remove and (b) reduce the VAT burden on charities. [45808]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Many of the supplies made by charities are not subject to VAT. Charities also benefit from VAT reliefs on their purchases worth more than £200 million per year. This forms part of the total tax reliefs for charities worth £2.4 billion per year.

Under agreements governing the application of VAT reliefs throughout the EU, successive Governments have agreed with European partners not to extend any existing VAT zero rates or introduce any new ones. The scope of the exemptions from VAT is similarly limited by European agreements. It is therefore not possible for the Government to introduce any new VAT zero rates or exemptions for supplies or purchases made by charities.

Charities VAT costs have been considered by the Government in two major reviews since 1997. In the course of these reviews it was not possible to find a solution that was practical, efficient, affordable, well-targeted and based on principle. Available resources are better and more effectively deployed through targeted initiatives and support, such as the Futurebuilders investment fund, rather than through a general VAT refund scheme for all charities.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many appeals against antisocial behaviour orders were funded by legal aid in the last 12 months; and what the (a) average and (b) total cost to public funds of this legal aid was. [45719]

Bridget Prentice: The Legal Service Commission has only recorded data relating to antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) since March 2005.

During March to December 2005, there were 25 appeals made to the Crown court against an ASBO. The average cost of these appeals was £1,135.64 and the total cost for this period was £28,391.

Appeals against ASBOs may also form part of a wider appeal in civil and criminal proceedings. The ASBO element of these cases could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Commission for Racial Equality

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent discussions her Department has had with the Commission for Racial Equality. [46165]

Ms Harman: The Secretary of State has met the chair and representatives of the Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) on several occasions.

HM Inspectorate of Court Administration has on-going contact with the Commission for Racial Equality in relation to their role in monitoring HM Court Services' compliance with the duties under the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000, their own internal responsibilities and linkage with the Department for Constitutional Affairs' Race Equality Scheme.

DCA corporate staff network for black and minority ethnic staff (PROUD), approached the Commission for Racial Equality to participate in PROUD's black history month in October 2005. Trevor Phillips attended giving a presentation on Race Equality in the Public Service.

Court Service (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the recent performance of the Court Service in Coventry. [46164]

Ms Harman: All data cover April to December 2005 unless stated otherwise (targets, where applicable, in brackets)

Mags: 86 per cent. of available courtroom capacity utilised (80 per cent.)

Departmental Properties

Mr. Weir: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much was paid by her Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) London. [35950]

Ms Harman: The answer provided relates solely to property on the HQ estate of the Department for Constitutional Affairs. It does not cover HM Court Service, associated offices or NDPB's as this information is neither collated nor managed by DCA and to obtain it would incur a disproportionate cost. Wales Office and Scotland Office are excluded on the grounds that they fund their own rent and should receive this question directly.

(a) My Department paid a total of £14,297,265.00 in property rental in the financial year 2004–05.

(b) (i) By region, the breakdown is:

Region	Property rental (£)
East Midlands	Nil
East of England	Nil
North East	93,856
North West	134,056
South East	Nil
South West	36,252
West Midlands	Nil
Yorks and Humber	Nil
Scotland	30,870
Wales	Nil
London	14,002,231

(b) (ii) by Nation the breakdown is:

Nation	Property rental (£)
England	14,266,395
N. Ireland	Nil
Scotland	30,870
Wales	Nil

(c) The total rental paid in London was £14,002,231.

The individual breakdown by building was as follows:

Building	Rental paid (£)
Selborne House, London	2,175,000
Southside, London	[1]4,216,711

Judicial Correspondence Unit

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many members of the Judicial Correspondence Unit took (a) voluntary early severance and (b) early retirement in each year since 1997. [47505]

Ms Harman: The Department's records do not show that any members of the Judicial Correspondence Unit have taken voluntary early severance or early retirement since 1997.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many disciplinary actions against officials employed by the Judicial Correspondence Unit (a) were commenced and (b) resulted in a sanction being applied in each of the last five years for which information is available. [47506]

Ms Harman: Data for the number of employees (in any part of the Department for Constitutional Affairs) against whom disciplinary action has been commenced, or in respect of whom disciplinary sanctions, short of dismissal, have been applied are only recorded on individual files. These are retained for the appropriate period before removal and destruction in compliance with the Department's obligations under the Data Protection Act. It is not therefore possible to obtain this information without incurring disproportionate costs.

Legal Aid

John Bercow: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much was spent on legal aid in each year since 1998. [46152]

Bridget Prentice: Legal Aid cash expenditure in each year since 1998 was as follows:

	£ million
1997–98	1,525
1998–99	1,623
1999–2000	1,551
2000–01	1,664
2001–02	1,716
2002–03	1,908
2003–04	2,077
2004–05	2,037

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate she has made of the savings that would have been made had means testing for legal aid in (a) magistrates courts and (b) Crown courts not been abolished in 2001; and if she will make a statement. [47334]

Bridget Prentice: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the cost of legal aid in Northern Ireland has been since 2002–03. [46521]

Bridget Prentice: The cost of legal aid in Northern Ireland each year since 2002–03 is as follows:

	£ million
	Amount
2002–03	45.0
2003–04	49.8
2004–05	58.6

New Magistrates Court (High Peak)

Tom Levitt: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she expects to announce a timetable for the development of the new magistrates court at New Mills, High Peak. [46179]

Ms Harman: My Department is unable to say when it will be able to proceed with the construction of a new courthouse in New Mills until the outstanding application under Section 13 of the Commons Registration Act 1965 is determined by the Derbyshire county council.

Queens' Counsel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many and what percentage of the English Bar are Queen's Counsel. [46533]

Ms Harman: There are currently 14,623 members of the England and Wales Bar, of whom 11,796 are independent barristers in private practice and 2,827 are employed. 1,134 are Queen's Counsel, which is 7.8 per cent. of the total and 9.6 per cent. of the independent Bar.

Small Claims Court (Gloucester)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the waiting time from allocation to hearing for small claims at Gloucester County Court was in the last period for which figures are available. [46371]

Ms Harman: The average waiting time from allocation to hearing for small claims at Gloucester County Court for the period April to December 2005 was 10.3 weeks.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Bedroom Standard

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many children in the south east region were living in accommodation one or more bedrooms below the bedroom standard in the most recent year for which figures are available. [47508]

Yvette Cooper: Using data from the Survey of English Housing it is estimated that over the three-year period 2002–03, 2003–04 and 2004–05, the number of children in the south east region living in households that are one or more bedrooms below the bedroom standard was 100,000.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress has been made since 1997 in reducing the number of children living in overcrowded conditions in the south east; and if he will make a statement. [47494]

Yvette Cooper: Using data from the Survey of English Housing it is estimated that over the three-year period 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99, the number of children in the south east region living in overcrowded households, based on the bedroom standard, was 100,000. This is the same as the estimate for the latest available period: 2002–03, 2003–04 and 2004–05.

The Government have doubled its investment in social housing from 1997 levels, and the Housing Corporation has now taken steps to encourage investment in larger homes through its National Affordable Housing Programme, so that more large homes can be built.

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on how many occasions his Office consulted citizens juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens jury. [46232]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not specifically consulted citizens juries on departmental policies within the last five years. However it does use a wide range of consultation methods, including fora and focus groups, in order to ensure public participation in the policy process.

Concessionary Travel

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list local authorities that have made representations to him objecting to the distribution of grant for the proposed extension of the concessionary travel scheme for older and disabled people. [46182]

Mr. Woolas: Out of the 336 representations received during the consultation period for the local government finance settlement, 61 mentioned the funding for concessionary fares. The points raised are summarised in the following tables:

Table 1: Summary table

Issue	Number of representations
Not enough money for concessionary fares	34
Support the concessionary fare funding scheme	18
Judgement for setting coefficients not transparent	2

Consolidated Fund

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for what reasons there was a failure to pay national non-domestic rates collected from local authorities into the Consolidated Fund in 2004–05; how much was involved; and if he will make a statement. [47511]

Mr. Woolas: The usual procedure is that receipts received in one month are paid into the Consolidated Fund on the eighth banking day of the following month. However, to avoid problems with year end accruals, the usual practice is to pay over the March receipts before our accounting system closes in March. Although the intention was to do this in March 2005, it was inadvertently overlooked and the payment was made on 12 April.

This transaction concerns the transfer of money between two central Government accounts at the Bank of England and therefore did not involve any loss of interest, or any risk to taxpayers' money. As at 31 March 2005 the national non-domestic rates (NNDR) requiring payment to the Consolidated Fund was £824 million. As it was year end, the amount received was lower than the usual monthly amount, which is typically about £1.6 billion.

Procedures have been put in place to ensure that this oversight will not happen again and that future relevant payment will be made in March.

Correspondence

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will reply to the letter of 13 December 2005 from the hon. Member for Castle Point on the Thames Gateway Port and compensation for Thames estuary fishermen. [45718]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has no record of receiving the hon. Member's letter of 13 December 2005 although officials in the ODPM have now obtained a copy of it from the hon. Member. However, the subject matter of the correspondence is the responsibility of the Department for Transport who will therefore reply directly to the hon. Member.

Council Tax

Anne Milton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the district precept of Band D council tax (a) excluding and (b) including average parish precepts was in (i) Guildford borough and (ii) Waverley borough, in each year since 1997–98. [46030]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is tabled as follows.

	Average Band D council tax for the authority
	Guildford		Waverley

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the annual change was in the average council tax for a band D property in each year since 1997–98. [46911]

Mr. Woolas: Details of the annual change in the average council tax for a band D property in each year since 1997–98 are published in Table 2.2e of Local Government Financial Statistics England 2005, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House and on the web at: http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/stats/lgfs/2005/lgfsl6/h/lgfsl6/xlsfiles/lgsf16-2-2k.xls

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department has provided to local authorities on tackling council tax (a) fraud, (b) evasion and (c) underpayments. [46979]

Mr. Woolas: Billing authorities are under statutory duty to take reasonable steps to ascertain whether dwellings should qualify for a council tax exemption or whether a discount should apply. Billing authorities have the power to fine individuals who fail to notify them that an exemption or discount should no longer apply. Where a person claims a discount or exemption, to which they know that they are not entitled, then they may be subject to prosecution under the Theft Act 1968 for obtaining a pecuniary advantage by deception.

None of these duties could be undertaken without a property valuation.

Dr. Francis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will take steps to entitle (a) husbands and wives and (b) other partners who care for one another due to (i) illness and (ii) disability, whether they work or not, to council tax rebate. [46327]

Mr. Woolas: Carers are already disregarded for the purposes of calculating entitlement to a council tax discount in some circumstances. The rules are designed to ensure that the person being cared for does not face a higher council tax bill as a result of their care needs, not to provide a general reduction in council tax for those receiving or providing care. Council tax benefit is available to husbands, wives and other partners who care for one another, whether they are in work or not, if they are on a low income.

The Government has no plans to introduce new council tax exemptions and discounts. Sir Michael Lyons' Inquiry into local government funding, including the reform of council tax, is due to report at the end of this year.

Departmental Accounts (Irregularities)

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what financial irregularity occurred in 2004–05, as referred to in the Department's Resource Accounts for 2004–05; how much was involved; which departmental division was involved; which Minister had oversight of the areas; whether the police authorities have been informed; and if he will make a statement. [47510]

Jim Fitzpatrick: As criminal charges have been brought and the matter is now before the courts, it would be inappropriate for me to comment at this time.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department's Accounting Officer has made of the financial irregularities referred to in the Department's Resource Accounts for 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [47513]

Jim Fitzpatrick: As criminal charges have been brought and the matter is now before the courts, it would be inappropriate for me to comment at this time.

Departmental Losses

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been lost by his Department due to (a) fraud, (b) theft and (c) loss of property in each year since its creation; and what estimate he has made of such losses in 2005–06 to date. [47515]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information is as follows.

(a) Losses due to fraud in each year since the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) was created are as follows:

Financial year	ODPM (C) (£)
2002–03	8,592
2003–04	3,622
2004–05	867,200
2005–06	0

(b) Losses due to theft in each financial year since the ODPM was created are as follows:

Financial year	ODPM (C) (£)
2002–03	1,901
2003–04	6,350
2004–05	1,000
2005–06	2,000

(c) Loss of property in each year since the ODPM was created is as follows:

Financial year	ODPM (C) (£)
2002–03	75
2003–04	3,678

No estimate of losses has been made for 2005–06. The figures shown for that year are for losses made to date.

Departmental Website

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost of maintaining his main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46302]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Brent, East (Sarah Teather) on 3 November 2005, Official Report, columns 1264–65W, for the cost of the main Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website: odpm.gov.uk.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Brent, East (Sarah Teather) on 17 October 2005, Official Report, columns 805–06W, for monthly visitors to the site from September 2003 to August 2005. Figures for September and October 2005 are table as follows:

Month	Unique visitors
September 2005	177,413
October 2005	187,381

East of England Plan

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to meet representatives of the East of England Regional Assembly to discuss the results of the examination in public of the draft East of England Plan when it is concluded on 16 March. [46063]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The normal practice is that any dialogue required between the Regional Assembly and my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister in the period following the Examination in Public and prior to issue of the Secretary of State my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister's proposed changes would be by written communication. The guidance provides for two types of occasions after the publication of the Panel Report where the Secretary of State my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister may need to meet with representatives of the Regional Assembly:

> 'where more evidence is required on matters left unresolved in the Panel Report or further information is required on whether the Secretary of State's proposed changes could be effectively applied'.

Such a meeting would need to be the subject of a publicly available minute. As yet, no such meeting is envisaged.

Flag Masts (Planning Permission)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether planning permission is required for domestic households to erect flag masts on their properties; and if he will make a statement. [43482]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 January 2006]: Planning permission is required for domestic households to erect flag poles on their properties. The exceptions: are vertical flag poles flying a national flag; flag poles flying flags as advertisements under Class 7 of Schedule 3 of the Town and Country Planning (Control of Advertisements) Regulations 1992; flag poles flying all other flags that have the express consent of the local planning authority to be flown.

Formula Spending Share (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what account has been taken of demographic changes since May 2004 in respect of the allocation of the formula spending share to Peterborough city council for 2005–06, with particular reference to migrants from EU accession countries. [46006]

Mr. Woolas: The 2005–06 formula spending shares announced in a written ministerial statement on 27 January 2005, Official Report, column 24–25WS, used the mid-2003 population estimates. Therefore population changes since May 2004 would not have been taken into account in the calculation of the formula spending shares for 2005–06.

From 2006–07, projections of population published by the Office for National Statistics will be used in the Local Government Finance Settlement as the key driver of population.

Funding (Lancashire)

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) revenue and (b) capital funding his Department has allocated to (a) West Lancashire district council and (b) Lancashire county council in each of the last 10 years. [45128]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) was established following the Machinery of Government changes on 29 May 2002.

The following tables set out payments made to (a) West Lancashire district council and (b) Lancashire county council since 2002–03

(a) Funding to West Lancashire district council

	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	£ million Total

Government Office for London

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the programmes managed by the Government office for London in 2005–06; and what the total funding for each was. [47514]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Government office for London (GOL) delivers policies and programmes in London on behalf of 10 central Government Departments. Its programme budget in 2005–06 totals £3.3 billion, of which £2.6 billion is grants to the Greater London Authority and its functional bodies. GOL leads on negotiating local area agreements on behalf of Departments, it handles planning casework, it leads on multi-agency work to improve arrangements for the resettlement of London's ex-offenders and preparing and testing plans for emergencies (the work of the London resilience team based in GOL).

Hereditaments

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the Department's definition of a corporeal hereditament is for council tax valuation purposes. [47140]

Mr. Woolas: The term 'corporeal hereditament' is not one defined for council tax valuation purposes.

Housing

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance he has given to the South West Regional Assembly on the numbers of new houses to be built in (a) the South West, (b) Gloucestershire and (c) the Cotswolds. [45901]

Yvette Cooper: Current Government guidance on the number of new additional housing required in the South West for the period 1996 to 2016 is contained in Regional Planning Guidance for the South West (RPG10) published in 2001. RPG10 includes a figure for Gloucestershire County but no figures for any district council such as Cotswolds. The South West figure in RPG 10 is 20,200 net additional houses per annum and 2,400pa for Gloucestershire.

The South West Regional Assembly (SWRA), as the Regional Planning Body, is now preparing a draft Regional Spatial Strategy (RSS) as required by the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004. The RSS will replace RPG10; cover the period to 2026; and set out District housing requirements. It is understood that a draft RSS will be submitted by the SWRA for public consultation later this year. No guidance has been given by Government to the SWRA as to what specific housing numbers should be proposed in the draft RSS. Government guidance on the content of the RSS is contained in PPS11 "Regional Spatial Strategies" and in PPG3 "Housing" on planning for housing.

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will publish the Housing Revenue Account Subsidy Determination 2006–07 Consultation Paper. [47033]

Yvette Cooper: The draft Housing Revenue Account Subsidy Determination 2006–07 was issued for consultation on 7 November 2005.

Following the conclusion of the consultation, and taking account of representations from stakeholders, including Wolverhampton, the final Determination was published on 20 December 2005.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the effect of his decision to replace local authority council house valuations by valuations by registered social landlords. [40398]

Yvette Cooper: It is Government policy that social rents should be restructured and that over time tenants in social housing should pay similar rents for similar properties regardless of landlord.

The three-year review of rent restructuring policy, which reported in 2004, made a number of recommendations. One was to use the same formula for restructuring local authority rents as that which is currently used for restructuring Registered Social Landlords (RSL) rents, and adopt the Retail Price Index (RPI) as the inflation measure used in calculating local authority rent increases. Individual property valuations are unchanged, but the formula used to calculate rents now uses the average 1999 value for RSL properties.

We announced on 7 November that we would introduce in full the recommendations made in the review in 2006–07, reinforcing the steps already taken to create a fair and transparent rent setting system in the social rented sector. We have provided additional protection for council tenants by capping at 5 per cent. the average cash increase in rents in any local authority for each of the next two years. This is in addition to the caps and limits that have been in place since the policy was first introduced.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) when he expects to announce the Housing Corporation's National Affordable Housing Programme in the south east region for (a) 2006–07 and (b) 2007–08; [47493]

(2) what action his Department has taken to increase the proportion of family-sized social rented homes to be built in the Housing Corporation's National Affordable Housing Programme in the south east region in (a) 2006–07 and (b) 2007–08. [47492]

Yvette Cooper: The Housing Corporation is currently assessing bids for affordable housing schemes planned to start in 2006–08 and discussing with regional housing boards how these will achieve the priorities set out in the regional housing strategies.

A decision on the overall programme, and its regional components is expected to be announced in March 2006 and announcements on individual allocations will be made subsequent to that.

Mobile Telephone Masts (Hammersmith and Fulham)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many new mobile telephone masts have been erected under permitted development rights in the Borough of Hammersmith and Fulham in each year since 1997. [46600]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend, the Member for Coventry, South on 2 November 2005, Official Report, column 1066W.

New University (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions have taken place between his Department and the Department for Education and Skills on the provision of a university for Peterborough. [46258]

Jim Fitzpatrick: There have been no discussions between the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Department for Education and Skills on the provision of a University for Peterborough.

Planning Controls

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to implement planning controls on mezzanine and other internal floor space additions. [40381]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects a further batch of development control measures contained in the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 to be implemented in the next few months.

Regional Fire Control Centres

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on what date London's existing regional fire control centre became operational. [46982]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The London-wide control centre started taking calls on 20 April 2004.

Standards Board for England

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the cost to the public purse of the five cases investigated by the Standards Board for England in the Peterborough city council area since September 2004; and what the outcome was of each investigation. [45462]

Mr. Woolas: Officers of the Standards Board for England (SBE) have investigated seven cases involving members of Peterborough city council in the period since September 2004. These are listed, along with the outcome of each case:

SBE case reference: 3770.03 and 3814.03

Allegations referred to Adjudication Panel for England (APE)

Outcome: Member disqualified for 2 years. Following High Court appeal, decision upheld, but sanction reduced to 1 year suspension.

SBE case reference: 3957.03

Allegations referred to APE

Outcome: Member disqualified for 18 months. Following High Court Appeal, this sanction was quashed.

SBE case reference: 7067.04

Outcome: There was a breach of the code of conduct but no further action is necessary.

SBE case reference: 7718.04

Outcome: No breach of the code of conduct

SBE case reference: 8322.04

Outcome: Case referred to local authority's standards committee for determination.

Hearing currently adjourned.

SBE case reference: 9292.04

Outcome: No breach of the code of conduct.

SBE case reference: 9293.04

Outcome: No breach of the code of conduct.

Taking into account the average cost of an investigation (£7,000) and the cost of various APE hearings and High Court appeals, the total cost incurred by the Board in respect of these cases is about £143,200.

Town/Parish Councils

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what level of public support is required for eligibility for a new (a) town and (b) parish council; and how that support is required to be demonstrated. [45768]

Mr. Woolas: Under the Local Government and Rating Act 1997, there are two ways in which a new town or parish council can be established both requiring different ways of demonstrating public support.

Section 11 of the Act provides for a petition to be raised for the creation of a new parish in a previously unparished area. For a petition to be considered valid it must be signed by not less than 250 or 10 per cent. of local government electors in the area of the proposed parish, whichever is the greater.

Section 9 of the Act provides that a district council may conduct a review of parish arrangements in their area and make recommendations to the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister for the establishment of a new parish. Under section 10 of the Act district councils must take steps they consider sufficient to inform persons who may be interested in reviews and proposals and take into consideration any representations made to them.

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what criteria on (a) the minimum size of a community and (b) other matters are used to determine suitability for creation of a new town council. [45769]

Mr. Woolas: In determining suitability for the creation of a new town council, the statutory criteria are the need to reflect the identities and interests of local communities, and to secure effective and convenient local government. Section 16(2) of the Local Government and Rating Act 1997 requires that a parish with 200 or more electors must have a parish council.

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is on the creation of new town councils. [45770]

Mr. Woolas: Where there is a desire by local people for the creation of new town and parish councils and provided that the proposals received meet the provisions set out in section 22 of the Local Government and Rating Act 1997, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will create such councils.

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many applications for new (a) town and (b) parish councils have been (i) submitted and (ii) successful in each of the last five years. [45771]

Mr. Woolas: The following table shows for each year since 1 April 2001 the number of parishes created from which town and parish councils are set up. Records of applications received are not comprehensive over this period.

	Parishes created
2001–02	12
2002–03	25
2003–04	23
2004–05	6
2005–06	[1]4

[1] Provisional

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his target time is for dealing with each part of the process relating to applications to create a new town council; and if he will make a statement. [45772]

Mr. Woolas: Following receipt, proposals to create a new town or parish council need to be examined to ensure that they comply with the legislation and that they meet the statutory criteria. In addition, maps need to be commissioned showing the proposed parish, and there is a period of consultation of up to six weeks on the content of the draft Order that will implement new parish arrangements. It presently takes between six to nine months for the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to complete these stages.

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what submissions his Department has received from Castle Point borough council on the establishment of a Canvey town council. [45773]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister received a petition via Castle Point borough council for the establishment of a Canvey Island town council on 17 January 2006.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the level of detected benefit fraud in each of the last six years was; and if he will estimate what the level of undetected fraud was in each year. [42550]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the following table.

	Cases of detected fraud	Prosecutions	Convictions
1999–2000	198,467	9,272	9,129
2000–01	182,569	11,584	11,403
2001–02	160,974	11,355	11,183
2002–03	145,232	9,396	9,267
2003–04	135,710	9,204	9,091
2004–05	150,651	8,670	8,573

Notes:
1. The above figures for cases of detected fraud are based on the number of effective benefit cases, which is defined as an investigation that results in an adjustment of the current rate of benefit, an overpayment or an underpayment or the person ceasing their claim to benefit. Effective cases are the total of benefit cases plus IOP cases.
2. Figures exclude GMS.

We do not collect information on the level of detected benefit fraud from local authorities. The level of housing benefit overpaid due to fraud has been estimated from 2002–03 onwards and reported as National Statistics. The latest published estimates for the percentage of housing expenditure overpaid due to fraud (within the scope of the sample) is 1.5 per cent. in 2002–03 and 2003–04. The estimate is based on a sample of cases and is therefore subject to sampling error. Estimates for 2004–05 are due to be published on 19 January 2006.

We have no estimate of undetected fraud.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of benefit fraud were detected in each of the last six years; and how many of these have resulted in (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions. [42764]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the table.

Number of cases of detected fraud, prosecutions and convictions (excluding housing benefit and council tax benefit)

We do not collect information on the number of benefit fraud cases detected by local authorities. The number of attempted prosecutions and convictions undertaken by local authorities is given in the table:

Number of prosecutions and convictions (housing benefit and council tax benefit only)

	Number of court summons issued ("prosecutions")	Number of successful prosecutions ("convictions")
1999–2000	—	861
2000–01	—	1112

2004–05	5,544	4,688
2005–06 (Q1 and Q2 only)	3,336	2,892

Notes:
Figures for local authority prosecutions which did not lead to conviction are not available prior to 2001–02.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many fraud inspectors there have been in his Department to investigate (a) incapacity benefit fraud and (b) other benefit fraud in each year since 1997. [44429]

Mr. Plaskitt: Benefit fraud investigators in the Department for Work and Pensions deal with allegations of benefit fraud relating to all benefits administered by this department. we do not employ a specific number of staff to investigate incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance fraud.

The table shows available information on the number of investigators employed by the Department.

Benefits

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action he is taking to improve the interface with local authorities in relation to the payment of means tested benefits. [45198]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department is modernising welfare delivery to improve accessibility, accuracy and value for money of services to customers. The Customer Management System (CMS) is an integrated, information-gathering system for working age customers that is being rolled out across the Jobcentre Plus network. Most local authorities are now receiving at least some of their housing benefit and council tax benefit claims via CMS. In October 2005, changes were made to the system that brought a number of improvements for local authorities, the most significant being a reduction in clerical documentation with three forms being reduced to a single local authority Input Document. We are continuing to monitor and evaluate the impact of CMS on local authorities.

We are currently piloting a new electronic link between the Department and local authorities. The link will use modern technology to pass information about DWP benefits to local authority housing benefit and council tax benefit staff. We expect the new IT to be more efficient than current links, to provide local authority staff with access to a wider range of information about DWP benefits and enable them to process the benefits that they administer more quickly. Subject to an evaluation, the new link will be rolled out nationally by the end of 2006.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made on the harmonisation of pay days for different benefits, with particular reference to claimants moving from one benefit to another. [45236]

Margaret Hodge: The Green Paper "A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work", published on 24 January 2006, makes clear our commitment to simplify the benefits system. A key aim of simplification is to ease transitions in and out of work. Problems caused by differences in paydays will be considered as part of this.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been paid to workers from the accession countries in (a) jobseeker's allowance, (b) housing benefit and (c) other benefits since May 2004. [45322]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the total number of non-resident parents who (a) make maintenance payments under the Child Support Agency (CSA) rules, (b) cannot be traced to pay under the CSA, (c) are assessed to have a zero liability due to low income, (d) are assessed to make payments but do not do so regularly, (e) have made alternative maintenance arrangements outside the CSA and (f) make no payments and are not referred to the CSA; and if he will make a statement. [21590]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty dated 31 January 2006:

In reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions; what his estimate is of the total number of non-resident parents who (a) make maintenance payments under the Child Support Agency (CSA) rules (b) cannot be traced to pay under the CSA (c) are assessed to have a zero liability due to low income (d) are assessed to make payments but do not do so regularly (e) have made alternative maintenance arrangements outside the CSA and (f) make no payments and are not referred to the CSA; and if he will make a statement.

Such information as is available is presented below:

(a) In September 2005, 297,000 cases were in receipt of maintenance via the Agency's collection service. In addition, a further 100,000 had a maintenance direct arrangement in place which, when the arrangement was originally set up, would have been underpinned by a CSA calculation or assessment.

(b) At the end of September 2005, there were 35,000 cases on the old scheme old computer system that were suspended because the NRP could not be traced. In addition, there were 14,000 old scheme cases that required trace action by CSA staff. Equivalent information is not currently available for new and old scheme cases on the new computer system.

(c) In September 2005, 461,000 cases had a zero liability

(d) In September 2005, 127,000 cases were scheduled to make payments via the Agency's collection service, but did not comply with this request. An additional 128,000 had a maintenance liability, but no active charging schedule currently in place.

(e) In respect of the number of NRPs who have made alternative maintenance arrangements outside of the Agency:

i) In 2003–04 the Family Resources Survey (FRS) reported that there were 550,000 Parents with care (PWCs) who were receiving maintenance direct from the NRP. It is likely that this figure will also include those cases in which the Agency has carried out a calculation or assessment and the NRP is then paying the PWC direct (i.e. "maintenance direct" cases, of which there were 84,000 in April 2004). However, it is not possible to quantify the extent to which such maintenance direct cases are, or are not, included in the FRS estimate.

ii) Analysis of the 2004 Family and Children's Survey suggests that 131,000 households have a court order in force with an absent parent, and that 580,000 households have a voluntary agreement in place. As with the FRS, it is possible that there might be an unquantifiable overlap with Agency's "maintenance direct" cases.

(f) Information is not available for the number of NRPs who make no payments and are not referred to the Agency.

I hope you find this helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1152W, on the Child Support Agency, what the single largest compensation payment made since 1 January 1997 was. [30971]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 31 January 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions; pursuant to the Answer of 15th November Official Report column 1152W on the Child Support Agency what the single largest compensation payment made since 1st January 1997 was.

As I explained in our previous response, compensatory payments in excess of £10,000 represent only a small fraction (just over 0.1%) of the total number of compensation payments made by the Agency:

	Number
Total number of payments made since 1 December 2001	35,558
Under £1,000	33,227
Between £1,000 and £9,999	2,289
Between £10,000 and £49,999	42
Over £50,000	0

The largest compensation payment of £41,000 was paid in September 2002.

I hope you find this helpful.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 8 December 2005, Official Report, column 1545W, to the hon. Member for Kettering (Mr. Hollobone) on the Child Support Agency (CSA), why it is not possible to break down the number of children supported through the CSA on a geographical basis. [39183]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 31 January 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions; pursuant to the Answer of 8th December 2005 Official Report column 1545W to the hon. Member for Kettering on the Child Support Agency (CSA) why it is not possible to break down the number of children supported through the CSA on a geographical basis.

Information to answer this question is not available for old scheme cases on the old computer system (CSCS). This is because management information for this system is drawn from a 5 per cent. sample of cases, which does not provide a sufficiently large sample size to allow the number of child support cases in any constituency to be broken down into robust estimates of the number or proportion who are paying child support in a particular constituency.

The Agency is currently undertaking a management information improvement project for the new child support system (CS2), which has already begun to deliver more robust statistics. It is envisaged that the Agency will be in a position to provide constituency level estimates in the New Year for cases on the new computer system, which will be made available on the Department's website alongside the CSA quarterly summary of statistics.

Financial Assistance Scheme

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people had received payments under the Financial Assistance Scheme by 31 December 2005. [46884]

Mr. Timms: The first payments to 13 members of the ASW (Cardiff) pension scheme were in individuals' bank accounts by Wednesday 21 December 2005.

Further payments are being made to other scheme members of qualifying schemes once trustees have provided the necessary member information.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to ensure that those who are eligible receive assistance from the Financial Assistance Scheme. [47487]

Mr. Timms: During 2004 the Department conducted two data collection exercises about FAS with the pensions industry. Prior to the start of the notification period on 1 September 2005, we made contact with every pension scheme which had taken part in these exercises, providing an application form and explanatory leaflet. At the same time, we wrote to all known firms of Pension administrators, advising them of the scheme.

At the beginning of January, we contacted by telephone, all scheme trustees who had not returned the FAS application form, reminding them that the notification period ends on 28 February. We hope to receive completed application forms from all schemes that appear potentially eligible for the FAS by the close of the notification period.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what independent research has been commissioned to assess the (a) outcomes and (b) cost-effectiveness of services provided by (i) Jobcentre Plus and (ii) voluntary and private sector organisations; and what further research is planned. [45778]

Margaret Hodge: Jobcentre Plus' main programmes and interventions are subject to a major programme of ongoing evaluation, analysis and monitoring by the Department, supported by a programme of commissioned independent research. Commissioned evaluations of outcomes and effectiveness are published and are publicly available. They can also be found on the DWP website and include all of the new deals and pilot initiatives such as Pathways to Work.

The Department also evaluates the outcomes and effectiveness of services provided by the private and voluntary sector, the most significant of which is the Employment Zones evaluation. Independent research on customer outcomes include the working age research and analysis publication No. 176 (2003) which compared the job outcomes for people on New Deal 25 plus, before it was re-engineered, with those on the Employment Zone provision.

Major evaluations also include a full cost benefit analysis and are carried out by DWP economists or by independent experts or a combination of both. Comparing the cost-effectiveness of Jobcentre Plus and private and voluntary sector services is difficult because Jobcentre Plus works in partnership with the private and voluntary sector. The current Employment Zones evaluation, however, will include a cost-benefit assessment. This will be carried out in-house, with administrative data analysis assessing the overall effectiveness of Employment Zones using valid Jobcentre Plus comparisons. This will be available in the autumn of 2006.

The Department will also commission a short feasibility study to explore the possibility of assessing the overall impact of Jobcentre Plus as well as some of its larger labour market programmes on a range of macroeconomic variables. Results from the feasibility study should be available in the latter half of 2006.

Copies of the DWP Research Programmes for 2004–05 and 2005–06 are available on the DWP research website http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd5/

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the main reasons for claimants leaving jobseeker's allowance; and how many people there were in each category of departure in each year since 1997. [44521]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the table.

[1] Moving to another benefit includes those claimants starting to claim income support (IS)/pension credit (PC), incapacity benefit (IB), working families tax credit (WFTC), and disabled persons tax credit (DPTC) within 90 days of the jobseeker's allowance (JSA) claim ending. It is possible that claimants may not move directly from JSA to another benefit, e.g. they may cease claiming JSA, find work and then claim IB within the given 90 day period.

[2] It is known that the number recorded as returning to work underestimates the true situation. It is not possible to determine the number that moved to employment, however the "Destinations of Benefit Leavers 2004" report showed that 62 per cent. of IS, JSA and IB leavers entered employment of 16 hours or more a week.

Notes:

1. Figures are expressed in thousands and rounded to the nearest hundred. Totals may not sum due to rounding.
2. Those reasons shown as "Recorded as" are what are completed on the JSA computer system following termination of the JSA claim. It is known that this information is not reliable and therefore figures should be used as a guide only.
3. Destinations of terminated JSA claims are assigned in the priority order shown above.
4. Number of terminations in the last year will increase following receipt of late notifications.

Longitudinal Data Matching

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what purposes longitudinal data matching is being used in his Department; and what assessment he has made of potential inaccuracies from using this method in benefit fraud cases. [43631]

Mr. Plaskitt: The purposes to which longitudinal data matching are used within the Department for Work and Pensions are published on the Departmental website and are held in the Library. Longitudinal data held within the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study are used to perform a range of statistical and research analyses, and some limited operational purposes, to give the Department further opportunities to evaluate the effectiveness of its businesses.

We do not use longitudinal data matching when investigating individual benefit fraud cases. Therefore we have made no assessment of potential inaccuracies from using such a method.

The majority of operational data matching for identifying fraud is still being undertaken on the Department's Generalised Matching Service; however longitudinal data are being used to inform longer term strategies for dealing with Fraud and Error. The combining of these two areas of work will allow the Department to assess and identify possible new areas of risk or inaccuracy not previously identifiable from simple data matching of current information.

New Deal/Workstep

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to extend (a) New Deal for Disabled People and (b) Workstep to help people back into work; and if he will make a statement. [46018]

Margaret Hodge: Contracts for the New Deal for Disabled People and WORKSTEP are now being extended, where necessary, to 31 March 2007. We are currently considering the future of this provision alongside the range of disability employment programmes to ensure they reflect current needs and support our proposals in the Welfare Reform Green Paper.

We will consult our key stakeholders later in the year.

Pensioners (Fuel Concessions)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total value was of help given to pensioners to help them with fuel bills in each year from 1979 to 1997. [44523]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Social Fund Cold Weather Payments scheme was introduced in October 1988. It replaced a similar but not identical Cold Weather Payments scheme which had begun in December 1986. Prior to that there had been a system of payments based on local office discretion.

The form of the current Cold Weather Payments scheme dates from 1991–92. Under the scheme, a Cold Weather Payment is made when the average temperature has been recorded as, or is forecast to be, 0°C or below over seven consecutive days at the weather station linked to the eligible customer's postcode. Eligible customers are now those awarded pension credit, or those awarded income support or income-based jobseeker's allowance who have a pensioner or disability premium or a child who is disabled or aged under 5, when the temperature criterion is met for their postcode.

Data are available only from the start of the Social Fund Cold Weather Payments scheme. Only total expenditure is available, not expenditure on pensioners. The available data is in the following table.

Winter Fuel Payments were introduced in winter 1997–98 to ensure that pensioners can afford to heat their homes in the winter months.

Cold weather payments in Great Britain

	Total expenditure (£ million)
1988–89	0.0
1989–90	0.4
1990–91	9.3
1991–92	23.0
1992–93	15.0
1993–94	12.4
1994–95	0.1
1995–96	61.6
1996–97	42.2

Notes:

1. Figures for 1990–91 include payments for the winter of 1990–91 made in April and May 1991.
2. As an indication of expenditure on pensioners, the proportion of total Cold Weather Payments expenditure on pensioners in 2000–01 was 50 per cent. (2000–01 is the first year for which both data is available and there was substantial Cold Weather Payments expenditure.) (Source: DSS Programme Accounting Computer System.)
3. Figures have been rounded to the nearest £0.1 million.
4. Total expenditure for 1988–89 was £2,510. That winter was a particularly mild one.

Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the value of the basic state pension as a proportion of average earnings were current uprating policy to continue in (a) 2010, (b) 2020, (c) 2030, (d) 2040 and (e) 2050. [35364]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table:

Percentage

	Full-time median earnings	Full-time mean earnings
2010	17	14
2020	14	12
2030	12	10
2040	10	8
2050	8	7

Note:

The figures are based on the earnings of full-time employees as recorded by the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE). In April 2005 the figure for median earnings was £431 a week and mean earnings was £517.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many applications were made for deemed buy-back under the state second pension in each of the last five years; how many individuals have been offered deemed buy-back in each year; and how many have taken up the offer in each year. [43898]

Mr. Timms: In order for a pension scheme member to qualify for deemed buy-back, a scheme's trustees must prove to HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) that the scheme qualifies for deemed buy-back. HMRC then calculates the amount required to restore state scheme rights to the level they would have been had the pension scheme member never been contracted-out. On receipt of HMRC's calculations, the trustees will determine whether the member actually qualifies for deemed buy-back, before giving the member the options for securing their accrued benefits in this way.

None of these calculations were issued before 2003. Since 2003, HMRC has issued approximately 7,000 calculations. Of the 7,000 calculations issued, 2,500 members do not qualify for deemed buy-back. HMRC has been notified of 58 pension scheme members who have opted for deemed buy-back (two members in 2004 and 56 members in 2005) and payment has been received for each of them. HMRC has received no information from the trustees regarding the remaining 4,442 pension scheme members.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of the Finance Act 2004 on stakeholder pensions (a) in 2005 and (b) over the next 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [47164]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply

The Finance Act 2004 introduces a radical simplification of the pension tax rules that will sweep away the complexity in the current rules and introduce greater choice, flexibility, transparency, clarity and cost-efficiency. This will benefit all those who participate or want to participate in pension schemes.

The Regulatory Impact Assessment of April 2004 'Simplifying the Taxation of Pensions' [www.hmrc.gov.uk/ria/simplifying-pensions.pdf] sets out the Government's assessment of the impact of the new rules including the plans to evaluate the effects of the Finance Act 2004 changes on pensions. Baseline research on employers and the financial services industry is currently in development.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what research his Department has carried out into customer satisfaction with the Post Office card account; and if he will make a statement; [45577]

(2) what estimate he has made of the value of the contract for the Post Office card account; and if he will make a statement. [45579]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Post Office card account is a product provided by Post Office Limited. My Department has not undertaken any customer satisfaction research specifically relating to the Post Office card account. However, I understand Post Office Limited have recently undertaken such research.

Around 3.6 million customers of the Department for Work and Pensions currently have their benefit or pension paid into a Post Office card account. (HM Revenue and Customs and the Northern Ireland Social Security Agency also pay some of their customers into a Post Office card account, taking the total number of card accounts to around 4.25 million.) The Post Office card account contract will cost the Government at least £1 billion between 2003 and 2010. The precise value of the contract will depend on how many customers use the card account between now and the end of Government funding in March 2010.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reasons his Department has decided to end the Post Office card account (POCA) contract; how many users of the POCA will be affected by this decision; and if he will make a statement. [45586]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 26 January 2006]: Around 3.6 million customers of the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) currently have their benefit or pension paid into a Post Office card account. (HM Revenue and Customs and the Northern Ireland Social Security Agency also pay some of their customers into a Post Office card account, taking the total number of card accounts to around 4.25 million.)

The Post Office card account was introduced in April 2003 to help support the conversion of some customers from order books to Direct Payment. It was aimed at those who did not already have a suitable account and was designed as a "stepping stone" to help people who had not used a bank account before get used to banking before moving on to an account offering more features.

In line with our wider policy on financial inclusion, we have always made it clear that payment into a bank or building society account is the best option for the overwhelming majority of customers. The Post Office card account is a simple account with limited functions. It can only receive payments of benefits, pensions and tax credits. It does not, for example, allow customers to make savings on fuel bills by paying by Direct Debit; it cannot receive payments of wages; cheques cannot be paid in to the Post Office card account; and it does not pay interest on balances.

Although the card account was designed for those who did not already have a bank or building society account, 70 per cent. of people who have opened one already have an account. And the remaining 30 per cent. have shown that, by managing to open and operate a Post Office card account, they can use other easy to operate banking products—including basic bank accounts, which are widely available and accessible at Post Office branches. The Post Office card account has allowed some customers to move from receiving their benefit or pension through cashing an order book at the Post Office counter to getting used to the basics of banking. In practice, there is no real difference in accessing money at the Post Office via a bank account compared to a Post Office card account—customers can collect the same money, on the same day as they do now at the Post Office, by using a plastic card and a personal identification number.

The Post Office card account contract runs between 2003 and 2010. There was never any expectation that the Government should provide funding beyond that date and there is no case for doing so. The Post Office card account does little to promote financial inclusion. Customers will still be able to collect their benefit or pension at the Post Office by using their bank or building society account there. Around 25 different bank accounts can be accessed at Post Office branches.

We also understand Post Office Limited is developing new banking and savings products which will be aimed at existing Post Office card account customers. We would like every DWP customer who currently has a Post Office card account to do their banking at the Post Office if that is in their best interests. DWP can help people move off Post Office card accounts to having their benefit or pension paid into more suitable bank or building society accounts, and help them open new ones which can be used at the Post Office if necessary. We will work with the Post Office and other stakeholders to develop a strategy to move customers from the Post Office card account. Our priority will be to ensure that this is a straightforward process for the customers themselves.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people receive benefit or pension payments through a Post Office card account (a) in total and (b) broken down by region. [46881]

Mr. Plaskitt: The total number of benefit and pension accounts, which are paid by direct payment into a Post Office card account, is 4,508,800. I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave on 24 January 2006 for the breakdown by region.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria will be used to assess whether the contract for the Post Office card account is continued for the payment of benefits and pensions after 2010. [46883]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Post Office card account contract is a finite contract, which ends in March 2010. The question of criteria, therefore, does not arise.

Customers will still be able to collect their benefits and pension at the Post Office. If they so wish. Around 25 different accounts can be accessed at the Post Office. The process for withdrawing money from these accounts is the same as for the Post Office card account.

Statutory Sick Pay

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what statistics his Department collects in relation to the administration of statutory sick pay on (a) the number of sick notes issued by doctors and (b) the condition for which the note was issued; and if he will make a statement. [46168]

Margaret Hodge: No such information is collected.

HEALTH

Drug Treatment Testing

12. Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the extent to which the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence employs models which adequately measure the change in the quality of life that new drug treatments can provide. [46711]

Jane Kennedy: The National Institute for health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has a well established methodology for measuring the quality of life benefits of the technologies it appraises. NICE frequently consults on its methodologies and invites comments from a wide range of stakeholders.

St Bartholomew's and Royal London Hospitals

14. Meg Hillier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the redevelopment of St. Bartholomew's and Royal London hospitals. [46713]

Jane Kennedy: We have now received the report from the strategic health authority and ministers must now consider the full findings of the review.

We are committed to delivering improvements to NHS services in this part of London. As soon as Ministers have considered the full findings of the review, we will work quickly with the local NHS to finalise consideration of the business case for the Barts and the London private finance initiative scheme.

Community Hospitals

15. Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the future of community hospitals. [46714]

Ms Hewitt: The White Paper, "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say: A New Direction For Community Services" was published yesterday, which sets out the Government's vision for the future of community hospitals. This builds on the 2005 manifesto commitment to develop a new generation of modern NHS community hospitals.

Sexual Health

16. Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of sexual health provision in Hertfordshire. [46715]

Caroline Flint: Primary care trusts in Hertfordshire are responsible for commissioning sexual health services, which meet the needs of their local population. A Department of Health funded national team reviewing genitor-urinary medicine and sexual health services is visiting Watford and St. Albans next week. This review will provide a push on plans to further develop and improve local sexual health services.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people were employed by the NHS to provide social health education in each year since 1997; [43128]

(2) how many staff are employed by the NHS in (a) St. Albans, (b) Hertfordshire and (c) England solely for the provision of sexual health education; and how many there were in each year since 2000. [44327]

Mr. Byrne: The requested information is not collected centrally. It is for primary care trusts to provide sexual health services which meet their local population needs.

Nurses

17. Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria were used to decide a two percent. pay award for nurses for 2006–07. [46716]

Mr. Byrne: Pay awards for nurses are determined by the independent Nurses and Other Health Professions Pay Review Body following evidence submitted by the Government and staff side representatives.

Community Health

18. Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to publish the White Paper on community health. [46717]

Mr. Byrne: The White Paper, "Our health, Our Care, Our Say: A New Direction for Community Services" was published on 30 January 2006.

Mental Health

19. David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on funding for mental health services in Cambridge. [46718]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Cambridge City primary care trust's allocation will grow by £27.8 million to £123.4 million for 2005–06, an increase of 29.1 percent. In 2006–07 and 2007–08 it will receive allocations of £148 million and £160 million respectively, a cash increase of £23 million or 17 percent., over two years.

The PCT's spending on mental health services has increased by nearly £16 million since 2002–03. Cambridge City PCT will continue to spend above the national average on mental health services locally.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average wait for a mental health bed was in

(a) Lancashire and (b) Lancaster and Wyre in the last year for which figures are available. [44720]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Private Finance Initiative

20. Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the use of private finance initiative projects in the NHS. [46719]

Jane Kennedy: The private finance initiative has enabled the national health service to build 78 new hospital schemes since 1997. We remain committed to the continued use of PFI. In order to ensure that future schemes continue to be locally affordable and suitable for the needs of patients we have asked all trusts with planned schemes to reappraise their proposals.

Mileage Allowances

21. Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she last discussed with NHS Employers the calculation of mileage allowance for community nurses and voluntary drivers. [46720]

Mr. Byrne: It is the responsibility of the NHS Staff Council to set mileage allowances for NHS staff. The Secretary of State has asked NHS Employers, who represent management side in England on the NHS Staff Council, to represent the NHS on this and other issues. We understand that the NHS Staff Council will consider mileage allowances for NHS staff in their work programme this year.

It is the responsibility of individual organisations to determine whether and how much to reimburse expenses for volunteer drivers. However, it would be good practice for volunteer drivers and paid staff to be paid equal mileage rates.

Detoxification Units

22. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of in-patient detoxification units in north west England [46721]

Mr. Byrne: The National Treatment Agency's (NTA) 'National survey of inpatient drug services in England' (2005) identified 16 services providing in-patient drug treatment in the north west region. In 2003–04, the NTA national needs assessment found 1,441 drug misusers from the north west accessed in-patient treatment.

NHS/Primary Care Trust Deficits

23. Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her latest projections are for deficits in NHS trusts and primary care trusts in 2005–06. [46722]

Jane Kennedy: The national health service is forecasting a net year-end deficit of around £620 million for 2005–06. This amounts to less than 1 per cent. of funding available. We are taking action now with the minority of organisations that are underperforming with the aim of restoring financial balance.

24. Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her Department's plans to tackle deficits in NHS trusts. [46724]

Jane Kennedy: There is a deficit in a minority of national health service organisations, and a large proportion of the gross NHS deficit is in a relatively small number of organisations, so the focus of our effort will be on these organisations. KPMG have already carried out an initial assessment of 62 organisations. Following this exercise, 18 organisations will receive urgent turnaround support to help them deliver efficiency improvements, and appropriate support for a further 23 is being put in place. We have also commissioned an assessment of a further 35 organisations.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people attended Accident and Emergency departments in (a) England and (b) West Cheshire Primary Care Trust (i) in total and (ii) on Saturday mornings in each year since 1995. [43014]

Mr. Byrne: Accident and emergency (A&E) attendance figures for England for the years requested are shown in the table and is available on the Department's website at: www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity/about_data/a_and_e_attendances.htm.

The Cheshire West Primary Care Trust is not a provider of A&E services. However, the Countess of Cheshire Hospital NHS Foundation Trust has been providing A&E services within the Cheshire West geographical area since 1993. Attendance figures for this trust are also shown in the table.

Total attendances at A&E departments, 1995–96 to 2004–05

The data requested on A&E attendance on Saturday mornings are not collected centrally.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated cost to the NHS has been of raising the target for patients being seen in Accident and Emergency departments within four hours from 95 percent. to 98 percent. [43015]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people died as a result of delays in accident and emergency departments in each of the past five years. [43062]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested could only be made available at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of targets for accident and emergency departments on the working practices of medical assessment units. [43291]

Mr. Byrne: Assessment suggests delivery of the four-hour accident and emergency operational standard has had a positive impact on practice in medical assessment units. National best practice guidelines have been made available as such units have become standard across the national health service.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with (a) NHS medical practitioners and (b) nursing staff on the impact of the Government targets for accident and emergency on the services provided to patients by the NHS. [43292]

Mr. Byrne: The Department holds regular and frequent discussions with a wide range of national health service staff. Feedback from these sessions shows there to be a wide consensus amongst doctors and nurses that the delivery of the four-hour standard has positively transformed accident and emergency services for patients and staff.

Agency Staff (North-West)

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost of agency (a) nurses and (b) doctors has been in each year since 2000 in the (i) Liverpool and (ii) Southport and Ormskirk area, broken down by hospital. [43116]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not available in the format requested. However, information has been provided for each national health service trust in the Liverpool and Southport and Ormskirk area.

Ambulance Service

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many instances have been recorded of the ambulance service using mobile phone location data to effect a rescue operation. [43785]

Mr. Byrne: Mobile phone location information is increasingly used by ambulance services to help identify the location of 999 callers, but information on frequency and purpose of usage is not collected centrally.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many assaults on ambulance staff while on duty in Lancashire were recorded in each of the last five years; and how many prosecutions resulted in each case. [45095]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not available in the format requested.

The NHS Security Management Service (SMS), created in April 2003, has collected data on the number of physical assaults on national health service staff in England for the period 2004–05. The figure for the ambulance service was 1,329.

Information about the number of prosecutions resulting from reports of assaults on ambulance staff was not collected centrally for the period 2000–04. The number of prosecutions identified involving assaults on ambulance staff in 2004–05 in England totalled 107.

A breakdown of figures for assaults and prosecutions for each ambulance trust in England for the year 2004–05 will be released shortly.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the level of demand for ambulance services was in each ambulance trust between midnight and four a.m. on 4 December (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [45276]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not centrally collected by the Department.

Level of demand for ambulance services is based on the number of emergency calls received by ambulance trusts. The data that the Department does collect on emergency calls is published in the statistical bulletin, "Ambulance services, England: 2004–05", which is available in the Library and on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/11/36/79/04113679.pdf.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding her Department has allocated for training controllers to expand their local geographical knowledge to prepare for the proposed reorganisation of ambulance trusts. [44065]

Mr. Byrne: Ambulance trusts are responsible for funding training of control room staff.

Ambulance control room staff use advanced technology to match the nearest resource to patients. Therefore, they are not solely reliant on their local knowledge of the area in which they work when directing ambulances to emergency call-outs. In addition, a lot of local knowledge comes from front-line staff driving the vehicles. There are no plans to reduce the number of staff involved on front-line healthcare duties as part of the proposed reorganisation of ambulance trusts.

Brain Tumours (Treatment)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations she has received on the use of (a) temozolomide and (b) carmustine implants for the treatment of newly diagnosed high grade glioma; [42481]

(2) what discussions she has had with (a) scientists, (b) clinicians and (c) brain tumour charities on the use of (i) carmustine implants and (ii) temozolomide. [42482]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are not aware of any formal representations on the use of temozolomide and carmustine implants for the treatment of newly diagnosed high grade glioma.

Ministers have not had any formal discussions on the use of temozolomide and carmustine implants for the treatment of newly diagnosed high grade glioma.

However, the Department has asked the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) to appraise carmustine implants and temozolomide for the treatment of newly diagnosed high-grade glioma.

As part of the appraisal process NICE has consulted with the manufacturers of carmustine implants and temozolomide as well as professional and patient groups.

NICE has now published preliminary recommendations on the use of carmustine implants and temozolomide in the treatment of newly diagnosed high-grade glioma. It is important to note that these recommendations do not constitute the Institute's formal guidance on this technology and may change after consultation.

Breast Cancer

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many women there are in West Lancashire aged 40 to 49 years with a family history of breast cancer; [45089]

(2) how many women in West Lancashire aged 40 to 49 years with a family history of breast cancer received a mammogram in 2004–05. [45093]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally.

Cancelled Operations (North-West)

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled by each hospital in the (a) Southport and Ormskirk and (b) Liverpool in the last year for which figures are available; and how many of those patients were operated on within 28 days of the operation being cancelled. [43114]

Mr. Byrne: The table shows the number of last minute cancellations for non-clinical reasons and the number of which were operated on within 28 days for hospital trusts in the (a) Southport and Ormskirk area and (b) Liverpool area.

Cancelled operations for non clinical reasons

National health service hospital trust	Number of last minute cancellations for non-clinical reasons	Of which were operated on within 28 days
Southport and Ormskirk area
Southport and Ormskirk Hospital NHS Trust	92	92
Liverpool area
Aintree Hospitals NHS Trust	272	245
Walton Centre for Neurology and Neurosurgery NHS Trust	146	146
Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen Hospitals Universities NHS Trust	343	276
Liverpool Womens Hospital NHS Trust	62	60
Royal Liverpool Children's NHS Trust	107	87
The Cardiothoracic Centre—Liverpool NHS Trust	348	336

Notes:

1. Data are for the latest 12 months from October 2004 to September 2005.
2. A last minute cancellation is one that occurs on the day the patient was due to arrive, after they have arrived in hospital or on the day of their operation. For example, you are to be admitted to hospital on a Monday for an operation scheduled for the following day (Tuesday). If the hospital cancels your operation for non-clinical reasons on the Monday then this would count as a last minute cancellation. This includes patients who have not actually arrived in hospital and have been telephoned at home prior to their arrival.
3. An operation which is rescheduled to a time within 24 hours of the original scheduled operation should be recorded as a postponement and not as a cancellation. The QMCO collection does not record the number of postponements.
4. Some common non-clinical reasons for cancellations by the hospital include: ward beds unavailable; surgeon unavailable; emergency case needing theatre; theatre list over-ran; equipment failure; admin error; anaesthetist unavailable; theatre staff unavailable; and critical care bed unavailable.

Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the anonymised annual salaries are for NHS chief executives within the Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority area, including the strategic health authority itself. [45094]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not held centrally but can be obtained from the annual reports of the relevant national health service organisations.

Choosing Health White Paper

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department has allocated to implementing the Choosing Health White Paper; what sum has been earmarked from this allocation for the prevention, detection and treatment of (a) sexually transmitted diseases and (b) HIV/AIDS; and over what time scale. [43322]

Caroline Flint: Over the next three years £1 billion, in addition to planned mainstream funding, will be invested to catalyse action that supports people in taking responsibility for improving their health, through the implementation of the Choosing Health White Paper. Of this, £300 million, over three years, is for measures to improve sexual health.

Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to commission the production of a national service framework on chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. [43417]

Mr. Byrne: The Department is currently considering its response to the chief medical officer's recommendation that a national service framework be formulated for chronic obstructive pulmonary disease.

Departmental Advertising Campaigns

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the public information advertising campaigns run by her Department in the past 12 months; and what her Department spent on (a) newspapers and (b) television advertising for those campaigns. [42515]

Jane Kennedy: Media spend on public information advertising for the Department for the period 1 January to 31 December 2005 was £23.06 million. The campaigns are listed in the table with a breakdown of newspaper and television advertising costs.

£ million

Campaign	Television advertising	Newspapers

Departmental IT Systems

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department has spent on IT systems in each year since 1997; what the purpose of each system is; what the outturn against planned expenditure of each system was; and what the (a) planned and (b) actual date of completion was of each system. [41324]

Mr. Byrne: Information requested has been placed in the Library.

Diverticulitis

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what treatment is available on the NHS for the elderly who suffer from non-life threatening diverticulitis; [44981]

(2) many people the NHS treated for diverticulitis in the last year for which figures are available; and what the cost was of treating those patients; [44982]

(3) what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the (i) life expectancy and (ii) quality of life of those suffering from non-life threatening diverticulitis. [44983]

Mr. Byrne: The symptoms, and the risk of complications, associated with diverticulitis can usually be controlled by good self-care aimed at reducing the incidence of constipation through a high-fibre diet with adequate fluid intake and exercise. For those where this is not possible stool bulking agents can be prescribed.

Information on the numbers treated for diverticulitis, and the associated cost to the national health service, is not collected.

We are not aware of any research on life expectancy, or the quality of life, for those living with diverticulitis undertaken by the Department.

Drug and Alcohol Detoxification

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact on waiting times for in-patient drug and alcohol detoxification treatment in (a) Lancaster and Wyre and (b) Lancashire if the Castle Unit at Ridge Lea Hospital in Lancaster closes. [44716]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

This is the responsibility of the Cumbria and Lancashire strategic health authority in partnership with the primary care trusts in the area.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the availability of in-patient drug and alcohol detoxification services in (a) Lancashire, (b) Lancaster and Wyre and (c) the North West. [44717]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally. However, the Cumbria and Lancashire strategic health authority reports that there are a mixture of private and national health service facilities available. NHS facilities include:

the Castle Unit and Harvey House at Lancaster;

Kenyon House (drugs) at Drugs North West in Prestwich and Wentwoth House (alcohol) at Eccles.

The main referral point for drug detoxification is Kenyon House, as all three drug action teams fund bed nights there. Private units include:

Abbey Gisburn Park Hospital;

the Clifton Detox and Pierpoint house units at St. Annes-on-Sea and the Priory Hospital Lancashire in Preston.

Waiting times for detoxification beds varies according to the differing demand from individual services.

Fertility Treatment

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 8 December 2005, Official Report, column 1568W, on fertility treatment, what percentage of primary care trusts (PCTs) responded to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence survey on the implementation of its guidelines on the assessment and treatment of people with fertility problems; and what percentage of all PCTs reported that they were providing at least one cycle of IVF to all eligible couples. [42726]

Caroline Flint: The overall response rate to the survey carried out by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence was 42.4 percent., the responses covering 128 primary care trusts (PCTs). Over half (63.5 percent.) of the PCTs replying said that they were offering one cycle of in vitro fertilization, with a further 31.7 percent, offering two cycles. Those responding, and indicating that they are providing at least one cycle, represent approximately 40 percent, of all PCTs. We are discussing with Infertility Network UK (IN-UK), the leading voluntary organisation representing the interests of fertility patients, ways in which IN-UK can work with PCTs to help ensure that fertility patients' voices are heard when decisions about the provision of services are made at local level.

Food Labelling

Jim Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Food Standards Agency about the revised food labelling system; and when she expects to report the Agency's conclusions. [45350]

Caroline Flint: The European Commission has indicated that it plans to propose revisions to the European Union legislation on nutrition labelling in 2007 in order to meet consumer needs and expectations. The Food Standards Agency (FSA) will consult with stakeholders on all aspects of the new proposals when they are published.

The FSA is currently consulting on proposals for a voluntary front of pack simplified system of nutrition labelling that will make it easier for people to make healthier food choices. This consultation closes on 8 February. The recommended scheme will be considered by the FSA's board at its open meeting on 9 March.

Foundation Trusts

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the detailed results of the evaluations of the state of readiness to become foundation trusts of all hospitals that were examined in the pilot project in 2005. [41848]

Mr. Byrne: The outcome of the whole health community diagnostic programme will be an action plan in each trust setting out what they need to do to achieve national health service foundation trust status and an indication of when they might enter the applications process. Action plans for each trust will need to be agreed between the trust and their strategic health authority and will be considered by the trust board at a meeting where the papers will be made public in the usual way.

Gambling

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what gambling addiction services are available in (a) Lancashire and (b) Lancaster and Wyre. [44715]

Mr. Byrne: Very few problem gamblers present to the national health service for treatment and specialist services are not widely available. However, most addiction services which concentrate on substance misuse are also prepared to treat problem gamblers. However, this data are not centrally collected by the Department.

General Practitioners

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been registered with a GP in each year since 1997. [43531]

Mr. Byrne: From 1 April 2004 patients register with a practice rather than an individual general practitioner. Total registration data are shown in the table.

Numbers of patients registered with a general practitioner and from 2004 general practice in England

1 October 1997	50,917,256
1 October 1998	51,117,646
1 October 1999	50,898,948
30 September 2000	51,336,812
30 September 2001	51,254,833
30 September 2002	51,524,894

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the likely effect on the number of inappropriate (a) investigations, (b) prescriptions and (c) referrals should multiple registration be introduced. [43568]

Mr. Byrne: These are among the considerations we are taking into account in preparing the forthcoming White Paper following the public consultation on "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say".

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the (a) condition and (b) fitness for purpose of general practitioner practice premises. [43569]

Mr. Byrne: Any person entering into a contract or agreement with a primary care trust (PCT) under which they are to provide primary medical services is required to ensure that the premises used for the provision of such services are suitable for the delivery of those services and are sufficient to meet the reasonable needs of the contractor's patients.

PCTs are responsible for monitoring compliance with these contracts or agreements including any necessary assessment of the condition and fitness for purpose of practice premises.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what data her Department collects from primary care trusts via the annual general practice assessment questionnaire. [43570]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not centrally collect any data from the general practice assessment questionnaire. The conduct of the questionnaire is performed by practices or for practices by a third party and acted upon locally.

Gershon Review

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress her Department has made towards its Gershon review targets. [42665]

Mr. Byrne: Up to September 2005, the latest for which confirmed figures are currently available we have achieved £1,709 million against our target of £6,500 million by March 2008.

Details of this early progress are provided in the Department's autumn performance report 2005 published on 7 December 2005 and is available on our website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/42/52/04124252.pdf

Haemophilia

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost is of controlling the bleeding of people with haemophilia (a) using recombinant factor VIII and factor IX and (b) using plasma derived products. [44926]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

Health Workers (Checks)

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Education regarding checks for health workers who work with children in schools; and when such discussions took place. [45358]

Mr. Byrne: Prior to her announcement on 19 January, the Secretary of State had conversations about safeguarding children with my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on 12 and 18 January.

Herceptin

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 128W, on Herceptin, for what reasons Herceptin is excluded from section 10(6)(4) of the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme published on 3 November 2004. [43637]

Jane Kennedy: Herceptin is not excluded from the 2005 pharmaceutical price regulation scheme under paragraph 10.6.4. All branded licensed national health service medicines are subject to the scheme irrespective of which indications are licensed.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what targets have been set for hospital bed occupancy; how many beds have been available in (a) general and (b) acute wards in hospitals in Lancashire Teaching NHS Trust in each year since 1997; and what percentage of these were occupied on average in each year. [43160]

Mr. Byrne: Evidence suggests that the optimal bed occupancy rate is around 82 to 85 per cent. These figures however are merely a guideline and it is up to the national health service locally to decide how best to manage their services.

The number of beds that have been made available in general and acute wards in Lancashire Teaching Hospitals Foundation NHS Trust, and the percentage of these that were occupied on average since 1997 is shown in the table. The data are collected on a provider rather than a commissioner basis.

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in reducing shortages of hospital beds during winter. [46723]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Strategic health authorities are responsible for ensuring that national health service organisations work together with other stakeholders, including NHS foundation trusts, to coordinate and improve NHS services throughout the year. Effective hospital capacity planning and bed management is one key element in this local process.

It is a tribute to all NHS staff that, nationally, the patient experience in accident and emergency and elective care has continually improved over recent years. For example, over 98 per cent. of patients are now seen and treated in A&E in less than four hours.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds are available in (a) general and (b) acute wards in each hospital in (i) Liverpool and (ii) Southport and Ormskirk. [43115]

Mr. Byrne: The table shows the average daily number of general and acute beds available in hospital trusts in Liverpool and Southport and Ormskirk.

Hospital Patients (Liverpool)

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients treated in (a) Alder Hey, (b) Liverpool Women's hospital, (c) Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen hospital, (d) Aintree hospital, (e) Cardio Thoracic Centre and (f) Walton Centre for neurology in each of the last three years were resident in (i) Southport and (ii) West Lancashire constituency. [43113]

Mr. Byrne: Information is not available in the format requested. However, the following tables show the counts of finished consultant episodes and patients at Royal Liverpool Childrens, Liverpool Womens Hospital National Health Service Trust, Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen Hospitals Universities NHS Trust, Aintree Hospitals NHS Trust, The Cardiothoracic Centre—Liverpool NHS Trust, Walton Centre for Neurology and Neurosurgery NHS Trust where the patients are resident within the Southport and Formby primary care trust (PCT) and West Lancashire PCT.

Notes:

Finished consultant episode (FCE)

An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

Patient counts

Patient counts are based on the hospital episode statistics (HES) unique patient identifier, HESID. This identifier is derived based on patient's date of birth, postcode, sex, local patient identifier and NHS number, using an agreed algorithm. Where data is incomplete, HESID might erroneously link episodes or fail to recognise episodes for the same patient. Care is therefore needed, especially where duplicate records persist in the data. The patient count cannot be summed across a table where patients may have episodes in more than one cell.

Primary care trust (PCT) and strategic health authority (SHA) data quality PCT and SHA data was added to historic data-years in the HES database using 2002–03 boundaries, as a one-off exercise in 2004. The quality of the data on PCT of treatment and SHA of treatment is poor in 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99, with over a third of all finished episodes having missing values in these years. Data quality of PCT of general practitioner practice and SHA of GP practice in 1997–98 and 1998–99 is also poor, with a high proportion missing values where practices changed or ceased to exist. There is less change in completeness of the residence-based fields over time, where the majority of unknown values are due to missing postcodes on birth episodes. Users of time series analysis including these years need to be aware of these issues in their interpretation of the data.

Ungrossed Data

Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data, that is the data is ungrossed.

Housing Development

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will discuss with the Deputy Prime Minister the merits of including health impact assessments in planning for areas designated for housing growth.[45348]

Caroline Flint: The Government's White Paper "Choosing health" integrated health impact assessment (HIA) into the regulatory impact assessment (RIA) process so that all Government Departments could consider the possible impact of their policies on health.

The Department has regular contact with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) on a range of issues including the integration of health considerations in planning. We have provided information on health in new ODPM guidance on strategic environmental assessment and sustainability appraisal. Such appraisals are applied to regional spatial strategies and local development documents which are used for planning purposes.

Improving Working Lives Standard

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the programmes which form part of the Improving Working Lives standard; how much funding has been allocated to each of these programmes since their start date, broken down by financial year; from what sources the funding for these programmes has been derived (a) in past years and (b) in 2005–06; if she will make it her policy that funding will be made available to support (i) the flexible careers scheme, (ii) the NHS Childcare Strategy, (iii) the GP Returner scheme, (iv) the Golden Hello scheme and (v) the NHS Delayed Retirement scheme in five financial years; and if she will make a statement. [44056]

Mr. Byrne: The improving working lives (IWL) standard was launched in October 2000 with an initial allocation of £9 million to health organisations and funding to promote IWL in subsequent years is in the table. IWL supports the aims of the NHS Plan in relation to increasing the national health service workforce. IWL is a feature of every day management in the NHS with successful implementation of modern employment practices and follows seven areas of good practice, which include flexible working and flexible retirement, child care and support for carers.

Improving working lives

	Funding (£)
2001–02	9 million
2002–03	1.9 million
2003–04	2.6 million
2004–05	722,000
2005–06	33,000

Initiatives such as the flexible careers scheme is one of many options for employers, which support the broader IWL ethos of promoting work life balance through flexible working. Other options on flexible working include the use of different rosters and working patterns to reflect service delivery.

The flexible careers scheme for hospital doctors was introduced in November 2001 and extended to general practitioners in 2002. The scheme supports flexible working and return to practice for doctors and general practitioners and Departmental funding from central programme budgets which is shown in the table.

Flexible Careers Scheme

	Funding (£)
2001–02	30,000
2002–03	640,000
2003–04	9.1 million
2004–05	23 million

Flexible working is now well embedded in the NHS through implementation of modern employment practice and legislation. The management and funding of the scheme is in the process of being devolved to local health organisations.

The NHS child care strategy had over £70 million invested between 2001 to 2004 to provide 150 nurseries for NHS staff. In addition, the Government committed the £100 million savings from Shifting the Balance of Power (StBoP) to extending the child care strategy, to ensure that the child care needs of all staff are met. From 2004–05 responsibility for child care has been devolved to the NHS.

In 2004–05 support for child care was extended to NHS students in the form of NHS student child care allowance. In 2004–05, £7 million was provided from central programme budget and in 2005–06, the investment will rise to approximately £16 million.

The golden hello scheme for general practitioners was replaced in April 2005 by the primary care development scheme with the aim to provide funding, targeted locally, at those areas that have the greatest recruitment difficulties in general practice. The Department allocated £13 million to support the scheme in 2005–06 to strategic health authorities.

The NHS delayed retirement scheme was replaced from 1 April 2004 by the new seniority arrangements negotiated for the new general practitioner contract. Retaining staff approaching retirement and encouraging staff to work beyond conventional retirement age one of the key features of IWL.

Independent Sector Treatment Centres

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of independent sector treatment centres (ISTCs) on the morale of NHS staff; and whether her Department has conducted a survey of the opinion of NHS staff on the effectiveness of ISTCs. [43695]

Mr. Byrne: No such assessments or surveys have been undertaken.

Influenza

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to question reference 40822, what the closing date is for tenders to contract to supply influenza vaccine to tackle a pandemic. [44749]

Caroline Flint: We have just concluded pre-tender meetings with the manufacturers who expressed an interest to the Official Journal of the European Union. The closing date for tenders was 28 November 2005. Final tenders will be issued by the end of this month following comments received on the draft issued before the pre-tender meetings.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 1 November 2005, Official Report, column 971W, on influenza, which manufacturers have responded to the invitation to tender for a contract to supply pandemic influenza vaccine; when the invitation to tender for the contract closed; when she expects to agree the contract to supply pandemic influenza vaccine; when she expects influenza vaccine manufacturers to have sufficient capacity to produce 120 million doses of influenza vaccine to the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [44933]

Caroline Flint: We have just concluded pre-tender meetings with the manufacturers who expressed an interest to the Official Journal of the European Union. The closing date for tenders was 19 October 2005. Final tenders will be issued by the end of this month following comments received on the draft issued before the pre-tender meetings. It is too early to give an indication of production capabilities because this will depend upon the nature of the eventual virus.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of people in at-risk groups who were unable to obtain a seasonal influenza vaccination in the borough of Hammersmith and Fulham in 2005. [45254]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not collected centrally.

IT Costs

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the average percentage of the overall budget of (a) primary care trusts and (b) NHS trusts which was spent on IT in the most recent period for which figures are available; [42190]

(2) what percentage of the allocation to a typical (a) primary care trust and (b) NHS trust is assumed to be for information technology expenditure. [42283]

Mr. Byrne: The great majority of funding allocated to primary care trusts (PCTs) is not ring fenced, and national health service trusts do not receive allocations but are paid for the provision of care services commissioned from them by PCTs. Each NHS organisation is free, and expected, to use its resources in the way that delivers the best available value for money.

Based on NHS summarised accounts data, spending in 2004–05 on information technology (IT) represented 6.5 per cent. of total NHS trust capital expenditure, and 16.6 per cent. of total primary care trust capital expenditure.

Revenue expenditure on IT is reported through an annual national survey of NHS bodies. Based on information from the 2004 survey, the latest period for which figures are available, the average percentage of revenue allocations which NHS bodies as a whole planned to spend on IT in 2004–05 is 2.11 per cent.

Detailed information from 2004 survey returns can be found on the NHS Connecting for Health's website at: www.connectingforhealth.nhs.uk/publications.

Because of the different sources and accounting bases for the available information, it is not possible to differentiate separate percentage revenue figures for NHS trusts and PCTs, or to quote a meaningful aggregate figure for combined capital and revenue expenditure on IT for either NHS trusts or PCTs.

Notes:

1. Figures do not include the Department's central expenditure on IT through the national programme for IT.

2. With effect from 2004–05, NHS foundation trusts (FTs) have not been required to submit financial returns to the Department, and consequently FT data are not included in the percentages for capital expenditure.

3. Percentage revenue expenditure derives from returns provided in 2004 by 568 out of 600 NHS organisations in response to the national survey.

Khat

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of khat on the health of its users. [43564]

Caroline Flint: The Department has made no formal assessment of the impact of khat on the health of its users, however we keep the evidence for health harms under on-going review to inform health messages and health policy.

The Advisory Council of the Misuse of Drugs (ACMD) has recently been reviewing the evidence of harms associated with khat use. The Department has an observer role on ACMD so we are fully informed of the scientific evidence and independent expert judgement of its harms in the United Kingdom and elsewhere.

In December 2005 the ACMD produced a report for the Home Secretary, and a number of recommendations. The recommendations included that khat should not be brought under the controls of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971, and a number of supplementary recommendations on educating and informing people of the risks posed by khat, and ensuring appropriate treatment and advice services are targeted where they are needed. The full report and recommendations can be found at www.drugs.gov.uk.

The Home Secretary announced on the 19 January that he accepted the council's recommendations in full.

Lung Disease

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to appoint a senior policy lead within her Department on lung disease and treatment. [43895]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has no plans to appoint a senior policy lead on lung disease and treatment.

Mental Health Services

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental health tribunal hearings took place in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [45191]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of mental health review tribunal hearings in England that have taken place over the last five business years are as follows:

	Hearings
2000–01	11,535
2001–02	11,091
2002–03	10,076
2003–04	12,323
2004–05	11,682

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many referrals there were to (a) psychiatrists, (b) clinical psychologists, (c) psychotherapists, (d) cognitive and behavioural therapists and (e) other therapists in each of the last five years, broken down to the most local level for which figures are available. [40890]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not available in the requested format because such information is only collected for consultant-led services. Information on the number of admissions under the care of a mental illness consultant in each of the last five years has been placed in the Library. The information is broken down according to care provider, strategic health authority and regional Government office boundaries where possible.

Midwives

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total number of midwives working in the NHS has been in each year since 1997, expressed as (a) headcount and (b) full-time equivalent; and what the total number of midwives working in the NHS was in each year since 1997 in terms of full-time equivalents per delivery. [42944]

Mr. Byrne: The total number of midwives working in the national health service since 1997 is shown in the table.

Midwives employed in the NHS as at 30 September, 1997 to 2004

	Headcount	Full-time equivalents
1997	22,385	18,053
1998	22,841	18,168
1999	22,799	17,876
2000	22,572	17,662
2001	23,075	18,048
2002	23,249	18,119
2003	23,941	18,444
2004	24,844	18,854

Source:
Department of Health Non-Medical Workforce Census.

The number of midwives working in the NHS in terms of full-time equivalents per delivery is not collected centrally. The number of students entering midwifery training in 2004–05 was 2,374, approaching 50 per cent. more than in 1996–97.

Naltrexone

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has commissioned on the use of naltrexone as a treatment for drug misusers; and if she will make a statement. [44644]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has asked the National Institute for Clinical and Health Excellence (NICE) to review the evidence on naltrexone and, by March 2007, deliver a technology appraisal on naltrexone as a treatment for relapse prevention.

This work has been started and will aim to look at the scientific research to see how effective natltrexone is at helping people stay off drugs, and to identify those groups of drug misusers, in the community and prison settings, who are most likely to benefit from this being prescribed to them. It will also look at advising on the optimum care package that needs to be available to those prescribed naltrexone to secure effective outcomes.

NHS Blood and Transplant

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost implications (a) have been and (b) are expected to be as a result of the merger of the National Blood Authority and UK Transplant. [43009]

Jane Kennedy: The merger between the National Blood Authority and UK Transplant will enable the new organisation to achieve savings targets, identified by the arm's length body (ALB) review, to be attained over the next three years.

NHS Blood and Transplant's specific ALB targets to be achieved by 2008–09 are a reduction in grant in aid of £11 million; further efficiency savings of £16 million; and a reduction in headcount of 153 whole time equivalents.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) staff and (b) managers are employed at NHS Blood and Transplant; [42671]

(2) what change there has been in the number of managerial posts as a result of the merger of the National Blood Authority and UK Transplant. [42672]

Caroline Flint: NHS Blood and Transplant (NHSBT) employs 6,760 staff, of whom 34 per cent. are professionally qualified clinical staff, 55 per cent. provide support to clinical staff and 11 per cent. are managerial and infrastructure support staff.

The new NHSBT Board replaced the National Blood Authority Board and the UK Transplant Board on 1 October 2005. The new NHSBT Board are working to develop the future strategy and structure for NHSBT.

NHS (Oxfordshire)

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when she expects the turnaround team to report on the situation in the NHS in Oxfordshire; [43902]

(2) what advice she has (a) sought and (b) received on the projected financial deficit of the NHS in Oxfordshire for 2006–07. [43903]

Caroline Flint: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health announced the formation of turnaround teams at the beginning of December 2005, the aim of these teams is to restore financial balance to the national health service organisations concerned.

Oxford Radcliffe NHS Trust is subject to the first phase of the work which is an initial assessment to establish the position of the trust's financial control and actions to restore financial balance.

This assessment has now finished and the strategic health authority is currently considering whether the trust should have any further support.

NHS Direct

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost was of providing answers to calls to NHS Direct in each year since 1998. [41965]

Mr. Byrne: The data requested are not centrally available.

NHS Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 145–46W, on NHS finance, if she will provide the equivalent figures for NHS income from fees and charges from NHS trusts in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04; and if she will outline the reasons for the trend in this income stream from 2002–03 to 2004–05. [43027]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 1555–58W which provided the comparable data for 2002–03 and 2003–04. The three years data are:

Fees and charges from NHS trusts

	£ million
2002–03	386.1
2003–04	531.7
2004–05	669.4

The figures refer to income from local authorities and other non-national health service income.

The increase is principally due to increases in income from local authorities for example under care trust joint arrangements or for delayed discharges, over the period.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her Written Statement of 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 37WS, on NHS finance data, what planned financial support each (a) strategic health authority, (b) primary care trust and (c) NHS trust will (i) receive and (ii) provide in 2005–06 at (A) month six of 2005–06 and (B) year end 2005–06; and what the forecast gross financial position of each body is at each date. [41901]

Mr. Byrne: The 2005–06 month six forecast outturn position for all national health service organisations (strategic health authorities, primary care trusts and national health service trusts) is available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/FreedomOfInformation/ClassesOfInformation/fs/en

Copies of this information are available in the Library.

The figure provided on the Department's website and in the Library, are inclusive of planned support.

Detailed in-year monitoring data are used for operational management of the NHS. It is not appropriate to publish the data at this stage.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Written Statement of 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 37WS, on NHS finance data, if she will publish the year-end financial forecasts for (a) strategic health authorities, (b) NHS trusts, (c) primary care trusts and (d) the NHS in total as at (i) month seven, (ii) month eight and (iii) month nine of the financial year. [41998]

Mr. Byrne: The forecast outturn position for 2005–06, as submitted by national health service organisations at the mid-year point (month six), is a net deficit of around £620 million. The 2005–06 month six forecast outturn position for individual NHS organisations (strategic health authorities, primary care trusts and NHS trusts) is available on the Department's website, at: www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/FreedomOfInformation/ClassesOfInformation/fs/en.

Copies of this information are available in the Library.

In-year monitoring data are used for the operational management of the NHS. It is not appropriate to publish the data on an ongoing basis during the year.

NHS IT Programme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contractors have been involved in the delivery of the NHS IT programme; and for how long each contractor has been involved. [44925]

Mr. Byrne: The national programme for information technology, which is being delivered by the NHS Connecting for Health Agency, has contracts with six primary provider organisations. These are listed, with the date on which contracts were signed.

	Month/year contracted
National service providers
BT (two contracts)	December 2003 and February 2004
Cable and Wireless	July 2004
Atos Origin	October 2003
Local service providers
CSC Alliance	December 2003
Accenture (two contracts)	December 2003 (both)
Fujitsu Alliance	January 2004
BT (with consortium partners)	December 2003

Between them these organisations make up the programme's four national application and infrastructure service providers, responsible for delivering services that are common to all users nationally, and the five local service providers, responsible for delivering services at a local level.

The primary provider organisations have contracts with numerous sub-contractor companies providing, for example, hardware, software and consultancy support, many of which are used by more than one of the primary providers. Additionally, other companies not directly involved in delivering systems and services to the national health service provide, or have provided, business support to the Department and NHS Connecting for Health in connection with the national programme.

NHS Professionals

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library the current (a) financial forecast and (b) financial position of NHS Professionals. [41117]

Mr. Byrne: The latest annual report and final accounts which give the financial information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget for NHS Professionals was in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; and what the anticipated budget is for 2006–07. [44057]

Mr. Byrne: The Department invested £26.6 million in NHS Professionals in 2004–05 and £23 million in 2005–06. Officials are currently working with NHS Professionals to agree a business plan and funding for 2006–07.

NHS Trusts (Chartered Accountants)

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) executive finance directors and (b) non-executive directors of NHS trusts in England are fully qualified chartered accountants. [42535]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Obesity

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress she has made in investigating difficulties with access to specialist obesity services since her Department's pledge in June 2004. [39565]

Caroline Flint: There are 13 national health service-operated obesity clinics for children and adults located across England.

The National Institute for Clinical Excellence has been commissioned to prepare definitive guidance on the prevention, identification, management and treatment of obesity. This is due in early 2007. Meanwhile, as part of its wider obesity programme, the Department completed consultation on 3 January on:

an obesity care pathway to assist health professionals in providing obesity services and a weight loss guide to be given to patients who intend to lose weight.

The Department published guidance for primary care trusts (PCTs) on measuring the height and weight of primary school children on 11 January. In order to help PCTs develop local strategies to prevent and tackle overweight and obesity, the Department has also supported the development of an obesity toolkit to signpost the reader to relevant sources of information regarding evidence of effectiveness of interventions.

Ostomy Care

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many ostomy patients returned to hospital for treatment for complications of their surgery in the last year for which figures are available; [45053]

(2) what steps she is taking to ensure that elderly ostomy patients continue to receive help at home for the related services and appliances they require; [45055]

(3) what estimate she has made of the average age of an ostomy patient; [45057]

(4) what estimate she has made of the number of ostomy patients who also (a) suffer from a disability and (b) need a walking aid. [45058]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the number of ostomy patients returned to hospital due to complications from their surgery is not available.

It is the responsibility of primary care trusts to provide adequate health and social care services, including the provision of appliances, for all ostomy patients in their area.

We have made no estimates on the average age of ostomy patients, or on the number of ostomy patients living with a disability or needing a walking frame.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of surgeries resulting in ostomy performed in (a) England, (b) West Yorkshire, (c) Kirklees and (d) Huddersfield in each of the past 10 years. [45056]

Mr. Byrne: We have made no estimates for the number of people whose surgery results in an ostomy.

Patient Records

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether a trained doctor will (a) oversee and (b) verify the accuracy of the transfer of a patient's records to the new electronic system; [43010]

(2) what safeguards she has put in place to ensure that general practitioners' handwriting is not transcribed wrongly onto electronic patient records; [43011]

(3) what estimate she has made of the time it will take to transfer handwritten general practitioners' notes on to the new IT system; [43012]

(4) whether a patient's notes will be (a) scanned and (b) transcribed into the new IT system. [43013]

Mr. Byrne: National health service trusts and general practitioners (GPs) will not be required to transfer handwritten notes to the NHS Care Records Service (NHS CRS) when the services goes live locally. Rather, each patient's care record will be populated using data from existing electronic systems. Trusts and GP practices will, however, be free to supplement the transferred data from paper records where they feel it to be clinically and logistically appropriate.

GPs already frequently transfer patient records to another GP when a patient changes their address or GP. It is the responsibility of the individual clinician to ensure that electronic data they have entered or transferred to a new or replacement electronic system is correct. An electronic facility to assist this process is currently under development—the 'GP2GP' record transfer service. This will reduce the amount of re-keying required by enabling the direct transfer of the electronic component of a patient's existing care record.

The Data Protection Act 1998 establishes a set of principles with which users of personal data must comply. These include the duty to ensure that information is accurate and up to date. This duty would extend to individual GPs and other clinicians when transferring local electronic records, or transcribing or scanning paper records, to the NHS CRS. Guidance for transcribing paper records developed by the Royal College of General Practitioners and issued by the Department makes it clear that responsibility for the quality of the necessary processes lies with the individual practice.

When the NHS CRS is deployed locally, a senior clinician, for example, the principle practitioner in a GP practice is responsible for approving the transfer of data. This only occurs after industry-standard testing procedures have demonstrated that the data has been safely transferred. Verification is by a series of quantitative and qualitative pre- and post-validation checks that ensure that the data stored on the new system is the same as the original.

It is considered to be good practice for NHS trusts and GP practices to preserve the existing paper records. The facility exists to easily store a case note reference on the electronic system that allows ready identification of the paper record where this may be required.

Patient Safety

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) patient safety incidents and (b) near misses have been reported by category for each hospital within the Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority; [45091]

(2) how many deaths were recorded as a result of patient safety incidents at (a) Southport and Ormskirk NHS Trust, (b) Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen University Hospital NHS Trust, (c) Aintree University NHS Trust and (d) Wrightington, Wigan and Leigh hospitals in 2004. [45125]

Mr. Byrne: The National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA) receives patient safety incident reports on a confidential basis. The NPSA does not provide patient safety incident data at a geographical or local national health service organisation level.

Primary Care Trusts (Sunderland)

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which Sunderland primary care trusts will have their final funding for the 2005–06 financial year changed against initial allocation. [42443]

Mr. Byrne: All Sunderland primary care trusts will have their final funding for the 2005–06 financial year changed against initial allocation. It is standard practice for adjustments to be made against the initial resource allocations mainly for the allocation of additional funds from centrally held budgets.

Private Finance Initiative Schemes

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which private finance initiative schemes in her Department have (a) reached financial close and are completed and operational, (b) have reached financial close and work has started on site, (c) are in negotiation but have not yet reached financial close and (d) have not yet placed advertisements in the Official Journal of the European Union; what the (i) capital value and (ii) completion or anticipated completion date is in each case; and if she will make a statement. [43647]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire to the reply I gave on 9 January 2006, Official Report, columns 158W and 159W to the hon. Member for Vale of Clwyd (Chris Ruane) and the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude).

Psychiatrists

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) median and (b) mean waiting times for patients waiting to see a consultant psychiatrist as (i) an out-patient first attendance and (ii) an elective in-patient admission were in (A) Lancashire and (B) Lancaster and Wyre in each year since 1997. [44718]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Queen Elizabeth Hospital Trust

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what allowance for population growth has been made in the budget allocation to the Queen Elizabeth Hospital Trust (a) in 2005–06 and (b) in future years. [44323]

Jane Kennedy: Revenue allocations are made direct to primary care trusts and not to national health service trusts.

Respiratory Health

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will amend the quality and outcomes framework for general practitioners to give greater priority to respiratory health. [43897]

Mr. Byrne: There are two indicator groups in the new quality and outcomes framework for respiratory health, asthma and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. The indicator groups included in the new agreement were announced in December. However, the full details of the new quality and outcomes framework are not yet available. The guidance for the new framework and the detail of the indicators will be published shortly and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Ridge Lea Hospital

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the Morecambe Bay Primary Care Trust's proposal to close the Castle Unit at the Ridge Lea Hospital in Lancaster. [44721]

Mr. Byrne: The future of the Castle Unit at the Ridge Lea Hospital has been the subject of a recent consultation exercise by the Morecambe Bay Primary Care Trust (PCT). The responses are currently being reviewed and will be discussed at a future board meeting of the PCT.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the infection rates for (a) chlamydia, (b) HIV, (c) gonorrhoea, (d) herpes and (e) syphilis were in the Dartford, Gravesham and Swanley Primary Care Trust area in each year since 1997. [43263]

Caroline Flint: This data are only routinely published at strategic health authority (SHA) level. This is shown in table 1. Sexually transmitted infections data are not yet available for 2005. The HIV diagnoses are from reports received from laboratories and clinicians by the end of September 2005.

Table 1: Rates[1,2] per 100,000 population of diagnoses of HIV and other selected sexually transmitted infections (STIs) in Kent and Medway Strategic Health Authority between 2000–04[3]

Condition description[4]	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004
HIV	4.0	4.1	6.5	6.5	7.6
Primary and Secondary Syphilis	0.3	0.4	0.7	0.5	0.6
Uncomplicated Gonorrhoea	7.2	11.8	10.6	10.1	12.7
Uncomplicated Chlamydia	41.3	39.0	59.4	72.1	116.9
Genital Herpes	24.1	25.9	25.0	23.3	27.7

[1] The denominator used to calculate the HIV rate was the population aged 15 above in Kent and Medway SHA.
[2] The denominator used to calculate STI rates was the total population of the SHA.
[3] Genitourinary medicine (GUM) clinics are open access services, so the data do not relate to residents of the SHA, but diagnoses made in the clinics within the SHA.
[4] Includes HIV diagnoses made in GUM clinics and other settings such as general practice and infectious disease units. For other STIs, only diagnoses made in GUM clinics are recorded.

Southport and Ormskirk Hospital

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the terms of reference are for the turnaround team sent into Southport and Ormskirk hospital. [43117]

Mr. Byrne: Following the initial assessment the teams will agree a tailored package of turnaround support with each organisation and the strategic health authority. The teams will then support the chief executives of the organisations in delivering turnaround. The type and length of engagement will be tailored to the needs of specific organisations. The chief executives will remain responsible for delivery in their organisations.

Specialist Gastric Care

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many specialist nurses there are for patients with colitis and Crohn's disease; and how many there have been in each of the last five years. [42087]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Standish Hospital, Stroud

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bidders have been short-listed for the Standish Hospital site, Stroud; when a decision will be made; and what requirement there will be for community involvement in the project. [41651]

Mr. Byrne: 12 bids or expressions of interest were received following re-marketing of the Standish Hospital site. The local health community has been consulted on the proposals received. Ministers will make a decision as soon as possible.

Student Grants Unit

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average time taken to reply to questions (a) telephoned and (a) emailed to the Student Grants Unit (i) helpline and (ii) email address was in the last period for which figures are available. [41037]

Mr. Byrne: The NHS Pensions Agency are responsible for the NHS Student Grants Unit.

There are dedicated telephone lines for universities who are to directly contact the Student Grants Unit without delay. From a limited exercise conducted between September and December 2005 it was apparent that other callers could experience some delay in having their calls dealt with.

Vulnerable Adults

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to extend the Protection of Vulnerable Adults scheme to (a) the NHS and (b) other health and social care settings not covered by the relevant provisions of the Care Standards Act 2000. [44903]

Mr. Byrne: In response to Sir Michael Bichard's Inquiry in June 2004, and in conjunction with the Department for Education and Skills, we have been developing a new vetting and barring scheme, legislation to provide for which will be introduced in February 2006, subject to the agreement of Parliament. This new scheme will apply to all national health service and social care settings.

Young People (Culinary Ability)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish a summary of results of the survey of young people's attitudes to cooking and culinary ability; how much this survey cost; what public health interventions its evidence will be used to support; and if she will make a statement. [41955]

Caroline Flint: We have been encouraged by the interest in the survey of young people's attitudes to cooking and culinary skills. The survey's findings will, at the earliest opportunity, be placed on the 5 A DAY website at www.5aday.nhs.uk.

The survey cost £8,000 to undertake.

The survey was designed to inform the development of the 5 A DAY programme with a focus on young independents aged 16 to 24. Survey results included:

33 per cent. of 16 to 24-year-olds have passed off a ready meal as their own and one in 10 young people never cook a proper meal for themselves because they do not know how

To help this group of young people improve their culinary skills, the Department has produced a new free recipe guide, "Fuel for Living". The guide provides simple and cost effective recipe ideas and cooking tips, to assist young people in preparing meals and increasing their fruit and vegetable consumption.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on how many occasions his Department consulted citizens' juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens' jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens' jury. [46237]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development has not consulted citizens' juries on departmental policies in the last five years.

Civil Servants (Overseas Visits)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what costs were incurred by his Department as a result of sending civil servants on overseas visits in each of the last 10 years. [46281]

Mr. Thomas: Figures for travel costs within administration costs budgets for years which information is readily available are shown as follows:

	£000
2001–02	2,358
2002–03	2,645
2003–04	10,677
2004–05	12,001

The figures for travel reflect all domestic and overseas travel for Ministers, Advisers and Officials and include costs for all travel, accommodation and subsistence. It is not possible to disaggregate costs for Officials' travel overseas without incurring a disproportionate cost.

Information for earlier years is not readily available and in some cases will no longer be held.

In 2003–04, DFID introduced new procedures to draw together administration costs, including those travel costs which had previously been recorded on the programme budget. These changes have increased transparency and has enabled DFID to manage administration costs more effectively. Figures for 2003–04 onwards now include travel costs that were previously funded by country programmes and as a result are not comparable with earlier years.

All official travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules contained in DFID's Staff Handbook and complies with the Civil Service Management Code.

EU Agricultural Subsidies

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the impact of EU agricultural subsidies on people in developing countries; and if he will make a statement. [46740]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development supports a range of research on the impacts of developed countries agricultural policies on developing countries. One current programme is with the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organisation (FAO) on the impacts of Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) agricultural Policies on developing countries. The research outputs are available at www.fao.org/trade The Government recognise the damaging impact that trade-distorting subsidies in the EU and other OECD countries have on developing countries and we are committed to securing reductions in these subsidies, through reform of the Common Agricultural Policy and the World Trade Organisation talks.

The most recent common agricultural policy reform package agreed in 2003–04 marks a significant shift in the EU's agricultural policy. The decoupling of subsidies from production should increase the market orientation of European farmers, leading to reductions in production and disposal of subsidised surpluses abroad.

The Government also fully supports the commitment made as part of the World Trade Organisation (WTO) Doha Development Agenda

> "to reduce, with a view to phasing out, all forms of export subsidies, and substantial reductions in trade-distorting domestic support."

There was progress towards this at the recent WTO ministerial in Hong Kong, where the EU agreed to phase-out its export subsidies by 2013.

Health Projects (Funding)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of his Department's budget for 2005–06 is allocated to projects for (a) AIDS, (b) tuberculosis and (c) malaria. [46879]

Mr. Thomas: DFID will spend at least £1.5 billion on AIDS related work over three years (2005–06 to 2007–08). The Department does not have a specific target for the year 2005–06. There are no targets for the Department's spending on TB and Malaria. However, DFID has already committed to double its funding to the Global Fund for AIDS, TB and Malaria to £100 million for 2006 and the same for 2007.

HIV/AIDS

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 18 January 2006, Official Report, column 1329W, on HIV/AIDS (paediatric care), if he will list the countries in which the UK funds AIDS programmes. [46381]

Mr. Thomas: DFID directly and indirectly supports HIV and AIDS related activities across all its 16 priority countries in Africa. These are Democratic Republic of the Congo, Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Nigeria, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Sudan, Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia and Zimbabwe. In well-developed states, DFID focuses on supporting national government decision-making processes and associated institutional reforms in line with the "3 ones" principles" and uses aid instruments such as general budget support. In "fragile states" where working with government has been more difficult, we have been supporting UN agencies and civil society organisations to provide a range of services.

In Asia, DFID funds HIV and AIDS programmes in India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Nepal, Vietnam, Cambodia and China. Most are not stand-alone DFID programmes, but are jointly funded. Burma is funded through our support to the UN.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, regional programmes cover a wide range of countries. In Latin America, the Brazil Sexually Transmitted Diseases/ AIDS Programme provides technical support across the region. Focus countries are Bolivia, Ecuador and Peru. In the Caribbean, the Regional Programme covers a wide range of island states, with a focus on six countries in the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States (St. Lucia, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, Grenada, Dominica, Antigua and Barbuda, and St. Kitts & Nevis). A new project supporting the private sector response to HIV and AIDS is under way in Jamaica and Barbados. A programme tackling AIDS-related stigma and discrimination covers all countries in the Caribbean.

In the Overseas Territories, support is provided to the Caribbean Epidemiology Centre to provide technical support and services for all of the Caribbean Overseas Territories (Montserrat, Turks and Caicos, British Virgin Islands, Bermuda, Cayman Islands and Anguilla).

In Europe and Central Asia, DFID supports HIV and AIDS programmes in Central Asia (Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan), through a programme working jointly with the World Bank. Flexible technical assistance programmes are also funded in Central Asia, Russia, Ukraine and Serbia and Montenegro, working with the Joint United Nation Programme for HIV and AIDS (UNAIDS).

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 6 December 2005, Official Report, column 1189W, to the hon. Member for South-West Surrey (Mr. Hunt) on HIV/AIDS, what progress has been made since the publication of the good practice framework in March 2005 towards (a) increasing access to paediatric medicines and (b) stimulating research and development into paediatric formulations. [46833]

Mr. Thomas: DFID published 'Increasing People's Access to Essential Medicines in Developing Countries: a Framework for Good Practice in the Pharmaceutical Industry' in March 2005, with widespread pharmaceutical industry support. The framework was developed in close consultation with the industry and with its stakeholders, including the World Health Organisation (WHO), non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and institutional investors. The framework, which recommends increased research and development into treatment and vaccinations for children, builds on the good work of many of the companies in the industry, and encourages pharmaceutical companies to go further by:

Engaging in widespread differential pricing of essential medicines in developing countries, especially the world's poorest, with particular attention given to patented medicines.

Increasing research and development investment for diseases affecting developing countries, including through public private partnerships.

Working to support broader health and development goals in developing countries.

and, increasing reporting and transparency around access to medicines activities.

The first recommendation related to research and development encouraged increased investment in medicines and vaccines for children. This issue has been discussed with pharmaceutical companies on a number of occasions since the launch, including at a well attended meeting of pharmaceutical companies and Government Departments on 30 September last year. Another meeting was held on 31 January to discuss differential pricing to make medicines cheaper in developing countries. The next meeting of the group will focus on paediatric issues.

The UK Government have also made significant progress on developing innovative financing to incentivise increased investment in research and development, including for paediatric formulations of medicines such as antiretroviral medicines. Research and development tax credits to increase investment in research and development for medicines and vaccines for AIDS, TB and Malaria were introduced in 2002. Last year the UK Government launched the international finance facility for immunisation, and announced plans for advanced market commitments to prompt the development of new medicines and vaccines for diseases affecting developing countries, including for paediatric formulations.

DFID also supports specific research on health in developing countries, including work on communicable diseases, sexual and reproductive health, maternal and paediatric health and HIV. DFID has funded research on the appropriate use of existing medicines in developing country settings including, clinical trials demonstrating the efficacy of co-trimoxazole prophylaxis in reducing mortality among children living with HIV and co-funding of the Development of Antiretroviral Treatment in Africa (DART) Trials with the Medical Research Council (MRC) exploring HIV treatment in resource limited settings, including for children and other vulnerable groups.

Millennium Development Goals

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what arrangements have been made by the UK to deliver the commitment made at the Millennium Review Summit of September 2005 to support comprehensive national strategies to achieve the millennium development goals by providing the necessary increases in aid of sufficient quality and timeliness. [46587]

Hilary Benn: The UK has argued strongly for increased levels of aid and debt relief to support partner countries in implementing strategies to achieve the Millennium Development Goals. Commitments made by European and G8 governments last year will increase global aid from $79 billion in 2004 to $129 billion in 2010. The UK wants to increase the impact of this by creating the International Finance Facility. Governments also made commitments on improving the quality of aid, by providing more direct support to partner governments'.

The UK has published expenditure plans for 2005–06 to 2007–08, and we intend to meet by 2013, the UN target of providing 0.7 per cent. of gross national income (GNI) as development assistance.

The United Kingdom's proposals for supporting countries to accelerate progress towards the Millennium Development Goals are set out in the paper "From Commitment to Action" prepared by the Department for International Development (DFID) and Her Majesty's Treasury. I have arranged for copies of this document to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what paediatric-centred policies have been put in place further to the Department's commitment to focus on the needs of children in the publication of its 2004 HIV and AIDS Treatment and Care Policy. [46832]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's HIV and AIDS Treatment and Care Policy, published in July 2004 alongside the UK's strategy for tackling HIV and AIDS in the developing world, focuses on supporting countries to develop and implement their own country specific policies using guidance from multilateral such as the World Health Organisation (WHO) and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), organisations that receive regular DFID funding. Like the rest of the international community DFID relies on the WHO for technical guidance on these issues.

In November 2004, the Medical Research Council's (MRC) clinical trials unit reported that using a widely available antibiotic drug could cut AIDS-related deaths in children after infancy by 43 per cent., by stopping infections associated with a weakened immune system. The outcome of the DFID-funded trial is that co-trimoxazole is now in the WHO paediatric treatment guidelines for children with HIV, and is now regarded as standard treatment even in the poorest countries. The treatment was also found to reduce the need for children's hospital admissions by 23 per cent.

In December 2004, DFID and the MRC jointly funded (£4.7 million) the Antiretroviral Therapy Research for Children (ARROW), run by the MRC clinical trials unit. The trial will address ways of providing antiretroviral therapy to children in resource poor settings and could both reduce costs of treatment as well as reducing side effects, and will begin in the next few months.

The UK is co-hosting, with UNICEF, the Global Partners Forum for Children and AIDS on 9 and 10 February. The forum will focus on key blockages to scaling up towards universal access to prevention, treatment and care for children. Paediatric treatment is one of the six key areas.

DFID has regular meetings with the pharmaceutical industry to advance the framework for good practice in the pharmaceutical industry, published in March 2005. The next meeting of this group will be dedicated to discussions on paediatric treatment.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor General if he will make a statement on the responsibilities of each directorate in the (a) Treasury's Solicitor's Department, (b) Serious Fraud Office and (c) Crown Prosecution Service. [41728]

The Solicitor-General: The responsibilities of the directorates in each of the three Departments are shown as follows:

(a) Treasury Solicitor's Department

Litigation group: Provides civil litigation services to Government Departments and other publicly funded bodies.

Employment and Commercial Practices Group: provides employment litigation ,and/or advisory services and gives advice on general contractual issues to Government Departments and other publicly funded bodies.

The Department-specific Advisory Divisions, several co-located with client Departments, provide legal support for all aspects of the client Department's work.

The European Division provides and co-ordinates legal services in support of the Government's policies in relation to the European Union, including conducting all litigation on behalf of the U.K. in the European Court of Justice.

The Bona Vacantia Division raises money from the estates of those who die intestate, and from the assets of devolved companies, on behalf of the Crown.

The Government Legal Service Secretariat supports the Treasury Solicitor (Head of the GLS) and GLS teams on a range of management and professional issues affecting more than one Department.

The Directorate of Corporate Strategy is responsible for planning and implementing strategic, business and policy development throughout the Agency.

The Treasury Solicitor's Department's Estimate also covers funding for HMCPS, and for the Attorney General's Office, which provides legal and policy advice and support to the Law Officers.

(b) Serious Fraud Office

The SFO has five investigation and prosecution divisions, each containing a number of multi-disciplinary case teams comprising lawyers, financial investigators and support staff. These divisions are supported by:

Accountancy Support and Forensic Computing—the former allocating support from a central resource; the latter responsible for the seizure, processing and analysis of all electronic-based evidence.

Asset Recovery Unit, which provides assistance on and handles applications for restraint and confiscation orders.

Finance and Establishment Division.

Mutual Legal Assistance Unit, which assists overseas authorities where there is evidence in England, Wales or N. Ireland relating to a suspected fraud overseas.

(c) Crown Prosecution Service

Policy Directorate: developing prosecution policy and providing practical guidance to CPS staff, as well as representing the interests of the CPS within the CJS.

Business Development Directorate: supporting and monitoring the 42 CPS areas in delivering Criminal Justice targets, and in the coordination and implementation of change.

Finance Directorate: developing and managing the planning and financial management framework, dealing with spending reviews etc.

Human Resources Directorate: supporting the CPS on all issues relating to people employed within the Service.

Business Information Systems Directorate: responsible for all aspects of the development and delivery of the CPS' Information and Communications Strategy.

Organised Crime Division: set up to provide a dedicated service to SOCA.

Special Crime Division: prosecutes/assists the prosecution of the most sensitive, specialised and novel cases.

Counter Terrorism Division: advises on, and prosecutes, cases of terrorism, incitement to racial hatred, war crimes, official secrets and other offences within the definition of "state crime".

Equality and Diversity Unit: Develops and supports the CPS equality and diversity policy.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Press Dining Room

Jim Dowd: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission for what reason a one-way electronic lock and alarm has been fitted to the fire exit door from the Upper Committee Corridor North to the Press Dining Room; how much this cost; and what assessment has been made of the impact on the safety of those using the Press Dining Room in the event of an emergency. [47154]

Nick Harvey: The mechanical alarmed door lock between the Upper Committee Corridor staircase and the Press Dining Room has been in situ for many years. It is designed to allow people to escape in an emergency from the staircase into the Dining Room. The fire risk assessment does not identify a requirement for escape in the opposite direction. The cost of installation is unknown.

Westminster Hall

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if the Commission will consider (a) replacing the temporary boarding fencing off Westminster Hall for building works with perspex screens and (b) creating perspex windows in the boards to allow visitors to the Palace and Officers to view Westminster Hall and the progress of works there until normal access is restored. [47202]

Nick Harvey: Portholes are to be cut into the screen to allow a view of the works in progress and they will be complemented by a temporary information display. A photo montage is in the course of preparation which will give Members, staff and visitors a view of Westminster Hall.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Coroners

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans the Department has to reform the law in relation to coroners. [44773]

Ms Harman: I intend to publish a draft Bill to reform the law in relation to coroners in the late spring. I plan to make a further statement shortly.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what representations she has received from the Hertfordshire coroner on the powers available to him to conduct appropriate inquiries into the Potter's Bar rail crash; and what response she has made to those representations. [44774]

Ms Harman: The Hertfordshire coroner wrote to my officials on 8 November 2005 questioning the adequacy of his powers to conduct inquests which would effectively investigate the fatalities arising from the Potters Bar rail crash. He stated that if such inquests went ahead, his other inquests would be delayed as a result. He further indicated that he would seek to appoint a judge as his deputy to conduct the inquests. It has been agreed in principle that a judge would be released to conduct the inquests and the coroner has been informed of this.

Court Service

Mr. Harper: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the average length of time was for the Court Service to notify the police of conviction details following a verdict in court for (a) all offences and (b) offences which require amendment of the sexual offenders register in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [44623]

Ms Harman: Information about the average length of time for the Courts Service to notify the police of conviction details following a verdict in court for (a) , all offences and (b) offences which require amendment of the sexual offenders register in the last 12 months is not recorded centrally. However, figures showing how expeditiously the Courts notify the police of all case outcomes, against a target time of three days are in the following table.

Magistrates courts

The production and despatch of the court register within three working days of the court hearing in England and Wales

Area	Number of registers completed within the survey period	Number of registers produced within 3 working days	Percentage of registers produced within 3 working days
October-December 2004	79,143	70,932	89.6
January-March 2005	81,409	72,233	88.7

Departmental Estate

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what (a) building and (b) refurbishment projects are planned by her Department in (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07; and what the expected costs are of each project. [37410]

Ms Harman: My Department has (a) (i) undertaken no new building projects in 2005–06. (ii) My Department has no building projects planned for 2006–07. Building projects are defined as 'new builds' as per the Treasury guidance referred to as follows.

My Department has (b) (i) undertaken no refurbishment projects in 2005–06 and (ii) has no refurbishment projects planned for 2006–07. Refurbishment projects are defined as 'upgrading' as per the Treasury guidance referred to as follows.

The answer provided relates solely to building and refurbishment projects on the HQ estate of the Department for Constitutional Affairs. It does not cover HM Court Service, Associated Offices or NDPB's as this information is neither collated nor managed by DCA and to obtain it would incur a disproportionate cost.

Trials (Location)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many trials in (a) magistrates courts and (b) the Crown court were moved to a different location at the request of the (i) prosecution and (ii) defence in each year since 1990. [47185]

Ms Harman: Information on the reason for cases being transferred to a different location is not held centrally for either magistrates courts or the Crown court and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost to the Department.

WALES

Business Rates

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was raised in business rates in (a) Rhyl, (b) Prestatyn, (c) St. Asaph, (d) Bodelwyddan, (e) Rhuddlan, (f) Dyserth and (g) Denbigh in each of the last 10 years. [46171]

Nick Ainger: Figures for individual towns and communities are not held centrally, and I understand from Denbighshire county council that they could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Denbighshire county council's contribution to the non-domestic rates pool in each year since the re-organisation of local government is provided in the following table.

Contribution to the non-domestic rates pool by Denbighshire county council

	£000
1996–97	12,936
1997–98	12,729
1998–99	12,475

2003–04	15,059
2004–05	14,367

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Members Travel Expenses

Tom Brake: To ask the Leader of the House how much was claimed by hon. Members for travel by (a) air, (b) rail and (c) motorcycle in the last two financial years for which figures are available; and what the 10 highest claims were in each year. [46257]

Mr. Hoon: The following figures report the cost of air and rail travel on parliamentary business within the UK plus certain European travel for the financial years 2003–04 and 2004–05. Details of claims relating to travel by motorbike are recorded together with claims for all forms of motor mileage and are not separately reportable.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Local Government Finance

8. Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received regarding the local government finance settlement. [46940]

Mr. Woolas: During the consultation period on the local government finance settlement, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister received 336 written representations from local authorities, hon. Members and others. I and ministerial colleagues also met 60 delegations.

Buncefield Oil Depot

9. Mike Penning: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the explosion, fire and subsequent investigations at the Buncefield fuel depot in Hemel Hempstead. [46941]

10. Mr. David Gauke: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the costs of tackling the Buncefield depot fire. [46942]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Following the incident at the Buncefield fuel depot the Health and Safety Executive and the Environment Agency were asked to conduct an investigation into the causes of the explosion. This inquiry is being chaired by Lord Newton of Braintree. In addition, the Hertfordshire fire and rescue service are carrying out their own internal investigation. Central Government and the Government Office for the East of England are also reviewing the lessons to be learned. These reviews will help inform future planning and emergency preparation.

The response to the Buncefield fire was led by Hertfordshire fire and rescue service, with support from 16 other fire and rescue services from across the country together with the high volume pumping capability funded by the Government's new dimension programme. It will take some time to determine the full costs involved. This exercise is being led by Hertfordshire county council who are working closely with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the formulation of a claim for financial assistance under the Bell win scheme.

Housing

11. Mr. Beith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of future population growth on housing needs in the North East of England. [46943]

Yvette Cooper: The North East assembly has submitted to the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister a draft revision of the North East regional spatial strategy. This includes work on the implications of future population growth and housing needs. It will be considered at an examination in public. The North East regional housing strategy also includes consideration of population changes.

12. David Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the supply of affordable housing in the East Midlands; and if he will make a statement. [46944]

Yvette Cooper: The East Midlands regional housing board is supporting a programme of sub-regional housing market assessments, which will help identify affordable housing needs and the supply required to meet them contributing to the review of the regional spatial strategy. The first of these reports will be concluded during the summer of 2006.

Mr. Khan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his most recent estimate is of the number of children living in overcrowded housing conditions in (a) London and (b) England. [32053]

Yvette Cooper: There are two measures of overcrowding—the statutory definition and the bedroom standard.

Based on the bedroom standard, the number of children living in overcrowded households over the three-year period 2002–03, 2003–04 and 2004–05 was (a) 275,000 in London and (b) 880,000 in England. The total number of overcrowded households in England on this basis is estimated to be around 500,000.

Information on compliance with the statutory standard is not collected centrally. Using data from the "Survey of English Housing" for the period 1997–98 to 1999–2000 and from the 1996 "English House Condition Survey" it was estimated that there were 25,000 households in England that were so overcrowded that the statutory standard was breached. However, reliable estimates for London on this basis are not available—neither are figures for the number of children that live in statutory overcrowded households.

East of England Regional Plan

13. Mr. Prisk: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the progress of the East of England regional plan. [46945]

Yvette Cooper: The East of England plan is currently under going its examination-in-public (EiP). The EiP is running to timetable and should be concluded at the beginning of March. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects to receive the panel's report during the summer and publish the final plan early in 2007.

Northern Way

14. Vera Baird: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of ports development in the South East and East of England on the Northern Way development plan's objective for promoting port development in Tees Valley. [46946]

Mr. Woolas: The Northern Way is developing an evidence base to promote economic growth in the North including the potential of its ports. It is for them to decide the specifics of their strategy. It is the Government's policy to promote improved economic performance in all our regions.

Chicken Farming

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will issue planning guidance on applications for chicken farming establishments which takes account of avian influenza and the presence of the virus H5N1 in Europe. [43386]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 20 January 2006]: There are no plans to issue such planning guidance. The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) is putting contingency plans in place to reduce the risk of avian influenza to the UK. In consultation with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, Defra has produced guidance for bird-keepers on the best way to do this. Further to this, the ODPM wrote to local planning authorities on 16 December 2005 drawing their attention to this guidance and reminding them of the need for reasonableness and proportionality should they need to consider planning applications for works required to isolate domestic poultry from wild birds.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received about planning permission for large scale chicken farming establishments that are in proximity to (a) residential areas and (b) educational establishments. [43387]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 20 January 2006]: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is not aware of general representations on planning policy for chicken farming establishments. It would not be appropriate to comment on individual planning applications given they may come to the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister for decision on appeal.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Hands: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will estimate the cost to his Department of sending Christmas cards in 2005. [45915]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The cost of purchasing official Office of the Deputy Prime Minister Christmas cards in 2005 was £1,834.10 + VAT. It is policy to send mail by second class post wherever possible. All expenditure incurred in the purchase of official Christmas Cards is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on principles set out in Government Accounting.

Freedom of Information

Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the cost to local authorities of responding to freedom of information requests made in 2005. [46682]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Government undertook a survey of a sample of local authorities covering the period 16 May to 12 August to obtain evidence on the impact on local government of the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act (FoI) on 1 January 2005. This survey suggested that the cost of FoI to local government was approximately £4.9 million per year in the short-to medium term. The Local Government Finance Settlement 2006–07 and 2007–08 includes an additional £4.9 million in each year above existing spending plans to reimburse authorities for these costs under the New Burdens principle.

Housing Benefit

Meg Hillier: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many applications for housing benefit extended payments were made in 2004–05; and how many of those applications were successful. [44811]

Mr. Plaskitt: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not available.

Local Government Finance

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received from the Royal borough of Windsor and Maidenhead on the rate support grant since its announcement. [47265]

Mr. Woolas: Consultation on the 2006–07 Local Government Finance settlement ran from 5 December to 11 January. During that period the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister received 336 written representations. The Royal borough of Windsor and Maidenhead made no previous written representation; I met a delegation form the council to discuss the settlement on Tuesday 10 January.

All representations received have been considered in reaching the final 2006–07 Local Government Finance settlement.

Official Travel

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much his air travel in an official capacity cost in each year since he became Deputy Prime Minister. [46634]

Jim Fitzpatrick: All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the 'Ministerial Code and Travel' by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

In respect of overseas travel by Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. These report information for the financial years 1995–96 to 2004–05. Information for 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready after the end of the current financial year.

During the financial year 2004–05, expenditure on domestic flights by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister was £1,041. Information in respect of my right hon. Friend's domestic air travel taken since the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was formed on 29 May 2002 until 2003–04 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost was of his official travel in each year since he became Deputy Prime Minister. [46636]

Jim Fitzpatrick: All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the 'Ministerial Code and Travel' by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

For information on the cost of ministerial vehicles provided to departments in 2004–05 I refer the hon. Member to the letter from Roy Burke, chief executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) in November 2005. For information for the financial years 2000–01 to 2003–04 I refer the hon. Member to the letters from the chief executive of the GCDA to the hon. Member for Buckingham (John Bercow) dated 10 January 2005 and to the then hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs dated 13 September 2003. Copies of these letters are available in the Library of the House.

During the financial year 2004–05, expenditure on rail travel by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister was 4,624. Information in respect of my right hon. Friend's rail travel taken since the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created on 29 May 2002 until 2003–04 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In respect of overseas travel by Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. These report information for the financial years 1995–96 to 2004–05. Information for 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready after the end of the current financial year.

During the financial year 2004–05, expenditure on domestic flights by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister was £1,041. Information in respect of my right hon. Friend's domestic air travel taken since the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was formed on 29 May 2002 until 2003–04 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost was of his overnight accommodation while travelling on official duties in each year since he became Deputy Prime Minister. [46637]

Jim Fitzpatrick: All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel' by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, in respect of overseas travel by Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The list includes the total cost of travel and accommodation. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. These report information for the financial years 1995–96 to 2004–05. Information for 2005–06 will be published as soon as it is ready after the end of the current financial year.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adult Education

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what opportunities are made available by her Department in Tamworth constituency (a) to retrain, (b) to reskill and (c) to educate local adult residents to improve their chances of taking up paid employment. [42080]

Phil Hope: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, will write my hon. Friend with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

The Government's Skills Strategy, "21st Century Skills: Realising Our Potential" (July 2003) and "Skills: Getting on in business, getting on at work" (March 2005), set out our plans for increasing opportunities for adults to develop their skills for paid employment.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 27 January 2006:

I write in response to your recent Parliamentary question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, where you ask what opportunities are made available by her department in Tamworth constituency to (a) retrain (b) reskill and (c) educate local adult residents to improve their chances of taking up paid employment.

Tamworth and Lichfield College is the principal further education (FE) college serving learners in the Tamworth district. Residents also have the opportunity to study in a number of other FE colleges within accessible travelling distance.

In 2004–05, some 9,500 adults enrolled on programmes of study at Tamworth and Lichfield College across a wide range of subject areas. Particularly large numbers (5,000 enrolments) were to programmes in Information and Communication Technology (ICT). These qualifications are adaptable to many employment sectors, and our regional and local market intelligence shows that, increasingly, employment opportunities will be in higher skilled and more technical jobs where ICT competencies will be an important part of the overall skills profile sought by employers.

In terms of the total employment demand, the health sector is forecast to be Staffordshire's second biggest sector over the next 10 years. Over 1,800 adults enrolled to programmes in Health, Public Services and Care at Tamworth and Lichfield College in 2004–05. College provision, therefore, is supporting residents to take advantage of new and emerging employment opportunities.

In addition to provision to support vocational training and upskilling, Staffordshire local education authority receives funding from LSC for the provision of non-accredited adult and community learning activities across the eight district councils in Staffordshire. The aim of the provision is to engage learners in learning programmes and activities to develop skills for life and personal development. Tamworth and Lichfield College delivers this provision on its Tamworth campus and an additional 17 community venues in the district. In 2003–04 the college enrolled 2,284 learners on 160 adult community programmes.

Learndirect offer a range of flexible learning opportunities though e-learning. The study can take place at the learndirect centres, of which there are 5 in the Tamworth area, or anywhere a learner can access a computer with a good internet connection. Courses include literacy and numeracy, and many are free.

Trust this is helpful.

Disabled People (Skills Levels)

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to increase the skills levels of disabled people in Hartlepool; and if she will make a statement. [42982]

Phil Hope: More people than ever before with self-declared learning difficulties and/or disabilities are now engaged in LSC-funded education and training with 579,000 learners across the post-16 sector in 2003–04 at a total cost of around £1.3 billion. We want to work closely with the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) to continue to break down the barriers that people with disabilities face in accessing quality training. The Learning and Skills Act 2000 places a statutory duty on the LSC to promote equality of opportunity between persons of different racial groups, men and women, and between disabled and non-disabled. To support that work, the LSC has introduced equality and diversity impact measures as a planning tool to promote greater equality of opportunity in both fair access to and outcomes from publicly-funded training.

Earlier this year, in our White Paper "Skills Getting on in business, getting on at work" we outlined how the LSC is providing capital funding to support colleges and training providers in making the necessary changes to their accommodation, in order to improve access for disabled learners.

However, responsibility for the planning and funding of skills training in Hartlepool, including skills for people with disabilities, is the responsibility of the LSC. Mark Haysom, the council's chief executive, has written to my hon. Friend with further information and a copy of his letter has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 30 January 2006:

I am writing to you to follow up the Secretary of State's answer to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding increasing the skills levels of disabled people in Hartlepool.

I have set out below a summary of current activity with learners in the town:

The main providers of post-16 learning in Hartlepool are Hartlepool College of Further Education and Hartlepool Sixth Form College. Both have been supported recently with funding in relation to improving access for learners with disabilities. All providers of Apprenticeships, Work Based Learning and Entry to Employment in Hartlepool have had an Access Audit to ensure that their facilities and premises are accessible to people with disabilities.

In excess of 1,900 people taking part in learning in Hartlepool are supported with Additional Learning Support Funding. This funding provides specific individual support in respect of learning difficulties and/or disabilities.

18 learners from Hartlepool with a learning difficulty/and or disability have achieved a Level 1 or Level 2 qualification through the Employer Training Pilot. This is 7% of those taking part.

73 young people from Hartlepool who consider themselves to have a learning difficulty and/or disability are currently on Apprenticeship programmes and improving their skills and employment opportunities at levels 2 and 3. 42 young people from Hartlepool who consider themselves to have a learning difficulty and/or disability are currently on entry to employment programmes and are improving their skills and employment opportunities leading to level 2 qualifications.

Hartlepool College of Further Education is working with Catcote Special School in Hartlepool to increase provision for learners aged 19+ with learning difficulties and/or disabilities. This project is increasing personal, social and skills for working life for 14 adults.

Hartlepool Sixth Form College is running a Pathways project1 which supports 26 learners with multiple learning difficulties aged 26 to 63. Learners follow the Certificate in Personal, Social and Health Education.

We have recently approved funding for the Shaw Trust to deliver support to unemployed 19–24 year olds with learning difficulties and/or disabilities that I have previously had specialist support in a local provider, or have returned from a residential college. The project will support them in community and work based settings. Participants will benefit from improved social skills to encourage independent living and progression, making aspirations and employment goals attainable. 50 learners will be supported across the Tees Valley.

In addition to the examples given above, people with disabilities have full access to the extensive range of skills training available in the colleges and learning organisations within Hartlepool.

Budgets for investment in services for learners with learning needs and disabilities for 2006–07 will shortly be allocated to regions and local LSC's enabling them to plan support for next year. This will be in the context of our plans for significant budget increases for these learners over the next few years. We have increased the overall budget for learners with learning needs and disabilities from £138 million to £157 million for 2006–2007 and this will increase again to £181 million in 2007–2008, rises of 14% and 15% year on year from 2005. These rises are significantly greater than the overall increase in our budget over the same period, which increases by 3% and 5%.

We are making this additional investment in response to the national review of support for learners with disabilities carried out for us by Peter Little. While the review is still out for consultation and we will need to agree nationally how the LSC's expenditure on learning is matched by what other agencies pay for by way of social and domestic support, we acknowledge that our own contribution must rise. This is because the overall number of learners with disabilities is rising as the effect of medical advances continues.

At a time when numbers of young people are falling and 80% of the workforce of 2010 is already in the labour market we regard it as essential that the aspirations and abilities of all learners are supported and developed.

I hope this information helps to support the answer to your parliamentary question.

Extended Schools

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the requirement for extended schools referred to on page 10 of the White Paper, "Higher Standards, Better Schools for All". [46446]

Beverley Hughes: By 2010 we expect all schools to offer access to a core offer of extended services, with half of all primaries and a third of all secondaries doing so by 2008. The core offer includes 8 am-6 pm wraparound child care; a varied menu of study support activities such as sport and arts clubs; swift and easy referral to specialist health and social care services such as speech therapy; parenting support; and wider community use of school facilities. How this develops in each community will vary depending on the needs of that community. Some will have greater need for more child care, others will be able to rely on working with existing providers. A survey of 4,000 schools has shown that many are already delivering parts of this offer, with the vast majority already providing some activities or care before or after school. There has been enthusiasm from local authorities and schools to engage with the extended schools support programme, with over 5,000 schools joining this year.

Foundation Stage Profile

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many statements are included in the Foundation Stage Profile. [46134]

Beverley Hughes: The QCA Foundation Stage Profile scales booklet covers 13 areas of development related to the early learning goals. For each area, the booklet offers a series of statements, numbered 1 to 9, describing aspects of development within that area (117 statements in all). For each individual child, teachers decide which of the nine statements in each area best describe the child's stage of development. Schools report to the local authority, as the child's "score", 13 numbers ranging from 1 to 9.

Literacy and Numeracy (Hampshire)

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of how many adults lacked basic (a) literacy and (b) numeracy skills in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2005 in (A) Hampshire, (B) Portsmouth, (C) Southampton, (D) the Isle of Wight and (E) each (1) borough and (2) district council in Hampshire. [47482]

Phil Hope [holding answer 31 January 2006]: The Department does not collect annual data on adult literacy and numeracy skills and it is therefore not possible to provide estimates for 1997 and 2005. However, in 2002/03, the Department for Education and Skills conducted the 'Skills for Life Survey'. This is a national needs and impact survey of literacy and numeracy, which provides estimates of the level of basic skills within England among adults aged 16–65 years old.

The assessment levels correspond to the literacy and numeracy National Standards: these were introduced in 2002 to provide a framework for all adult screening tests, diagnostic tools, programmes of study and qualifications. Learners are assessed for levels of literacy and numeracy from Entry Level 1 to Level 2. Level 2 is broadly equivalent to a higher grade GCSE (A*-C).

The survey provides estimates for Learning and Skills Council areas and districts. Within the Learning and Skills Council area of Hampshire and The Isle of Wight, the Skills for Life Survey estimates that around 7 per cent. of adults had literacy levels below Level 1 (equivalent to a GCSE D-G) and around 43 per cent. had numeracy levels below Level 1 (Table 1 and 2).

Table 1: Estimates, based on the Skills for Life Survey, of Adult Literacy Levels for Learning and Skills Council: Hampshire and Isle of Wight

Literacy	Number	Percentage
Entry Level 1 Skills and below	6,025	1
Entry Level 2 Skills	5,430	0
Entry Level 3 Skills	61,295	6
Total Entry Level Skills	72,750	7
Level 1 Skills	464,400	42
Level 2 Skills and above	572,100	52

Table 2: Estimates, based on the Skills for Life Survey, of Adult Numeracy Levels for Learning and Skills Council: Hampshire and Isle of Wight

Numeracy	Number	Percentage
Entry Level 1 Skills and below	23,400	2
Entry Level 2 Skills	116,730	11
Entry Level 3 Skills	335,470	30
Total Entry Level Skills	475,600	43
Level 1 Skills	339,000	31
Level 2 Skills and above	294,900	27

At a district level, the Skills for Life Survey estimates around 10 per cent. of adults have literacy levels below Level 1 (equivalent to a GCSE D-G) within Portsmouth, Southampton and the Isle of Wight and around 50 per cent. have numeracy levels below level 1 (Table 3 and 4).

Table 3: Estimates, based on the Skills for Life Survey, of Adult Literacy Levels for Districts

	Total Entry Level		Level 1 Skills		Level 2 Skills
Literacy	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
Portsmouth	10,340	9	55,890	47	51,540	44
Southampton	14,140	10	63,140	45	62,850	45
Isle of Wight	7,820	10	35,970	47	32,950	43

Table 4: Estimates, based on the Skills for Life Survey, of Adult Numeracy Levels for Districts

	Total Entry Level		Level 1 Skills		Level 2 Skills
Numeracy	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
Portsmouth	62,540	53	35,900	30	19,330	16
Southampton	77,700	55	41,340	30	21,080	15
Isle of Wight	39,010	51	23,910	31	13,810	18

A copy of the full report of this survey has been placed in the House of Commons Library and all geographical estimates are on the Skills for Life website [http://www.dfes.gov.uk/readwriteplus_skillsforlifesurvey/].

School Milk (Shropshire)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what subsidies her Department has provided for primary schools in Shrewsbury constituency for daily school milk; and if she will make a statement. [44976]

Jim Knight: I have been asked to reply.

The EU funds a scheme which subsidises the provision of milk to primary and nursery schools. In England the Government supplements the EU subsidy for primary schools by payment of an annual maximum of £1.5 million in national aid. Participation in the subsidy scheme, which is administered by the Rural Payments Agency, is entirely a matter for schools or local education authorities. Shropshire county council is on the Agency's register of subsidy claimants.

Sure Start

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which (a) private, (b) voluntary and (c) public sector organisations delivered services in Sure Start programmes in each year for which figures are available. [43842]

Beverley Hughes: Services in Sure Start programmes have been delivered by organisations from a range of sectors, for example, voluntary and community sector organisations, such as community development trusts, statutory partners, including local authorities and health authorities, and some private companies. Information on the extent to which individual organisations are involved is not collected centrally.

Training Schemes

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she has taken to aid the provision of training schemes for Surrey Heath residents over 50 years old. [39769]

Phil Hope: We are committed to safeguarding a wide range of adult learning opportunities in every area, including provision for learners over 50, and we will ensure that adult learning provision in Surrey Heath is provided through the funding from the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) to further education colleges, local authorities and other providers. As this is an operational matter, Mark Haysom, the LSC's Chief Executive has written to the hon. Member with further information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 23 January 2006:

I refer to the written reply by Phil Hope to your Parliamentary Question. The Minister has asked that I write to you with further information.

Adult and Community Learning (now called Personal and Community Development Learning) is an important source of provision for older people. We are safeguarding funding for this provision for future years.

For other forms of provision, the LSC has agreed clear funding priorities with the Government as public resources are necessarily finite. Our highest priorities are to support increased participation and achievement of 16–18 year olds and to support adults without skills for life and full level 2 qualifications which are important for basic levels of employability. Many older people come within these latter priority categories and around a quarter of enrolments in LSC funded provision in Surrey are by people over the age of 50.

Surrey County Council, our Adult and Community Learning provider in the county, has developed provision for older people in two communities with high levels of multiple deprivation, one of which is in Surrey Heath. Building on earlier work by the Pre-Retirement Association, the purpose of these was to develop a transferable and innovative curriculum of recreational learning to encourage older people to regard learning and skills acquisition as a positive and natural accompaniment to growing older. Amongst other things, this led to the formation of an 'older and bolder club' for health activities and recreation. The University of the Third Age has a presence in Surrey Heath to encourage lifelong learning for older people not in employment and relevant courses are also delivered by the WEA (with funding from the LSC.)

To help shape future provision, the Surrey Lifelong Learning Partnership has run focus groups on our behalf, involving older learners, to identify provision of particular interest. Analysis of needs against provision on a geographic basis means that we can now identify where there is relatively high and low participation in learning for over 50s to provide a basis for review of future provision.

Our future provision in Surrey will also be influenced by our South East Region's annual statement of planning priorities in which we have a commitment to "pilot curriculum opportunities for older workers to change their occupations or extend their careers". To this end, we are developing a project, with European funding support, to identify different ways of delivering learning to older people. This will include targeted information, advice and guidance and the development of courses specifically to meet the needs of older people seeking to extend their careers.

Looking further forward, demographic changes—with fewer young people entering the labour market and an expectation of longer working life—mean that, nationally, we will need to provide a broader programme of support for older people to keep their skills up to date. We will be working with the Department for Education and Skills to define and plan the nature of this broader support.

I hope this further information is helpful.

Work Experience

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Key Stage 3 pupils undertook work experience in each year between 1995 and 2005, broken down by year group; and in which sectors. [25127]

Jacqui Smith: We have no figures for the period 1995 to April 2001. From April 2001, the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) took on the delivery responsibility for links between schools and businesses. Mark Haysom, the LSC's chief executive has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 22 December 2005:

Further to your question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills requesting the number of Key Stage 3 pupils who undertook work-experience placements between 1995 and 2005.

The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) collects data for work-experience placements for Key Stage pupils in Years 10 and 11. It does not collect information on Key Stage 3 students as part of the LSC Education Business Link funded activity.

Yours sincerely

Work-based Learning

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding has been allocated to work-based learning in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08 for (i) 16 to 19-year-olds and (ii) 19 years plus at (A) Level 1, (B) Level 2 and (C) Level 3. [33349]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is funded by the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) through an annual Grant Letter that sets out the LSC's key priorities. The operational delivery of individual programmes, taking account of these priorities and the funding made available by the Department, is a matter for the LSC. The following table details the allocations for work based learning programmes for the relevant financial years. In addition funding allocations are given for the adult skills programme Train to Gain.

	2005–06	2006–07	2007–08
Work Based Learning (16–18)	606,357	669,189	675,181
Entry to Employment (16–18)	220,208	208,369	204,044
Work Based Learning (19+)	268,973	202,767	229,000

£000

	2005–06	2006–07	2007–08
WBL total	1,095,538	1,080,325	1,108,225
Train to Gain programme	161,027	230,000	399,000
Overall total	1,256,565	1,310,325	1,507,225

Data for allocations to programmes by qualification level are the responsibility of the LSC and the council's Chief Executive Mark Haysom has written to the hon. Member with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 21 December 2005:

I write in response to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills regarding funds allocated to Work-based Learning (WBL) in the three years from 2005–06 to 2007–08, for qualification levels 1, 2 and 3.

I need to begin by pointing out that the Learning and Skills Council does not allocate funding on the basis of qualification levels. We allocate funds to providers based on locally agreed provider development plans. These reflect a sound assessment of local employer, sector and individual needs, as well as Government policy, priorities and targets.

We afford our local teams considerable flexibility to move funds around to meet specific needs, hence we cannot say with certainty at this time, how much will be spent at each learning 'Level' for the years in question.

We do however gather information that enables us to see how much has been spent on the various elements of the WBL programme. For the most recently completed academic year, 2004/05, we know that the amounts were:

£344 million for Advanced Apprenticeships, which are geared towards the achievement of a Level 3 qualification;

£443 million for Apprenticeships, geared towards Level 2;

£228 million for Entry to Employment, Level 1; and in addition, some £45 million of our WBL programme budget was spent on training towards NVQs only (Levels 1–4)

DEFENCE

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) names and (b) grades were of his Department's officials who visited Ascension Island and participated in the preliminary summit of 30 November 2005. [47308]

Mr. Ingram: Two officials from the Ministry of Defence visited and participated in a preliminary summit in Ascension Island on 30 November 2005, one from our policy and defence relations (South) organisation and another from our permanent joint headquarters. Under the Data Protection Act, their names are withheld.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the conditions governing the use of Ascension Island by the United States air force. [47330]

Mr. Ingram: The use by the United States air force of Ascension Island is based on the 1956 Bahamas Agreement between the United Kingdom and the United States, and has been developed further through a number of local agreements covering the operational activities undertaken there.

Boards of Inquiry

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what restrictions are in place on legal personnel supporting families at board of inquiry meetings; and for what reasons such restrictions are in place. [47325]

Mr. Touhig: A board of inquiry is an internal review conducted to investigate a matter and to report. It is not a court and it does not meet in public. The presence of families may inhibit the openness of witnesses, in addition to being impractical as boards of inquiry can last for months and necessitate travel both inside and outside the United Kingdom. In the case of an inquiry into a fatality or serious accident, we seek to ensure that the next of kin are fully briefed on the inquiry's progress and outcome.

Casualties (Iraq/Afghanistan)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department is considering making available a breakdown of casualty figures for the deployments in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan. [45218]

John Reid: Yes. The MOD intends to publish casualty figures for Iraq on the MOD website in the next few weeks, identifying the number of personnel categorised as "Seriously Injured" and "Very Seriously Injured". The figures will be updated regularly. I will write to inform the right hon. Member prior to the first publication.

The MOD will also release in the same way these categories of information for any UK casualties that occur from 1 January 2006 onwards as a result of operations in Afghanistan. Information for previous years is not held centrally and will take some time to collate. I will write to the right hon. Member when the figures are available and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Defence Staff (Deployment)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the distribution in each region and country of (a) regular service personnel, (b) direct civilian employees of the Department, (c) civilian personnel in the UK defence agencies and trading funds as at 1 October 2005. [45547]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 25 January 2006]: Information on the posted location of Service personnel is published in TSP 10 (UK regular forces distribution across UK), which shows the number of Service personnel by Government office region and local authority. A copy of this publication is available in the Library of the House, showing data as at 1 October 2005.

The following table shows the number of civilian personnel in the UK, Defence agencies and trading funds as at 1 October 2005 by Government office region.

[3] From the 1 January 2006 reporting, DASA has been able to identify a methodology to correctly identify all of the ABRO staff. Estimated October 2005 figures based on the new methodology are broken down as follows: ABRO Estimate October 2005 total 2390 FTE, broken down by Government Office Region: Yorks and Humber 130, West Midlands 1010, South West 810, Eastern 140, South East 100, Scotland 90, Wales 20. The differences between ABRO published and estimated figures are included within the MoD Total Excluding Agencies and Trading Funds figures above Overall figures by Government Office Region would be unaffected by any impact of ABRO staff estimates.

Notes:
1. All figures are rounded to the nearest 10, as a result totals may not always equal the sum of the parts.
2. Figures include values for part time staff proportionate to those of full time staff.

Iraq

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many 30mg pyridostigmine bromide tablets (a) personnel from (i) the 7th Armoured Brigade, (ii) 3 Commando Brigade, (iii) 16 Air Assault Brigade, (iv) 102 Logistics Brigade and (v) HQ Armoured Division, (b) Royal Navy personnel in the Gulf and (c) Royal Air Force personnel in the Gulf took daily during the 2003 invasion of Iraq on Op Telic; [44221]

(2) what percentage of (a) the 7th Armoured Brigade, (b) 3 Commando Brigade, (c) 16 Air Assault Brigade, (d) 102 Logistics Brigade, (e) HQ Armoured Division, (f) Royal Naval personnel in the Gulf and (g) Royal Air Force personnel in the Gulf took nerve agent pre-treatment tablets during the 2003 invasion of Iraq on Op Telic; and for how many days in each case; [44222]

(3) how many nerve agent pre-treatment tablets were re-supplied to (a) the 7th Armoured Brigade, (b) 3 Commando Brigade, (c) 16 Air Assault Brigade, (d) 102 Logistics Brigade, (e) HQ Armoured Division, (f) Royal Naval personnel in the Gulf and (g) Royal Air Force personnel in the Gulf during the 2003 invasion of Iraq on Operation Telic. [44223]

Mr. Touhig: Nerve agent pre-treatment sets (NAPS) tablets were issued to armed forces personnel serving with Operation Telic in single strips of 21 tablets. The recommended dosage rate is one Pyridostigmine Bromide (30mg) tablet every eight hours—ie three per day. Thus, a single strip contains a week's supply.

A total of 7,266,504 tablets were supplied to Operation Telic, in the form of 346,024 strips of 21. These were issued to approximately 32,000 personnel, over a three month period as follows:

Month	Strips supplied	Total tablets
January 2003	85,573	1,797,033
February 2003	155,541	3,266,361
March 2003	104,910	2,203,110
Total	346,024	7,266,504

Information is not held centrally on how many of these tablets were then issued locally to individual units in theatre, and could only therefore be provided at disproportionate cost.

Nor is it known how many tablets were actually taken daily by individual personnel. This is because the tablets were self-administered by personnel on command, rather than being administered by medical officers. For this same reason, information is not held as to what percentage of personnel took the tablets.

Jewish Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department did to (a) celebrate Hanukkah and (b) mark Yom Kippur in 2005. [46754]

Mr. Touhig: The decision to hold events to mark religious festivals is one for commanding officers and civilian line managers and records of such events are not held centrally.

Religious belief is regarded as a private matter in the Ministry of Defence and armed forces. It is the Department's policy to allow personnel to meet their religious observances provided this does not interfere with operational effectiveness, health and safety requirements or business needs. Armed forces and Ministry of Defence civil service personnel may request leave to celebrate religious festivals where these fall outside national public holidays. Such requests are considered objectively and met wherever practical. Areas for worship or contemplation are made available in Ministry of Defence and armed forces establishments wherever practicable.

A "Guide on Religion and Belief in the Ministry of Defence and Armed Forces" was published last year to raise awareness of faith and cultural issues.

Medical Training to the Midlands

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons the use of land owned by his Department reduces the cost to his Department of the Medical Training to the Midlands; whether the use of land owned by (a) another Government Department and (b) the private sector would alter the cost of the project; and if he will make a statement. [47001]

Mr. Touhig: Acquisition of non-Ministry of Defence (MOD) land always carries additional costs (legal, professional fees etc) as well as requiring an outlay of capital. There might also be disposal costs to be taken into account if the acquisition led to existing MOD land becoming surplus. It is for this reason that before considering such an acquisition to meet a new requirement, we always first look at the suitability of land and property already owned by the Department. This is consistent with the wider Government policy on asset management. We also need to ensure that our estate is no larger than is required for defence purposes and that it is efficiently used. If a privately-owned site were to offer specific advantages (for instance in terms of location, features or potential value for money) then an exception might be made, but this would be considered on a case by case basis.

Parachute Regiment

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the establishment is of each battalion of the Parachute Regiment; and how many vacancies there are in each battalion. [46080]

Mr. Touhig: The following table shows the strength of the individual battalions of The Parachute Regiment compared to the Infantry element of the establishment as at 1 December 2005.

	Strength	Establishment	Difference
1st Battalion of The Parachute Regiment	490	580	-90
2nd Battalion of The Parachute Regiment	510	580	-70
3rd Battalion Of The Parachute Regiment	510	580	-70
Total	1,510	1,730	-220

Notes:
1. The figures quoted are as at 1 December 2005 and are for UK regular trained Army officers and soldiers only and therefore exclude mobilised reserves, full-time reserve service and other reserves.
2. Strength totals for the 2nd Battalion include 90 soldiers on detachment with The Royal Scots Dragoon Guards.
3. The establishment figures include only the infantry posts and exclude attached personnel of other arms and services such as chefs, clerks etc.
4. The strength figures do not include officers and soldiers in The Parachute Regiment that are serving outside the battalion, or personnel from other capbadges that are attached to the battalion. The officer element excludes personnel with the rank of colonel and above.
5. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

In addition to those Parachute Regiment personnel serving with the battalions there are 480 (excluding colonels and above) members of the regiment posted elsewhere.

Public and Commercial Services Union

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) representations he has received and (b) meetings he has had with (i) representatives from the Public and Commercial Services Union and (ii) other interested groups in relation to job cuts and outsourcing of functions in his Department in Northern Ireland. [46795]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 31 January 2006]: Representations have been made to Defence Ministers in writing and at meetings. In 2002, the trade unions tabled a claim for enhanced redundancy compensation for any MOD civil servants in Northern Ireland made redundant as a result of the peace process. A delegation of TU representatives from TGWU, GMB, AMICUS, TGWC, PCS and Prospect met with me in London in December 2004 and I met other TU representatives (GMB, Prospect, TGWU, PCS, JCC and AMICUS) in Northern Ireland in November 2005.

There has also been correspondence from a number of Members of Parliament on the same issue.

QinetiQ

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what safeguards he has put in place to ensure that intellectual property developed by Qinetiq remains in the UK following that company's flotation. [44157]

John Reid: In common with other companies which carry out MOD-funded research, ownership of intellectual property generated as a result of MOD contracts remains with QinetiQ, although MOD has free rights to such information for its own use, or for use by its contractors for defence and security purposes. The MOD also has rights to disclose such information to other governments for international co-operation purposes.

Should QinetiQ wish to use UK government-funded intellectual property in programmes with overseas governments or contractors, arrangements exist, established in July 2001, which allow MOD to prevent transactions that it judges would cause an unmanageable conflict of interest or otherwise be contrary to the defence or security interests of the UK. These arrangements will remain in place after the initial public offering in QinetiQ. QinetiQ is also subject to the same security and export controls as any other UK company.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to ease the restrictions on QinetiQ's involvement in defence manufacturing. [44158]

John Reid: When QinetiQ became a company in July 2001, the Ministry of Defence (MOD) put in place a range of measures to ensure that the company did not undertake activities that could cause an unmanageable conflict of interest affecting its ability to carry out work for MOD customers.

In addition, the MOD had a separate right to require QinetiQ to seek our specific approval if it wished to carry out certain defence manufacturing activities which might also cause a conflict of interest. In reviewing the operation of the compliance regime, the Department has concluded that the existence of this additional approvals process on top of the wider conflict of interest protections has caused some confusion, and that there is scope for simplifying the regime. Consequently, the MOD has agreed with the company that the separate defence manufacturing approvals process will be removed from 1 April 2008, by which date the MOD will be in a position to open its research programme to full competition, potentially providing greater opportunities for the rest of industry to bid for work and increasing the options available to MOD customers. This change will not affect the level of protection available to customers who will exercise their rights through the wider provisions contained elsewhere in the compliance regime.

SevenCs

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect of the acquisition of SevenCs by the UK Hydrographic Office on other commercial enterprises in the hydrographic industry. [47220]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 31 January 2006]: Prior to the acquisition the UK Hydrographic Office concluded that a change of ownership of SevenCs would, of itself, have little or no effect on other commercial enterprises in the hydrographic industry. The acquisition should, however, work to the benefit of the industry as a whole by invigorating the development of digital navigation products, which will in turn enhance safety of life at sea.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the acquisition of SevenCs by the UK Hydrographic Office. [47222]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 31 January 2006]: On 30 November 2005 the UK Hydrographic Office (UKHO) acquired SevenCs, a leading navigational software development company, based in Hamburg. This acquisition was in line with the UKHO's strategic direction and within its remit as a Ministry of Defence Trading Fund.

The purpose of the acquisition was to ensure an open route to market for all digital navigational data, including the UKHO's. It was strategically important for the UKHO, and in order to discharge the UK's responsibilities under the International Convention on Safety of Life at Sea, that the UKHO safeguard an open system, which does not tie the end-user to a particular brand of data.

Sudan

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK military personnel are working (a) under the NATO flag and (b) under the EU in relief efforts in Sudan. [46861]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom currently has one officer based in Ethiopia as NATO's senior military liaison officer to the African Union (AU), whose work includes supporting the AU mission in Darfur. A second officer will be deployed shortly and will be based in Sudan. The UK also has one officer based in Sudan as part of the EU support for the AU mission.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Biodiversity

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the Government plan to assess whether they have met the target of halting biodiversity loss by 2010. [45688]

Jim Knight: The Standing Committee of the UK Biodiversity Partnership has agreed to use a set of 18 headline indicators to assess whether the target of halting biodiversity loss by 2010 has been met. These are based on the framework being used within the United Nations Convention on Biological Diversity. Some of the indicators are already published; others require further development. The full set of indicators is as follows:

Focal areas	Indicators
Status and trends of the components of biological diversity	1. Trends in populations of wild birds: (a) farmland birds; (b) woodland birds; (c) coastal and sea birds 2. Plant diversity in the wider countryside 3. Status of BAP Priority Species 4. Status of BAP Priority Habitats 5. "Trends in genetic diversity of cultivated plants" 6 (a) Extent of SACs, SPAs and SSSI/ASSIs; (b) Proportion of features of SACs and SPAs in favourable condition
Sustainable use	7. Proportion of woodland area under certified management 8. Area of land under agri-environment scheme agreement 9. Proportion of commercially exploited fish stocks around the UK harvested sustainably

Focal areas	Indicators
Threats to biodiversity	10. Nitrogen deposition 11. Number and costs of invasive alien species 12. Impact of climate change on biodiversity
Ecosystem integrity and ecosystem goods and services	13. Marine trophic index 14. Connectivity/fragmentation of ecosystems 15. Water quality in aquatic ecosystems
Status of access and benefits sharing	16. Percentage of European patent applications for inventions based on genetic resources and/or traditional knowledge that disclose the source of these resources and knowledge
Status of resource transfers and use	17. Funding to biodiversity: in economic and development cooperation (response) in EU research, monitoring and management
Public opinion	18. Public awareness and participation

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the results of the 2005 reporting round for the UK Biodiversity Action Plan will be published; and how this information will be used to improve the delivery of biodiversity conservation up to 2010. [45689]

Jim Knight: The results will be published in a new report later this year. This will provide UK and county level information on how individual species and habitats are faring, emerging influences by sector, and constraints to delivery. We are committed to making full use of these results. And we will look to make them relevant to a range of different audiences and stakeholders.

The responsibility for implementing measures to conserve biodiversity is a devolved matter. And the results of the 2005 reporting round will feed into the individual strategies for biodiversity and the environment in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures the Government (a) have introduced and (b) are planning to introduce to halt biodiversity loss by 2010. [45690]

Jim Knight: Under the UK Biodiversity Action Plan (UK BAP) there are costed and targeted national action plans for 436 of our most threatened habitats and species in the UK. These are supported by approximately 150 local biodiversity action plans, often at county level. The most recently completed review of progress was conducted in 2002 and the latest published information on progress was issued in 2003: "UK Biodiversity Action Plan—tracking progress". A further report on progress to 2005 will be published this year.

The England Biodiversity Strategy, "Working with the grain of nature" was published in 2002. This brings together England's key contributions towards halting the loss of biodiversity by 2010. The strategy sets out a programme of activity to integrate biodiversity into policy making and practice. The third annual stock-take of progress under the strategy was published on 29 December 2005. This highlights coverage of more than 1 million hectares of land by Environmental Stewardship agreements, a new Planning Policy Statement on Biodiversity and Geological Conservation, a new policy on ancient and native woodland, and a substantial increase in investment in water and wetland management for wildlife.

Under the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Bill, we propose to extend a duty to all public authorities in England and Wales to have regard to the conservation of biodiversity in the exercise of their functions. And we are also committed to publishing a Marine Bill to provide a new framework for marine conservation.

We will publish new priorities, targets and plans for meeting our target of halting biodiversity loss by 2010, following reviews being undertaken under the UK Biodiversity Action Plan.

The UK commitment towards international efforts to reduce the rate of loss of biodiversity by 2010 is contained in the World Summit on Sustainable Development Delivery Plan for international biodiversity (http://www.sustainable-development.gov.uk/delivery/global-local/international/wssd/delivery-plans.htm). The plans set out the intermediate steps needed to meet the UK's long term aims, and reports on progress to date.

The UK also continues to fund and administer the Darwin Initiative. This has played a major role in conserving endangered species and habitats throughout the world. Since its launch in 1992, we have committed more than £45 million to more than 400 projects in more than 100 countries.

Border-straddling Farms

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms straddle the border between (a) England and Wales and (b) England and Scotland. [43333]

Jim Knight: The following figures relate to single payment scheme applications made in 2005:

(a) There are 463 applicants who have land both in England and Wales. 176 have applied to RPA and 287 to NAWAD.

(b) There are 128 applicants who have land both in England and Scotland. 64 have applied to RPA and 64 to SEERAD.

Bovine TB

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the annual Government expenditure on the development of a vaccine against bovine tuberculosis in (a) cattle and (b) badgers has been since 1998. [46730]

Mr. Bradshaw: From 1998–99 to 2004–05, and including the forecast for the year 2005–06, Defra has spent £3.5 million on research into a vaccine against bovine tuberculosis for badgers, and £3.8 million on research into finding a vaccine for cattle.

In parallel with this, Defra has been researching diagnostic tests for badgers and cattle. From 1998–99 to 2004–05, and including the forecast for the year 2005–06, Defra has spent £1.1 million on badger test development, and £2.3 million on cattle test development.

The Government continues to pursue the development of vaccines for cattle and badgers. On 9 June 2005, we announced details of work on natural transmission studies in cattle and a field study to obtain licensing data for injectable BCG in badgers, to start in 2006.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of parishes where badgers removed during the Krebs trial were found to be free of bovine tuberculosis. [45840]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 26 January 2006]: The results of the randomised badger culling trials are still being collected and analysed by the Independent Scientific Group, which is responsible for them. The information requested has not yet been made available by the ISG.

Climate Change

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department plans to take to ensure the travel undertaken by the Young Climate Change Champions is carbon-neutral. [47580]

Mr. Morley: Under the Climate Change Champions youth competition we are looking to avoid and minimise carbon-intensive travel for all Defra facilitated journey's as far as possible. As part of this we will, for example, ensure that the nine chosen Champions, guardians and Government officials travel by surface transport, predominantly by train, on the fact finding tour to Switzerland. We will also be looking to offset any unavoidable emissions incurred as a result of the competition.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department has allocated to the 'Tomorrow's Climate, Today's Challenge' programme. [47581]

Mr. Morley: Defra has committed £12 million to the 'Tomorrow's Climate, Today's Challenge' climate change communications initiative to March 2008.

Coastal and Marine Resources Atlas

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of maintaining the online Coastal and Marine Resources Atlas in each of the last three years. [46856]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 30 January 2006]: Prior to its launch this week, the Coastal and Marine Resource Atlas was a research project. The Coastal and Marine Resource Atlas was produced collaboratively by the following organisations:

Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA)
Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra)
Scottish Executive (SE)
Scottish Natural Heritage (SNH)
Energy Institute (EI)
Joint Nature Conservation Committee (JNCC)
Environment Agency (EA)
English Nature (EN)
Countryside Council for Wales (CCW)
Department of Trade and Industry (DTI)
Hampshire County Council (HCC)
Essex County Council (ECC)
Kent County Council (KCC)

The direct cost of development since September 2003 was £211,000. Defra contributed £71,000 towards these cost. The breakdown by year are:

	Overall costs	Defra contribution
2003–04	12,600	10,000
2004–05	135,600	35,000
2005–06	62,800	26,000

The costs of maintaining the system will be significantly less.

Countryside and Rights of Way Act

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will consider extending the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 legislation to riverside areas. [45666]

Jim Knight: The Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 already includes rights of access on foot for open-air recreation for some riverside areas, which have been mapped as open country and registered common land. We have no plans to extend this at present.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many live agreements there were under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme within two miles of (a) an urban area and (b) the coast (i) in the agreement year 2004 and (ii) from the scheme's inception to November 2005; [46970]

(2) how many hectares were in live agreements under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme within two miles of (a) an urban area and (b) the coast (i) in the agreement year 2004 and (ii) from the scheme's inception to November 2005; [46971]

(3) how much funding was provided under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme for (a) live agreements and (b) live agreements providing public access (i) within two miles of an urban area and (ii) within two miles of the coast (A) in the agreement year 2004 and (B) from the scheme's inception to November 2005. [46973]

Jim Knight: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the items valued at over £100 that have been reported as stolen from buildings occupied by her Department in the past 12 months. [43433]

Jim Knight: I following table shows thefts of items valued at over £100 from core DEFRA buildings from 1 January to 31 December 2005.

Description	Value (£)
Fujitsu Laptop computer	600
Kodak digital camera	200
Fuji digital camera	400
Nokia mobile phone	300
2 x Dell laptops and accessories	2,000
Dell PDA; Nokia mobile phone	305
Sony Discman	100
Toshiba laptop computer	650
Dell flat screen monitor	100
Dell flat screen monitor	100
Dell laptop and docking station	1,050

Departmental Energy Use

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much energy was consumed by her Department in each of the last five years; and how much was spent on energy in each year. [45507]

Jim Knight: Defra was created in June 2001. The following information relates to the four years since then.

	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Energy consumed KWh (Thousand)	155,195	143,957	141,421	134,585
Energy consumed (weather corrected) KWh (Thousand)	164,586	150,381	148,169	142,671
Cost of energy (£000)	3,952	4,155	3,984	4,407

Departmental Equipment

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) laptops and (b) mobile phones her Department bought in each year since 1997; and what the cost of each category of equipment was in each year. [41268]

Jim Knight: DEFRA came into being in June 2001. From information held centrally the cost of each category of equipment in core-DEFRA since 2001 is:

	Mobile phones	Laptops
2001–02	93,272	1,083,488
2002–03	25,721	817,008
2003–04	28,761	897,982
2004–05	70,685	165,111

As at 12 January 2006, core-DEFRA had 2,030 mobile phones. Information for the previous financial years is not held centrally and mobile phone numbers for those years could only be provided at disproportionate cost. For the financial years 2001–02, 2002–03, 2003–04, 2004–05 (end April 04-end September 04) the numbers of laptops were 789, 966, 880 and 163 respectively. On 1 October 2004, DEFRA owned 1,575 laptops which were transferred to IBM's ownership under the e-D contract between IBM and the Department. Since this date, and to 12 January 2006, DEFRA has requested a further 926 laptops from IBM. Under the e-D contract DEFRA does not purchase laptops but pays a service charge for each item.

Departmental Expenditure

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of pension contributions incurred by (a) her Department and (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which she is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [39969]

Jim Knight: The cost of pension contributions incurred by the core Department, the Pesticides Safety Directorate and the Veterinary Medicines Directorate are shown in the following table:

	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06[1]
Defra	25,453,000	27,164,000	39,464,000
PSD	654,000	718,000	1,041,000
VMD	542,000	575,000	798,000

[1] Estimate

Figures for 2002–03 are not available.

Figures for the non-departmental public bodies and remainder of the Executive Agencies are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The breakdown of costs by country and English region cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

For 2005–06, employers' contributions are payable to the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) at one of four rates in the ranges 16.2 to 24.6 per cent. of pensionable pay, based on salary bands. The Scheme Actuary reviews employer contributions every four years following a full scheme valuation; last carried out as at 31 March 2003. The contribution rates reflect the cost of benefits as they accrue (net of employee contributions), not the costs as they are actually incurred, and reflect past experience of the scheme.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent in each year since 1997 by her Department on salaries paid to civil servants. [41583]

Jim Knight: Departmental expenditure on salaries and wages paid to permanent staff is shown in note 2.A of the departmental annual resource accounts. Figures for the Department since 2001–02 are shown in the following table.

There are no figures provided for DEFRA's predecessor Departments as this information could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

	Expenditure on salaries (£000)	Expenditure on salaries as percentage of total spend[1]
2001–02	261,694	4.8
2002–03	305,285	6.7
2003–04	325,206	6.5
2004–05	333,874	5.9

[1] Total spend is defined as total public spending as shown in Table 1 of the DEFRA departmental report 2005 (Cm 6537).

Departmental IT Systems

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department has spent on IT systems in each year since 1997; what the purpose of each system is; what the outturn against planned expenditure of each system was; and what the (a) planned and (b) actual date of completion of each system was. [41317]

Jim Knight: Since the creation of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs during the financial year 2001–02, the Department has spent the following amounts on IT systems:

2001–02	53,746,277.74
2002–03	52,328,672.88
2003–04	57,143,428.57
2004–05	62,460,067.88

The figures quoted above include the cost of maintaining an in-house IT service, including centralised applications development, prior to the outsourcing of this function on 1 October 2004 to International Business Machines (UK) Ltd, and from that date any payments made under the new arrangements.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the then right hon. Minister of State for Rural Affairs to the hon. Member for St. Ives (Andrew George) on 21 October 2004, Official Report, column 832W, that provided that the final contract to IBM has a potential cost of £509 million over 10 years.

Specific information as requested for each system is not held centrally and to gather this detail would incur a disproportionate cost to the Department.

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff employed by her Department live in Castle Point. [42815]

Jim Knight: The home addresses of staff are not held in a form that would enable the number living within a parliamentary constituency to be determined without incurring disproportionate cost.

Departmental Vehicles

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cars are (a) owned and (b) leased by her Department; what models the cars are; what type of petrol each model requires; and what the fuel efficiency is of each model. [41352]

Jim Knight: The car fleet of DEFRA and associated Executive Agencies comprises of:

(a) 333 owned cars, and

(b) 86 lease cars.

This excludes HGV's, vans, 4x4's, and people carriers in the fleet.

Of these 372 are diesel, 21 are petrol, 18 dual fuel petrol/LPG and eight petrol/electric hybrids.

A spreadsheet made available in the Library of the House provides owned and leased vehicles detailing make, model and fuel type.

We are unable to provide information on fuel efficiency of each car, as this would be at disproportionate cost.

Eggs (Sensitive Product Status)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to seek sensitive product status for eggs in shells in the forthcoming World Trade Organisation talks. [37673]

Jim Knight: In October, in the run-up to the 6th Ministerial meeting in Hong Kong, the EU made an offer on improved market access for agricultural products. Others, such as the US, did so too. An agreed feature of the market access negotiations is that all countries will be permitted to protect sensitive products, by applying less than the agreed reduction rates to the tariffs on these products. The EU suggested that up to 8 per cent. of a country's tariff lines on agricultural products should be deemed sensitive products. The US suggested 1 per cent., so there is a considerable divide here that, because the matter was not discussed or decided at Hong Kong, still needs bridging.

The Commission has not made any list of sensitive products available as yet; nor is it likely to do so before the figure for sensitive products is agreed. The EU may yet have to offer a lower figure than 8 per cent. in order to secure a Doha deal. In addition, agreeing the treatment of sensitive products is, of course, as important as agreeing the number.

The UK Government are not endorsing any product as sensitive until the number and treatment of sensitive products is agreed. In general, you will be aware that the UK Government wishes to see only a minimal number of sensitive products as we believe a large number would undermine the potential benefits of the Doha Round.

The representatives for the Egg Industry can lobby the Commission direct. The UK Government will review its own position when we know the parameters we have to work to.

Fallen Goats

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she (a) takes and (b) plans to take to monitor the extent to which her Department's approved agents collecting fallen goats under the compulsory Scrapie Monitoring Scheme operate in accordance with biosecurity regulations. [45701]

Mr. Bradshaw: A key objective of the Government's Animal Health and Welfare Strategy is to raise biosecurity standards on farms and hauliers involved in the collection of fallen goats from farms should adhere to biosecurity protocols issued by DEFRA. This includes making sure that vehicles and equipment are maintained in good working order at all times, and, in particular, that surfaces liable to contamination are thoroughly cleansed and disinfected.

Action will be taken against any haulier involved in the collection of fallen goats from farms who fails to adhere to these biosecurity protocols.

Farming

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) dairy, (b) arable and (c) mixed farms there were in West Lancashire in (i) 1976, (ii) 1980, (iii) 1990 and (iv) 2000. [45037]

Jim Knight: The number of holdings by farm type in West Lancashire are as follows:

	(a) Dairy	(b) Cereals	General cropping	(c) Mixed
(i) 1990	16	43	349	28
(ii) 2000	13	59	218	23

Notes:
Figures prior to 2000 cover main holdings only. Figures from 2000 onwards include main and minor holdings. A holding is defined as minor if it meets all the following conditions:
(a) The total area is less than six hectares.
(b) The labour requirement is estimated to be less than 100 standard person days.
(c) There is no regular full-time farmer or worker.
(d) The glasshouse area is less than 100 square metres.
(e) The occupier does not farm another holding.

Green Ministers Group

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times the Green Ministers' Group has met in the past 12 months. [47582]

Mr. Morley: Following the general election in May 2005, the Cabinet Sub-Committee of Green Ministers (ENV(G)) was replaced by the Ministerial Sub-Committee on Sustainable Development in Government (EE(SD)) whose members are departmental Sustainable Development Ministers It is established practice under exemption two of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committees.

Grey Squirrels

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she plans to have with landowners to persuade them to allow the culling of grey squirrels on their land. [46433]

Jim Knight: The decision to control grey squirrel lies with individual landowners and we have no plans to carry out culling of grey squirrel on private land. However, we will be encouraging landowners to cull grey squirrels in priority areas where there is a critical threat to woodland and priority species such as the dormouse, red squirrels and woodland birds.

The recently published Grey Squirrels and England's Woodlands: Policy and Action Statement set out specific areas for action by the Forestry Commission over the next three years. These are:

Research into new methods of controlling grey squirrel;

Advice on best practice;

Grants to woodland owners;

Supporting partnerships and encouraging co-operative action;

Applying best practice on the public forest estate.

The Red Alert North England Partnership which includes DEFRA and the Forestry Commission have agreement with the owners of the 16 designated red squirrel reserves that grey squirrel will be culled. They are still working with landowners in the buffer zones to ensure grey squirrels are also controlled in these areas. The Forestry Commission's English Woodland Grant scheme will enable incentives to be offered towards the cost of grey squirrel control.

Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Directive

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many meetings of the EU (a) Committee for the implementation of the Directive concerning integrated pollution prevention and control, (b) Committee for the adaption to technical progress and application of the Community award scheme for an eco-label and (c) Committee on the monitoring mechanism of emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases in the Community have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; which other UK representatives were present; what provision was made for representation of the devolved governments; and if she will make a statement. [39001]

Mr. Morley: In respect of the implementation of the Directive concerning integrated pollution prevention and control, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1463W.

There were no meetings of the Committee for the adaption to technical progress and application of the Community award scheme for an eco-label.

The Committee on the monitoring mechanism of emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases, met on 20 July and 16 September during the UK Presidency. The Committee was chaired by the European Commission. The UK was represented by a Defra official.

The devolved Administrations are routinely asked to represent their views.

Jewish Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department did to (a) celebrate Hanukkah and (b) mark Yom Kippur in 2005. [46757]

Jim Knight: An article was placed in Defra's Office Notices (29 September 2005 edition), which raised awareness of forthcoming Jewish religious festivals, including Yom Kippur. No specific measures were taken to raise awareness of Hanukkah.

However, Defra's Diversity and Equality unit (DEU) maintains an extensive intranet site, providing help and guidance to all staff, which gives comprehensive information on the world's major religions/faiths, including Judaism. The site also contains an annually updated interfaith calendar, which details the major festivals of all the major religions/faiths throughout the year. Furthermore, the site contains guidance on the regulations implementing the EU Employment Directive 2000, which came into force on 2 December 2003, under which it is unlawful, to discriminate in employment and training on grounds of religion or belief.

In recognition of the diversity of faiths/religions practiced by Defra staff, managers are encouraged, where practical, to allow non-Christian staff to work on privilege days falling on Christian holidays, and take the equivalent time at a later date to allow them to celebrate/observe their own religious festivals. In addition, Defra wherever possible, makes space available for staff who wish to pray.

Live Exports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department's policy is on live (a) sheep and (b) calf exports to Europe. [46622]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department would prefer a trade in meat to the long distance transport of live animals to slaughter, whether in the UK or across borders. We would also like to see a lower limit for maximum journey times.

There is currently no export of calves and we are pleased that the use of veal crates will be banned throughout the EU from 1 January 2007 (though they have already largely been phased out). This will mean that calves in Europe will enjoy the same minimum levels of welfare as UK calves have done since 1990.

All animals should be transported in good conditions. New welfare in transport rules come into force in January 2007 under EC Regulation 1/2005. The UK supported the new regulation as it does much to help improve animal welfare in transport, such as improved enforcement of the rules, and new training and authorisation procedures but we regret that it did not lower the maximum journey times to slaughter.

Livestock Movements

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will review the need for the current six-day rule as it applies to the movement of sheep. [47036]

Mr. Bradshaw: I do not believe that this is the right time for a review. In 2003, the extensive cost benefit analysis into movement standstills demonstrated the significant benefits of standstill regimes in reducing both the size and cost of a disease outbreak. And these conclusions remain valid.

Standstills confer significant protection when disease is present but undetected. I do not believe that it would be at all desirable to remove this protection from the sheep industry.

Organic Farming

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of farms are managed to Soil Association organic standards in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [43254]

Jim Knight: Soil Association Certification Ltd are one of the 10 private bodies currently approved by DEFRA for the inspection and certification of organic farmers in the UK in accordance with Council Regulation (EEC) 2092/91.

Of the 192,824 agricultural holdings in England, 2,562 currently hold organic certification and of these 1,613 are certified by the Soil Association. The corresponding figures for the Tees Valley are 842, three and zero and for Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland 229, one and zero.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms have converted to Soil Association organic standards since 1997. [43255]

Jim Knight: Soil Association Certification Ltd are one of the ten private bodies currently approved by DEFRA for the inspection and certification of organic farmers in the UK in accordance with Council Regulation (EEC) 2092/91.

In 1997 there were 1,027[1] organic farms in the UK of which 750[2] were certified by the Soil Association. Currently there are 4,016[3] organic farms in the UK, of which 2,237[3] are certified by the Soil Association.

Pheasant Shooting

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department collects information on the number of farms that have started pheasant shoots as part of their business since 2000. [44207]

Jim Knight: The Department does not have any information on the number of farms that have started pheasant shoots as part of their business since 2000.

The most recent information collected on shooting was on the 2003 June agricultural and horticultural census. The results show that an estimated 2,150 farms in England are engaging in shooting as a commercial activity. This figure includes the shooting of all game species and also includes non-game shooting, for example, clay pigeon shooting.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many grants her Department has made for pheasant rearing as part of farm diversification in each year since 2000. [44214]

Jim Knight: Since 2000, DEFRA has funded the following relevant projects as part of the support available for farm diversification:

one project funded through delegated grants under the objective 1 programme in Cornwall from 2001 to 2003

one project funded through a Countryside Service Sustainable Development Grant in 2004–05 to assist the running of a private shoot; and a further project involving game processing for retail sale after the birds had been shot. This was funded through the rural enterprise scheme in 2003–04

ERDP (England rural development plan) schemes do not target specific sectors of the food industry, including people involved with pheasant rearing. It is up to individual applicants to come up with projects that meet the criteria of ERDP schemes. ERDP schemes are also competitive, and there is no guarantee that an entirely eligible application will receive funding.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department collects statistics on the number of pheasants reared for shooting each year. [44216]

Jim Knight: The Department does not collect statistics on the number of pheasants reared for shooting. However, research carried out for the Department in summer 2005 estimates that the number of pheasants reared for shooting in Great Britain each year is in the region of 20 to 30 million birds.

School Milk

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to change the way the school milk subsidy scheme is administered; and if she will make a statement. [43875]

Jim Knight: The Rural Payments Agency must administer the school milk subsidy scheme in accordance with regulatory, accreditation and audit requirements set by the EU. These rules allow little scope for changing current practice.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which local authorities participate in the school milk subsidy scheme. [43876]

Jim Knight: The following local authorities currently participate in the school milk subsidy scheme in England.

Set-aside

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many UK farmers have applied for set aside payments for each of the last seven years; and how much was allocated for set aside payments in each such year. [43546]

Jim Knight: The following table details the number of farmers in England that have applied for set-aside broken down into the totals for each of the last seven scheme years.

It also details, by scheme year, the total amount paid for set-aside.

	Number of applications	Value of set-aside paid (£)
1999	31,373	157,352,422
2000	30,892	104,002,110
2001	32,909	163,175,036
2002	30,707	120,681,975
2003	30,571	152,041,890
2004	30,670	111,390,408
2005[1]	34,014	11,148,768

[1] The payment for 2005 is an estimate.

The variation in payment value is due to fluctuations within the aid rates applicable.

A proportion of 2005 scheme year claims are still being validated, so the precise number and value might change.

The other parts of the UK are the responsibility of their respective devolved administrations.

Stray Animals

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether funding has been made available to local authorities to enable them to fulfil their responsibility for looking after stray animals under the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005. [47175]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 31 January 2006]: Funds will be transferred from the police to local authorities to reflect the transfer of responsibility for stray dogs under section 68 of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005. Negotiations over this transfer of funds are currently taking place between DEFRA, the Home Office, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Local Government Association and section 68 will not commence until an agreement has been reached.

Tail Docking

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether all tail docking of animals is prohibited. [45753]

Mr. Bradshaw: No, the docking of dogs' tails is allowed but only if performed by a vet. The routine tail docking of piglets is prohibited, but they can be docked on the advice of a vet where tail biting is likely to occur. The tail docking of cattle is prohibited except in an emergency by a vet. And the Docking and Nicking of Horses Act 1949 prevents the docking of a horse's tail and restricts the import of a horse with a docked tail.

The Animal Welfare Bill will prohibit the mutilation of animals for non-medical reasons, with exemptions set out in secondary legislation.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to prevent people from travelling abroad to get their dogs' tails docked. [45760]

Mr. Bradshaw: The docking of dogs' tails is currently legal if performed by a vet and the Government do not consider it necessary to restrict the ability of people to take their dog abroad to get it docked.

Anyone travelling abroad with a dog has to comply with appropriate veterinary requirements when entering the country of destination, and when re-entering the UK.

UK Regional Development Regulations

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the proposed EU budget on the EU regional development programme, with particular reference to UK regional development regulations (RDRs); and when an announcement will be made on the next tranche of RDRs. [43834]

Jim Knight: Based on the assumption that this question relates to UK rural development programmes which will be developed in light of the new Rural Development Regulation (EC Regulation No. 1698 of 2005) and come into force from 1 January 2007, the overall budget for rural development in Europe has been set at €69.75 billion for the period 2007–13.

The agreement on the EU budget deal allows member states, including the UK, to begin the necessary preparatory work for the next round of rural development programmes to run from 2007. The allocation of EU rural development funds to member states has yet to be determined and will be subject to proposals currently being devised by the European Commission. The figure of €69.75 billion is similar to current rural development expenditure, although the focus of this expenditure in the new financial perspective will be upon the new member states.

Importantly, the agreed budget deal included a provision allowing member states, at their discretion, to transfer up to 20 per cent. of pillar 1 funds and make them available for expenditure on rural development measures. Decisions on the overall level of transfer needed will depend on the UK's share of EU funding for rural development, and on the overall size and content of the new rural development programmes to operate from 1 January 2007. In England, we hope to launch a public consultation on the next rural development programme in February 2006.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

BBC World Service

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the BBC World Service's decision to cease broadcasting non-English language services in parts of eastern Europe, Thailand and Kazakhstan; and what assessment has been made of the likely impact of this decision. [47297]

Mr. Straw: I have received representations from Members of Parliament and members of the public in the UK, as well as from some Governments and members of the public in the countries concerned. Many have expressed concern and opposition to the changes while some have endorsed the reprioritisation of the BBC World Service. The changes involved were decided on the basis of a thorough assessment of the reach and impact of all its language services. The overall impact of the closures has been judged to be low.

Correspondence

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to reply to the letter of 31 October from the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton regarding his constituent, Mr. M. A. Lindsay. [33481]

Dr. Howells: My noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, replied to the letter of 31 October from the hon. Member on 7 December 2005.

Côte d'Ivoire

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the security situation in Côte d'Ivoire. [46525]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend, the Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 26 January 2006, Official Report, columns 2240–41W.

Departmental Websites

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost of maintaining his main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46304]

Ian Pearson: The cost of maintaining the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Web Platform, which hosts all of the FCO's public facing websites for 2004–05 was £548,000. Costs for the main FCO website are included within this overall cost. The number of unique visits to the FCO website for each of the 12 months during that year were as follows:

	Visits
2004
April	1,079,439
May	1,168,731
June	1,214,901
July	1,217,242
August	1,211,198
September	1,213,467
October	1,490,828
November	1,262,186
December	1,052,104
2005
January	1,158,188
February	920,028
March	981,640

Ethiopia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in Ethiopia. [45552]

Ian Pearson: The UK is concerned about governance, human rights and the detention of opposition leaders, journalists and members of civil society in Ethiopia. We have raised our concerns directly and at the highest level with the Ethiopian Government, most recently when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development visited Ethiopia on 18 January.

During his visit, my right hon. Friend called for an independent investigation into the alleged recent human rights violations in Oromiya; a prompt, fair and open judicial process for those currently detained; international jurists to observe the trials, and that an independent international organisation be allowed to inspect all the places where people are currently being detained. On 17 December 2005, in a meeting with my noble Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, Prime Minister Meles agreed to observation of trials of the opposition by international jurists, the first of whom has been appointed.

We remain committed to supporting poverty reduction and the democratisation process in Ethiopia. We will continue to work with the Government of Ethiopia, the international community and other stakeholders to make progress on human rights and governance in Ethiopia.

European Community

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the legislative items introduced under articles (a) 94, (b) 95 and (c) 308 of the treaty establishing the European Community in the past 12 months. [46782]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 18 October 2005, Official Report, column 904W. The Government do not keep a central overview of legislative items introduced under articles 94, 95 and 308 of the treaty. The Europa website provides a means of searching for all legislation. This is available at: http://www.europa.eu.int/eur-lex/en/search/search_lif.html New proposals are listed by subject-matter on the main page at: http://www.europa.eu.int/index_en.htm

Overseas Territories

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what ministerial visits to the Overseas Territories are planned before January 2007; and if he will make a statement. [47096]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: No specific trips are planned but foreign engagements for Government Ministers are kept under constant review. It is not practice to announce such visits until they are firm. Because of the unpredictable nature of world events, final decisions on overseas visits are often not possible until very shortly before the day of travel and an announcement is sometimes not possible until a visit is under way.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment the UK Government have made of the vulnerability of each of the Overseas Territories to (a) natural disasters and (b) man-made disasters; and if he will make a statement. [47099]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The UK Overseas Territories are mostly small islands, which are potentially at risk from a range of man made and natural disasters. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has a rolling programme of capability reviews to assess the vulnerability of those most at risk and offer advice on measures to mitigate a disaster's impact and manage the crisis. The review process also assesses a territory's ability to deal with disasters locally.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contingency plans his Department has in place for (a) natural and (b) man-made disasters in each of the Overseas Territories. [47100]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Foreign and Commonwealth Office Rapid Deployment Teams are ready at all times to respond to crises and disasters all over the world including the Overseas Territories. There is also a dedicated Overseas Territories Management Oversight Committee, which supports the Governor in time of disaster, and works with other Government Departments including the Department for International Development, in organising the UK's response in London. Each Overseas Territories has ownership of its own disaster contingency plans.

Rendition

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether individuals have been subject to rendition from the United Kingdom to an overseas country since 1997. [47586]

Dr. Howells: No.

Rohingya People

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of Rohingya people living in (a) Bangladesh, (b) Pakistan, (c) Saudi Arabia, (d) United Arab Emirates, (e) Malaysia and (f) Thailand. [45555]

Ian Pearson: We do not normally hold figures for the total number of Rohingya people living in third countries.

However, inquiries carried out by our Missions suggest that there are between 450,000 and 500,000 Rohingyas living in Saudi Arabia, 11,000 in Malaysia and between 150,000 and 220,000 in Bangladesh. We have no overall figure for Rohingyas living in Pakistan, but there are an estimated 80,000 living in Karachi.

There are no figures available for Thailand or the United Arab Emirates.

Slave Trade Abolition (Bicentenary)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will use the 2007 bicentenary of the abolition of the slave trade to press for effective worldwide prohibition of slavery and for the establishment of mechanisms to monitor and report on compliance. [47333]

Ian Pearson: The Government are committed to marking in 2007 the 200th anniversary of the passing of the Abolition of the Slave Trade Act. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister is chairing an Advisory Group, which includes a broad range of faith, community, city and cultural representatives, to develop proposals on the Government's contributions to the bicentenary. We will want to look both to the past and to the lessons that have been learnt and to raise awareness of the millions of people still living under contemporary forms of slavery. Around the world, the UK works in partnership with foreign Governments, international organisations and civil society to break the cycle of poverty and social exclusion that are at the root of most forms of contemporary slavery. Together with the Advisory Group, we will consider how best to use this opportunity to make progress on the range of issues that persist today.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions he had had with the Government of Sudan on permitting civil society within Sudan access to the work of the African Union without fear of harassment; [46044]

(2) what plans he has to help facilitate a civil society forum in Sudan. [46049]

Ian Pearson: On 22 January 2006, the 35 participants in an open civil society forum on working with the African Union in Khartoum, organised by the Sudanese Organisation Against Torture, were detained for more than three hours at the conference venue by the Sudanese authorities. All were released unharmed. Our ambassador in Khartoum raised this with the Government of Sudan, and attended the scene during the detention. Other embassy staff were on hand to speak to the participants and provide consular assistance which, thankfully, was not needed. We are clear that such harassment of civil society is unacceptable and that the Government of Sudan must strictly uphold the freedoms of expression and association that are guaranteed under the constitution of Sudan. We are pressing the EU presidency to lead a formal high-level protest to the Government of Sudan in the coming days, and will continue to raise this matter with the Government of Sudan.

The UK strongly supports the development of civil society in Sudan. We are supporting a capacity building programme for civil society organisations and the media in Sudan including providing more than £200,000 over three years to support the work of the Sudanese Organisation Against Torture. We are also contributing to the Multidonor Trust Fund which is developing a civil society programme to support civil society voice and advocacy.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Colin Worton

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 317W, on Colin Worton, by what criteria claims for (a) compensation and (b) an ex gratia payment are assessed. [46455]

Mr. Hanson: There are two schemes for awarding compensation for miscarriages of justice. These are the statutory scheme under Section 133 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 and the ex gratia arrangements which were set out in a statement to the House of Commons on 29 November 1985, Official Report, columns 691–692, by the then Home Secretary and which have been adopted by successive Secretaries of State for Northern Ireland since then.

Section 133 provides that the Secretary of State shall pay compensation to a person who has been convicted of and punished for a criminal offence, where the conviction is subsequently reversed or a pardon is granted on the ground that a new or newly discovered fact shows beyond reasonable doubt that there has been a miscarriage of justice. Compensation shall not be paid where the non-disclosure of the unknown fact was wholly or partially attributable to the person convicted.

A reversal in this context refers to a conviction which has been quashed either on an out-of-time appeal, or on a reference under the Criminal Appeal Act 1995, section 7 of the Terrorism Act 2000 or section 12 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005.

Under the ex gratia scheme compensation may exceptionally be granted where a person has spent time in custody following a wrongful conviction or charge, where there has been serious default on the part of the police or some other public authority, or where facts emerge, either at trial or on appeal within time, that completely exonerate the accused.

Crosshill Quarry

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what standards were applied in deciding that the two positive samples collected from Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin, in November 2004 were not considered hazardous (a) for human consumption and (b) to aquatic organisms. [46333]

Angela E. Smith: Asbestos fibres were detected in two water samples collected on 5 November 2004 from (a) the discharge point from Crosshill Quarry, and (b) the receiving waterway 30 metres downstream. Analysis of the samples collected showed that they contained, respectively, twenty one thousand (21,000) and four thousand two hundred (4,200) asbestos fibres per litre of water. To put the above-mentioned number of asbestos fibres in context, the USA Environment Protection Agency has set a limit on the number of fibres allowed in drinking water at seven million (7,000,000) per litre. Moreover, it is the view of the World Health Organisation (WHO) that there is no consistent evidence that ingested asbestos is hazardous to health and thus it is concluded that there is no need to establish a health-based guideline value for asbestos and drinking water. The Department is guided by the WHO advice on the matter.

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what dates in (a) July 1984 and (b) February 2004 water and soil samples were collected from Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin; and what the results of each of those samples were. [46334]

Angela E. Smith: Environment and Heritage Service of Department of the Environment did not collect water or soil samples from the Crosshill Quarry site in July 1984 or February 2004. Records held by Environment and Heritage Service contain no evidence that samples were collected by the owners of the site on any date in July 1984 or February 2004.

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland under what authority the contractor was permitted to cut the railway carriages at Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin, into three sections between 25 November 2003 and February 2004. [46335]

Angela E. Smith: Antrim borough council was the regulatory authority for Crosshill when the site operator proposed the reburial of the carriages and when work commenced. The Department of the Environment was not in a position to give authority for the work.

No additional authority was required from the Health and Safety Executive. Nevertheless, the site operators did provide HSE with a method statement for their proposals for the reburial of the carriages.

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action was taken to identify the source of white asbestos found in Crosshill Quarry, Crumlin, in February 2005; what investigation was undertaken by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [46336]

Angela E. Smith: It has not been possible to be conclusive about the exact source of the asbestos fibres found in the soil samples. This site was used for several years as a landfill for demolition waste, and the asbestos fibres identified are typically found in a range of construction and demolition waste.

The Department undertook an initial soil survey for asbestos at Crosshill Quarry in February 2005, and in light of the results recommended that remedial actions be undertaken by the site operators. On completion of these remedial actions, the Department undertook a further soil survey in July 2005. The remedial actions have been effective in significantly removing the asbestos fibres in the two identified areas in the February tests.

Ministerial Car Fleet

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 11 January 2006, Official Report, column 637W, on the Ministerial Car Fleet, from what budget ministerial cars and drivers are paid. [46469]

Mr. Woodward: Cars and drivers for Northern Ireland Office (NIO) Ministers are provided by either the Police Service of Northern Ireland or the Government Car and Dispatch Agency, who then recover their costs directly from the NIO.

Police

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers based in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales have been (i) transferred and (ii) seconded into the Police Service of Northern Ireland in each year since the implementation of the Patten Report. [44888]

Mr. Woodward: The number of officers transferred and seconded from GB police services into the Police Service of Northern Ireland since the year 2000 to date has been provided in the following tables.

(i) Officers transferred from GB Police Services

Transferred	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006 (to date)
England	0	2	25	7	8	13	1
Wales	0	0	0	0	0	0	0

(ii) Officers seconded from GB Police Services

Seconded	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006 (to date)
England	2	2	0	2	1	3	12

Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements are in place to ensure that bodies within the responsibility of his Department comply with the requirements of the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000. [3542]

Mr. Hain: Historically because the Race Relations Act 1976 did not apply to Northern Ireland it was understood that the provisions of the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000 did not apply. The Northern Ireland Office (NIO) and Executive have a parallel and similarly stringent mechanism through Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1993 which has race as an equality category. However the Department has agreed with the Commission for Racial Equality that the Northern Ireland Office will operate on the principle that section 71(1) of the Race Relations Act and amendment Order applies to all of the Northern Ireland Office functions both in Northern Ireland and Great Britain. It was further agreed that the Department' s equality related statutory duties will be reviewed as part of a wider review of the NIO's equality scheme under section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998. The Commission for Racial Equality will review compliance when the reviewed equality scheme is completed.

Speech Therapy

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the possible impact of the cancellation of the speech therapy degree course for 2005–06 at the University of Ulster on speech therapy waiting lists in Northern Ireland. [46675]

Mr. Woodward: Entry to the speech and language degree course at the University of Ulster is being deferred for the academic year 2006–07. This decision is part of a phased move to change the duration of the course from four years to three years, which is in line with courses in England, Wales and Scotland. Plans have been put in place to ensure that there will be no year without a supply of graduates available for employment in the Health and Personal Social Services.

US Visa Applications

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 2247W, on US Visa Applications, how many applications his Department has discussed with the US Consulate in Belfast in each of the last 15 years. [46466]

Mr. Hain: None. Decisions on applications for visas are a matter for the US Administration.

Waste Management Grant Scheme

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the potential impact on councils' draft rates estimates of the changes in the Waste Management Grant Scheme. [45432]

Angela E. Smith: The reduction of £3 million in the Waste Management Grant Scheme will impact on all 26 councils to varying degrees. Only individual councils can define the precise effect this has on the district rate. However, the Department of the Environment has conducted a provisional assessment of the impact based on district councils' spending profiles. It indicates that councils which invest in capital projects will be unaffected, whereas others who utilised the scheme for revenue spend may have to raise their rates by between 1 and 2.5p.

Whatever money councils choose to raise, it will be in addition to the capital moneys from the Waste Management Grant Scheme.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Waste Management Grant Scheme for 2006–07 has been reduced to £7 million; and if he will make a statement. [45433]

Angela E. Smith: The reduction was made in light of the Priorities and Budget exercise for 2005–08, which took into account the ongoing pressures on all elements of the Northern Ireland block allocation. The £7 million budget for 2006–07 reflects the pattern of carry over in councils' capital spend.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons local councils were not notified of changes in the Waste Management Grant Scheme before the Northern Ireland Local Government Association Strategic Forum on 12 January. [45434]

Angela E. Smith: District councils were made aware of the possibility of a reduction to the grant and closure of the Waste Management Grant Scheme during the summer of 2005. When this was confirmed in October 2005, councils made adjustments to their spending plans.

In light of pressures on the Northern Ireland budget, Ministers have had no option but to take a firm line on resource funding. Their approval to provide funding for the last year of the scheme, granted at the end of December 2005, was given with the condition that the money should only be used for capital projects as originally planned.

EHS was not in a position to advise councils while it pressed for a relaxation to the resource funding position, which it continued to do until mid-January. When it became clear that there was no prospect of change, the matter was raised at the NILGA meeting on 12 January 2006.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will allow allocations for the Waste Management Grant Scheme in Northern Ireland to be spent on revenue expenditure. [45435]

Angela E. Smith: Flexibility in the application of the Waste Management Grant Scheme arose in the past from in-year monitoring, which enabled a degree of both capital and resource spend. Pressure on budget for 2006–07 means that flexibility is no longer available.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Waste Management Grant Scheme funding in Northern Ireland must be spent only on capital expenditure.[45436]

Angela E. Smith: The basis of the Waste Management Grant Scheme was as a capital grant for the provision of smaller infrastructure elements. Its increased use for associated resource projects has depended upon in-year monitoring, enabling flexibility between capital and resource elements, but that flexibility cannot be provided for 2006–07.

Hard decisions had to be made during the most recent Budget process, and this resulted in the loss of flexibility for the use of funds for resources.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures are available to him to ensure that local councils in Northern Ireland are able to meet their waste management requirements. [45437]

Angela E. Smith: I fully recognise the difficulties faced by local councils in meeting their waste management requirements, particularly those contained in the EU Landfill Directive. My Department is committed to working in partnership with councils to assist them with these responsibilities and to this end, we have set up a number of important working groups comprising representatives from central and local government.

The Northern Ireland Landfill Allowances Scheme (NILAS) Implementation Steering Group was established in June 2005 with the aim of ensuring that Northern Ireland maximises the possibility of achieving the Landfill Directive targets for the reduction of biodegradable municipal waste sent to landfill.

One of the key tasks facing local councils is the provision of a network of new infrastructure to ensure that landfill diversion targets are met. In April 2005, the Department established a Waste Infrastructure Task Force to help councils with the planning and procurement of new waste management facilities.

The main work of the task force involves identifying appropriate structural arrangements for the procurement of waste infrastructure; the likely location, type and cost of the facilities; and a suitable procurement and funding package.

From a financial point of view, the Department of the Environment's Environment and Heritage Service continues to support councils through grants for the treatment and safe disposal of fridges and end of life vehicles.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Correspondence

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will respond to the letter of 22 December 2005 from the hon. Member for East Devon seeking an inquiry into the recent events at English National Opera. [47306]

Mr. Lammy: I will be sending a response to the hon. Member within the next few days.

Departmental Sustainable Development

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department takes to report publicly on its key sustainable development impacts. [46865]

James Purnell: Key operational sustainable development impacts are publicised on our website under the heading 'Framework for Sustainable Development' (see http://www.culture.gov.uk/about_dcms/sustainable_development/sustainable_development_framework.htm). I intend to publish a Sustainable Development Action Plan very shortly, followed by a progress report by the end of 2006. Our sustainable development strategy, which covers all aspects of our involvement with sustainable development, is available electronically on our website and hard copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

EU Media Plus

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which UK (a) programmes and (b) films have received funding from the EU Media Plus programme; and if she will make a statement. [46836]

James Purnell: The Government support the Media Plus programme and recognise the benefits it brings to help create a sustainable and successful film industry in the UK.

Since 2001, the UK film industry has benefited from over €28 million, approximately £19.5 million, through the Media Plus programme, and a further €500,000 (£341,000) through the related i2i initiative.

Specific projects to have received such funding include films such as East is East and Christmas Carol—The Movie. Slate funding received has led to the development of films such as Sylvia, A Cock and Bull Story and Girl with a Pearl Earring.

In addition, the New Talent scheme has been particularly beneficial for the UK. The British scriptwriter, Duane Hopkins, received the 2004 MEDIA New Talent award in 2004 for his feature-length screenplay Better Things.

TV programmes that have also benefited from the funding scheme include Why We Fight and the forthcoming In Search of Mozart.

I am arranging for the complete list of UK programmes and films that have received financial assistance from the EU Media Plus programme to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Jewish Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her Department did to (a) celebrate Hanukkah and (b) mark Yom Kippur in 2005. [46753]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS is a diverse organisation that values its staff as individuals. Although the Department does not specifically celebrate Hanukkah and Yom Kippur its diversity training promotes the need for staff to be sensitive to colleagues observing or already celebrating religious or cultural events. We also provide a religious and cultural guide and an interfaith calendar which is available to all staff on our intranet site.

Libraries

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her Department's policy is on stocking Bibles in libraries. [47917]

Mr. Lammy: This is a matter for each local library authority.

Licensing Act (Welsh Forms)

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress has been made on providing Welsh language versions of the licensing forms issued in relation to the Licensing Act 2003. [45027]

James Purnell [holding answer 24 January 2006]: My officials have been exploring with the Welsh Language Board which other documents relating to the licensing process should be prescribed in Welsh, in addition to the applications forms. They hope to conclude those discussions shortly. We will then consult key stakeholders before finalising the regulations and laying them before Parliament in April. Subject to the usual parliamentary process, we would expect the Order prescribing the forms to come into force in the early summer. The Department is also discussing a proposed DCMS Welsh language scheme with the Welsh Language Board with the aim of treating the Welsh and English Languages equally in the conduct of public business.

National Cultural Goods

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received on the adoption of legislation in the United Kingdom to (a) prevent seizure and (b) guarantee the security of national cultural goods on loan from other countries; and if she will make a statement. [46671]

Mr. Lammy: My Department has received four letters on this subject, one of which was on behalf of a number of museum and gallery directors most affected by this issue. I am meeting the directors on 2 February to discuss what can be done to prevent the seizure of international works of art in the UK and reassure lenders that it continues to be safe to exhibit in the UK.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the adequacy of UK provisions to guarantee the security of national cultural goods on loan from other countries; and if she will make a statement. [46672]

Mr. Lammy: The Government have reviewed the extent of the protection already available to state owned property, including national cultural goods, in the United Kingdom under the State Immunity Act 1978, and we will be considering the introduction of legislation to provide immunity from seizure for international works of art.

Olympic Games 2012

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her latest estimate is for the cost of hosting the 2012 Olympic games; and if she will make a statement. [45123]

Tessa Jowell: As I said in my recent answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Edgbaston (Ms Stuart) on 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 2296W, I have commissioned KPMG to provide advice on the costs of the London 2012 Olympic games. Their work, which is ongoing, will inform our strategy for managing the Olympic project.

Stonehenge

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether (a) Ministers and (b) officials from her Department have discussed with the National Trust the proposals from consultants for a new northern corridor route for the proposed A303 Stonehenge road improvement. [47005]

Mr. Lammy: I am aware of outline proposals from the National Trust's consultants on a new northern corridor route for the A303 past Stonehenge. The Department for Transport will be meeting the National Trust to discuss this and other issues. My Department will chair the next Stonehenge programme board on 22 February which will provide a further opportunity for discussion.

Television Broadcasts (Violence)

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether her Department plans, under the Government's Respect Agenda, to monitor and evaluate the effect on antisocial behaviour of the broadcasting of violent acts during peak-time television programming. [46677]

James Purnell: No. Responsibility for what is broadcast on television and radio rests with the broadcasters and the organisations which regulate broadcasting—the Office of Communications (Ofcom) the governors of the BBC, and the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority.

Under section 2.4 of Ofcom's Broadcasting Code, which applies to all broadcasters, programmes must not include material which, taking into account the context, condones or glamorises violent, dangerous or seriously antisocial behaviour and is likely to encourage others to copy such behaviour. This has been in place since July 2005. Ofcom periodically commissions research which informs the development and interpretation of its code.

Television Licences

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many fines for the non-payment of television licences have been imposed in each London constituency for each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [47409]

James Purnell: Information on fines for unlicensed use of a television receiver is not recorded separately from other offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts 1949 to 1967 and the Communications Act 2003, although the majority of offences under these acts are likely to relate to television licence evasion; nor is information held by constituency. The number of offenders receiving fines for all offences under the above Acts in the Metropolitan and City of London police force areas, for each of the last five years for which information is available, was:

	Number of fines
2000	16,105
2001	6,071
2002	10,267
2003	7,066
2004	12,131

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many fines for the non-payment of television licences have been imposed in (a) Barnsley and (b) Doncaster in each of the last five years. [46557]

James Purnell: Information on fines for unlicensed use of a television receiver is not recorded separately from other offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts 1949 to 1967 and the Communications Act 2003, although the majority of offences under these acts are likely to relate to television licence evasion. The number of offenders receiving fines for all offences under the above Acts in the Barnsley district magistrates court and Doncaster magistrates' court, for each of the last five years for which information is available, was:

Number

	Barnsley district magistrates court	Doncaster magistrates court
2000	571	567
2001	420	381
2002	617	888
2003	251	362
2004	328	423

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Annual Leave

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research he has commissioned on the average number of days of paid annual leave taken by low-skilled workers. [45697]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government asked the Low Pay Commission to consider the impact of extending annual leave entitlements. The following table from their annual report for 2005 shows the paid leave entitlement for low-paid working age employees in autumn 2003.

Paid leave entitlement (excluding bank holidays) for low-paid working age employees by hours, autumn 2003

Percentage

Paid leave entitlement	Part-time	Full-time	All
Fewer than 10 days	41.1	6.8	24.4
10 to fewer than 12 days	4.2	3.4	3.8
12 to fewer than 20 days	18.2	14.0	16.1
20 days or more	36.6	75.8	55.7

Departmental Expenditure

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many widescreen televisions have been purchased by his Department for use in London Headquarters in each of the last five years; and what the cost was in each year. [39144]

Alan Johnson: The Department is unable to identify separately widescreen televisions purchased from expenditure on other electrical audio-visual equipment such as flatscreen displays or traditional cathode ray tube TVs.

Departmental Sickness Absence

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many days sick leave on average staff in his Department have taken in each of the last five years; and what percentage of total working days this represented in each year. [28767]

Alan Johnson: The following sets out average sick absence in the DTI HQ (including Small Business Service) in each of the last five years; and percentage of total working days this represented in each year. All data include weekends and public and privilege holidays; and therefore based on working year of 335 days.

	Headcount		Full-time equivalent
	Average days	Percentage of total working days	Average days	Percentage of total working days
2005	5.7	1.72	5.9	1.77
2004	8.0	2.39	8.2	2.46
2003	7.0	2.09	7.2	2.16
2002	7.0	2.08	7.2	2.13
2001	6.7	2.01	6.9	2.07

Departmental Staff (Castle Point)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff employed by his Department live in Castle Point. [42820]

Alan Johnson: Ten staff from the Department of Trade and Industry and its agencies have given their home address as being in Castle Point.

Equal Opportunities (Funding)

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what factors he took into account in deciding on the level of funding to be allocated to (a) the Commission for Racial Equality, (b) the Disability Rights Commission and (c) the Equal Opportunities Commission. [46693]

Meg Munn [holding answer 30 January 2006]: The information is as follows.

(a) The Commission for Racial Equality is funded by the Home Office.

(b) The Disability Rights Commission is funded by the Department for Work and Pensions.

(c) My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry decides the level of funding for the Equal Opportunities Commission in accordance with agreed business plans.

EU Accounts Modernisation Directive

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to inform businesses of their requirements under the EU Accounts Modernisation Directive. [46955]

Alun Michael [holding answer 31 January 2006]: Regulations implementing the bulk of the EU Accounts Modernisation Directive were made in November 2004. Guidance for companies on the effect of the amendments was placed on the DTI website prior to that date. Regulations implementing the requirement of the Directive to produce a Business Review and introducing the Operating and Financial Review were made in March 2005. Guidance covering both aspects of the 2005 regulations was placed on the DTI website prior to that date. Following a decision not to proceed with the Operating and Financial Review the guidance has now been updated to relate solely to the Business Review and consultation is under way about what changes to the Businesses Review is needed as a consequence.

European Public Procurement Law

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions his Department has had with the European Commission concerning the impact of European public procurement law on the costs to small and medium-sized enterprises in the UK of bidding for public contracts. [39575]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 9 January 2006]: The UK played an active role in the negotiations on proposals from the European Commission regarding the two new European public procurement directives which were implemented on 31 January 2006. DTI was involved in that process where SME's interests were taken into account. These new directives, which replace existing EU rules on public procurement, will help to improve the procurement process for suppliers, including SMEs, and contracting authorities through their greater clarity and the scope they provide to take account of modern procurement methods and systems.

Foreign Farm Workers

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to ensure that foreign farm workers working in the United Kingdom are paid above the national minimum wage. [44980]

Jim Knight: I have been asked to reply.

Any person employed to work in agriculture, anywhere in England and Wales, is entitled to be paid at least the appropriate agricultural minimum wage rate set out in the Agricultural Wages Order. This includes all foreign nationals legally entitled to work in the United Kingdom. The Agricultural Wages Order is enforced by the Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs in England and the National Assembly for Wales Agriculture Department in Wales. If a worker considers s/he might have been underpaid they should contact the Agricultural Wages Team on 0845 000 01 34 and they will arrange for the matter to be investigated.

Gas Supplies

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the dates on which his Department had discussions with (a) Ofgem, (b) Energywatch and (c) gas supply companies regarding erroneous transfers of customers' gas supplies to other suppliers. [47584]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has extensive contact with Ofgem, Energywatch and gas and electricity suppliers about a range of aspects of domestic gas and electricity supply, including erroneous transfers. DTI, Ofgem and Energywatch have been closely involved in the suppliers' Customer Transfer Programme, which began in June 2003. This is a very substantial project that is designed to improve all aspects of the switching process, including reducing erroneous transfers. Such transfers have already fallen significantly. In 2005 there were around 110 complaints per month about erroneous transfers of gas supply. In the same period, gas transfers were running at an average of 300,000 per month. This compares with 150 complaints per month in 2004, and 290 per month in 2003. I expect complaints about erroneous transfers to decline still further once the Customer Transfer Programme is completed in March 2006.

National Weights and Measures Laboratory

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the national targets are for the National Weights and Measures Laboratory; and what the performance has been of relevant offices in Devon and Cornwall in relation to those targets. [38481]

Alan Johnson: The National Weights and Measures Laboratory targets approved by DTI Ministers for 2005–06 are:

To report a break even in the Income and Expenditure Account for 2005–06.

To satisfy all its customers as demonstrated by at least 95 per cent. of them reporting that they are satisfied or very satisfied with NWML's provision of services.

To complete all Type Approval work (new patterns, variants, amendments, renewals, additions, Test Certificates, and OIML Certificate of Conformity) within 10 weeks (45 working days).

In respect of European approvals (new patterns only) to achieve an average time per job of better than five weeks (23 working days).

In respect of UK approvals (new patterns only) to achieve an average time per job of better than seven weeks (32 working days).

To complete calibration jobs within the time requested by customers, with at least 95 per cent. of all jobs (including preparation of certificates) completed within 18 working days of acceptance of the work and an average completion time of less than 13 working days.

To complete 85 per cent. of the milestones scheduled for year 1 of the National Measurement System (NMS) Legal Metrology Programme by their due dates.

In respect of approved verification to complete the evaluation of the application and supporting Quality documentation within 30 working days (six weeks) of receipt for at least 80 per cent. of applications.

To complete implementation of the MID by 30 October 2006 (interim target to submit all requisite draft regulations to the European Commission by 30 April 2006).

Chief Executive to reply within 10 working days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to him for reply.

To meet RoHS Regulations enforcement contract delivery targets by dates specified in the MoU with DTI.

To meet savings and efficiency targets (financial and headcount) in the NWML Efficiency Delivery Plan.

Nuclear Energy

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which (a) power generation companies and (b) investment institutions have indicated a positive interest in (i) building and (ii) investing in new nuclear build. [46567]

Malcolm Wicks: Many companies regularly express interest publicly in a variety of energy infrastructure projects that relate to a number of different generating technologies, including nuclear, renewables, gas and carbon capture and storage.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of electricity used in the UK was produced from nuclear energy in the latest year for which figures are available. [48021]

Malcolm Wicks: In 2004, the latest full year for which data are available, 19 per cent. of the electricity supplied to customers in the UK was from nuclear sources.

Operating and Financial Review

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what impact assessment was made of the decision in November 2005 not to require listed companies to prepare Operating and Financial Review statements. [45501]

Alun Michael: The Government have decided to widen their current consultation on company narrative reporting requirements. This will ensure that all points of view and relevant up-to-date evidence are taken into account while the current Company Law Reform Bill is going through Parliament.

The Government took the decision in November 2005 to repeal the mandatory requirement on quoted companies to prepare an Operating and Financial Review (OFR) as contained in the OFR regulations so that they are required to prepare a Business Review instead. This decision was made in the light of the Government's strong commitment to sustainable development, strategic forward-looking narrative reporting and its policy of not imposing unnecessary burdens on UK companies, and taking into account the large body of evidence from previous consultations on narrative reporting.

Chapter 6 of Part 15 of the Company Law Reform Bill contains provisions relating to narrative reporting by companies. The Government are now inviting comments on any considerations which Ministers should take into account in deciding whether, and if so how, to frame amendments to these or other provisions of the Company Law Reform Bill to ensure effective forward looking narrative reporting by quoted companies, including, where appropriate, on social, community, employee and environmental matters. The consultation is therefore extended to invite views from all stakeholders on the full range of options for reporting, including matters previously contained within Schedule 7ZA of the Companies Act 1985 and within the Accounts Modernisation Directive (2003/51/EC), and any other matters relevant to narrative reporting.

The Government will also consider in light of responses to this consultation whether existing business reporting requirements should be amended by regulations under secondary legislation as an interim measure before the new Bill comes into force. For the avoidance of doubt, however, no such changes would apply to financial reporting periods which had commenced before any new regulations had been passed. This is to ensure that companies have certainty as to their current legal reporting obligations and have adequate time to prepare for any changes.

The closing date for responses to this consultation is 24 March 2006. The Government are keen to ensure conclusions can be reached in a time scale which allows any resulting policy changes to be introduced and debated during the appropriate parliamentary stages of the current Bill.

The Government have already issued an invitation for views on narrative reporting on a more limited basis (my statement of 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 177WS). Comments already received as a result of that invitation will be taken into account in this wider consultation exercise. Those who have already expressed a view are welcome to submit further comments should they so wish.

Company Law

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how he intends to ensure that companies meet their social, environmental and community responsibilities in his review of company law; and if he will make a statement. [47328]

Alun Michael: The Company Law Reform Bill is part of a wider programme of Government and market-led reform to support enterprise, encourage investment and promote long-term performance in order to ensure that Britain remains one of the best places in the world to set up and run a business.

A key part of the Bill is the statutory statement of directors' duties. This will provide greater clarity on what is expected of directors. It will also recognise in statute that business prosperity and responsible business behaviour are two sides of the same coin: directors are required to promote the success of the company in the collective best interests of shareholders, having regard to wider factors such as the interests of employees, the community and the environment. Re-stating this requirement will help directors to understand that they need to look beyond the short-term financial bottom line, but company law is not the right vehicle for addressing specific social, environmental or community issues.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what cost-savings he expects to result from the Company Law Reform Bill when enacted. [47375]

Alun Michael: The Government's Regulatory Impact Assessment for the Company Law Reform Bill, presents an estimated range for the total direct benefits that are expected to result from provisions in the Bill. This range is £160 million to £340 million per year. Details are available at http:www.dti.gov.uk/cld/pdfs/clrbria.pdf

Parliamentary Questions

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will reply to question number 39575, tabled by the hon. Member for Westmoreland and Lonsdale on 19 December 2005; and what the reasons are for the delay in replying. [47583]

Alan Johnson: I have answered the hon. Member's question today. I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding.

Post Office

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library a copy of the report received from Post Office Ltd on pilot schemes for innovative ways of providing a service. [46062]

Barry Gardiner: We have very recently received the analysis we requested from the Post Office on pilot studies trialling new models of service delivery. We are viewing this and will encourage the Post Office to draw it together into a report for publication.

Power Generation

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the number of new electricity generators which may be required to take account of (a) the decline in energy generated by existing power stations that will come to the end of their working lives over the next decade and (b) an increase in demand of (i) 20 per cent., (ii) 30 per cent. and (iii) 40 per cent. over the next decade. [46679]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 30 January 2006]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's first Annual Report on Security of Supply lists planned major new electricity projects (www.dti.gov.uk/energy/publications/policy/sec_supply_first_report.pdf). This will be updated in the next report of the Joint Energy Security of Supply Working Group, which will also consider the position on electricity supply and demand over the next decade. The report will be published shortly.

Race Equality Impact Assessments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many Race Equality Impact Assessments his Department had completed in (a) April 2004 to March 2005 and (b) April 2005 to November 2005; and how many assessments in each period resulted in a change of policy. [32830]

Meg Munn: The DTI has completed three Race Equality Impact Assessments (REIA) since April 2004. In one case, the assessment of the impact on race equality recorded in the REIA reflected the considerable changes made to the original proposals to mitigate potential adverse effects. In the other two, the REIAs did not result in a change of policy. The DTI is reviewing its Race Equality Scheme, including an analysis of completed Race Equality Impact Assessments, with a view to publishing a revised, more effective scheme by June 2006.

Radioactive Waste

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the countries from which (a) radioactive waste and (b) spent fuel has been received but not yet returned; and what the (i) radioactivity level and (ii) quantity held is in each case. [46037]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 26 January 2006]: The UK does not allow the import of radioactive waste, but overseas spent fuel is received in the UK for reprocessing.

Sellafield

Spent fuel has been received for reprocessing at Sellafield from these countries: Japan, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and the Netherlands. To date no waste as a result of reprocessing has been returned overseas.

Details of fuel deliveries and the programming of reprocessing of customer's fuel are operational and commercial matters for British Nuclear Group and its customers, but the total amount of foreign spent fuel to be reprocessed under new reprocessing contracts signed since 1976 is around 4,500 tonnes, which will result in 400, 5,000 and 25,000 cubic metres of High, Intermediate and Low Level Waste respectively.

Non-Sellafield sources

Countries from which spent fuel has been received but not yet returned:

Country	Kg HM
Belgium	13.9
Denmark	54.3
France	115.8
Germany	582.6
Holland	5.9
Georgia	4.4

Waste return clauses are in force for the above material, excluding Georgia.

It is not possible to give current radioactivity levels for this material as the levels on receipt would be considerably different from those today. To attempt to calculate notional radioactivity levels from the above weights could give an erroneous result.

Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the costs to be borne by his Department resulting from the delay in implementing the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [47941]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave on 23 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1764–65W.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the extra costs to be borne by manufacturers resulting from uncertainty caused by the delay in implementing the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [47943]

Malcolm Wicks: The delay to implementation of the Directive will mean savings for many manufacturers. These are likely to exceed significantly any costs arising from the delay.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether he has made an assessment of the impact of the channel tunnel on the level of traffic on UK roads; and if he will make a statement; [46539]

(2) whether he has made an assessment of the net impact of the channel tunnel on the UK economy; and if he will make a statement. [46540]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 30 January 2006]: The Department has not made any specific assessment of the effect of the channel tunnel on UK road traffic levels or the UK economy more generally.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the cost to his Department of sending Christmas cards in 2005. [45924]

Ms Buck: The information requested is set out as follows.

Christmas card 2005

	Cost including VAT (£)
Central Department	1,780
Highways Agency	2,488
Maritime and Coastguard Agency	1,769
Vehicle and Operator Services Agency	664
Vehicle Certification Agency	[1]
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	2,981
Driving Standards Agency	3,213
Government Car and Despatch Agency	[1]

[1] No card.

Note:
The information refers to the cost of the cards. It is not possible to separate out postage costs from normal mail, although the policy is to mainly use second class.

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the funding provided in the 2006–07 local government finance settlement to (a) West Berkshire council and (b) other local authorities to provide free bus passes for all those who are entitled to them; [46246]

(2) what estimate he has made of whether (a) West Berkshire council and (b) other local authorities will require additional funding above that provided in the local government finance settlement to finance the free bus pass scheme; and what assessment he has made of sources of additional funding. [46248]

Ms Buck: The Government are providing an extra £350 million for 2006–07 through the formula grant system which will be sufficient to fund the cost to local authorities. There is general agreement that there is enough additional money overall for the local authorities. The extra funding is not ring-fenced; therefore it is not possible to identify the concessionary fares funding for individual local authorities. All local authorities, including West Berkshire council, have a responsibility to offer older and disabled people free off-peak local travel on buses and we expect this to be done in an efficient and effective way, balancing all the available resources.

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the payments to bus operators by (a) West Berkshire council and (b) other local authorities in England under the free bus pass scheme; and what percentage of the payments in (i) West Berkshire and (b) England will be met from central Government grant in 2006–07. [46251]

Ms Buck: None. The Department for Transport has issued guidance to local authorities on implementation but it is for individual concessionary travel authorities, to design and operate their local concessionary fares scheme. The Government are providing an extra £350 million for 2006–07 which will be sufficient to fund the cost to local authorities of the introduction of free off-peak local bus travel for pensioners and disabled people.

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the local authorities in the County of Durham which have received funding to introduce the concessionary travel scheme; and how much was paid to each. [46785]

Ms Buck: All the districts in the County of Durham receive funding for concessionary fares through the formula grant system. The extra funding is not ring-fenced; therefore it is not possible to identify the current funding for concessionary fares for individual local authorities. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister consulted on the formula to be used for funding the extension to free off-peak local bus travel for pensioners and disabled people from 1 April. The funding will continue to not be specifically allocated.

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost of extending the concessionary travel scheme for aged and disabled people in Easington to include cross boundary travel to Tyne Wear and Teesside. [46745]

Ms Buck: None. Cross-boundary concessionary travel is offered at the discretion of the local authority based on their judgement of local needs and their overall financial priorities.

Departmental Expenditure

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the annual expenditure on vehicles by (a) his Department and (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which he is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland was in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [40006]

Ms Buck: Information on actual and projected spend on vehicles has been placed in the Libraries of the House. The expenditure data typically comprises purchase price, fuel and servicing. Charges relating to the specialist nature of the Department for Transport fleet, such as adaptations, have also been included in some cases.

The information requested as iii) a), b), c) and d can only be provided at disproportionate costs.

For details of expenditure on ministerial vehicles provided to the Department by the Government Car and Despatch Agency I refer the hon. Member to the letter of 20 December 2005 from the chief executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker). Copies of this letter are available in the Library.

Departmental Website

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost of maintaining his main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46309]

Ms Buck: The total cost of the Department for Transport's main website at:

www.dft.gov.uk for the financial year 2004–05 was £290,035. This cost includes hosting, maintenance and development. It does not include staff costs.

Unique visitors to the Department for Transport website—2005

	Unique visitors
January	117,333
February	117,722
March	134,296
April	134,561
May	125,765
June	122,320
July	112,853
August	136,300
September	127,740
October	125,336
November	137,404
December	115,945
Total	1,507,575

In the period of the last financial year (2004–05) the total number of unique visitors was 1,302,712 with a total number of visits of 2,842,657. The cost per visit over the same period was therefore 0.1 pence.

Highways Agency

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the administration costs are of the Highways Agency to date in the financial year 2005–06. [44669]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency's administration costs to 31 December 2005 in the financial year 2005–06 are £70,166,841. This figure includes salary costs.

Lockerbie Station

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the footbridge at Lockerbie railway station is being considered for funding under the Railways for All scheme. [45294]

Ms Buck: Decisions on Railways for All funding relating to stations in Scotland will be a matter for Scottish Ministers and we are working closely with Transport Scotland, the new national transport agency. We propose to publish shortly the final Railways for All strategy, which will include details of how the funding will be targeted.

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what account is taken of the needs of users at Lockerbie railway station when timetabling for cross-border rail services. [45295]

Derek Twigg: Cross Country is the main operator of cross border rail services at Lockerbie railway station at present. The specification for the new Cross Country franchise is currently being developed and the needs of Lockerbie will be one of the factors to be taken into account. We expect to consult on the specification in the summer of 2006.

London Commuter Services

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which commuting service into London had the highest passengers in excess of capacity level in the last year for which figures are available. [41134]

Derek Twigg: In 2004, which is the last year for which data are available, the London commuting services with the highest passenger in excess of capacity were:

Time	From	To	Train operator	Arrive	Train capacity	Passengers	PIXC
07:40	Ashford	London Victoria	South Eastern Trains	09:28	266	466	200
18:09	London Bridge	Beckenham Junction	Southern	18:44	205	286	81
17:50	London Bridge	Rochester	South Eastern Trains	18:51	420	586	166

Since the data were collected, both Southern and South Eastern Trains have introduced new rolling stock on these services which provides greater passenger capacity.

London Underground

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet the Mayor of London and raise the renegotiation of the public-private partnership deal for the London Underground; and if he will make a statement. [47208]

Ms Buck: I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 144W.

Off-peak Bus Travel

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 26 January, PQ 44701, if he will break down the figure of £350 million for the provision of off-peak bus travel into main cost areas and provide the assumptions which underlay the calculation of each such area. [47127]

Ms Buck: The £350 million was based on analysis which estimated the overall costs, in 2002–03 prices, at £250 million of moving from existing provision. An additional £100 million was added to allow for the reimbursement of authorities already offering free off-peak local bus travel (e.g. London, Merseytravel and Centro (the West Midlands Passenger Transport Executive), inflation, and to act as a contingency for the uncertainty of the additional take-up.

Pedestrian Rail Crossings

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what recent representations he has received on the safety of pedestrian rail crossings; [45724]

(2) if he will visit Benfleet railway station in Essex to assess the safety of the two unmanned pedestrian crossings in its vicinity; [45725]

(3) if he will undertake a review of the safety of unmanned pedestrian railway crossings; and if he will make a statement; [45726]

(4) if he will make it his policy to facilitate and speed up the closure of little-used unmanned pedestrian foot crossings of railway lines. [45727]

Derek Twigg: The Department receives correspondence on a range of issues including, safety at individual level crossings.

I meet the health and safety executive's an a regular basis to review safety issues including level crossing safety. I have at present no plans to visit Benfleet station. It is for HSE's HM Railways Inspectorate (HMRI) to assess whether Network Rail is controlling the risks at the two un-staffed pedestrian crossings at Benfleet station. I have asked the appropriate HMRI representative to contact the hon. Member to see how best to deal with your concerns.

Network Rail seeks to close crossings where viable alternatives exist which are acceptable to local residents and crossing users. Level crossing safety is governed by a legislative framework that facilitates the efficient management of level crossing risk and includes powers to ensure adequate protective measures are put in place. As part of this legislative framework, HSE's HM Railways Inspectorate, on behalf of the Secretary of State ensure on a case-by-case basis that individual level crossings are compliant with the legislation and thereby ensure that essential safety standards are being met.

Public Transport (Government Grants)

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much in Government grants was allocated for subsidies to public transport per head of population in (a) West Yorkshire, (b) South Yorkshire and (c) North Yorkshire in 2005–06. [46816]

Ms Buck: The following grant per head of population was allocated in 2005–06:

(a) West Yorkshire	17.40
(b) South Yorkshire	29.68
(c) North Yorkshire	18.40

These figures include integrated transport block funding and major public transport scheme funding allocated through the Local Transport capital settlement, and expected spend on Department for Transport bus grants (Rural Bus Subsidy Grant and Bus Challenge). Figures can vary year on year, particularly on the amount allocated to major transport schemes.

The figures do not include local authority spend on public transport subsidy funded from Revenue Support Grant (that spend is not allocated by Government for use particularly on transport) or payments made direct to operators of Bus Service Operators Grant (that is not allocated on a geographical basis).

The figures do not include funding allocated for rail. Central Government supports rail services in the north of England through direct franchise payments (subsidies) to the Train Operating Companies (TOCs), but these allocations are not available on a local authority area basis. Further payments are also made to PTEs for the specific provision of rail services in their respective areas, but the total subsidy figures will not be known until the end of 2005–06.

Railways

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were employed by the Strategic Rail Authority; and how many were employed in a (a) technical or advisory capacity and (b) administrative posts. [41741]

Derek Twigg: As at 1 April 2005 the number of people employed by the Strategic Rail Authority was 409. A breakdown of this number is not available in the form requested.

As at 1 February 2006 the total number of people employed by the Strategic Rail Authority is 24. These remaining staff will be employed on issues affecting South East Trains and in carrying out work to enable the authority to be wound down later this year.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the change in the number of passenger kilometres travelled on the railways between London and Shrewsbury in each of the last five years. [45354]

Derek Twigg: Passenger miles travelled between London and Shrewsbury in the last five years, and the annual percentage change, are as follows:

	Passenger miles (millions)	Percentage change on previous year
2001–02	9.4	—
2002–03	9.1	-3.78
2003–04	8.9	-1.32

	Passenger miles (millions)	Percentage change on previous year
2004–05	8.6	-3.21
2005–06	9.1	+4.82

Note:
For 2005–06, figures are available only for the period from April to January. To allow a proper comparison to be made, figures for other years also relate to the April to January period.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people have been caught travelling on the railway without a ticket in each year since 1997; how many were (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted; and if he will make a statement. [45990]

Derek Twigg: The Department does not hold this information as revenue protection is a matter for train operators.

Road Gritting

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding the Government have provided to local authorities for the gritting of roads in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [46326]

Ms Buck: Funding for routine highway and street lighting maintenance, including gritting, is provided to local authorities through the Revenue Support Grant, which is not ring-fenced to specific services.

Stonehenge

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if Ministers or officials in his Department have discussed with the National Trust proposals from consultants for a new northern corridor route for the proposed A303 Stonehenge road improvement. [47004]

Dr. Ladyman: The National Trust wrote to the Department on 22 December 2005 setting out their views on the A303 Stonehenge improvement scheme review, including a suggestion for a specific northern route option. Officials will be meeting the National Trust to discuss this and other issues.

Road Maintenance

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost of outstanding maintenance on roads for which his Department is responsible. [43614]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I have given him today [UIN 40579].

Safe and Efficient Drivers Scheme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research and consultation his Department undertook before the launch of the Safe and Efficient Drivers Scheme. [47495]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 31 January 2006]: The Safe and Fuel Efficient Driving (SAFED) Scheme has been highly successful in the truck sector. The Department undertook research in 2005 to study the van sector, to adapt and develop the existing scheme to be appropriate for vans and to pilot the training course to determine how effective it would be. The results were published on our website on 25 January 2006. A key stakeholder advisory group was formed to advise and steer this pilot project.

There was no formal public consultation on the scheme, though the stakeholder advisory group were key to developing the scheme and views on the concept were sought from the Road Haulage Forum. While the Government routinely consults on regulatory proposals, it should be stressed that this is not new regulation. There is no requirement on van drivers to undertake this training.

Safety/Speed Cameras

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how the composition of the executive or boards of safety camera partnerships is determined. [47897]

Dr. Ladyman: Governance arrangements for safety camera partnerships are set out in the Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the National Safety Camera Programme for England and Wales, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House. All safety camera partnerships are required to have a steering group made up of senior representatives from each of the partners.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) locations and (b) roads concerned where fixed cameras are (i) in place and (ii) will be in place by 31 December for the purpose of monitoring vehicles for offences other than speeding. [46676]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department holds this information only in respect of red light cameras within the national safety camera programme. This is contained in a table that has been placed in the Library of the House. The information is correct as at 31 December 2005.

Strategic Road Network

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether there is a backlog of maintenance to be undertaken on the strategic road network. [40579]

Dr. Ladyman: The strategic road network of trunk roads and motorways in England is maintained in a safe and serviceable condition on a whole life cost principle, identifying the appropriate maintenance treatment at the optimum intervention time. This ensures the best use of available resources and minimizes the impact on road users. There is currently no backlog of carriageway maintenance on the strategic network and consequently no estimate for outstanding works.

Sussex-London Rail Service

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the prospects for a fast rail service between the Sussex coast and London. [44809]

Derek Twigg: Rail services between the Sussex coast and London are the responsibility of Southern as the incumbent franchisee. Changes to services can be proposed by the franchisee subject to the requirements of the Franchise Agreement and Network Rail approval.

Some changes to services between London and the Sussex coast are proposed in the Brighton Mainline Route Utilisation Strategy (BML RUS). A decision and announcement about publication of the BML RUS is likely to be made shortly.

Traffic (Hammersmith and Fulham)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his projections are for traffic growth in Hammersmith and Fulham for each of the next 10 years. [45267]

Ms Buck: The Mayor has overall responsibility for transport in the capital (with the exception of trains). The Mayor is also responsible for providing a transport strategy which sets out proposals for improving transport in London and sets targets for traffic levels in London. The target for Hammersmith and Fulham is for traffic in 2011 to fall by 2 per cent. (relative to 2001 levels).

Further information on the Mayor's Transport Strategy can be found at http://www.london.gov.uk/approot/mayor/strategies/transport/index.jsp.

Train Operating Companies

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2913W, on C2C/One Rail, if he will provide the same breakdown for all train operating companies. [42734]

Derek Twigg: The following table shows the number of cancellations, and the reasons for them, for the 20 additional Train Operating Companies with which the Department has franchise agreements.

Trams

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for public investment in the (a) Sheffield Supertram, (b) Tyne and Wear Metro, (c) Manchester Metrolink and (e) West Midlands Metro. [39209]

Derek Twigg: The Department has received a bid from the South Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive for approval of Government funding for two proposed extensions to Sheffield Supertram. We are currently considering their proposals.

In July 2005, Nexus Passenger Transport Executive submitted their 20-year strategy for capital reinvestment in the Tyne and Wear Metro. The Department is considering requests by Nexus for a contribution to development costs for the strategy.

In regard to Manchester Metrolink, I refer the hon. Member to the Secretary of State for Transport's Statement to the House of 16 December 2004, Official Report, column 152WSJ.

In 2000, the Department provisionally approved proposals promoted by Centre, the West Midlands Passenger Transport Executive, for two extensions to Midland Metro. In early 2006 the Department expects to receive an updated business case from the promoters for the scheme.

In reaching decisions on these schemes we will also be taking into account advice from the English regions as part of the regional funding allocation prioritisation process.

Transport Security

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from (a) the Metropolitan Police Authority, (b) the Metropolitan police, (c) the Greater London authority and (d) the Mayor of London, with regard to (i) his Department's review of policing at airports and (ii) his Department's review of the British Transport police; and what plans he has to consult interested parties on these representations before taking final decisions on each review. [46382]

Ms Buck: The review of policing at airports is an independent review led by Stephen Boys Smith, jointly supported by the Department for Transport and the Home Office. The review team has written to all interested parties inviting submissions. In some cases, meetings will be held between the review team and the interested party.

Following the Secretary of State's announcement of the BTP review, the Department's review team received representations from a number of organisations, including the Metropolitan Police Service and the London assembly. No representations were received from the Metropolitan Police Authority or the Mayor of London.

The Secretary of State is now considering the initial findings of the review and the appropriate next steps.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum Project (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide further funding for the work undertaken in Peterborough under the auspices of the Invest to Save Asylum and Migration Project once the initial allocation has been spent; and if he will make a statement. [46259]

Mr. McNulty: The Peterborough Asylum and Migration project is funded by the Treasury Invest to Save Budget, which provides initial financial backing to projects that demonstrate the capacity to achieve sustainability. The grant is limited for three years and no further allocation is planned after it expires. The Home Office works closely with the Asylum and Migration project to ensure that services currently delivered under the programme can in future be delivered by mainstream service providers as well the voluntary and community sector.

Bereket Yohannes

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the arrangements are for the investigation into the apparent suicide of Bereket Yohannes. [47094]

Mr. McNulty: As Mr. Yohannes died while in immigration detention, Stephen Shaw, the independent Prisons and Probation Ombudsman, has been asked to investigate the incident and this is ongoing.

The police are carrying out their own investigation and this is also ongoing.

Mr. Yohannes' death will also be subject to an inquest and the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will co-operate fully with the Coroner's Office over this.

Channings Wood Prison

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign national prisoners there are at HMP Channings Wood; how many of these are awaiting deportation; how long those awaiting deportation have been waiting; and to which country they are to be deported. [46417]

Fiona Mactaggart: As at 26 January there were 30 foreign national prisoners at Channings Wood prison. One prisoner is awaiting deportation to Jamaica, who would otherwise have expected to be released from prison custody on 24 December 2005. The prisoner in question is awaiting relevant travel documents.

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place to assess the effectiveness of consultant-led projects in his Department; what sanctions are available to penalise consultants who run unsuccessful projects; how many projects conducted by consultants were assessed as unsuccessful in each year since 2000; and what sanctions were imposed in each case. [29054]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office has published comprehensive internal guidance on actively managing contracts for the engagement of professional services. The guidance details that all Home Office contracts contain clear and explicit terms of reference for consultancies. It emphasises that trained and experienced contract managers are put in place to effect delivery by consultants of a cost effective service that meets contracted time scales, within budget and to laid down specifications. It requires a contract assessment report so that any important lessons and useful information about the performance of the contractor or individuals who provided the service are gained.

Home Office standard contract terms provide that no payments are made until the Department is satisfied with outputs and there is additionally opportunity to take corrective action. If the Department remains dissatisfied, payment of received invoices can be withheld and if necessary the contract terminated. Additionally terms provide that the Department has sole entitlement to terminate the contract. The Department may also require the replacement, at no extra cost, of non-performing of consultants.

The Department operates the Office of Government Commerce's Gateway review process to provide assurance at critical stages of a project's lifecycle, whether led by departmental staff or consultants. Additionally best practice governance and quality assurance procedures are applied to ensure delivery of all projects to defined costs, outputs and time scales.

No records are held centrally of sanctions applied to consultants engaged on projects, and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Crime Prevention

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has commissioned on the effects on recidivism of the use of cautions for crimes of robbery. [46824]

Fiona Mactaggart: No research has been commissioned which directly addresses this issue.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females were (i) prosecuted for and (ii) convicted of (A) murder and (B) manslaughter in England and Wales in 2004. [39715]

Fiona Mactaggart: The available information from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of males and females proceeded against at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts for murder and manslaughter is contained in the table.

Court statistics for 2005 will be available in the autumn 2006.

Males and females proceeded against at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts for offences of murder and manslaughter[1], England and Wales 2004

Number

	Murder		Manslaughter[2, 3]
	Proceeded against	Found guilty	Proceeded against	Found guilty
Males	685	343	427	544
Females	74	18	41	46

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.

[2] Includes: manslaughter, child destruction, infanticide, causing death by dangerous driving, diminished responsibility and causing death by careless driving when under the influence of drink or drugs.

[3] Found guilty figures may include those prosecutions for murder that were reduced to manslaughter.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of people have received 100 per cent. of a compensation award pursuant to section 13 of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme. [46415]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority advise that in 2004–05 there were 32,993 full awards and 2,418 reduced awards. All the reduced awards were reduced under paragraph 13E of the compensation scheme.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what effect a Criminal Injuries Compensation award has on the payment of benefits to a claimant. [46418]

Mr. Plaskitt: I have been asked to reply.

Current income-support and jobseeker's allowance rules offer generous treatment to awards of compensation made to victims of violent crime. Our general policy is to allow injured people to safeguard their long-term financial position without losing benefit entitlement.

The normal and most beneficial way for an injured person to handle a large payment of compensation is to place it in trust. The capital value of a trust is entirely disregarded, as are any payments from it, provided they are intended and used for items other than everyday living expenses, for example, the injured person's special needs. Even when used for everyday living expenses, payments are disregarded if they are no more than £20 per week.

Following a recent review of the rules, a full disregard will apply to income derived from monies held in trust, as a consequence of a personal injury, from October 2006. This will align the income support and jobseeker's allowance rules with those in state pension credit, housing benefit and council tax benefit.

In addition, a new grace period of 52 weeks will be introduced, during which any lump sum personal injury payment, can be automatically disregarded without needing to be placed in a trust fund at the outset.

Criminal Records Bureau

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications to the Criminal Records Bureau are outstanding; and how many applications were outstanding in (a) September 2005, (b) June 2005 and (c) January 2005. [45504]

Andy Burnham: Information is not available to provide an answer in the specific format requested. However, during the 12 month period up to 31 December 2005, the average time for completion of all Enhanced Disclosures is 31.5 days, excluding any time an application has to be returned to a customer.

On this basis, the average for the periods specified in the hon. Member's question are:

In January 2005 it was 28.4 working days;

In June 2005 it was 26.4 working days;

In September 2005 it was 31.1 working days;

As at 31 December 2005, the average time taken was 32.9 working days.

These calculations include any time an application has to be returned to a customer and is not an accurate indication of the Bureau's performance, because Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) has no means of controlling when such information may be provided by the customer.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what administrative savings have been made by his Department in each of the last eight years. [34945]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Value for money (VFM) improvements in administration contributes to the delivery of the Department's wider VFM targets. The 2004 Spending Review reclassified frontline operational costs for areas such as prison establishments and immigration case-working to Programme expenditure. This will enable a more effective focus in bearing down on headquarters and back-office overheads without damaging front-line delivery.

As set out in the Home Office Targets Autumn Performance Report 2005 (Cm 6707), during 2004–05 the Home Office and the Police Service achieved overall VFM gains worth £845 million per annum of which £554 million was cashable. Of these, Headquarters reform contributed £32 million, all of which was cashable, an important contributor being the a reduction in Home Office headquarters headcount.

DNA Profiles

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 16 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1111–2W, on DNA profiles, how many of the 24,000 DNA samples taken from children under 18 years who were never cautioned or charged were subsequently used successfully to prosecute a crime. [46987]

Andy Burnham: Information on the number of DNA profiles used successfully to prosecute a crime is not collected by the Home Office, but information is available on the number of such profiles which have been used to assist crime investigations. It has been established that to date 541 DNA profiles of the 24,168 DNA profiles taken from persons under 18 years who had not been charged or cautioned for an offence have subsequently been 'matched' to DNA recovered from unsolved crime scenes stored on the National DNA Database, providing the police with key intelligence leads on the possible identity of the offender and assisting crime investigation and detection.

Harmondsworth Detention Centre

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the procedures are for the delivery of private mail to detainees in Harmondsworth detention centre; and whether mail is read by centre staff. [47073]

Fiona Mactaggart: Post for detainees at Harmondsworth is received at the centre and the detainee's room number is noted on the top. It is then sorted into the relevant accommodation unit and distributed to the unit officer. Mail is opened by the detainees in front of the officer who ensures it contains nothing prohibited. Parcels are opened in the presence of the detainee in reception and any banned items are removed and placed in to sealed storage with the detainee present. A receipt is issued if items are retained.

The following applies to all removal centres, not only at Harmondsworth.

In accordance with Detention Centre Rule 27 (4), outgoing or incoming mail must not be opened, read or stopped unless there is reasonable cause to believe that its contents may endanger the security of the removal centre or the safety of others or are otherwise of a criminal nature or where it is not possible to determine the addressee or sender.

Where the centre considers it necessary to open outgoing or incoming mail (for the reasons referred to above) they must advise the relevant detainee of the reason for doing so and give the opportunity for him/her to be present when it is being opened.

The centre must keep a central record (i.e. not in individual case files) of every occasion where mail is opened, the reasons for doing so and whether the detainee was present.

Where parcels are received for detainees, these must be opened by the detainee in the presence of centre staff. Where the items therein are not ones which the detainee can keep in his/her personal possession, he/she should be advised of the reason for this and informed that they will be held with his/her property held by the centre. The detainee must be given a receipt for the property and a record must be kept.

Identity Cards

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate he has made of the cost to (a) each Department and (b) each citizen of the introduction of the national identity card scheme. [43587]

Andy Burnham: The Home Office has developed its current best estimate of the cost of using the ID cards scheme to support the services which it oversees and these costs have been incorporated into the business case.

In deriving these estimates account has to be taken of current and planned levels of investment in similar or related technologies and the types of use required to support the particular services which the Home Office oversees. Not all services will require a high degree of integration between the ID cards scheme and other IT systems. For many, integration costs will be absorbed in the usual cycle of system upgrades and technology refresh. Therefore, these costs are not in our estimates and would be a matter for each department to consider based on their business case for using the scheme.

We cannot release the detailed estimated costs for integrating IT systems within the Home Office and other Government Departments at this stage as these elements may be acquired from the market. The estimates are therefore commercially sensitive and to release them may prejudice the procurement process and the Department's ability to obtain value for money from potential suppliers.

The current best estimates for the cost to the citizen were outlined in the regulatory impact assessment published on 25 May 2005. The current best estimate for the cost of a passport and ID card package is £93. In October 2005, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced that a stand alone ID card for British citizens would cost £30.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has received from (a) Christian, (b) Hindu, (c) Muslim and (d) Sikh communities in the West Midlands region on the proposed identity cards scheme. [46878]

Andy Burnham: The identity cards programme team has received no representations from individuals or communities identifying themselves as either Christian, Hindu, Muslim or Sikh and living in the West Midlands region.

However, the special issues research conducted in October and November 2004, comprised a number of focus groups which included a group of Hindu females and a group of Sikh males from Birmingham. This issues raised from these particular groups was the concern that Sikh men would not have to remove their turbans in order to be enrolled on the ID card scheme. The group of Sikh men were also concerned that they might have to carry their ID card with them at all times. Both the Hindu female and Sikh male groups expressed views that the ID card was a positive idea as it would allow people to prove their identity and would assist if someone had a car accident for example. The Sikh male group also expressed a preference that staff working in the enrolment centres in areas of high ethnic minorities should be bi-lingual. The Hindu female group also expressed concerns that information on the Register might be 'sold' to private companies. The Identity Cards Bill which is currently before Parliament includes no such provision.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalents were employed to answer hon. Members' letters to the immigration and nationality directorate in each of the last five years. [46479]

Mr. McNulty: The figures on 1 April in each year for full-time equivalent posts within the immigration and nationality directorate (IND) engaged in handling Members' correspondence were as follows:

	Number
2005	276.9
2004	229.5
2003	170.0

These figures include both posts whose main role is drafting replies to Members' letters and those whose chief responsibilities relate to the administration of the correspondence handling process. They exclude, however, those posts in respect of which dealing with Members' correspondence represents only a minor part of the work. Because of organisational changes within IND it is not possible to provide comparable figures for 2002 and 2001.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of letters addressed to the MPs' correspondence section of the immigration and nationality directorate between 6 May and 30 November 2005 had been replied to by 1 January 2006. [46480]

Mr. McNulty: Of 16,140 Members' letters sent direct to the immigration and nationality directorate and received between 6 May and 30 November 2005, 13,455 (83 per cent.) were answered by 1 January this year.

IT Systems

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 2027W, on IT systems, when he expects the remaining probation areas to be connected to the prison OASys IT system; and if he will make a statement. [47291]

Fiona Mactaggart: Our intention is that all 42 probation areas will be connected to the Prison Service OASys IT system by the end of this financial year.

London Bombings

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether UK officials investigating the 7 July 2005 bombings have visited (a) Bosnia-Herzegovina, (b) Kosovo, (c) Albania and (d) Serbia-Montenegro as part of their investigations. [46655]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 30 January 2006]: The events of 7 July remain the subject of an ongoing police investigation and it is not the Government's policy to comment on specific operational details in such cases.

National Offender Management Service

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) staff and (b) other resources have been allocated to each regional offender manager in the National Offender Management Service. [23270]

Fiona Mactaggart: Each Regional Offender Manager (ROM) is allowed to have up to eight members of staff, including the ROM. In recognition of their additional workload, the offices of the South East and Welsh ROMs have been allocated an additional post.

The budget given to each Regional Offender Manager in the financial year 2005–06 ranges between £456,314 and £654,506. These figures are dependent on profiles reflecting the differing needs and requirements of each region, and cover staff and office management costs.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the regional offender managers within the National Offender Management Service; and when each was appointed to the post. [44876]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information is provided in the following table.

Name	Date	Location
Steve Murphy	1 April 2005	London
Sarah Payne	1 January 2005	South East

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the first assessment of the effectiveness and value for money of regional offender managers is expected to be (a) made and (b) published. [44881]

Fiona Mactaggart: The effectiveness and value for money of the regional offender managers will be assessed against the target to deliver a five per cent. reduction in re-offending by adults and young offenders by 2007–08 compared to 2002–03, leading to a 10 per cent. reduction by the end of the decade. Statistics on reducing re-offending are published annually by the Home Office and report progress against the target on reducing re-offending.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether regional offender managers will commission prison places (a) from local governors, (b) from area managers and (c) across England and Wales. [44882]

Fiona Mactaggart: Regional Offender Managers will commission prison places through Service Level Agreements (SLAs) with the public sector Prison Service at a regional level. SLA's will specify the total number of spaces commissioned in a region and include a breakdown by establishment. For contracted prisons, contracts specify the number of places provided by individual providers. The SLA for the High Security Estate will be between the National Offender Manager and the Director General of Her Majesty's Prison Service.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of (a) male and (b) female prisoners in England and Wales have re-offended since the introduction of the National Offender Management Service. [46580]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is not available. To calculate the re-offending rate we need to consider criminal activity in the two year follow up period. The most recent figures are for the 2002 adult cohort and can be found on the Home Office's website (www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb2505.pdf).

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what formal training is provided for staff working in the National Offender Management Service prior to their contact with prisoners; and how much has been allocated for such training. [46581]

Fiona Mactaggart: Newly recruited prison officers participate in the eight-week prison officer entry level training programme. This year Her Majesty's Prison Service allocated £1,193,646 to provide 1,100 programme places through its central staff college. A further 1,100 places are provided through 12 establishment-based centres, but aggregate budget figures are not available and to collect them would incur disproportionate cost.

The national probation service commissions a probation officer qualification scheme that leads to the Diploma in Probation Studies. The training for the qualification is work based, therefore a trainee probation officer may spend time on placement in a prison at different stages of the two year course. There are currently 1,340 trainee probation officers in the programme and the sum allocated for the training in 2005–06 is £51.4 million.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the latest projection is of the number of staff that each regional offender manager will require for each of the next three years. [44944]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 23 January 2006]: National Offender Management Service (NOMS) is currently considering the future resource requirements of regional offender mangers (ROMs) and until decisions have been made about these no further statistical prediction can be made.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the requirement for (a) prison places, (b) prison healthcare services, (c) prison workshop places, (d) prison programme places and (e) annual prison escorts for each regional offender manager; and what the outcomes of each of these assessments has been. [44945]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 23 January 2006]: One of the key objectives for the National Offender Management Service in the next year is to map out the need of offenders on a regional basis, using OASys and other assessment tools. This will enable regional offender managers to commission services on the basis of identified need rather than historic provision. For 2006–07, service level agreements will be based largely on existing service provision.

Offences Against the Person Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people found guilty of an offence under section 18 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861 were sentenced to (a) five years' imprisonment, (b) four years' imprisonment, (c) three years' imprisonment, (d) two years'' imprisonment, (e) one year imprisonment, (f) six months' imprisonment, (g) community service and (h) a fine only in (i) Essex, (ii) the Metropolitan Police part of London, (iii) Hertfordshire and (iv) England and Wales, broken down by (A) sex and (B) age in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [37377]

Fiona Mactaggart: I will arrange for the information requested to be placed in the Library.

Police

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the daily cost is of holding a prisoner in a police cell in each police force area. [37756]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prisons

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the Prison Service budget was spent on (a) educating adult prisoners and (b) prisoners in young offenders institutions in the last five years for which figures are available. [43580]

Fiona Mactaggart: Responsibility and funding for prisoner education transferred from the Prison Service to the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) in 2002–03.

From 2000–01 to 2002–03 inclusive, spending on education for all prisoners represented just over 2 per cent. of total Prison Service expenditure. Following the transfer and allocation of additional funding secured by DfES in SR2002, spending on education for all prisoners rose to 3 per cent. a year in 2003–04 and 2004–05.

The Prison Service education budget split for 2004–05 was 82 per cent. for prisoners in the adult estate and 18 per cent. for prisoners in young offenders institutions.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Measuring Quality of Prison Life audit was last conducted for each prison; what mechanisms there are for public access to these audits; what assessment he has made of the results; and if he will make a statement. [44344]

Fiona Mactaggart: The following table details when prisons were last audited under the Measuring the Quality of Prison Life (MQPL) survey. MQPL, the Weighted Scorecard, cost performance, compliance with Prison Service standards, findings from external inspections by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Prisons and the Independent Monitoring Board inform the quarterly assessment of performance submitted to Ministers through the National Offender Management Service. Survey results and reports may be obtained from the Home Office Open Government Unit.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend the personal officer scheme across the prison estate; and if he will make a statement. [44351]

Fiona Mactaggart: Prisons are encouraged to operate Personal officer schemes and most already do so.

The introduction of the offender management model, currently planned for April 2007 for offenders in custody, will result in changes in the way individual offenders are managed and in the role of the personal officer. All sentenced prisoners will then have an offender supervisor, normally a prison officer, who will help ensure they follow an individual sentence plan designed to reduce re-offending and prepare them for their return to the community.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will commission further research into the comparative operating costs of publicly and privately operated prisons; [45182]

(2) when the last review was made of the comparative costs and performance of privately and publicly operated prisons; and what the outcome of that review was. [45183]

Fiona Mactaggart: The last review of the comparative costs and performance of privately and publicly managed prisons was in respect of 1998–99. Since then the performance of the prisons in both sectors has been continuously monitored through key performance targets. There are no current plans to commission further research.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of the operation of the Office of Contracted Prisons was in each of the last eight years for which figures are available. [45184]

Fiona Mactaggart: The cost of the operation of the Office for Contracted Prisons for the years 2003–04 and 2004–05 is shown in the following table:

£000

	2003–04	2004–05
Pay	[1]407	[1]606
Non-pay	415	397
Total	[2]822	[2]1,003

[1] Additional pay costs were incurred during 2004–05 because of the recruitment of a full team of office support staff.

[2] Figures are for the operation of the Office for Contracted Prisons only: they do not include the costs of contracts or of controllers teams based in individual prisons.

Note:
Data cannot be provided for earlier years as the Office for Contracted Prisons was not created until April 2003. Before this date, the management of contracted prisons was the responsibility of individual Prison Service area managers: costs for the contracted prisons were included within individual Prison Service area budgets.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards achieving his Department's targets for (a) holding prisoners closer to home and (b) developing opportunities for jobs and housing when prisoners are released. [45209]

Fiona Mactaggart: There are currently no targets for the distance at which prisoners are held from their home address.

Employment, training and education (ETE) outcomes for prisoners released before April 2005 can be separated only at disproportionate cost. Education training and employment (ETE) outcomes also include those who attended Freshstart appointments at Jobcentre Plus. Freshstart is the initiative whereby prisoners who do not have a job or training place to go to on release are linked into employment, training and benefits advice and support immediately after release. The Accommodation and ETE targets for 2004–05 and the recorded outcomes are given in the following table.

Number of discharges 2004–05	Number with accommodation	Number with ETE	Target	Percentage target
Accommodation
85,685	66,888	—	64,765	+3.2
ETE
85,685	—	41,146	38,012	+7.6

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has for the building of new prisons in England and Wales. [45540]

Fiona Mactaggart: There are no plans at present to build any new prisons in England or Wales.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost per prison place was in each prison establishment in England and Wales for the financial year 2004–05. [45848]

Fiona Mactaggart: The cost per prison place for each establishment in the prison estate for 2004–05 is shown in the following table. Costs per place vary considerably across the estate, with costs for securing those prisoners deemed to be of highest risk (Category A) being at the highest end of the spectrum and the cost of a place in an open establishment being at the lowest.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female remand prisoners were subsequently (i) acquitted and (ii) sentenced to a non-custodial penalty in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [45850]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 30 January 2006]: The information requested is provided in the following table.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes in cost he expects will be realised as a result of the performance test of the prisons on the Isle of Sheppey. [46051]

Fiona Mactaggart: The performance test at Sheppey was designed to encourage better quality and value for money in the supervision and care of offenders on the Isle of Sheppey. In its proposals, the Prison Service identified approximately £2 million of cost savings which will be reinvested to deliver improved quality. Hence, the proposals are cost neutral, but will deliver enhanced outcomes.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to change the role of prison officers in relation to the promotion of education and learning within prisons; and if he will make a statement. [46180]

Fiona Mactaggart: Education for offenders in custody is provided by contractors. There are no plans to change the role of prison officers in relation to the promotion of offender education and learning within prisons.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been re-categorised from category C to category D at Coldingley prison in each of the last six months. [46739]

Probation Service

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of levels of staff absenteeism in the probation service in each region in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [44384]

Fiona Mactaggart: The level of staff sickness absence for each region of the national probation service (NPS) since 2001–02 is shown in the following table.

The national average so far this year stands at 12.2 days, a marginal improvement from 12.3 days achieved in each of the two preceding years.

The need for the NPS to improve its performance on sickness absence is acknowledged and is actively being addressed. The director of probation has asked all areas to produce a performance improvement plan that sets out clear actions to reduce their levels of absence.

Monthly sickness absence monitoring returns submitted by the 42 probation areas to the national probation directorate.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the proposed police boundary changes will affect the probation service in Wales. [45474]

Fiona Mactaggart: Until the future structure of policing in Wales has been decided, it is not possible to be clear about the implications for the probation service.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether further legislation will be necessary to introduce contestability into the provision of probation services. [46183]

Fiona Mactaggart: Local probation boards currently have an exclusive statutory duty to make arrangements for the provision of probation services. This enables them to enter into contracts with other organisations to deliver services on their behalf. But legislation is necessary to enable the Secretary of State to contract direct with a range of organisations to deliver probation services.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his proposals for restructuring the Probation Service allow (a) members of the public and (b) local organisations to be informed of applicants for contracts to provide probation services; and what powers there will be to make objections to applicants. [46499]

Fiona Mactaggart: There are no plans to publish the names of those tendering for a contract to provide probation services. Competitions will be organised in full compliance with the revised EU Procurement Directives; an objection to a bidder's participation in the competition would be considered in the light of the Directives which allow for the disqualification of a bidder under specified circumstances such as fraud.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his proposals for restructuring the Probation Service will give offenders rights to object to being supervised by a particular provider of probation services under contract. [46500]

Fiona Mactaggart: No. Offenders will not be able to object to being supervised by any particular provider of probation services.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many responses to the consultation paper "Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending" were received from individual members of (a) probation staff, (b) probation services and (c) probation boards; and how many were supportive of the proposal; [46501]

(2) if he will place in the Library the response he has received from the Magistrates' Association to the paper "Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending"; [46504]

(3) if he will place in the Library the response he has received from the Police Federation to the paper "Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending"; [46505]

(4) if he will place in the Library the response he has received from the members of the judiciary to the paper "Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending"; [46506]

(5) how many responses were received to the consultation paper, "Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending"; and how many of these responses were supportive of the Government's position. [46509]

Fiona Mactaggart: Around 750 responses to the consultation paper have been received from a range of individuals and organisations. These are being analysed at the moment. We will publish a summary of them, along with our response to the key issues raised, within three months of the closing date for the consultation (20 December 2005).

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he intends to take with regard to restructuring the Probation Service if employees refuse to accept the transfer of their employment from a probation board to a probation trust or private company. [46502]

Fiona Mactaggart: When probation trusts are established, most staff will transfer from probation boards to the new trusts on the same terms and conditions of employment. If, in due course, work transfers to an alternative provider, staff will generally transfer, with their pay, terms and conditions protected by TUPE and the recent extension of the Two Tier Workforce Agreement. Staff who do not wish to transfer will be free to terminate their contract of employment. The employment status of chief officers will change in the transition from boards to trusts: they will cease to be statutory office holders appointed by the Secretary of State and will instead be appointed and employed by the trust itself. If a chief is not appointed to the trust, he or she will be compensated accordingly.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether the introduction of the proposals to restructure the probation service has been (a) cancelled and (b) postponed; [46508]

(2) when legislation will be introduced to give him the power to commission probation services; [46510]

(3) what plans he has for the future of probation boards. [46511]

Fiona Mactaggart: Proposals for the restructuring of the probation service were set out in the Home Office consultation paper, "Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending", published on 20 October. Legislation will be introduced when parliamentary time allows.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what methodology was used to determine the extent to which proposals for the future of the Probation Service will reduce the adult reconviction rate as set out in paragraph 31 of the consultation paper, Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending; and over what period of time the expected reduction is expected to be achieved. [46513]

Fiona Mactaggart: The National Offender Management Service has a target to reduce re-offending by 5 per cent. by 2008 and by 10 per cent. by the end of the decade. The restructuring proposals are part of a broader programme of change, including the introduction of end-to-end offender management and improvements in IT systems, which will help to contribute to the achievement of that target. The consultation paper does not seek to quantify the extent to which the restructuring proposals alone will reduce re-offending. But experience elsewhere suggests that the introduction of competition in the delivery of services helps to drive up performance. Examples from the custodial sector are given in the partial regulatory impact assessment which was published alongside the consultation paper.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what methodology was used to produce the figures for cost savings contained in the Regulatory Impact Statement for the proposals for restructuring the probation service. [46514]

Fiona Mactaggart: The indicative cost savings contained in the partial Regulatory Impact Statement assumed cost savings within the range of 3 per cent. to 8.5 per cent. through contesting certain activities of the national probation service. This range was based on the experience of the savings delivered through the market and performance testing programme within the Prison Service. The savings profile assumed a 10 year programme of contestability with no more that 12 per cent. by value of probation business being contested in any one year. The projected cash savings were discounted using a standard 25 year discounted cash flow analysis.

Quick Check

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines his Department has issued on the use of the fingerprint testing machine quick check; and if he will make a statement. [43201]

Mr. McNulty: Written guidance in the form of policy and process on the use of quick-check is available on the Immigration Nationality Directorate (IND) website. Additionally, training (and continued access to expert advice) on the practical application of the machines is made available on request.

Reoffending

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of offenders (a) released early from prison and (b) who had completed their sentences reoffended within two years in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [44389]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data on the two year reoffending rate by proportion of sentence served is not collated centrally.

However, information on offenders recalled while under Home Detention Curfew and on those offenders recalled to custody following release on parole are published annually. The latest data are shown in Chapter 10 of Offender Management Caseload Statistics, a copy of which is placed in the Library.

Sex Offenders

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines for the issuing of licences to (a) sex offenders and (b) child sex offenders his Department publishes; and if he will make a statement. [45865]

Fiona Mactaggart: Offenders who are supervised in the community by the probation service following a custodial sentence are subject to a licence, which is issued by the governor of the releasing establishment.

The licence contains the standard conditions for supervision, together with any additional conditions deemed necessary for the purpose of protecting the public from further offending and assisting the offender's rehabilitation.

Additional conditions are inserted on the advice of the probation service and are designed to manage and reduce an offender's risk of re-offending.

The National Probation Service issued guidance on the use of licence conditions on 8 March 2005 under probation circular 16/2005 'Criminal Justice Act 2003—Early Release and Recall'. This guidance concerns all offenders on licence including those who have been convicted of sexual offences against adults or children.

Television Licence

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals were prosecuted for not paying the television licence fee in each year since 1996–97. [46353]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform is contained in the table and shows the number of people proceeded against at magistrates courts for offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts 1949 to 1967 and the Communications Act 2003 (mainly television licence evasion), 1996 to 2004.

Defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts for offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts 1949 to 1967 (mainly television licence evasion), England and Wales, 1996 to 2004[1]

WORK AND PENSIONS

Asylum Seekers

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what rules apply to (a) asylum seekers and (b) illegal immigrants for (i) benefit claims and (ii) the repayment of overpayment of benefits; and if he will make a statement. [46186]

Mr. Plaskitt: DWP administered benefits are not payable to illegal immigrants; they have not been payable to asylum seekers arriving in Great Britain since April 2000. As such, the only overpayments that would arise would be through fraud and error. There are no different rules for such individuals when considering whether, and how, an overpayment should be recovered.

Benefits

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of those receiving pension credit are also receiving council tax benefit in (a) West Lancashire and (b) England. [45015]

Mr. Plaskitt: As at May 2005, there were 4,300 pensioner households in the West Lancashire district council area, and 1,634,600 pensioner households in England, receiving both pension credit and council tax benefit.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will summarise the responses to the Housing Green Paper, "Quality and Choice: a decent Home for All" relating to proposed simplification of the Housing Benefit Non-Dependent Deduction regime. [38102]

Mr. Plaskitt: There were 495 respondents to the Housing Green Paper—"Quality & Choice; A decent Home for All" in April 2000, 103 of whom supported simplification or reform of non-dependent deductions. Five respondents disagreed with simplification.

The Government's Paper "The Way Forward for Housing", published in December 2000, stated that the Government did not intend to pursue further reform of non-dependent deductions. However, the Government have taken the opportunity to make changes to the scheme.

From October 2003, if the householder or their partner is aged 65 or more, and a non-dependant moves into their home, or an existing non-dependant's circumstances change to increase the deduction, then the start of the deduction or increase in deduction is delayed for 26 weeks. From April 2005, if the non-dependant is on pension credit, no deduction is made in respect of that non-dependant.

At present, there are no plans to simplify the provisions further for non-dependants in housing benefit, but they will remain under review.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the proportion of private sector tenants in receipt of housing benefit or local housing allowance who have elected to move to alternative private sector accommodation while continuing their claim in (a) Pathfinder and (b) non-Pathfinder areas since the Pathfinder pilots started. [40888]

Mr. Plaskitt: The impact of the local housing allowance on the propensity of private sector tenants on housing benefit to move will be monitored as part of the ongoing evaluation of the local housing allowance.

This will be reported in the forthcoming 15 month Claimant Report, due to be published this spring, and as part of the results from the final wave of the evaluation, due to be published at the end of the year.

Meg Hillier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of widening the housing benefit extended payment scheme from April 2004 to include those in receipt of incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance; and if he will make a statement. [44777]

Mr. Plaskitt: Data on housing benefit extended payments for incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance claimants are not currently available.

Such data are estimated using the previous four quarters' returns. May 2005 is the first quarter that sufficient data were available to be analysed. That analysis is on-going; we expect figures to be available later this year.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost to public funds of paying the housing benefit of tenants transferred from council tenancies to registered social landlords since 1997. [45334]

Mr. Plaskitt: We have not made such an estimate. To determine such a figure would require detailed assumptions about the rents each authority might theoretically have charged had it retained the stock. However, the potential impact on housing benefit where stock is transferred to registered social landlords is considered as part of the overall value-for-money assessment of transfers.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1550W, on housing benefit, what additional information he would need to collect to estimate the cost. [47189]

Mr. Plaskitt: The main constraint in calculating accurately the cost requested is that there is no information about the individuals that would have been affected (gainers and floaters on) and the additional benefit they would have received had the disregards been changed from 1988 onwards. We do not have the necessary information to make the estimate; it would not be possible collect the necessary information retrospectively.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of people entitled to but not claiming (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit in each year since 1997–98; what the annual cost saving was from this unclaimed benefit; and if he will make a statement. [41462]

Mr. Plaskitt: The estimated number of people entitled to but not claiming housing benefit and council tax benefit in each year since 1997–98 is in the table.

The estimated number of people entitled to but not claiming Housing benefit and council tax benefit each year since 1997–98

Thousand

	Housing benefit	Council tax benefit
1997–98	110:470	1,200:1,660
1998–99	130:430	1,250:1,750
1999–2000	200:530	1,280:1,860
2000–01	240:580	1,450:2,000
2001–02	390:680	1,760:2,340
2002–03	420:700	1,870:2,440

Forecasts of spending on benefits are based on estimates of those who will actually receive the benefit, not those who are entitled. This is in accordance with Government Accounting rules that require forecasts to be taut and realistic. Forecasts are generally based on trends in administrative data on people actually in receipt of benefits. This normally means take-up of benefits is implicitly assumed to remain at around current levels, although the anticipated impact of initiatives to increase take up will also be included. Forecasts do not make an explicit assumption about take-up.

Consequently, there is no saving, relative to spending plans, from take-up of benefits being lower than 100 per cent. If take-up of benefits was higher than is implicit in the forecasts, spending would be higher than planned.

However, the department does publish estimates of the amount of benefit unclaimed in each year. The estimated amount of benefit unclaimed for housing benefit and council tax benefit in each year since 1997–98 is in the table.

£ million

	Housing benefit	Council tax benefit
1997–98	140:700	400:600
1998–99	170:630	440:650
1999–2000	290:840	460:710
2000–01	360:960	590:860
2001–02	630:1,230	760:1,060
2002–03	760:1,400	880:1,200

Notes:

1. The figures are sourced from the Family Resources Survey.
2. The latest estimates of the number of entitled non-recipients, range, unclaimed, and take-up relate to 2002–03, and can be found in the DWP report entitled "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up in 2002–2003". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.
3. Estimates for 2003–04 will be published in early 2006.
4. Estimates are presented as ranges within which it can be assumed the true number lies. These ranges account for possible biases inherent in estimates from data that is less than perfect.
5. Comparing estimates over time is not straightforward. Our estimates allow for biases, which can change from year to year; but we cannot be sure of the extent or effects of changes. Therefore, any analysis of changes over time should be made with caution.

Call Centres (Relocation)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the potential savings to be made by relocating his Department's call centres overseas; and if he will make a statement. [45712]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department has no intention of moving any of its jobs overseas and has made no such estimate.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have (a) been sent to prison and (b) lost their driving licence for a period of time for refusing to comply with the Child Support Agency in each quarter since 1995–96; and if he will make a statement. [28420]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 16 November 2005]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 31 January 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many people have (a) been sent to prison and (b) lost their driving licence for a period of time for refusing to comply with the Child Support Agency in each quarter since 1995–96; and if he will make a statement.

Committal to prison action:

Our records between 1995/96 and 1999 are unreliable and information pre-dating 2001/2002 does not specify whether the non-resident parent served a prison sentence. The records only show whether a warrant was issued. However, from March 1999 to October 2005 there have been 545 suspended prison sentences. I have noted below the number of prison sentences actually served.

2001/2002—0 sentences served

2002/2003—4 sentences served

2003/2004—8 sentences served

2004/2005—8 sentences served

2005/2006 (April -Nov)—8 sentences served

Removal of driving licences:

The power to withdraw driving licences was brought into effect on 2 April 2001 (under the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Act 2000). From then until October 2005 there have been 60 suspended driving licence sentences. I have noted below the number of driving licences actually withdrawn.

2001/2002—0 driving licences removed

2002/2003—1 driving licence removed

2003/2004—1 driving licence removed

2004/2005—5 driving licences removed

005/2006—4 driving licences removed (April-Nov)

We use these ultimate sanctions as the final lever to achieve compliance rather than as a punitive measure for those non-resident parents who will not pay. This explains the difference between the number of warrants we obtain and the number of driving licences withdrawn or prison sentences actually served. The Agency can only request that courts consider these sanctions, however it is for the magistrates or sheriffs to make the decision.

The creation of the Enforcement Directorate has already significantly improved the Agency's enforcement performance and effectiveness with substantially improved outcomes at the more routine stages of enforcement for example bailiff action, third party debt orders and charging orders.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to reply to question 27502, on child maintenance, tabled by the hon. Member for Birkenhead on 10 November 2005. [42012]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 16 January 2006]: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1553W.

Child Poverty

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of children in relative low-income households have been living in poverty in each year since 1990–91. [41436]

Margaret Hodge: We recognise that poverty and social exclusion are not just about low income, or the goods and services that people can afford. We understand that people's opportunities and quality of life are also shaped by their education, their skills, by access to quality health services, by decent housing and by the security and quality of the areas in which they live.

However, for measurement purposes, the threshold of below 60 per cent. contemporary median (also known as relative) income is the most commonly used to define the number of children living in poverty. This is the same measure that is used to report trends in low income.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to change the rules which detect anomalies, inaccuracies and incomplete data in the Child Support Agency's new scheme; and if he will make a statement. [30045]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 1 February 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to change the rules which detect anomalies, inaccuracies and incomplete data in the Child Support Agency's new scheme; and if he will make a statement.

There are currently no plans to change the rules, which detect anomalies, inaccuracies and incomplete data in the Child Support Agency's new scheme.

To ensure that new scheme cases are supported by complete and accurate data the Agency operates a risk based management checking regime for new applications and the maintenance of both the New and Old Scheme live caseloads.

We have acknowledged that there are problems with our new computer system and work is ongoing to resolve these with system releases planned for early 2006 to deliver further improvements. The Agency is continuing to work closely with EDS to remedy the outstanding problems and plans future releases during 2006 and 2007 and build upon the improvements already made.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what account is taken by the Child Support Agency of Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service advice to the courts on access arrangement for the non-resident parent when making parent decisions on payments in any particular case; [38885]

(2) what recent discussions there have been between the Child Support Agency and the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service; [38991]

(3) what mechanisms are in place to ensure cooperation and information-sharing between the Child Support Agency and the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service. [38992]

Mr. Plaskitt: The amount of child maintenance can be affected by the number of nights the child spends with the non-resident parent. However, this calculation is based on what is actually happening. The Agency therefore relies on the information provided by both parents, rather than a third party such as CAFCASS.

We do value working in partnership with stakeholders, and although there are no formal contracts between the Child Support Agency and CAFCASS at present, the Agency is committed to extending their relationship with stakeholders and will include CAFCASS in any future stakeholder communication.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in how many cases over the last five years the courts have made orders for compensation against the Child Support Agency. [44239]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 1 February 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, in how many cases over the last five years the courts have made orders for compensation against the Child Support Agency.

Although the Agency tracks and reports the overall level of compensation payments, we cannot distinguish between compensation paid under our extra-statutory scheme (which allows clients to seek compensation without the need to go to court) and payments made to litigants as a result of an order from a court. We are therefore unable to provide the precise information you have requested on payments made as a result of a court order for compensation against the Child Support Agency.

Over the last year, however, we have introduced a small litigation team to handle cases where the client is taking action against the Agency. This team is not aware of any cases where the courts have made orders for compensation against the Agency.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much information relating to Child Support Agency cases in the Borough of Hammersmith and Fulham has been lost since the introduction of the new IT system. [45265]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 1 February 2006:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply form the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much information relating to Child Support Agency cases in the Borough of Hammersmith and Fulham has been lost since the introduction of the new IT system.

Neither the Agency nor the service supplier (EDS) are aware that any data has been lost from the new computer system (CS2) in any area of the country. Any information relating to child support cases that has been saved to the system is retained in the system.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Damages

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the 10 largest amounts of damages paid out by his Department in the last year for which figures are available, indicating in each case the nature of the claim. [27733]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department deals with cases involving personal injury, commercial and employment matters. In relation to commercial and personal injury matters, no cases have been lost in the last year causing the Department to pay damages. (Personal injury cases in relation to Jobcentre Plus are outsourced and the information about them is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost). In relation to employment matters, four cases were lost at the employment tribunal in 2004 which caused damages to be paid. They all relate to Jobcentre Plus and the details are as follows:

April 2004	Unfair dismissal	60,000.00
August 2004	Constructive dismissal	37,850.86
November 2004	Constructive dismissal	21,372.19
June 2004	Public Interest Disclosure Act	9,000.00

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the items valued at over £100 that have been reported as stolen from buildings occupied by his Department in the past 12 months. [43444]

Mr. Plaskitt: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Guidance (Evidency/Documentary Access)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his policy is with regard to (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department giving evidence to the (i) Scottish Parliament, (ii) National Assembly for Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland Assembly committees; and to what categories of document he gives (A) full access, (B) restricted access and (C) no access to the (1) Scottish Parliament, (2) National Assembly for Wales, (3) Northern Ireland Assembly and (4) House of Commons Select Committees. [37412]

Mrs. McGuire: Requests for the attendance of Ministers or officials to give evidence to the devolved legislatures will be considered on a case by case basis. This consideration will reflect: the principles set out in the Cabinet Office guidance Departmental Evidence and Response to Select Committees (July 2005); the policy outlined in the Department for Constitutional Affairs' Devolution Guidance Note 12 Attendance of UK Ministers and Officials at Committees of the devolved legislatures; and the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act. The principles underlying the provision of information to House of Commons Select Committees are set out in Departmental Evidence and response to Select Committees, particularly sections 4B and 4C.

Departmental Special Advisers

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the special advisers employed by his Department; and what their responsibilities are in each case. [41341]

Mrs. McGuire: The Special Advisers to the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions are John Williams and John Woodcock. They work in accordance with the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

Departmental Website

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost of maintaining his main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46311]

Mr. Timms: The production, management and maintenance of the DWP website www.dwp.gov.uk is carried out by the Department's in-house e-communications team. It is not possible to quantify internal costs for the site but contracted and quantifiable costs have been included.

The departmental site is hosted by our IT contractors. In most cases it is not possible to separate these costs from contracted costs.

The cost for maintaining www.dwp.gov.uk for the last year for which figures are available (financial year 2004–05) was £101,467.

The number of unique visitors to the site for each of the last 12 months is given in the following table.

Number

2005	Unique visitors
January	226,862
February	226,725
March	242,377
April	241,648
May	239,310
June	217,544
July	212,847
August	225,773
September	245,289
October	256,502
November	276,836

Fraudulent Activities (Collaborative Projects)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what collaborative projects his Department has undertaken with the Merseyside Police Authority to combat fraudulent activities; and if he will make a statement on the outcome of those projects.[44965]

Mr. Plaskitt: Investigators from the Department for Work and Pensions have worked with officers from the Merseyside Police Authority for a number of years in cases where they have had a common interest and where the Department has required police assistance.

An example of collaborative projects has included operation Bromsgrove, a multi-agency investigation into illegal workers some of whom were suspected of benefit fraud. The labour provider at the centre of the operation is currently facing prosecution. A number of people found to be illegally claiming benefits from the Department are currently being considered for benefit sanction.

Industrial Injuries Advisory Council

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what reports have been produced by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council since 1 January 1997; and if he will make a statement. [41461]

Margaret Hodge: The Industrial Injuries Advisory Council has produced 14 reports since 1 January 1997, not including its annual reports. These are listed:

Command papers (presented to Parliament)

Diseases induced by ionising and non-ionising radiation—March 1999 (Cm 4280)

Conditions due to chemical agents—February 2002 (Cm 5395)

Occupational deafness—November 2002 (Cm 5672)

Conditions due to biological agents—November 2003 (Cm 5997)

Osteoarthritis of the hip—November 2003 (Cm 5977)

Hand arm vibration syndrome—July 2004 (Cm 6098)

Asbestos-related diseases—July 2004 (Cm 6553)

Vinyl chloride monomer-related diseases—November 2005 (Cm 6645)

Position papers

Review of the schedule of prescribed diseases—January 1997

Lung function assessment, Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit, Prescribed Disease D12 (Chronic bronchitis and emphysema in underground coalminers)—February 2000

The neurobehavioral effects of chronic exposure to solvents—December 2003

Stress at work—March 2004

Silica-related renal and connective tissue diseases—November 2005

Sporting injuries—November 2005

Copies of the Command Papers and Position Papers are available in the House of Commons Library.

Lone Parents (Employment)

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether the definition of employment used in measuring progress towards the target to help 70 per cent. of lone parents into employment by 2010 includes (a) full-time and (b) part-time employment; and if he will make a statement;[43817]

(2) what progress has been made to date towards meeting the target of helping 70 per cent. of lone parents into employment by 2010. [43818]

Margaret Hodge: The Government have set themselves the ambitious target of increasing the employment rate of lone parents to 70 per cent. by 2010. The target is measured using the labour force survey and the International Labour Organisation (ILO) definition of employment which includes both full and part-time employment.

Helping lone parents return to the labour market is the most effective way of ensuring their social inclusion and is the best route out of poverty for them and their children. Additionally, the increase in sustainable employment that results from this movement into work increases the productive potential of the economy.

We have already made significant progress in achieving this target. There are now over 1 million lone parents in work, 318,000 more than in 1997; the lone parent employment rate has increased by 11 percentage points since 1997, currently standing at 56.6 per cent. and the number of lone parents claiming income support has fallen by around a quarter since 1997.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many visits abroad Ministers in his Department have made in relation to policy on child care for working parents since 2001. [45192]

Margaret Hodge: Since 1999, the Government have published annually information relating to Cabinet Ministers' visits overseas costing more than £500. Copies of the published lists for the years 2001 to 31 March 2005 are available in the Libraries of the House. The detailed information the hon. Member has requested in respect of other Ministers is not collected centrally and to collect it would involve incurring disproportionate cost.

Ministerial travel is conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

New Deal

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Beverley and Holderness who attained employment through a new deal programme have since restarted on a new deal programme. [44314]

Margaret Hodge: Of the 2,160 people who have been helped into work through the new deal in the Beverley and Holderness constituency, 420 have since restarted on a new deal programme.

Some people will become unemployed again after leaving the new deal. This is inevitable in a dynamic labour market, but the evidence shows that new deal helps people stay in work longer than those in the general labour market. After finding a job through new deal individuals will also have added to their skills and experience, making it easier for them to find a job in the future.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in the borough of Hammersmith and Fulham who attained sustained employment through a new deal programme in the last three years have since restarted on a new deal programme. [45263]

Margaret Hodge: In the three years to August 2005, 1,180 people gained sustained employment through new deal for young people, new deal 25 plus and new deal for lone parents in the constituency of Hammersmith and Fulham. In the three year period to November 2005, 140 people had restarted on a new deal programme in the constituency of Hammersmith and Fulham. Those restarting on a new deal programme may have joined a different new deal programme from the one they were on before.

A sustainability measure is not available for new deal 50 plus and new deal for partners. Information is not available at constituency level for new deal for disabled people.

Information is not collected at borough level.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of (a) men and (b) women, aged (i) 50 to 54, (ii) 55 to 59 and (iii) 60 to 64 years have taken part in (A) new deal 50-plus on a voluntary basis and (B) new deal 25-plus on a compulsory basis; and which options they took. [40482]

Margaret Hodge: New deal 25-plus is a mandatory programme designed to help long term unemployed people back into work. It is aimed at people aged 25 and over who have been claiming jobseeker's allowance for 18 out of the last 21 months. This includes those aged 50 and over who have not previously participated in new deal 25-plus.

Unemployed or economically inactive people aged 50 or over and who have been claiming benefits for 6 months or more can also volunteer to join the new deal 50-plus.

The available information is in the tables.

Post Office Network

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what public services which are provided by his Department are made available by the post office network. [46059]

Mr. Plaskitt: A number of services relating to the payment of benefits and pensions are made available through the post office network.

Customers who receive their payments by direct payment into a post office card account collect their money from post offices and many customers who have their payments made into a bank or building society account can also use the post office network to access their money.

Customers who cannot be paid by direct payment are paid by cheque. Through the Department's relationship with the Alliance and Leicester Commercial Bank Plc, cheque payments with a value of less than £450.00 can be cashed at post office branches. The Department also has a contract with Post Office Ltd to ensure that customers can continue to receive cheque payments in the event of disruption to normal delivery services.

Social Fund Community Care Grant Schemes

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to make an announcement on the level of funding available for the Social Fund Community Care Grant scheme in 2006–07. [47181]

Mr. Plaskitt: We will make an announcement, by way of a written statement to the House, towards the end of March on the level of funding available for the Social Fund Community Care Grant scheme in 2006–07.

TREASURY

Africa (Debt Repayments)

Ann McKechin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the net flow of resources between the United Kingdom and Africa was when the bilateral debt repayments from all African countries to the United Kingdom are subtracted from the United Kingdom aid budget to Africa excluding debt cancellation for (a) the 2005 calendar year and (b) financial year 2004–05; and what the expected figure is for 2005–06. [42086]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In fiscal year 2004–05 the UK's bilateral assistance to Africa amounted to £970 million. The UK also gave very considerable sums of money via multilateral agencies, however the data are not disaggregated to show how much went to Africa. The estimated figure for the UK's bilateral assistance to Africa for fiscal year 2005–06 is £1 billion.

During fiscal year 2004–05, the UK received official bilateral debt payments from countries in Africa amounting to approximately £152.8 million. The UK also wrote off almost £351.6 million of African official bilateral debt in 2004–05. During fiscal year 2005–06, the UK expects to receive official bilateral debt payments from countries in Africa amounting to approximately £1,112.5 million. The UK expects to write off almost £1,143.3 million of African official bilateral debt in 2005–06.

Benzodiazepines

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths in which benzodiazepines abuse was given as a (a) cause and (b) factor occurred in each of the last 10 years. [47324]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 1 February 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many deaths in which benzodiazepines' abuse was given as a (a) cause and (b) factor occurred in each of the last 10 years. I am replying in her absence. (47324)

Abuse of benzodiazepines is not separately identified as a cause of death using the International Classification of Diseases. The attached table shows the number of deaths where benzodiazepines were mentioned on the death certificate and the underlying cause was drug poisoning, for the ten years 1994 to 2003, the most recent year for which figures are available. These figures are produced from a special database which contains deaths where the underlying cause was drug poisoning. Figures readily available from death certification relate to deaths due to drug poisoning, not the total number that were attributable to drug use.

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions his Department consulted citizens' juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens' jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens' jury. [46238]

John Healey: This information is not held centrally in Treasury and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Servants (Overseas Visits)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what costs were incurred by his Department as a result of sending civil servants on overseas visits in each of the last 10 years. [46278]

John Healey: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess) on 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 2272W.

Colon Cancer Deaths

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths occurred in the United Kingdom in 2005 as a consequence of colon cancer. [46188]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 1 February 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question concerning how many deaths occurred in the United Kingdom in 2005 as a consequence of colon cancer. I am replying in her absence. (46188)

The most recently available information is for deaths in 2004. There were 10,333 deaths where the underlying cause was malignant neoplasm of the colon[1] in the United Kingdom.[2]

Yours sincerely

[1] Cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) code C18.
[2] Data for England and Wales are for deaths occurring in the calendar year. Data for Scotland and Northern Ireland are for deaths registered in the calendar year.

Departmental Website

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost of maintaining his main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46310]

John Healey: The cost of maintaining the main HM Treasury website for the financial year 2004–2005 was £123,133. The visitor numbers for each of the last 12 months are as follows:

Date	Number of unique visits
January 2005	91,710
February 2005	96,022
March 2005	141,507
April 2005	101,113
May 2005	100,699
June 2005	93,244
July 2005	79,419
August 2005	77,768

September 2005	94,514
October 2005	105,491
November 2005	113,712
December 2005	120,005

The term unique visits, refers to the number of different visitors logged during this period. These figures do not include repeat visitors nor do they differentiate between different users coming from behind a shared firewall.

Departmental Staff

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many departmental employees have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46772]

John Healey: The information for HM Treasury is shown as follows:

Earnings

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all (i) employees, (ii) full-time employees and (iii) part-time employees in (A) Scotland, (B) each of the unitary local authority areas in Scotland and (C) the United Kingdom had weekly gross earnings including overtime below (1) £285.71, (2) £214.50 and (3) £181.87 in the last period for which figures are available. [46142]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 1 February 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many and what percentage of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all (i) employees, (ii) full-time employees and (iii) part-time employees in (A) Scotland, (B) each of the unitary local authority areas in Scotland and (C) the United Kingdom had weekly gross earnings including overtime below (1) £285.71, (2) £214.50 and (3) £181.87 in the last period for which figures are available. I am replying in her absence. (46142)

Currently average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for all employees, full time employees and part-time employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. This is the standard definition used for ASHE. The ASHE does not collect data on the self-employed and people who do unpaid work.

I am placing in the House of Commons Library, tables showing proportions of gross weekly earnings for all employees, males and females in Scotland, unitary local authorities in Scotland and the UK.

The ASHE, carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

Economic Activity (Milton Keynes)

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to increase the rate of economic activity in Milton Keynes. [47304]

John Healey: The Government have put in place policies that will raise the trend rate of growth for all English regions and local areas, including Milton Keynes. For instance, as one of the Government's four housing growth areas, Milton Keynes is benefiting from significant new investment in infrastructure and through further regeneration of brownfield sites.

GVA—gross value added—statistics show that between 1989, when comparable regional records began, to 2004, the South East enjoyed the highest increase in economic growth per head of all the English regions. It is also experiencing historically low unemployment levels. Unemployment has fallen in the region by 38,000 (17.7 per cent.) since 1997.

Electoral Administration

Mr. Devine: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in each ward in Livingston constituency are over 18 years; and how many of these are on the electoral register in each ward. [46136]

John Healey: This question is a devolved matter, in this case the responsibility of the Registrar General for Scotland.

Emigration

Grant Shapps: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people emigrated from the UK in each year from 2000, broken down by constituency in which they lived at the time of emigration. [47618]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 1 February 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about how many people emigrated from the UK in each year from 2000, broken down by constituency in which they lived at the time of emigration. I am replying in her absence. (47618)

Emigration estimates are not available at the level of Parliamentary constituency. They are based mainly on the International Passenger Survey (IPS), thus, sample size restricts the level for which reliable estimates can be produced. The lowest level of detail for which National Statistics emigration estimates are published is constituent country within the UK and Government Office Region in England. These data are available in the annual reference volume International Migration 2003, Series MN NO 30, available at:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/Productasp?vlnk = 507

Government Spending (Tax Revenue)

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on using tax revenue sourced from particular taxes for particular areas of Government spending. [47131]

Mr. Des Browne: The primary aim of tax policy is to raise sufficient revenue for Government to pay for public services. In some cases, where the Government are raising revenue for a specific purpose, it is appropriate to reinforce the purpose of the tax measure by linking it to the spending which it finances.

Jewish Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his Department did to (a) celebrate Hanukkah and (b) mark Yom Kippur in 2005. [46767]

John Healey: The Treasury did not specifically celebrate Hanukkah or mark Yom Kippur in 2005.

The Treasury, however, has taken a range of positive steps to promote faith awareness in the Department including awareness raising articles in the staff magazine, the provision of a prayer room and flexibility in leave arrangements so that staff can celebrate religious holidays and observe religious obligations.

In addition, the Treasury Staff Code clearly details employees' obligations under the Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2003.

Manufacturing Productivity

John Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rate of growth of manufacturing productivity has been in each year since 1998. [46151]

John Healey: The annual growth rates since 1998 of manufacturing productivity on an output per job basis, the ONS' headline measure, is presented in the following table.

Percentage

	Annual productivity growth
1998	1.2
1999	4.4
2000	6.3
2001	3.5
2002	1.5
2003	4.5
2004	6.2
1998 to 2004	29.4

Ministry of Defence Budget (Tax Revenue)

Mrs. Riordan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of tax revenue was allocated to the Ministry of Defence budget in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06. [47130]

Mr. Des Browne: The Defence budget as a percentage of current receipts for the years in question is as follows:

	2003–04 (Outturn)	2004–05 (Outturn)	2005–06 (Estimate)
Current Receipts (Billion)	418.7	448.4	483.0
Defence near-cash budget (Billion)	25.8	27.0	28.15
Defence near-cash budget expressed as a percentage of Current Receipts	6.2	6.0	5.8

Figures for the Defence near cash budget do not include the net additional cost of military operations (e.g. in Iraq and Afghanistan), which are met separately from the Treasury reserve. The net additional cost of operations was £1.6 Billion in 2003–04 and £1.1 Billion in 2004–05.

Population Estimates

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations (a) his Department and (b) the Office for National Statistics has received on the accuracy of mid-year population estimates. [46964]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 1 February 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your question regarding what representations the a) Treasury and b) the Office for National Statistics has received on the accuracy of mid-year population estimates. I am replying in her absence. (46964)

A number of queries are received each year following the August publication of annual mid-year population estimates. These queries range from general points of clarification to questions regarding the accuracy of the estimates. The following is a list of authorities that have written in with concerns about the accuracy of their 2004 population estimates:

Greater London Authority
Cambridgeshire
Copeland
East Cambridgeshire
Forest Heath
Hampshire
Mid Bedfordshire
South Tyneside
Slough
Southend
Suffolk
Telford & Wrekin Council

In addition to these Local Authorities, queries concerning the accuracy of the estimates have also been received from:

Commission for Racial Equality
Art Beyond Belief (Slough)
Haymill Association of Resident & Tenants (Slough)
Kedderminster Tenants & Residents Association (Slough)
Slough Age Concern
Slough Business Community Partnership
Slough Citizen's Advice Bureau
Slough Council for Voluntary Service
Slough Supported Tenants Action Group
One member of the public (Slough)

Finally Mr Adam Afriyie MP asked two Parliamentary Questions in this area (ref: 38552 and 38558).

This includes correspondence dealt with by Her Majesty's Treasury (HMT). I am not aware of any additional correspondence with HMT that has not been passed on to ONS.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Office for National Statistics has made of the reasons other than population changes why mid-year population estimates differ from the 2001 national census. [46965]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 1 February 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your question about what assessment the Office for National Statistics has made of the reasons, other than population changes, why mid-year population estimates differ from the 2001 Census. I am replying in her absence. (46965)

As a result of changes in society, which include increased mobility and different living arrangements, it is becoming increasingly difficult to estimate the size of the population. Substantial work has been done on the difference between mid-year population estimates and the 2001 Census. This work is summarised in the final report of the 2004 Local Authority Population Studies, which can be found here: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_population/LAStudy_FullReport.pdf This document provides further links to other detailed reports.

Work undertaken includes:

An initial assessment of accuracy of the mid-year population estimates;

A revised allowance for under-enumeration in the 1991 Census;

The Longitudinal Study Adjustment for young men (and other minor changes); and

The Local Authority Population Studies.

These studies confirmed that the 2001 Census had worked well in most areas, but there were a few cases where it was not able to adjust sufficiently for exceptional circumstances. This work, together with revised international migration estimates, accounted for a large proportion of the initial 1.1 million difference between mid year estimates and the Census; reducing the difference to a little over 0.2 million.

Further information on population estimates can be found in the detailed methodology guide to 'Making a population estimate in England and Wales'. This is published here: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=575

ONS is now investing substantially in a project to Improve Migration and Population Statistics (IMPS). (More information on this project can be found here: www.statistics.gov.uk/IMPS). The key aims of this project are to reduce the size of the difference between population estimates and mid-year estimates for 2011 when the next Census is undertaken and to better understand any difference that does remain.

As part of this project we are currently undertaking work to quality assure the mid-year estimates against a range of administrative sources.

Tobacco

Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much duty has been collected from tobacco products in each of the last five years. [46603]

John Healey: Excise duty receipts for tobacco products can be found in Table 3 the HM Revenue and Customs 'Tobacco Bulletin', which is available from HM Revenue and Customs website at:
http://www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task=bulltobac

HEALTH

Agency Staff (Lancashire)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost of agency (a) nurses and (b) doctors in Lancashire Teaching NHS Trust has been in each year since 1997. [43162]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested and shown in the table is only available since 2003 when the Lancashire Teaching Hospitals National Health Service Trust was formed.

Ambulance Services

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her plans are for the regionalisation of ambulance services in Bexhill and Battle; and if she will make a statement. [45794]

Caroline Flint: "Configuration of NHS Ambulance Trusts in England: Consultation Document" sets out the proposed new ambulance trusts on which we are currently consulting. This includes the proposal for a new trust, referred to in the document as South East A, which would cover the areas covered by the current Sussex, Kent and Surrey ambulance trusts, if the proposals are agreed. However, no decision has been made, or will be, until consultation has been concluded.

A copy of "Configuration of NHS Ambulance Trusts in England: Consultation Document" is available in the Library. I also refer the hon. Member to the ministerial statement on this consultation I made on 14 December 2005, Official Report, columns 151–53WS.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will announce the results of the public consultation into the regionalisation of the ambulance services in Sussex. [45791]

Caroline Flint: A 14-week consultation on the future configuration of ambulance services commenced on 14 December 2005, to run until 22 March 2006. No decision has been made, or will be, until consultation has been concluded. We will announce our decision once the consultation has concluded, after due consideration of responses received.

Aspartame

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations her Department has issued in relation to aspartame; and if she will make a statement. [46261]

Caroline Flint: The Sweeteners in Food Regulations 1995, as amended, implement European Union legislation (Directive 94/35/EC) on sweeteners, including aspartame, which are permitted to be used in food.

Audiology (South-West Region)

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average waiting time was for each primary care trust in the south west region for audiology-related treatment in the last period for which figures are available: [46575]

(2) how many patients are waiting for audiology-related treatment in each primary care trust in the south west region. [46576]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally.

BCG Inoculations

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons she has cancelled BCG inoculation programmes administered in schools. [44112]

Caroline Flint: The reasons for the change to the Bacille Calmette Guerin vaccination policy were given in the chief medical officer's letter to the profession dated 6 July 2005. A copy of this letter is available in the Library.

Child Obesity

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what national target she has set for halting the rise in obesity of children under 11 years in each year to 2010. [45528]

Caroline Flint: A public service agreement target specifically on obesity has been set in July 2004 "halting the year-on-year rise in obesity among children aged under 11 by 2010 in the context of a broader strategy to tackle obesity in the population as a whole". No year-on-year targets up to 2010 have been set.

Dentistry

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) dental nurses, (b) dental hygienists and (c) dental therapists were employed in West Lancashire in each year since 1997. [45090]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available in the format requested. However, the table shows the data for dental therapists.

NHS hospital and community health services: Qualified dental therapists in the Cumbria and Lancashire Strategic Health Authority area by organisation as at 30 September each specified year

Healthy Living Centre (Stroud)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will open a healthy living centre in Stroud constituency. [46045]

Caroline Flint: Healthy living centres (HLCs) are funded by the Big Lottery Fund (BLF) and by local partnerships. All the grants by BLF for HLCs were awarded by the end of 2002 and there are no plans for further awards.

Homeopathy

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines she has issued on the use of homeopathy. [44619]

Caroline Flint: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has produced some clinical guidelines that included reference to complementary and alternative therapies alongside more conventional approaches. NICE'S current assessment of smoking cessation interventions will also include consideration of complementary therapies, and departmental officials will discuss with NICE how the clinical guidelines work programme could, where appropriate, include complementary therapies.

The Government also commissioned the Foundation for Integrated Health to produce 'Complementary Healthcare: a guide for patients', published in January 2005, which includes information on homeopathy.

Hospital Services

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of patients were (a) treated at and (b) admitted to (i) Barnet and (ii) Chase Farm hospitals with the 98 percent.-within-four hours target as of (A) 31 December 2004 and (B) 31 December 2005; and if she will make a statement. [45231]

Jane Kennedy: The data requested are not collected in the format requested.

The total time and wait for admission data for Barnet and Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust for the quarters ending in the periods requested are shown in the table. The four hour target applies to the total time spent in accident and emergency (A and E)—this is the time from arrival to admission, transfer or discharge. There is no separate target for admissions.

Influenza Vaccine

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doses of influenza vaccine are available. [38665]

Caroline Flint: There are currently 200,000 doses of seasonal flu vaccine available from the Department's contingency stock.

Maternity Services

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the caesarean rate has been in each of the last five years at Southport and Ormskirk NHS Trust. [45097]

Mr. Byrne: Deliveries by caesarean section[1] as a percentage of all deliveries at Southport and Ormskirk Hospital National Health Service Trust, are shown in the table.

1. Three month vacancy information is as at 31 March each specified year.
2. Three month vacancies are vacancies which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (full-time equivalents).
3. Three month vacancy rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three month vacancies plus staff in post.

4. Three month vacancy rates are calculated using staff in post from the Non-Medical Workforce Census September each specified year.
5. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.

Staff in post notes:
1. Staff in post data are from the non-medical workforce census September each specified year

General notes:
1. Vacancy and staff in post numbers are rounded to the nearest whole number.
2. Calculating the vacancy rates using the above data may not equal the actual vacancy rates.
3. Due to rounding, totals may not equal the sum of component parts.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwife-led birthing centres there are in Milton Keynes. [45431]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally by the Department.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the role of supervisors of midwives. [45733]

Mr. Byrne: The role of supervisors of midwives is one of public protection ensuring that the standard of midwifery practice in their locality is maintained, that midwives have the correct equipment and skills to perform their role and that the quality of their practice is monitored. In practice, the role is one of providing professional support for midwives in overcoming professional dilemmas and enabling them to perform their role in an environment conducive to positive outcomes.

NHS Structure

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will break down by parliamentary constituency all (a) strategic health authority areas, (b) primary care trusts and (c) NHS trusts. [42666]

Mr. Byrne: This information is available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/FreedomOfInformation/ClassesOfInformation/NHSFactsheets/fs/en.

A table listing this information has been placed in the Library.

Nurses (Hammersmith and Fulham)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) agency and (b) NHS nurses were employed by the NHS in the borough of Hammersmith and Fulham in the last year for which figures are available; and what the total cost was of each category of nurse in that year. [45958]

Jane Kennedy: This information is not collected in the format requested.

However, table 1 shows all national health service qualified nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff, including practice nurses employed in Hammersmith and Fulham primary care trust (PCT) and Hammersmith hospitals NHS trust as at September 2004. Figures for the number of agency staff employed by the NHS are not collected centrally.

Organ Donation

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking (a) to encourage organ donation and (b) to raise the profile of the online organ donation register. [42026]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Nearly 13 million people have registered on the organ donor register (ODR), 22 per cent. of the United Kingdom population. The Department gives around £1 million yearly to the NHS blood and transport (NHSBT) to run the ODR and to promote transplantation and also provides section 64 grants to a number of charities. Specific initiatives include funding through NHSBT to support hospital based initiatives. I recently wrote to all Members of Parliament to ask them to help raise awareness within their constituencies, and the Prime Minister also hosted a reception to celebrate the success of transplantation. Online registration initiatives include Oran-ise, an online game to encourage students to register, and nearly 50 web-based campaigns run by national health service organisations, further education establishments and professional organisations.

Poultry Inspections

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Meat Hygiene Services is taking to ensure that from 1 January its official veterinary surgeons assume line management supervision of poultry inspection assistants as required under the EU Hygiene Package. [44984]

Caroline Flint: There has been no change in the supervision requirements of plant inspection assistants, now food business operator establishment staff, following the implementation of the European Union hygiene regulations.

Official Veterinarians remain responsible for the technical supervision of these staff.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what test poultry inspection assistants in post before 1 January were required to pass before they were permitted to inspect poultry meat. [44991]

Caroline Flint: There was no legislative requirement to carry out a specific test prior to authorisation, however, an ongoing assessment was carried during the training period.

After receiving the required training for plant inspections assistants as set out in Regulation 11 of the Poultry Meat, Farmed Game Bird Meat and Rabbit Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1995, revoked 31 December 2005, and in the light of the guidance given in the Meat Hygiene Service operations manual, the Official Veterinary Surgeon assessed the competency, both theoretical and practical, of the plant inspection assistants.

Once the Official Veterinary Surgeon was satisfied that a candidate was competent, s/he would certify an application for authorisation.

Private Finance Initiative Schemes

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what sign offs are required before a guarantee can be provided by her Department for private finance initiative schemes for NHS foundation trusts; [43742]

(2) how much has been guaranteed by her Department for the University Hospital Birmingham NHS Trust private finance initiative scheme; [43743]

(3) what the current status is of the proposed University Hospital Birmingham private finance initiative rebuild; and if she will make a statement. [43744]

Mr. Byrne: The trust's full business case (FBC) has been submitted to the Department for approval; the trust is currently clarifying a number of points which have been raised by the Department. Subject to approval by the Department, the FBC will be forwarded to HM Treasury for approval by officials and Ministers.

In common with other foundation trust private finance initiative (PFI) schemes with a capital value in excess of £10 million, the Secretary of State for Health, the PFI consortium and its funders will sign a deed of safeguard prior to financial close. The effect of the deed of safeguard is to make the Secretary of State liable should the trust be unable to meet its payments to the operator of the PFI scheme.

Radiographers

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many radiographers were employed in Southport and Ormskirk in each year since 1997; and whether there are any vacancies at present. [45030]

Three month vacancy:

1. Three month vacancy information is as at 31 March 2004.
2. Three month vacancies are vacancies which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (full-time equivalents).
3. Three month vacancy rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three month vacancies plus staff in post.
4. Three month vacancy rates are calculated using staff in post from the Non-Medical Workforce Census September 2004.
5. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.

Staff in post:

1. Staff in post data are from the Non-Medical Workforce Census September 2004.

General:

1. Vacancy and staff in post numbers are rounded to the nearest whole number.
2. Calculating the vacancy rates using the above data may not equal the actual vacancy rates.
3. Due to rounding, totals may not equal the sum of component parts.

Residential Drug Rehabilitation Places

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many residential drug rehabilitation places were available in England in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [44125]

Caroline Flint: We do not have an annual record of residential rehabilitation places for the last five years.

The National Treatment Agency (NTA) launched a residential directory on 8 August 2003, and an online bed vacancy directory BEDVACS started on 23 April 2004. There is no record of any information until 1 February 2005. On 1 February 2005, there were 118 English residential rehabilitation units with a total of 2,498 beds. Currently the directory lists 119 English residential rehabilitation units with a total of 2,530 beds.

Reverse Therapy

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has (a) commissioned, (b) funded and (c) evaluated into reverse therapy in relation to (i) myalgic encephalomyelitis and (ii) Gulf War illnesses; and if she will make a statement. [46256]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has not commissioned, funded or evaluated research into the use of reverse therapy in the treatment of myalgic encephalomyelitis or Gulf War syndrome.

Sheep Meat (Radioactive Contamination)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether restrictions in place to prevent contaminated sheep meat entering the human food chain in areas of the countryside affected by radioactive contamination following Chernobyl have been lifted. [45970]

Caroline Flint: Restrictions on the sale, movement and slaughter of sheep, arising from the Chernobyl nuclear accident, remain in place in limited areas of Cumbria and Scotland, plus parts of North Wales. The last restrictions in place in Northern Ireland were removed in April 2000. The following table shows the numbers of farms and estimated sheep numbers remaining under restriction, as of 1 January 2006.

	Farms	Sheep
England	9	6,600
Wales	355	176,000
Scotland	11	18,000
Total	375	200,600

Smoking

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what national targets she has set for reducing the percentage of pregnant women who smoke. [45526]

Caroline Flint: The 1998 White Paper, "Smoking Kills", sets a specific national target for smoking during pregnancy, "to reduce the percentage of women who smoke during pregnancy from 23 percent. to 15 percent. by the year 2010; with a fall to 18 percent. by the year 2005". The latest data used to monitor this target comes from the infant feeding survey, which takes place every five years. The results for 2000 show that, in England, 19 percent., of pregnant women smoked. Results for 2005 are due in 2007.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much smoking-related illnesses have cost the NHS in each of the last five years. [46602]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available in the form requested.

The latest data on the cost to the national health service of treating illness and disease caused by smoking is estimated to cost between £1.4 billion to £1.7 billion every year in terms of general practitioner visits, prescriptions, treatment and operations.

Surrey and Sussex NHS Healthcare Trust

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much per day the turnaround team at the Surrey and Sussex NHS healthcare trust will cost (a) the trust, (b) the strategic health authority and (c) central departmental funds. [46742]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 30 January 2006]: The turnaround teams were announced by the Secretary of State in a written ministerial statement on 1 December 2005, Official Report, columns 36–37WS. The teams will comprise of experts with a mix of commercial and national health service turnaround skills.

The first stage of this is a baseline assessment, the aim of which is to ensure there is an agreed understanding of the local financial problem and that actions are in hand to address this.

The contract for the baseline assessment was awarded to consultants KPMG. Surrey and Sussex healthcare NHS trust's assessment was included in this assessment. The value of this contract is commercial in confidence.

Following the baseline assessment a tailored package of turnaround support will be agreed by the local NHS. This will be paid for by the local NHS. I do not hold details of these agreements.

Tuna (Mercury Levels)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the level of mercury in (a) tinned tuna and (b) tinned yellowfin tuna. [45981]

Caroline Flint: A survey published by the Food Standards Agency (FSA) in 2003 found that the mean level of mercury in canned tuna sold in the United Kingdom was 0.19 milligrams per kilogram (mg/kg). All the samples were below the statutory limit for mercury in tuna of one mg/kg. The only sample of canned yellowfin in the survey had one of the lowest mercury levels found in canned tuna (0.05 mg/kg). The FSA advice is that pregnant women and women who intend to become pregnant should limit their consumption of tuna to no more than four medium size cans per week or two fresh tuna steaks.

Vulnerable Adults

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many individuals are on the protection of vulnerable adults list; [44898]

(2) how many referrals have been made to the protection of vulnerable adults list since it was established; and how many referrals have resulted in a name being added to the list. [45511]

Mr. Byrne: The legislation underpinning the operation of the protection of vulnerable adults (POVA) list is the Care Standards Act 2000, which sets out the criteria for referring people to the list and for deciding whether to include a person on the list. As at 31 December 2005, the latest date for which figures are available, there have been 3,448 referrals made to the POVA list, which was established on 26 July 2004.

Overall, there are 288 individuals confirmed as being unsuitable to work with vulnerable adults and they have been placed on the list. There are also 1,228 people provisionally listed who are subject to further investigations and cannot work in a regulated social care position in the interim.

Waiting Times

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) average and (b) longest waiting time was for an out-patient appointment at each of the hospitals run by Hammersmith hospitals NHS trust in the last year for which figures are available. [45948]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not hold the information in the format requested.

However, the table shows waiting times for first out-patient appointments following general practitioner written referrals, for Hammersmith hospitals national health service trust, for each quarter from December 2004 to September 2005.

Waiting times for first out-patient appointment following GP written referral, Hammersmith hospitals NHS trust

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Cathedrals (Maintenance and Restoration)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners how much was spent in 2004–05 on maintaining and restoring the fabric of cathedrals in England. [46115]

Sir Stuart Bell: A 2004–05 figure is not available. However, a 2004 survey suggested that the average annual amount spent on the repair and maintenance of cathedrals is £11 million.

Fairtrade

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what the Church Commissioners' policy is on purchasing fair trade products for its offices. [46119]

Sir Stuart Bell: The Commissioners have been purchasing Fairtrade products for at least six years.

The Commissioners have been purchasing Fairtrade products for at least six years.

Flying Bishops

Robert Key: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what percentage of the parishes in the provinces of (a) Canterbury and (b) York are in the pastoral care of flying bishops. [46319]

Sir Stuart Bell: At 31 March 2004, 1.5 per cent. of parishes in the Province of Canterbury, and 3.1 per cent. of parishes in the Province of York had petitioned for extended episcopal ministry and received this from the three Provincial Episcopal Visitors. The respective totals including those receiving episcopal ministry from other bishops as well were 2.1 per cent. and 3.3 per cent.

Further details are available in Appendix 7 of the recently published report from the House of Bishops' Women Bishops Group (GS 1605).

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Rural Payments Agency

12. Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs What assessment she has made of the efficiency of the Rural Payments Agency. [47606]

Margaret Beckett: The Rural Payments Agency is modernising its systems and processes to deliver the single payment scheme (SPS). It is estimated that the cost of processing £1.6 billion of claims will be 5.4 pence in the pound. This compares favourably with the cost of administering the schemes SPS replaces which in 2004–05 was 5.7 pence in the pound.

Single Farm Payment Scheme

13. Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs If she will make a statement on the implementation of the single farm payment scheme. [47607]

Margaret Beckett: The Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for South Dorset (Jim Knight) announced on 31 January that full payments under the single payment scheme will commence in February 2006. Staff are working exceedingly hard to ensure that this expectation is turned into a reality.

21. Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of single farm payments she expects to have been paid by the end of February 2006. [47616]

Margaret Beckett: The Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for South Dorset (Jim Knight) confirmed on 31 January that SPS payments will commence before the end of February, with the bulk of payments being made by the end of March.

Nuclear Waste

14. Mr. David Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what her latest estimate is of the costs associated with the management of the stockpile of radioactive waste; and if she will make a statement. [47609]

Mr. Morley: The total cost of operating, cleaning up and decommissioning the UK's publicly owned civil nuclear sites, for which the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) has been given responsibility, is currently estimated at £56 billion. This figure includes the costs of interim management of waste arising from decommissioning and clean-up activity. The cost of any facility, or facilities that will be needed in light of CoRWM recommendation for the final long-term management higher activity wastes will be additional to this.

Habitats Directive

16. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what steps she is taking to ensure that the UK's obligations under the habitats directive are met. [47611]

Mr. Bradshaw: A small number of legislative changes are in hand, to meet a recent European Court of Justice ruling,. But of course the UK has already done more than virtually any other EU member state in meeting the policy objectives behind the directive by protecting and enhancing our terrestrial and marine biodiversity.

Canoeing

17. Mr. John Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, if she will make a statement on the access of canoeists to rivers and waterways. [47612]

Mr. Morley: Canoeists currently have access to around 27 per cent. of our major areas of inland water, and research suggests that overall supply meets demand. But we are working with partners to develop more opportunities for access in the future.

Centre for Ecology and Hydrology

18. Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what assessment she has made of the impact of the proposed closure of the Banchory station of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology on climate change research. [47613]

Mr. Morley: Staff at the Banchory station of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH) carry out important monitoring and scientific research on the impacts of climate change on plants and animals. Links between biodiversity and climate change remain a priority for the new CEH. Future research work in this area will be carried out in even closer collaboration with universities, through a proposed new partnership funding initiative.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely impact on wildlife research of the National Environment Research Council's plans for the future organisation of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology. [47293]

Mr. Morley: The Government are fully committed to maintaining the quality of environmental science in the UK and provides funding to the Natural Environment Research Council for this purpose. NERC is currently consulting widely with stakeholders on proposals on how best the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology can contribute on a sustainable basis to this. I am sure that NERC Council will consider all evidence and views on the potential impact of the proposals, including any impact on wildlife research. The Centre for Ecology and Hydrology will continue to deliver its contractual commitments to the Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs arid other Government Department and agencies.

Warm Front Scheme

19. Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the operation of the warm homes scheme in Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland. [47614]

Mr. Morley: The Warm Front Scheme has already provided assistance to 3,573 homes in Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland through a range of insulation and heating measures and energy efficiency advice. We continue to work with Eaga Partnership, the scheme manager, to ensure the effective delivery of the scheme across the country.

Climate Change

20. Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress she has made with the review of the UK climate change programme. [47615]

Mr. Morley: We are aiming to publish the revised UK climate change programme as soon as possible this year.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with Cabinet colleagues on progress towards meeting climate change targets. [47610]

Margaret Beckett: I have regular discussions with Cabinet colleagues on our progress towards meeting both our international and domestic climate change targets as part of the climate change review process, through our involvement in the Sustainable Energy Policy Network and the EE Committee.

Animal Welfare

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will implement the recommendation contained in paragraph 200 in the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report "Welfare of farmed animals at slaughter or killing", published in 2003. [47603]

Mr. Bradshaw: No.

Beef

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on the cattle market of a delay in lifting the ban on the export of British beef. [44042]

Mr. Bradshaw: I can confirm that, in 2005, Defra commissioned a report from the Meat and Livestock Commission assessing any risks and the market impact of the lifting of the over-30-month rule.

My officials and I are also closely monitoring the UK market situation as well as the overall EU beef market, since the full re-introduction of post-August 1996 cattle to the food chain on 23 January. In the unlikely event of any substantial and sustained fall in the market price we have the option of pressing the EU Commission's Beef Management Committee for a temporary exceptional market support measure.

Current indications are that the full re-introduction of over-30-month beef from cattle born after 1 August 1996 has passed largely without incident. The impact on market prices will become clearer once they have been collected and published after the first full week of trading.

Bird Keepers

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what information her Department holds on the (a) number of bird keepers in the UK and (b) percentage of birds of wild origin they keep. [46298]

Jim Knight: The Department holds information on the number and locations of larger poultry businesses. In addition the Great Britain Poultry Register was established in December 2005 to gather more information about particular species of birds held on commercial premises with 50 or more birds. Owners with less than 50 birds are also encouraged to register on a voluntary basis.

However, we do not hold information on other bird keepers or the number and percentage of wild birds kept in the UK.

Bovine TB

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons her Department has refused Mrs. Kremers of New Park Farm, Ogwell, Devon the option of paying for a second TB test for an animal that tested positive to the initial tuberculin skin test; and by what means Mrs. Kremers can appeal against this decision. [47587]

Mr. Bradshaw: The current skin test for bovine tuberculosis (TB) is an effective test. It is the accepted standard laid down in both national and international legislation for determining the existence of disease in a cattle herd.

The Tuberculosis (England and Wales) Order 1984 requires cattle failing the tuberculin test, and those considered to have been direct contacts exposed to TB, to be compulsorily slaughtered. There is no provision for a second TB test nor is there a mechanism for appeals.

CAP Entitlements (Trading)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether trading of common agricultural policy entitlements is allowable in advance of payments being made by the Rural Payments Agency. [46042]

Jim Knight: Trading can only take place once entitlements have been established. The Rural Payments Agency has launched a pre-registration system for those claimants who intend to trade entitlements once they have received their entitlement notification.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the total level of funding for the countryside stewardship scheme was in the 2004 agreement year; [46968]

(2) how many live agreements providing public access there were in (a) the 2004 agreement year and (b) from the scheme's inception to November 2005; [46969]

(3) how many hectares were in live agreements under the countryside stewardship scheme which provided public access (a) in the agreement year 2004 and (b) from the scheme's inception to November 2005; [46972]

(4) how much funding was provided for live agreements providing public access under the countryside stewardship scheme (a) in the agreement year 2004 and (b) from the scheme's inception to November 2005. [46974]

Jim Knight: I cannot provide the information requested within a reasonable time. I will write to the right hon. Member to provide a detailed answer to his questions when we have the information and will place a copy in the Library of the House and on the DEFRA website.

Departmental Website

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost of maintaining her main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46276]

Jim Knight: For our main website, www.defra.gov.uk direct operating costs—staff costs for the central team with lead responsibility for updating and maintaining websites—are estimated to be around £352,000 for the current financial year. Additional costs arise from the activities of staff in business units across the Department, contributing to the content of websites but the cost for this cannot be readily calculated . Website hosting services—as well as a range of IT applications—are provided as part of DEFRA's overall IT service provision and the costs cannot be disaggregated.

The number of visitors per month to the website during 2005 was as follows:

	Number
January	230,000
February	230,000
March	270,000
April	270,000
May	260,000
June	240,000
July	230,000
August	250,000
September	260,000
October	320,000
November	320,000
December	270,000

Emissions Trading

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the progress of the national allocation plan for the second phase of the EU emissions trading scheme. [48016]

Mr. Morley: A national allocation plan (NAP) with a final installation level-allocation for Phase II of the EU ETS (2008 to 2012) must be submitted to the European Commission by 31 December 2006. The European Commission recently published its revised guidance for Phase II of the EU ETS, and we are now assessing the impacts of this guidance on the development of our NAP. A draft policy NAP is due to be published this spring.

External Consultants

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department has paid since 2004 to external consultants who had previously been employed by the Department in any capacity within the previous five years. [41205]

Jim Knight: External consultants are not employed by the Department but provide consultancy services under contracts for services. The Department does not hold records centrally of how much it has paid since 2004 to external consultants who had previously been employed by the Department in any capacity within the previous five years, and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role her Department is playing in the Government's commitment to eradicate fuel poverty. [47108]

Mr. Morley: Defra plays a leading role in taking forward the Government's commitment to tackle fuel poverty. This is reflected in our PSA target, wording of which is shared with DTI, which endorses the commitment to eradicate fuel poverty, as far as reasonably practicable, in vulnerable households in England by 2010.

Defra is responsible for the Warm Front Scheme, which is the key tool for tackling fuel poverty in the private sector in England. Since its launch in June 2000 it has assisted more than 1 million households with a range of insulation and heating measures and energy efficiency advice. The new phase of the scheme, launched in June 2005, is better equipped to target and assist those most in need in a sustainable way.

Funding for Warm Front was enhanced by the announcement in the pre-Budget report 2005 of an additional £250 million for Warm Front in the period 2005–08.

The Department works closely with colleagues across Government who have an interest in this area including the Departments of Trade and Industry, Work and Pensions and Health, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and Treasury as well as the Devolved Administrations. This ensures that all areas which impact on our ability to tackle fuel poverty—energy efficiency, income and fuel cost—can be fully considered and appropriate action taken.

IBM, Guildford

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 2376W, on departmental transport, if her Department will make a representation to IBM to instruct its employees not to park in residential roads near the site on the Epsom road, Merrow, Guildford. [46054]

Jim Knight: Official representations have been made to IBM to gain their co-operation in asking their employees not to park in surrounding roads.

DEFRA are carrying out daily patrols in the local roads to try to identify vehicles which belong to IBM employees. Drivers or their line managers are then contacted and asked to move their vehicles even though these may be parked legally.

Marine Environment

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with Cabinet colleagues on the protection of the marine environment. [47174]

Mr. Bradshaw: Both I and my officials have had extensive discussions with various colleagues in other Government Departments (and also with the devolved administrations) on a range of domestic and international issues concerning the protection of the marine environment, not least in preparing the Government's proposals for the Marine Bill.

Protected Species

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received about the species included in the list in Schedule 9 of the Countryside and Wildlife Act 1981. [46687]

Jim Knight [holding answer 30 January 2005]: The Government have undertaken a review of Part I of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, as it applies to England and Wales, and sought comments on retaining Schedule 9 in its current form and making it the subject of an early review. The responses we have received as part of this review are overwhelmingly in support of the retention of Schedule 9, with some suggested additions for both Part I (animals) and Part II (plants). We will be issuing a consultation document later this year which will proposed amendments to Schedule 9, informed by these responses.

Single Farm Payment

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether farmers in Lancashire will receive the single farm payment on the original timetable. [45491]

Jim Knight: As I announced on 31 January, the Rural Payments Agency will start making full payments under the single payment scheme in February with the bulk of payments being made in March. This is in line with announcements made in January 2005, and well within the regulatory payment window, which runs from 1 December 2005 to 30 June 2006.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what dates the UK Government received funds for the Single Farm Payment from the EU. [47981]

Jim Knight: Common Agricultural Policy funding is reimbursed by the European Commission two months after the end of the month in which the payments to claimants are made. No funds for the Single Payment Scheme have therefore been received.

Water Supplies

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to ensure safe and sufficient water supplies in the south-east. [47594]

Mr. Morley: Water companies have statutory duties with regard to water supply and have produced drought and water resource plans in liaison with the Environment Agency. Under the Water Act 2003, these plans are now being made statutory. We have asked the Environment Agency to monitor and report on the developing drought in the south-east.

Woodland

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to use native woodland creation to tackle (a) habitat fragmentation, (b) flooding and (c) climate change. [47168]

Jim Knight: Our statement of policy for England's ancient and native woodlands "Keepers of Time" which we published last year sets out a number of strategic objectives which include the creation of new native woodland to extend, link arid complement existing woodland and other habitats. It also sets the objective of increasing the recognition and use of 'environmental services' which native woodland can provide, for example flood alleviation and pollution mitigation.

The England forestry strategy review and the review of the UK climate change programme are looking at how existing policies are performing and the range of polices that might be put in place in the future.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much woodland has been created in each year since 1995; and how much of this is broadleaved. [47171]

Jim Knight: The area of new woodland creation in England comes principally from the area of Forestry Commission grant aided planting and new woodland planting on the public forest estate. In addition a relatively small area is planted without grant aid and this is assumed to be entirely broadleaved. The total area created with and without incentives is given in the following table.

	Total new woodland creation thousands of hectares	Broadleaved woodland thousands of hectares	Broadleaved woodland as percentage of all new planting
1995–96	4.7	4.3	91
1996–97	4.7	4.2	88
1997–98	4.4	3.8	87
1998–99	5.1	4.4	85
1999–2000	5.9	5.2	87
2000–01	5.9	5.2	89
2001–02	5.4	4.7	87
2002–03	5.9	5.4	91
2003–04	4.6	4.4	96
2004–05	5.3	5.1	96

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to increase woodland cover in England. [47172]

Jim Knight: Our target is to create 30,000 hectares of new woodland over the seven-year period, 2000–06, of the England rural development programme. In the period 1 January 2000–31 December 2005, 28,262 hectares of new woodland has been planted.

The successor to the current programme is being developed and a public consultation document will be published soon. New woodland creation is expected to remain a feature of the programme but at this stage we do not have a target area.

The revised England forestry strategy and the revision of the UK biodiversity action plan native woodland creation target are both expected to be published later this year and will provide more details of our plans for woodland cover in England.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to encourage farmers to plant trees. [47166]

Jim Knight: Incentives to promote the planting of trees in England are part of the Forestry Commission's English Woodland Grant Scheme (EWGS) which combines and replaces incentives for the establishment of new woodland that were available under the Commission's Woodland Grant Scheme (WGS) and Defra's Farm Woodland Premium Scheme (FWPS). Defra's Environmental Stewardship Scheme will build on past achievements by providing incentives for small-scale tree planting.

In addition to these England-wide schemes there are various regional and local initiatives aimed at increasing tree cover; notably the National Forest in the Midlands and the 12 Community Forest partnerships based close to urban areas.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of England is covered by ancient woodland; and what steps she has taken to halt its decline. [47169]

Jim Knight: In June last year I launched "Keepers of Time: a statement policy for England's ancient and native woodland", which at around 340,000 hectares makes up just under 3 per cent. of our land area.

Our vision is that ancient woodlands, veteran trees and other native woodlands are adequately protected, sustainably managed in a wider landscape context, and are providing a wide range of social, environmental and economic benefits to society.

The Action Plan for 2005–07, which accompanied the policy statement, set out a broad range of actions aimed at achieving our strategic objectives, which includes halting the decline.

PRIME MINISTER

Hospitality (Expenditure)

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister how much he has spent on hospitality in each year since he became Prime Minister; and what proportion was spent on alcohol. [46489]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my noble Friend Lord Bassam of Brighton to the noble Lord Hanningfield on 21 July 2005, Official Report, column WA261.

For 2002–03 I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 28 April 2004, Official Report, column 1087W.

For 2001–02 I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 27 January 2003, Official Report, column 564W.

For figures up to the period of 2001–02, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) on 28 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1444–48W.

Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister how many staff were employed in his Office in each year since he became Prime Minister. [46487]

The Prime Minister: For the number of staff on the No. 10 payroll for the period up to 1 April 2003 I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) on 30 June 2003, Official Report, column 56W.

For the number of staff on the No. 10 payroll for the remaining period up to 1 April 2005 I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Belfast, East (Mr. Robinson) on 10 October 2005, Official Report, column 163- 64W.

Official Travel

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister how much he has spent on air travel in each year since he became Prime Minister. [46488]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1661W.

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister what the total cost was of his official travel in each year since he became Prime Minister. [46490]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1660- 61W.

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister what the total cost was of his overnight accommodation during official travel in each year since he became Prime Minister. [46491]

The Prime Minister: The information requested cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate costs.

However in respect of overseas travel, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of these lists are available in the Library of the House. Information on the number of officials accompanying Ministers on overseas visits is included in the list. All Ministers travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in Chapter 10 of the ministerial code, and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers". Information for the year 2005-06 will be published as soon as it is ready after the end of the financial year.

Royal Audiences

Harry Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what matters he has raised at audiences with HM The Queen in the course of the present Parliament; [46727]

(2) how matters to be raised by him at audiences with HM the Queen are selected. [46728]

The Prime Minister: Discussions with Her Majesty the Queen are not disclosed.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

2012 Business Summit

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the (a) companies, (b) trade bodies, (c) regional development agencies, (d) trades unions and (e) local authorities represented at the 2012 Business Summit held in London on 24 January. [46571]

Tessa Jowell: Given that many of the organisations represented at the 2012 Business Summit do not fit easily into the categories included in the question, the following is a complete alphabetical list of all attending organisations.

Casinos

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether guidance has been produced on alcohol (a) served and (b) consumed on the gaming floor area of new casinos licensed under the Gambling Act 2005. [46726]

Mr. Caborn: No such guidance has yet been produced in relation to the new casinos permitted by the Gambling Act 2005. The Gambling Commission has published guidance in relation to alcohol on the gaming floor of casinos licensed under the 1968 Act, and the regulation of alcohol provision in the new casinos will be developed from this model.

If it becomes clear that alcohol is becoming a problem in either existing casinos or those new casinos permitted by the 2005 Act, there are powers under the Licensing Act 2003 and the Gambling Act 2005 to stop it being served.

Cricket

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money was allocated to cricket through (a) the Sports Council, (b) the national lottery and (c) other Government funding in each of the last five years. [46815]

Mr. Caborn: Funding for cricket is allocated through Sport England. The table sets out the funding allocated in each of the last five years.

Table 1: Funding for cricket 2001–02 to 2005–06

	English cricket board award	Lottery	Community club development programme
2001–02	522,000	7,519,883	—
2002–03	224,000	15,381,677	—
2003–04	120,833	10,400,024	[2]9,400,000
2004–05	618,750	2,530,717	—
2005–06	[1]611,000	508,684	—
Totals	2,096,583	36,340,985	9,400,000

[1] ECB funding for 2005–06 from 1 April to 30 September 2005
[2] CCDP funding for period 2003–04 to 2005–06

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the annual expenditure on (a) fixtures and fittings, (b) general office expenses and (c) office equipment was of (i) her Department and (ii) each (A) non-departmental public body and (B) executive agency, (C) other public body for which her Department is responsible in each English region in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06 in each case. [40069]

Mr. Lammy: Expenditure by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport on fixtures and fittings was £477,000 in 2002–03, £475,000 in 2003–04 and £335,000 in 2004–05; with planned expenditure of £100,000 in 2005–06.

The term "general office expenses" is neither used as part of the Department's accounting procedures, nor those of the Royal Parks Agency.

Annual expenditure by the Department on office equipment, including computers, was £938,000 in 2002–03, £958,000 in 2003–04, £1,100,000 in 2004–05; with planned expenditure of £350,000 in 2005–06.

The Royal Parks Agency's accounts do not identify separately figures for fixtures and fittings and attempts to provide these would be at disproportionate cost.

Annual expenditure by the Royal Parks Agency on office equipment, including computers, was £11,000 in both 2002–03 and 2003–04, £23,000 in 2004–05, with planned expenditure of £23,000 in 2005–06.

Information requested in respect of the non departmental public bodies could be obtained at disproportionate cost.

English National Opera

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidance she has issued to English National Opera on severance payments for senior executives. [47836]

Mr. Lammy: I have issued no guidance to English National Opera on severance payments for senior executives.

Football

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to continue to promote an anti-racist message through football in (a) Swindon and (b) England. [47555]

Mr. Caborn: Swindon Town Football Club gives its full backing to the national anti-racism campaigns, Kick It Out and Show Racism The Red Card. The club promotes the campaigns on match days and they liaise with the local authority and local schools to convey the anti-racism message.

My Department continues to support these anti-racism campaigns such as Kick It Out and Show Racism the Red Card through funding for the Football Foundation which will receive £45 million in Government money between 2004 and 2007. We are also working closely with the Commission for Racial Equality who are developing race equality action plans with the Football Association, the Premier League, the Football League, the Professional Footballers Association and the Football Foundation.

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of Swindon's Football in the Community scheme. [47554]

Mr. Caborn: DCMS has made no official assessment of Swindon's Football in the Community scheme but is delighted that professional clubs continue to work in their local areas to promote football and provide opportunities for a wide range of people.

Olympics 2012

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the statement at her Department's Olympic summit on 24 January, if she will provide a breakdown by main budget heading of the £3.3 billion cost of infrastructure. [46159]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 30 January 2006]: The figure of £3 billion that I mentioned on 24 January comprises £2 billion for the Olympic venues and infrastructure to be met from the Public Sector Funding Package. The other £1 billion is to meet the costs of infrastructure works already planned and budgeted as part of the general regeneration of the lower Lea valley.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many events there will be at the London 2012 Olympics; and which of these events will be open to women competitors. [46661]

Tessa Jowell: There are planned to be 26 sports in the programme for the 2012 Olympic games and all, except the boxing competition, will be open to women competitors. There are planned to be 19 sports in the programme for the 2012 Paralympic games, all of which will be open to women competitors.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the liaison bodies established between her Department and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in relation to arrangements for the 2012 London Olympic and Paralympic games have met; and if she will make a statement. [46986]

Mr. Caborn: The Olympic delivery group, the Olympic projects review group and the Olympic board steering group meet regularly at approximately two-week intervals.

The inter-departmental steering group and the network of Olympic co-ordinators will meet on a quarterly basis.

Paralympics

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to (a) promote awareness of the Paralympic Games and (b) maximise the potential opportunities for people with disabilities taking part in sport as a consequence of the Paralympic Games; and if she will make a statement. [47038]

Mr. Caborn: We are committed to working with others to maximise media coverage and exposure of the Paralympic Games and to promoting the Games nationwide. In 2012, the Olympic stakeholders will implement an innovative promotional programme for the Paralympic Games that generates excitement among a wide range of audiences. Among those specifically targeted will be schools, community groups, sports clubs and special interest groups.

The Paralympic Games in 2012 will motivate more people with disabilities in the UK to take part in sport. We will work with Sport England to sustain this legacy after 2012, in line with our commitment to increase sports participation for disabled people. This will include greater access to modern facilities and greater awareness and interest in healthier lifestyles. There will also be support, training, new career opportunities for coaches and volunteers, and visibility for sports that are not currently widely played in the UK.

Public Libraries

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the (a) recent and (b) likely closure of public libraries. [47795]

Mr. Lammy: We are monitoring the situation closely and I have written to all leaders of the 149 library authorities in England to remind them of their statutory obligations. Primarily, the operation of library services are a matter for determination by the elected representatives of the parent authorities. However, public libraries are valuable community assets and local decision makers should think carefully about what might be lost through closures.

RNIB Talking Books

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many local authorities subsidised the cost of Royal National Institute for the Blind Talking Books on the most recent date for which figures are available. [47578]

Mr. Lammy: The Government do not hold this information centrally; however, according to the Royal National Institute for the Blind (RNIB), 131 English local authorities subscribe to the RNIB talking books scheme.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

China/Ethiopia/Burma

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the humanitarian situation in (a) China, (b) Ethiopia and (c) Burma. [47041]

Hilary Benn: There is no humanitarian emergency in China. The country has made dramatic progress in reducing absolute poverty over the last 25 years, with over 450 million people lifted out of poverty. There are, however, still 135 million people below the poverty line and progress towards some of the Millennium Development Goals is slower than expected. The DFID programme focuses on increasing access to basic education, water and sanitation and basic health services, and on tackling HIV and AIDS and Tuberculosis.

In Ethiopia, 2.6 million people in, especially in the Somali, Afar and Oromia regions, have been badly affected by the drought and will need humanitarian assistance in 2006. The Government of Ethiopia and UN agencies issued an appeal on 23 January 2006, with particular emphasis on non-food needs such as health, nutrition, water, sanitation and livestock. We are considering our response. We will also continue to support the Government of Ethiopia's Productive Safety Nets Programme which provides assistance to those communities and households most vulnerable to crop failure by enabling them to invest in assets like clothes and livestock, or to build roads or protect water supplies.

Burma is one of the poorest countries in Asia. It is not on track to achieve any of the Millennium Development Goals. There is little reliable data but we know that many of Burma's 50 million people face poverty and vulnerability. We provide £500,000 a year humanitarian assistance through the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) to support displaced people in Eastern Burma.

Kenya

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the outcomes were of the discussions on increased private sector investment and growth in Kenya held on his recent visit there. [47040]

Hilary Benn: I did not have any formal discussions regarding private sector development on my recent visit to Kenya. However, I did hold discussions on governance and corruption. We will continue to push on these issues to create a better climate for investment. More widely, DFID has been engaged for a number of years on private sector development in Kenya and, with our assistance, the Government of Kenya is soon to publish a Private Sector Development Strategy and a Financial Sector Strategy, and is implementing a Strategy for the Revitalisation of Agriculture.

Natural Disasters

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether vulnerability to natural disasters is considered as one of the criteria in the development of aid programmes; and if he will make a statement. [47095]

Mr. Thomas: Vulnerability is a factor which DFID takes into account in allocating aid to particular countries. According to the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), approximately half of the world's least developed countries face high levels of natural disaster risk and the impact on poor people is increasing. It is important that developing countries ensure that their planning includes efforts to minimise the impact of risk and respond more effectively when disasters occur. DFID has produced a new policy outlining our approach to disaster risk reduction which will be published shortly.

DFID is funding significant disaster risk reduction programmes in countries susceptible to disasters. For example, we are providing over £60 million to support disaster preparedness in Orissa, India. In Bangladesh, with the UNDP, we are supporting the development of the government's Comprehensive Disaster Management Programme which is helping to improve legislation, programming and co-ordination across government ministries on disaster risk reduction.

DFID is also providing support for the international disaster risk reduction system. We are one of the leading donors to the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction, contributing around £1 million per year and we are providing £3.75 million to support the Pan American Health Organisations' work in the Caribbean to reduce the vulnerability of the health sector to disasters. Our support to the disaster risk reduction work of the Red Cross and international non-governmental organisations totals over £16 million.

Palestinian Authority

Mr. Joyce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid and assistance the UK is giving to the Palestinian Authority. [47446]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development's (DFID) programme of assistance to the Palestinians aims to enhance the prospects for peace, make Palestinian governance and institutions more effective and accountable, and encourage more co-ordinated delivery of humanitarian and development assistance. In 2005–06 our programme has included:

Support to the Palestinian Negotiations Support Unit;

Technical advice on public administration and civil service reform;

Humanitarian assistance to Palestinian Refugees through the United Nations Relief and Works Agency; and Budget support to the Palestinian Authority (PA) through the World Bank Reform Trust Fund.

This is in addition to assistance provided through the UK Government's Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP).

Given the current political uncertainty in the occupied Palestinian territories we are reviewing how we can best support the peace process and economic development.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he will reply to question number 42471 tabled by the hon. Member for Cotswold. [46368]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member for Cotswold to the response I gave on 30 January 2006, Official Report, columns 13–14W.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

0870 Numbers

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 8 November 2005, Official Report, column 291W, on 0870 numbers, what contractual arrangements his Department has for the provision of non-profit making 0870 lines. [37643]

Alun Michael: Cable and Wireless provide the 0870 lines deployed directly by the Department of Trade and Industry. Under current arrangements the threshold for revenue to return to the Department is set at 359,999 call minutes per year for each 0870 line. The low volume of calls on the 0870 lines means that these thresholds have not been reached.

These services can be terminated with three months notice. Other 0870 lines are supplied by BT and managed by sub-contractors through two DTI funded contracts providing support for UK bidders into the EU's sixth Framework Programme for RTD. These BT lines attracted set up charges of up to £250 per number and continue to attract rental charges of £200 per annum, which is absorbed into the overall cost of the contracts. Calls to these numbers are charged at national rate, so are not revenue earning for either DTI or our contractors. The two contracts are due to run until the end of 2006.

Administrative Costs

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the administrative costs were of each agency for which he has responsibility in the last year for which figures are available; what the total of such costs was in that year; and whether the costs are regarded for the purposes of public expenditure statistical analyses as (a) identifiable and (b) non-identifiable. [39854]

Alan Johnson: Administrative costs (net) for the Department's Agencies for 2004–05 are:

	£000s
Small Business Service (SBS)	18,036
Employment Tribunals Service (ETS)	27,593
Insolvency Service (INSS)	71
National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML)	(108)

The figures for SBS and ETS are taken from their annual reports and resource accounts (HC 371 and HC 180 respectively). The figures for INSS and NWML are taken from the provisional departmental administration costs outturns disclosed in the most recent "Public Expenditure" White Paper (CMD 6639) as their net administration costs are not readily identifiable from their resource accounts.

For the purposes of the country and regional analysis exercise, from which data is disclosed in chapter 8 of the annual public expenditure statistical analyses, the costs of the Employment Tribunals Service are regarded as identifiable, those of the Insolvency Service, and National Weights and Measures Laboratory as non-identifiable.

Christmas Cards

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the cost to his Department of sending Christmas cards in 2005. [45919]

Alan Johnson: In 2005, my Department ran an internal competition for children of DTI employees to design the official corporate Christmas card. This resulted in only minimal costs for artwork to clean up and scan the winning design.

Total costs for printing 4,500 cards was therefore £1,575.

Specific costs for postage are not accessible (these cards are posted along with regular DTI mail). However, based on second class postage and the amount of cards printed:

21p per letter x 4,500 cards printed: £945

Overall costs are therefore estimated at £2,520.

All expenditure incurred was made in accordance with departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, as set out in Government Accounting.

Consultants/Specialists

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much the Department spent on (a) marketing consultants and (b) employment and recruitment specialists in each year since 1997. [41909]

Alan Johnson: The information on these categories of expenditure for 2003–04 (actual), 2004–05 (actual) and 2005–06 (spend to date), is as follows.

Marketing consultants
2003–04	14,742,791
2004–05	12,311,497
2005–06	7,792,880
Employment recruitment consultants
2003–04	1,087,321
2004–05	1,239,444
2005–06	432,935

Information for years pre 2003–04 is not readily available on a centralised basis and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, of 26 October 2005 on behalf of Lesley Clarke. [38119]

Alan Johnson: I apologise to my right hon. Friend for the delay in responding. The issues raised cover the responsibilities of two other departments and officials are collating a response with contributions from those departments. I hope to respond in the near future.

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State will respond to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 9 November 2005. [41976]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 16 January 2006]: The letter from the hon. Member has been delayed by an administrative error, for which I apologise. A response will be sent shortly.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will answer the letter to him dated 13 December 2005 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mrs J. Lyth. [45407]

Alan Johnson: I apologise for the delay in responding to this letter. I intend to reply in the next few days.

Departmental Conferences

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) guidelines and (b) criteria are used in his Department for the production and purchase of branded materials for distribution at conferences held in the Department. [45663]

Alan Johnson: My Department produces publicity materials in accordance with its branding rules. These set out how DTI's communications should appear visually.

The production and purchase of branded materials are usually considered on a case-by-case basis—depending on the purpose and objectives of a conference. It should be noted that DTI complies with conventions on government communications, which include ensuring that they are conducted in an economic and appropriate way and that the costs are justifiable as expenditure of public funds.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to collect figures for the cost of branded goods commissioned for use by his Department; and if he will record these costs in his Department's annual accounts. [45664]

Alan Johnson: Within the DTI, financial expenditure is the devolved responsibility of individual directorates. Our policies surrounding the recording of expenditure and publishing in our annual reports conforms to Government accounting requirements.

I have not made it policy to collect figures on items as specific as branded goods as these are generally an ad-hoc expense that is incurred for activities such as large exhibitions/conferences, not for standard DTI business. It should be noted that the DTI complies with conventions on Government communications which include ensuring that they are conducted in an economic and appropriate way and that the costs are justifiable as expenditure of public funds.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are taken by his Department to support staff with mental ill-health. [36268]

Alan Johnson: The DTI provides medical and other advice, through their Occupational Health Service and through disability management advisers and specialist assessors where appropriate, to identify the appropriate support for employees with medical conditions, including mental ill-health.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many disciplinary actions against civil servants employed in his Department (a) were commenced and (b) resulted in a sanction being applied in each of the last five years. [43487]

Alan Johnson: The information is as follows:

	Disciplinary actions commenced	Formal sanctions applied
2001	20	20
2002	19	16
2003	61	53
2004	81	70
2005	93	76

The Department has procedures in place to deal with misconduct and poor behaviour. These are developed in consultation with the trade unions and are available to all staff, either on the Department's intranet or in hard copy.

Energy Supplies

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions he has met officials of the National Union of Mineworkers and British local producers to discuss the future of energy supplies in the UK in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [47008]

Malcolm Wicks: Since becoming Minister for Energy I have once met officials of the National Union of Mineworkers. I have had three other meetings with UK coal producers and other mining union representatives.

Identity Fraud

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what training his Department has provided for (a) front desk and (b) administrative staff in relation to identity fraud. [41284]

Alan Johnson: The Department contracts with a service provider for front desk and guarding services. It is a requirement of the contract for the service provider to ensure that their staff are fully trained to carry out their role. The training incorporates all those skills needed to provide counter measures against unauthorised access or threat to the departmental assets.

Other staff are trained to carry out a number of checks as part of the normal departmental recruitment procedures. These checks aim to positively establish identity and obtain background information on the subject by taking up references.

Marine Bill

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the written answer of 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1767W, on the Marine Bill, what meetings his Department held with (a) other Government Departments, (b) industry representatives and (c) other stakeholders; and when the meetings took place. [47530]

Malcolm Wicks: The possibility of a Marine Bill has been under consideration for some time and has arisen in discussion at numerous meetings at which DTI has been represented, particularly in connection with offshore energy. It has been discussed at regular meetings of groups which bring together the marine renewables industry and offshore oil and gas industries with other stakeholders including fishing interests, shipping and ports groups and environmental non-governmental organisations. DTI officials are also members of Defra's inter-departmental Marine Bill steering group.

Office Equipment

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) personal computers, (b) laptops, (c) servers, (d) printers, (e) scanners, (f) photocopiers and (g) fax machines (i) his Department and (ii) each (A) non-departmental public body, (B) executive agency and (C) other public body for which his Department is responsible in (1) Scotland, (2) Wales, (3) each of the English regions and (4) Northern Ireland owned in (x) 2003-04 and (y) 2004-05. [40107]

Alan Johnson: In 2000 the Department of Trade and Industry transferred ownership of its core IT infrastructure as part of a long-term private finance initiative (PFI) agreement to a consortium led by Fujitsu. The use of IT equipment such as PCs, laptops, servers, scanners and printers is now, in the main, provided as a service through the PFI partner, Fujitsu. The use of photocopiers is also provided mainly through supplier leasing arrangements. Details of fax machines owned by the Department are shown in the following table. The chief executives of the Department's Agencies have been asked to write to the hon. Member in respect of their equipment holdings.

Pipeline (Milford Haven)

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the map of stage 1 of the liquid gas pipeline from (a) Milford Haven to Tirley and (b) Milford Haven to Felindre. [47552]

Malcolm Wicks: A copy of the map showing the route of the natural gas pipeline from Milford Haven to Aberdulais will be placed in the Libraries of the House. No application has yet been made for a pipeline from Felindre to Tilrey.

Public Relations Companies

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the public relations companies that have had contracts with (a) his Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body and (ii) executive agency for which his Department is responsible and (c) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by his Department and other such organisations since May 1997. [39093]

Alan Johnson: The following companies have been awarded public relations contracts from the DTI since 2002:

Harrison Cowley
Fishburn Hedges
GCI
Countrywide
Prowse

This information has been sought through the Central Office of Information. To collate information prior to this would exceed disproportionate costs.

Expenditure by non-departmental public bodies, executive agencies and independent statutory bodies is not held centrally, therefore to collate would exceed disproportionate costs.

Sizewell B (Waste Heat)

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with British Energy to explore the technical and economic possibilities of distributing the waste heat from Sizewell B power plant via a heat grid. [46569]

Malcolm Wicks: None.

Postgraduates

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Department is taking to (a) retain and (b) attract postgraduates in the UK work force; and what estimate he has made of the number of people with postgraduate qualifications relevant to business and industry that leave the UK to work abroad each year. [43077]

Alan Johnson: We have introduced several initiatives—we have raised Research Council-funded PhD stipends; improved professional training in PhDs; increased the average Research Council postdoctoral salary; improved training for postdoctoral researchers and introduced 1,000 new academic fellowships. A recent research report by the Higher Education Policy Institute stated that the UK gained 40 per cent. more staff than it lost over an eight-year period, from highly cited academics to post doctoral staff.

My Department does not have any specific estimates of numbers leaving the UK to work abroad. I understand the Higher Education Statistics Agency collects data on destinations of postgraduates.

TRANSPORT

Anti-terrorism Legislation (Railway Enthusiasts)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he has given to the British Transport Police on the application of anti-terrorism legislation to the activities of railway enthusiasts who choose to photograph trains and stations. [42286]

Derek Twigg: The Department has not issued any such guidance to the British Transport Police (BTP). Railway enthusiasts are frequently present on the rail infrastructure, are knowledgeable about railway operations and know what is or is not usual. They are in a good position to report any suspicious activity to the police and BTP actively encourage them, like any other user of rail services and stations, to do so.

BTP officers would not normally use powers under Section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000 to stop and search rail enthusiasts. However, in certain circumstances, photographing and videoing of railway infrastructure could be one possible indication of hostile surveillance and officers may judge it necessary to question, and possibly search, an individual. In this context, rail enthusiasts are not treated any differently from any other individual.

Cycling

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on cycling safety in each of the last 20 years. [48012]

Dr. Ladyman: Most spending on cycle safety in England is undertaken by local highway authorities. This includes capital spending on infrastructure schemes such as cycle lanes, which may have traffic management as well as safety benefits. It also includes revenue spending on cycle training, other educational initiatives and local cycle safety publicity. Since 2001–02, capital spending by English authorities outside London has been recorded through the local transport plan system, but this was not recorded centrally for earlier years. Revenue spending on road safety comes from local authorities' own resources and is not recorded centrally.

The Department for Transport also produces cycle safety publicity and resources at national level. Figures for annual spending are only available as far back as 2002–03. Our road safety challenge grant scheme, which has been running since 2002–03, has funded a number of projects that are wholly or partly to improve cycle safety. Figures for spending on cycle safety projects under previous grant schemes are not available. The Department also includes projects on cycle safety in its road safety research programme, though figures are available only from 1999–2000.

The Department has also from time to time funded various schemes to promote cycling, including infrastructure, facilities and training, which will have included safety benefits. From 2005–06, this role has been taken on by Cycling England, which now receives £5 million per year from the Department, to spend on a range of infrastructure, training and publicity measures.

Available figures are shown in the following table. These may include amounts sent on cycling infrastructure and facilities that was not entirely safety-related and amounts spent on road safety publicity and education that was not entirely cycling related. These figures do not include spending on infrastructure, facilities, education and publicity that had wider road safety benefits for all road users, including cyclists. No figures are available for earlier years.

Buses

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which local authorities have introduced reduced bus fare schemes for people under 16 years since 1997. [47039]

Ms Buck: There was no change in the coverage of reduced bus fare schemes between 1997 and 2001. In a number of cases, newly-created unitary authorities introduced reduced bus fare schemes similar to those that existed before the authority was created. No information is available for years since 2001. Free local bus travel for people under the age of 16 was introduced in London in September 2005, for travel on Transport for London's bus network. This replaced a flat fare scheme.

Marine Oil Pollution

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps have been taken to prevent ships at sea spilling oil since the Sea Empress oil spill; and what further steps he plans to take. [47173]

Dr. Ladyman: The UK Government have played a key role, internationally, regionally and nationally, in developing many measures to prevent, or mitigate the consequences of, oil spills from ships during the 10 years since the Sea Empress oil spill in February 1996. The most significant measures are as follows:

In 1994, recognising the value of tugs in preventing groundings and other incidents, the UK introduced Emergency Towing Vessels (ETVs) on a trial basis. Initially ETVs were stationed at Dover and Stornoway for the winter months only. After further review, the number of ETVs was increased to four—stationed at Dover, Stornoway, the Fair Isle Channel, and in the South West approaches—and since October 2001 all four ETVs have been on station all year round.

The UK participated fully in the adoption in 1996 of the Hazardous and Noxious Substances Convention which will provide compensation cover similar to the international oil pollution compensation regime but for other oils and chemicals, and also for explosion, death or injury from such products.

In 1997 the UK co-ordinated an EU member states' initiative at the IMO to have the whole of the North Sea, and all waters around the UK and Ireland, declared a special area for the purposes of protecting those waters from operational discharges of oil from shipping.

The UK Maritime and Coastguard Agency has a dedicated Enforcement Unit. In 1997, legislation was passed to enable magistrates to impose a fine of up to £250,000 on either the master or the ship-owner for an oil pollution offence; this is the highest fine for any offence in a magistrates court.

In 2000, following a wide-ranging review, the UK published a revised "National Contingency Plan for Marine Pollution from Shipping and Offshore Installations", setting out how the relevant agencies and authorities in the UK will respond to such incidents. The UK has also created the role of the Secretary of State's Representative for Maritime Salvage and Intervention (SOSREP). On behalf of the Secretary of State, SOSREP has the power to oversee, control and—if necessary—intervene in salvage operations within UK waters involving vessels or fixed platforms where there is a significant risk of pollution. To reduce the risk of pollution of our seas and coasts, SOSREP can direct vessels which are in difficulties to a suitable place of refuge. The powers of direction invested in SOSREP are extensive, and are called into play when he believes that the public interest is not being adequately protected. The SOSREP role has proved very successful, as well as being an international first for the UK.

In 2000 the UK initiated action at the IMO to increase the limit of compensation under the 1992 CLC/Fund regime by a further 50 per cent. to £177 million, with effect from 1 November 2003.

In 2001, along with six other states, the UK pressed for a world-wide initiative to create a Supplementary Fund to the 1992 CLC/Fund to provide further substantial compensation for the most serious oil spills.

The UK was one of the countries, which developed the Bunkers Convention 2001, which establishes a liability regime for pollution from ships' fuel oils.

The UK played a leading role in the EU and the IMO to secure international agreement to accelerate the phasing out of single hull oil tankers. Double hulls can provide additional protection against spillage in the event of collisions and groundings.

The UK played an active part in the work leading to the development of the EC Vessel traffic monitoring and information system Directive, which covers reporting requirements on ships with dangerous cargoes, the installation of Voyage Data Recorders on ships, the installation of Automatic Identification Systems (AIS) on ships and the establishment of shore-based stations to receive AIS5 information; exchange of vessel traffic information; places of refuge; and measures for shore authorities to take in bad weather conditions. The UK implemented the Directive in national law in 2005.

The UK played a leading role in the IMO in achieving the designation of the Western European Particularly Sensitive Sea Area (PSSA), which includes a substantial proportion of the UK's seas and coasts. The PSSA came into effect on 1 July 2005. The protective measure for the PSSA is a mandatory reporting system. The reporting system applies to all tankers of more than 600 deadweight tonnes (dwt) carrying heavy grades of oil.

As regards further steps:

The Merchant Shipping (Pollution) Bill is currently going through Parliament which will enable the UK to ratify and implement the Supplementary Fund Protocol to the Fund Convention, thereby increasing the amount of compensation available for any one incident to some £621 million.

In addition, work on vessel routeing and traffic management measures has progressed to take account of wider developments in UK policy on the sustainable use of the marine environment, such as the growth in offshore renewable energy, the Government's commitment to introducing a Marine Bill, developments in thinking on marine spatial planning and advances in e-navigation technology. As part of this process, considerable work has gone into the identification of Marine Environmental High Risk Areas and an announcement will be made shortly.

Multi-modal Studies

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the schemes which arose as an outcome of multi-modal studies which have been awarded investment by his Department, broken down by (a) road construction and (b) public transport schemes and what (i) the amount awarded and (ii) the location of each scheme was in each case. [42712]

Dr. Ladyman: The Multi-Modal Studies were strategic transport studies which developed recommendations for implementation over the short, medium and longer term up to 2031. Many of the schemes recommended required further detailed development and appraisal work before being ready for implementation. In our responses to the Multi-Modal Studies we set out the way in which we wished to see the study recommendations taken forward by the relevant delivery agencies.

The schemes recommended by the Multi-Modal Studies which have reached the stage of programme entry or equivalent with agreed funding allocations are listed in the following tables. A number of other schemes are continuing to be prepared for a decision on programme entry by the respective delivery agencies.

Safety Camera Partnerships

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport to which elected bodies the Safety Camera Partnerships are accountable in two-tier local government areas. [47896]

Dr. Ladyman: Safety Camera Partnerships are comprised of representatives from local authorities, the police, the Highways Agency and the magistrates courts and optional representatives from the Crown Prosecution Service, national health service trusts and the health authority.

Safety Camera Partnerships are not however a legal entity, and they complement, not replace, existing local authority and police statutory responsibilities in respect of road safety. Safety Camera Partnerships are not therefore directly accountable to any elected bodies. However each member of the partnership does remain locally accountable to its parent body.

Schools (Road Safety)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has allocated funding to local authorities for road safety initiatives outside schools since May 2002. [44670]

Ms Buck: The Department is funding a number of local authority initiatives which will improve road safety for children, including the "Kerbcraft" child pedestrian training programme and "travelling to school" project which we support jointly with DfES. Mainstream funding for all transport improvements, including road safety schemes, is allocated to local authorities through the Local Transport Plan system.

Senior Citizen Rail Travel

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received in support of free senior citizen rail travel; and what his response was. [44213]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport ensures that all train operators participate in the Senior Railcard scheme which gives discounts on train travel for people over 60. Additional concessions for senior citizens may be proposed and funded by local authorities, such as the Greater London Freedom pass scheme funded by the Greater London Authority. The Department has received no recent representations proposing free travel for senior citizens.

Thameslink 2000

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the timetable is for taking decisions on the selection of stations to be improved through platform extensions on the Midland branch of the Thameslink 2000 line. [46908]

Derek Twigg: The various applications which Network Rail have made in respect of the Thameslink 2000 project include their proposals to extend a number of platforms at stations along the Midland branch of the proposed Thameslink route to accommodate trains of 12 car length.

The public inquiry into the Thameslink 2000 project was re-opened between 6 September and 7 December 2005, following the submission of fresh applications by Network Rail to address deficiencies in the scheme identified by the original inquiry.

The inspector is currently preparing his report on the re-opened inquiry for submission to the Secretary of State for Transport and the Deputy Prime Minister, who are jointly and severally responsible for determining the various consent applications required to implement the project. We expect to receive the inspector's report in March.

We will consider on a case by case basis the merits of extending the platforms to accommodate trains of 12 car length at other stations along the Midland branch that were not included in the submitted applications.

Tram Systems

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the tram systems (a) operating and (b) being developed. [48122]

Derek Twigg: The following light rail systems are currently operating:

Tyne and Wear Metro
Docklands Light Railway (DLR)
Manchester Metrolink
Sheffield Supertram
Midland Metro

Croydon Tramlink

Nottingham Express Transit (NET)

Blackpool Corporation Tramway

I refer the hon. Member to my answer on 24 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1992–1993W, concerning those which are being developed.

Transport (Scotland)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what responsibilities he has for the provision of transport in Scotland. [44667]

Mr. Darling: I continue to have responsibility for the following reserved matters in the field of transport in Scotland:

transport security

transport safety and regulation, including the regulation of air transport and shipping, marine and air safety the provision and regulation of railway services including rail safety rail heritage

marine, air and rail accident prevention and investigation

most aspects of road traffic regulation, including driver and vehicle licensing and testing, road signing, vehicle standards, general speed limits some aspects of road safety technical standards relating to the transport of disabled persons

In the case of railways, the provision of services is a reserved matter but the Scottish Ministers exercise certain devolved executive functions.

The UK Government continues to lead on EU and international negotiations since international relations are reserved.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria an individual from another EU country must meet to be entitled to (a) jobseeker's allowance and (b) housing benefit. [45323]

Mr. Plaskitt: In order to receive income-related benefits a claimant must both have a right to reside in, and be habitually resident in the Common Travel Area. The benefits affected by the Habitual Residence Test are: income support; jobseeker's allowance (income based); pension credit; housing benefit; and council tax benefit. The Common Travel Area comprises the United Kingdom, Republic of Ireland, Channel Islands and the Isle of Man.

The Habitual Residence Test applies to all claimants, including British citizens, who have lived in this country for two years or less. Claimants who do not satisfy the Habitual Residence Test are classed as people from abroad and are not eligible for these benefits.

Some groups of people who have the right to reside in UK are automatically treated as habitually resident in the UK. These include European Economic Area nationals who are classed as workers under European Community law.

Housing Benefit

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost of abolishing the two highest rates of non-dependent deduction on housing benefit. [38103]

Mr. Plaskitt: The estimated cost of abolishing the highest two rates for non-dependant deductions is approximately £10 million a year.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost of raising the standard rate of housing benefit and council tax benefit earned income disregards from £5 per week to £10 per week. [38104]

Mr. Plaskitt: The estimated cost of raising the standard rate of earnings disregard in housing benefit and council tax benefit from £5 to £10 is £20 million a year.

Lone Parents

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many lone parents whose youngest child is aged between 11 and 16 years are caring for a child who is sick or disabled. [48300]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested. Figures are only available for those receiving income support.

As at August 2005, there were 15,000 lone parents in receipt of income support, whose youngest child was aged between 11 and 16 years, and whose benefit included a disabled child premium.

Women Pensioners

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many women in the City of Newcastle were aged over 60 years in (a) 1995, (b) 2000 and (c) 2005; and how many women were receiving (i) a full basic state pension, (ii) a part basic state pension of 50 per cent. of the full pension and (iii) a part basic state pension of less than 50 per cent. of the full pension in each year. [38293]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 19 December 2005]: Information that is available is in the following table.

	2000	2005 (see note 6)
Women aged over 60 years in City of Newcastle	31,200	30,500
Number of women receiving a full basic state pension in City of Newcastle	17,600	15,500
Number of women receiving more than 50 per cent. but less than 99 per cent. of the full basic state pension in City of Newcastle	11,800	11,500
Number of women receiving less than 50 per cent. of the full basic state pension in City of Newcastle	1,500	800

Notes:

1. Detailed geographical information on the state pension is not available for 1995.
2. Data is taken from 5 per cent. extract of PSCS as at 31 March 2000 and 2005, therefore figures are subject to a degree of sampling variation. They are also adjusted to be consistent with the overall February caseload from the WPLS.
3. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.

4. A full basic state pension as at 31 March 2005 was £79.60.

5. A full basic state pension as at 31 March 2000 was £66.75.

6. The latest available population figures from ONS are mid year 2004.

7. The figures supplied are based on entitlements to all categories of state pension. A full basic state pension is paid to those who fully satisfy the contribution conditions either in their own right or where applicable, on the basis of their late or former spouse's contributions.

CABINET OFFICE

Civil Servants

Kate Hoey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans the Government have to increase the London allowance of civil servants; and if he will make a statement. [46414]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Departments and agencies have delegated authority to determine pay arrangements for their own staff outside the senior civil service that are tailored to meet their business needs. It is therefore a matter for individual departments and agencies to determine what levels of pay, including any London allowances, are appropriate to recruit, retain and motivate their own staff, taking into account particular labour market pressures. Departments and agencies may also decide, on the basis of business need, to pay higher rates of pay or allowances to members of their senior civil service working within the M25.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what costs were incurred by his Department as a result of sending civil servants on overseas visits in each of the last 10 years. [46290]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information provided could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

All official travel in the Department is undertaken strictly in accordance with the rules contained in the Cabinet Office management code.

Departmental Expenditure

Martin Horwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much the Cabinet Office and its agencies have spent on (a) the design and production of new logos and (b) employing external (i) public relations and (ii) graphic design agencies in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [33200]

Mr. Jim Murphy [pursuant to the reply, 12 December 2005, Official Report, c. 1682W]: I regret that the data relating to the expenditure on public relations by the Better Regulation Task Force provided in lines 10 to 13 of the table of the previous response was incorrect.

The correct information should read as follows.

	Amount (£)
2004–05
Public Relations support for the Better Regulation Taskforce (BRTF)	58,900.00
2005–06
Public Relations support for the Better Regulation Taskforce (BRTF)	58,153.67

Government Communications

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress has been made on the implementation of the Phillis review recommendations on restructuring Government communications. [47195]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Good progress has been made and all the Phillis review recommendations on restructuring have been implemented.

The first permanent secretary, Government communication, Howell James, took up post in July 2004 and is head of profession for all Government communicators. He is supported by a small, strategic team within the Cabinet Office which concentrates on cross-Government co-ordination, strategic communication, standards and professional development.

At Number 10, as Phillis recommended, the Prime Minister is supported by two key appointments; a director of communications, a special adviser without executive powers, and an official spokesman, a senior civil servant who reports to the permanent secretary.

In January 2005 a new network, the Government Communications Network (GCN) was set up to replace the Government Information and Communication Service. In line with Phillis' recommendations the GCN includes all those who work in communication across Government whatever their area of expertise, for example press, marketing, internal communications, and new media.

As Phillis recommended the permanent secretary also provides advice to Departments on communication structures and promotes the exchange of communication best-practice across Government.

The Government News Network, which handles regional communications on behalf of a number of Government customers, has moved to the Central Office of Information to enable delivery of a more strategic and co-ordinated communications function in the regions.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much was spent on the Central Office of Information in each year since 1996–97; and how much the estimated spend is for 2005–06. [47196]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Central Office of Information running costs for each year since 1996–97 are shown in the following table.

	Running costs (£ million)
1996–97	25.9
1997–98	15.2
1998–99	16.0
1999–2000	17.9

	Running costs (£ million)
2000–01	20.8
2001–02	23.5
2002–03	25.5
2003–04	22.9
2004–05	25.8

The figure for 1996–97 includes £8.5 million of costs resulting from the implementation of the COI quinquennial review. Excluding these one-off costs, running costs in the year represented 13.8 per cent. of turnover. For 2004–05, running costs represented 7.8 per cent. of turnover.

Final figures for 2005–06 are not yet available, but they will include the additional costs for the Government News Network. The results for the current year will be published in mid-July 2006.

IT Failures

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what computerisation or IT failures have occurred in projects managed by the Cabinet Office in each year since 1997; what the contracted cost of the project was in each case; and what estimate he has made of the direct and indirect costs of failure in each case. [14369]

Mr. Jim Murphy [pursuant to the reply, 5 October 2005, Official Report, c. 773W]: I regret the figure quoted in relation to the original contract value of the contract with ITNET of £84 million in the final paragraph was incorrect.

The final paragraph should read as follows:

"The second IT failure was with the data centre and hosting management service to be provided by ITNET whose contract was terminated in 2004. The original contract value was £83 million. A total of £5 million was paid up to the point of termination of the contract."

Public Appointments (Political Impartiality)

Jim Dowd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what measures are in place to ensure the political impartiality of chief executives of non-departmental public bodies. [47153]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Cabinet Office guidance for non departmental public bodies requires public bodies to adopt a code of conduct for their staff which should include the requirement for staff to conduct themselves with impartiality, integrity and honesty.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

BBC World Service

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department plans to review the BBC World Service's allocation of grant in aid. [47294]

Mr. Straw: Grant in aid for BBC World Service forms part of the overall settlement allocated to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office by HM Treasury. The current financial settlement runs until April 2008. As with all elements of Government spending, the funding of BBC World Service will be reviewed in 2006–07 as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Convention against Torture

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether it is the Government's policy to receive intelligence information from Governments who (a) have not (i) signed and (ii) ratified the UN Convention against Torture, (b) have signed the Convention but maintain reservations, (c) have not signed the Optional Protocol on monitoring and (d) employ definitions of torture in practice narrower than the terms of the UN Convention; [48240]

(2) whether it is the Government's policy to make an assessment of the risk that intelligence received by the security services from other countries was obtained by torture. [48293]

Dr. Howells: The Government's position on torture is clear. The UK condemns unreservedly the use of torture. We work hard with our international partners to eradicate this abhorrent practice.

It is not the Government's policy to comment on intelligence matters.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the security situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo; and if he will make a statement. [47542]

Ian Pearson: Pockets of instability persist in the east of the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC). In Ituri and the Kivus, the security situation remains fragile. Elements of the DRC army have fought each other, and civilians continue to suffer abuses by armed groups.

Despite the UN peacekeeping mission (MONUC)'s operations to disarm Ituri militias and to disrupt the activities of foreign armed groups, these militia groups continue to persecute civilians. In UN Security Council Resolution 1653, the international community condemned the activities of these groups, and pledged its support for MONUC's robust approach to protecting civilians and tackling these militia. We continue to urge regional Governments to work together to disarm these groups.

EU Gendarmerie Force

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the duties are of the EU Gendarmerie Force. [47913]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The European Gendarmerie Force is a multinational force from five countries (France, Spain, Italy, Portugal, and the Netherlands). It is a force which is available to a number of organisations, including the EU, NATO, the UN or ad hoc coalitions. It is not an EU body. Its duties will be decided by the participating nations.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the estimated annual cost is of the EU Gendarmerie Force launched at Vicenza on 19 January. [47914]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We do not know of any estimated annual cost of the European Gendarmerie Force. Costs would be a matter for the participating nations.

EU Travel Bans

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) UK nationals and (b) individuals with listed UK addresses are subject to EU travel bans. [46783]

Dr. Howells: The EU has imposed travel bans with respect to Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burma, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Moldova, Serbia and Montenegro, Uzbekistan and Zimbabwe.

These are enforced by checking the names and dates of birth of visa applicants against a consolidated 'warnings list', which includes all the data from the travel ban lists. Positive matches are referred for further investigation. Although none of the targeted individuals are listed as having British addresses or nationality, the information contained on the list itself is not sufficient to say that none do.

Extraordinary Rendition

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Governments of (a) Poland and (b) Romania on the practice of extraordinary rendition; and if he will make a statement. [48294]

Dr. Howells: Reports of extraordinary rendition were raised at the European Union General Affairs and External Relations Council on 21 November 2005, which was attended by Polish and Romanian Ministers. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary undertook, as presidency of the EU, to write to the US Secretary of State about these reports. Dr. Rice responded with a detailed statement on 5 December 2005. The issue was also discussed at a dinner of EU and NATO Foreign Ministers on 7 December 2005 in Brussels, which was attended by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary.

Human Rights

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he supports the proposal to establish a European Union agency to monitor the observance of human rights in Europe; and if he will make a statement. [48295]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: As agreed at the European Council of December 2003, the proposed European Fundamental Rights Agency will extend the mandate of the existing European Monitoring Centre on Racism and Xenophobia. It will provide assistance and expertise in human rights issues to EU institutions and member states when they are implementing Community law. The Government are in favour of an agency with a well-defined remit and work objectives that do not duplicate the work of existing bodies, particularly the Council of Europe.

Kazakhstan

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Kazakhstan following international monitors' criticism of the presidential elections held in December 2005. [47295]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The UK issued an EU Presidency statement on 5 December supporting the preliminary report of the OSCE's Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights (ODIHR) International Observation Mission on the 4 December elections. While noting that there had been some improvements in the administration of the elections in the pre-election period and that voting on the day was conducted in a generally calm and peaceful atmosphere, the report concluded that the elections had failed to meet a number of OSCE commitments and other international standards for democratic elections. The UK offered the EU's support to Kazakhstan in fulfilling its international commitments in this regard. A further EU statement was issued under the UK's Presidency on 15 December which reiterated these points and looked forward to the final ODIHR report and the opportunity to study its recommendations. It noted Foreign Minister Tokaev's statement on 5 December in which he expressed readiness to continue cooperation with ODIHR.

In a letter to President Nazarbayev of 23 December, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister urged Kazakhstan to address concerns raised about areas in which it has not yet fully met the standards of the OSCE. He noted that the UK stood ready to support Kazakhstan in undertaking future reform in order to meet these standards. Senior officials in London have delivered similar messages on a regular basis to the Kazakh ambassador in London. Our new ambassador, Paul Brummell, also talked over these issues at his first meeting with Foreign Minister Tokaev on 9 January. We will continue to discuss both bilaterally and with our EU partners, the relevant issues as appropriate in our contacts at all levels with the Kazakh authorities.

Libya

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the human rights situation in Libya; and if he will make a statement. [47991]

Dr. Howells: The Government remains concerned about the human rights situation in Libya. The Government welcomes recent developments such as: the opening of a dialogue between the Libyan authorities and groups like Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch; the progress made in the joint programme, financed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Global Opportunities Fund, between the Libyan Ministry of Justice and the International Centre for Prison Studies on prison management; the abolition of the Revolutionary Courts; and the current debate in the Basic People's Congresses on the possible abolition or further restriction of the death penalty.

The Government will continue to work with the Libyan authorities to encourage them to continue to move towards internationally accepted standards on human rights and the rule of law.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent evidence he has received that the Libyan security services are practising torture on prisoners. [47992]

Dr. Howells: The Government are aware of claims that the Libyan security services have practised torture on prisoners. The Government condemns the use of torture and works with international partners to eradicate this abhorrent practice.

The Government will continue to work with the Libyan authorities, as they have in the area of prison management, to encourage them to continue to move towards internationally accepted standards on human rights and the rule of law.

Palestinian Authority

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had about possible changes to the UK's relationship with the Palestinian Authority after the Palestinian elections; and if he will make a statement. [46316]

Dr. Howells: The UK is clear that democracy means accepting the results of elections, provided they are free and fair. The Palestinian Legislative Council elections are not an exception to this principle. We look forward to Palestinian Authority President Abu Mazen appointing a Government committed to his policy of one gun, one authority, and to the vision set out in the Roadmap of two states, Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security.

Hamas now has a choice to make between the path of democracy and the path of violence. The onus is on Hamas to change, in particular their approach to Israel and their approach to violence. We are watching developments closely.

Rafik Hariri

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the United Nations investigation into the assassination of former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri; and if he will make a statement. [47543]

Dr. Howells: The Government welcomes the important contribution that the United Nations International Independent Investigation Commission (UNIIIC) has made, since it was mandated by the adoption of UN Security Council resolution (UNSCR) 1595 of 7 April 2005, towards bringing those responsible for the assassination of former Lebanese Prime Minister Hariri to justice.

The UN Secretary-General's report of 19 October 2005 highlighted that Syria's level of co-operation with the UNIIIC had been unacceptable. UNSCR 1636, unanimously adopted on 31 October 2005, underlined the seriousness with which the international community viewed Syria's non-co-operation. As a result of our continuing concerns about the lack of Syrian co-operation, we co-sponsored UNSCR 1644, adopted on 15 December 2005, which underscores Syria's obligation to co-operate fully and unconditionally with the UNIIIC.

We welcome the recent appointment of Serge Brammertz to succeed Detlev Mehlis at the head of the UN investigation, and we look forward to discussing his next report with Security Council Partners.

UK Agencies

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the UK agencies whose powers are circumscribed by similar agencies operating at EU level. [48271]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: It would incur disproportionate cost to determine accurately and comprehensively what levels of cooperation exist between the 18 European Community and over 100 UK agencies and which, if any, of the latters' powers are circumscribed by the former.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Behaviour and Truancy Partnerships

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the roll out of secondary school behaviour and truancy partnerships in Gravesham will begin. [43281]

Jacqui Smith: All secondary schools in Gravesham should be working in partnership to improve behaviour and tackle persistent truancy by September 2007. Schools in Gravesham already work closely together, and local authority officers are due to meet secondary heads and primary representatives in February 2006 to discuss further development of the partnership.

Boarding Schools

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to increase the number of boarding school places in the maintained sector. [47125]

Jacqui Smith: The new target capital funding arrangements for the first time enabled maintained boarding schools to bid for funding to undertake building projects to increase boarding places; make essential improvements; or undertake significant remedial or enhancement work to boarding accommodation. Three projects were approved which will result in an extra 40 boarding places.

In addition, under the expansion of successful and popular secondary schools programme, we have received applications from two boarding schools. Subject to local decisions, these applications could result in an additional 182 boarding places in the next five to seven years.

Carers

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent research her Department has carried out to estimate (a) the number of school age young carers and (b) the average number of hours per week that such carers spend on their caring roles. [44306]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 20 January 2006]: The Department has not carried out research to estimate these figures. Data on young carers is available from the 2001 Census of Population.

The Census established that there were about 150,000 children and young people under 18 in England and Wales who provided some form of care for family members. A full breakdown of the age and numbers of young carers by the number of hours a week when they provided care can be found in the following table.

Age and number of young carers in England and Wales, by hours caring per week (2001 Census)

	1–19 hours	20–49 hours	50+ hours	Total number	Total (percentage)

Source
Becker (2004)

The table shows that 84 per cent. of young carers spend between one and 19 hours in their caring role and 7 per cent. spend over 50 hours caring per week. Some of these young carers are as young as 5–7 years old.

Further information on this topic can be found in Young Carers in the UK: The 2004 Report published by Carers UK. This is the third survey of young carers who are being supported by specialist young carers' projects in the UK http://www.carersuk.org/Policyandpractice/Research/YounQcarersReport2004.pdf. A merged reply to three written parliamentary questions (44305, 44307 and 44132) given on 20 January 2006 contains further information on the issue of young carers.

Civil Servants

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many disciplinary actions against civil servants employed in her Department (a) were commenced and (b) resulted in a sanction being applied in each of the last five years. [43496]

Maria Eagle: A sanction can include any or all of the following (although the list is not exhaustive): verbal warning; written warning; a bar on promotion; the withholding of pay increases and/or bonus payments; suspension from duty with loss of pay; downgrading or dismissal. The following table shows data for the last five years:

	Disciplinary actions	Sanctions applied
2001	35	26
2002	11	11
2003	7	7
2004	7	7
2005	11	7

Communication Aid Project

Roger Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to ensure continuing support for recipients of communication equipment under the Communication Aid Project. [47912]

Maria Eagle: Since it went live in April 2002, the Communication Aids Project has assisted some 4,000 children of school age experiencing significant difficulty in communicating with those around them. The present tranche of funding comes to an end in March 2006 and officials are exploring with the British Educational Communications and Technology Agency how the momentum generated by the project might be maintained.

Contact Orders

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children have been killed during contact visits after contact orders were granted to parents who were known to be violent in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [44662]

Maria Eagle: The Government do not collect statistics on how many children have been killed during contact visits after contact orders were granted to parents who were known to be violent.

The Government's guidance "Working Together to Safeguard Children" (1999) sets out that in any case where a child dies and abuse or neglect is known or suspected to be a factor in the child's death, the case should be examined through a local serious case review. The Government commission national reports which draw out the lessons to be learned from these reviews.

We plan to strengthen systems for reviewing child deaths by giving the new local safeguarding children boards a function of collecting and analysing information about each child death. This is with a view to identifying any case giving rise to the need for a serious case review, any matters of concern affecting the safety and welfare of children in the local area, and any wider public health or safety concerns arising from a particular death or from a pattern of deaths in that area. We plan to trial these arrangements between 2006 and 2008.

Corby Community College

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on Corby Community college in Northamptonshire and the measures the school is taking to raise its standards. [47378]

Jacqui Smith: It is the intention that Corby Community college in Northamptonshire will be replaced by Corby academy. The project, which is reaching the end of a detailed feasibility study will provide 1250 11–18 places. It is sponsored by Brooke Weston City Technology college, the Garfield Weston Foundation, and a local developer, Corby Developments Ltd. All pupils attending Corby Community college will have a right to a place at the academy, which offers the opportunity to take improvements at the College to a new level.

Correspondence

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will respond to the letters of 31 October and 25 November 2005 from the hon. Member for West Derbyshire, on teachers' ineligibility for child care vouchers. [45776]

Jacqui Smith: I replied to the right hon. Member's letter on 27 January.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will respond to the letters of 5 October and 25 November 2005 from the right hon. Member for West Derbyshire, on the effect of school admissions policies on rural schools. [45777]

Jacqui Smith: I replied to the right hon. Member's letter on 27 January.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will reply to the letter of 26 October 2005 from the hon. Member for St Albans concerning Mrs. Helen Bramall. [46332]

Jacqui Smith: I replied to the hon. Member's letter on 27 January.

Departmental Vehicles

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many cars are (a) owned and (b) leased by her Department; what models the cars are; what type of petrol each model requires; and what the fuel efficiency is of each model. [41361]

Maria Eagle: The following table provides a breakdown of the vehicle fleet owned by the Department for Education and Skills by model, number, type, and fuel efficiency. No vehicles are leased by the Department.

Model	Numbers	Type of fuel	Efficiency
Vauxhall Astra	12	Unleaded petrol/LPG	35.2
Vauxhall Vectra	3	Diesel	44.5
Vauxhall Zafira	3	Diesel	39.2
Ford Focus	5	Diesel	44.8
Ford Fiesta	1	Diesel	53.1
Ford Galaxy	3	Diesel	34.2
Volvo S80	2	Unleaded petrol	21.9

Drop-out Rates

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the 10 university subjects with the highest drop out rate. [39931]

Bill Rammell: The information is not held centrally.

Non-continuation rates are calculated on an institutional basis and the figures for 2002/03 entrants are available from the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) publication 'Performance Indicators in HE' at:

http://www.hesa.ac.uk/pi/0304/continuation.htm.

Education Maintenance Allowances

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people were (a) eligible for and (b) took up education maintenance allowances in (i) Barnsley and (ii) Doncaster in the last year for which figures are available. [42116]

Maria Eagle: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate Education Maintenance Allowances for the DfES and hold the information about take-up of the scheme. Mark Haysom, the council's Chief Executive, has written to my hon. Friend with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 23 January 2006:

I am writing in response to your Parliamentary Question that asked "how many people were (a) eligible for and (b) took up education maintenance allowances in (i) Barnsley and (ii) Doncaster in the last year for which figures are available?"

During the academic year 2004/05, 1,821 young people in Barnsley Local Education Authority and 2,707 young people in Doncaster Local Education Authority received one or more EMA payments.

During the academic year 2004/05, EMA was available to all 16 years olds nationally and to 17 and 18 years olds in former pilot areas (young people who are 19 are entitled to receive EMA in certain circumstances). Both Barnsley and Doncaster Local Education Authorities were former pilot areas.

In preparation for the roll-out, projections of the number of young people eligible for EMA were only made for 16 years olds. The projections are formed by applying income distributions (derived from the Family Resources Survey) and expected numbers in full-time further education to the estimated population of 16 years olds. When applied to individual localities the figures may be subject to some variation but they provide a useful estimate. The following table displays the data for Barnsley and Doncaster.

Take-Up of EMA by 16-years-olds in 2004/05

LEA	Projected number eligible	Actual Take-Up	Percentage Take-Up
Barnsley	1,250	1,062	84.96
Doncaster	1,770	1,451	81.98

This compares against a national take-up of 82% (calculated as the total number of 16 years olds who received EMA against the projected number eligible to receive payment).

I hope this information is helpful and addresses your question. If you would like further details please contact Chris Bradley at the LSC National Office on 0114 207 4512 or Christopher Bradley@lsc.gov.uk

Education Statistics (Wandsworth)

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding has been awarded to Wandsworth council to provide for new school buildings at each school in Tooting constituency since 1997; and what the sum awarded was in each case. [47752]

Jacqui Smith: Capital allocations made to the London borough of Wandsworth and schools in its area since 1997 are set out in the following table:

	£ million
1996-97	1.2
1997-98	0.9
1998-99	1.9
1999-2000	3.6
2000-01	8.0
2001-02	7.8
2002-03	13.7
2003-04	11.7
2004-05	10.4
2005-06	10.5

We expect local authorities and schools to take decisions locally on allocating funds between new buildings, improvements and repairs in accordance with priorities set out in their local asset management plan. Accordingly, records of these categories of capital expenditures are not held centrally.

Records of capital allocations are not maintained at constituency level.

Capital allocations to local authorities and schools are higher than ever before. In 2005–06 they are £5.5 billion and they are planned to increase to £6.3 billion in 2007–08, an increase from £683 million in 1996–97.

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average number of hours per week of physical education undertaken in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in Wandsworth was in 2004–05. [47753]

Jacqui Smith: Data from the annual PE, School Sport and Club Links survey is not collected in the format requested. The 2004–05 survey found that overall, 69 per cent. of 5-to-16 year olds in the 11,400 schools taking part in the survey were spending at least two hours in a typical week on high quality PE and school sport within and beyond the curriculum. This figure is 64 per cent. for primary schools and 75 per cent. for secondary schools.

In 2004–05 the results for the Southfields School Sport Partnership which covers the Wandsworth area, found that overall, 72 per cent. of pupils were participating in at least two hours of high-quality PE and out-of-hours school sport in a typical week. At the time of the survey there were 60 schools in the partnership.

Exam Results

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 2203W, on exam results, how many and what proportion of entrants to undergraduate courses leading to qualified teacher status attained (a) at least (i) 360, (ii) 300, (iii) 240, (iv) 180, (v) 120 and (b) fewer than 120 points at A level in each year since 2002–03. [40436]

Bill Rammell: The latest available information is given in the table.

'A' level points attainment for English domiciled entrants to English HE institutions who have one or more 'A' level qualifications on entry and who are aiming for the qualification of first degree with QTS[1]

	2002/03		2003/04		2004/05
'A' level points attained	Entrants	Percentage	Entrants	Percentage	Entrants	Percentage
360+	215	5	215	4	300	5
300+	670	16	770	16	950	17
240+	1,600	37	1,790	37	2,190	38
180+	2,740	64	3,040	63	3,655	64
120+	3,628	84	4,010	83	4,740	83
<120	685	16	845	17	960	17
Total known	4,315	100	4,855	100	5,700	100

[1] Figures are for students identified as studying for first degree with QTS and who have either GCE 'A' level or VCE 'A' level qualifications. The average score given is the average tariff points score based upon all 'A' level qualifications (not just the best three).

Note:
Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5 and are on a snapshot basis as at 1 December.

Fresh Start Programme

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will revise the eligibility criteria for the Fresh Start programme to include secondary schools that achieve less than a 25 per cent. rate of pupils gaining at least five A* to C GCSEs including English and mathematics. [47344]

Jacqui Smith: All applications for a school to join the Fresh Start programme are considered on their merits, having regard to the issues facing the school. In reaching decisions we look carefully at all the factors which make a school a cause for concern, including very low attainment and poor performance in the core curriculum.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools were reopened under the Fresh Start programme in each year since 1997. [47345]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is set out in the following table. The first Fresh Start school opened in September 1998.

Academic year	Number of Fresh Start schools opened
1998-99	3
1999-2000	13
2000-01	10
2001-02	3
2002-03	4
2003-04	4
2004-05	9
2005-06	4

Further Education

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will rank further education colleges in England by the correlation between funding per full-time equivalent student and all year qualification success rate. [45385]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 24 January 2006]: Qualification success rates for each college are available from the LSC website (http://benchmarkingdata.lsc.gov.uk/year8/index.cfm by downloading the file "Institution level success rates: Excel file qualification aim data").

Funding data are also available for each college on the LSC website (http://www.lsc.gov.uk/National/Documents/SubjectListing/SectorData/CollegeAccounts/default.htm).

We do not benchmark colleges by full-time equivalent student numbers, but in the light of the Foster report we are considering the development of a value for money measure which will be used to benchmark college efficiency.

General Teaching Council

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the annual renewal fee for registration with the General Teaching Council was in each year since 2000. [48135]

Jacqui Smith: Teachers were required to pay an annual registration fee to the General Teaching Council for England for the first time in 2002–03. The fee was initially set at £23 and was increased to £28 in 2003–04 and to £30 in 2004–05. The fee level was retained at £30 in 2005–06.

Headship Qualifications

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to ensure reciprocal recognition of Welsh, Scottish and Northern Irish headship qualifications. [47241]

Jacqui Smith: Arrangements are already in place to ensure that holders of the Welsh NPQH, the Scottish Standard for Headship, and the PQH in Northern Ireland are considered to hold a qualification that is equivalent to NPQH.

Following the introduction of the mandatory requirement in April 2004, applicants from the other home countries who want to apply for a first-time headship post in England need to present evidence that they hold or are working towards the qualifications that apply in their own countries.

Serving head teachers working in the other home countries who wish to apply for a headship post in England are exempt from the mandatory requirement in the same way that serving head teachers in England would be.

Identity Fraud

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what training the Department has provided for (a) front desk and (b) administrative staff in relation to identity fraud. [41282]

Maria Eagle: The Department does provide training for front desk staff (receptionists and security guards) dealing with the public face to face. The induction training includes validating whether a person is who they say they are and whether they are allowed on site in their own right or whether they need to be escorted. After the induction, appointee must sign a declaration that they understand what they have been taught, that they know where the assignment instructions are kept should they need to refer to them and that they know who to contact for further guidance.
